Hundreds of thousands of jobless workers would have had work at average wages last year if stockholders in industrial companies had limited their greed for profits to a 6 per cent return on the par value of their holdings. This appears from a Wall Street Journal review which shows that 116 industrial corporations presented their common stockholders with an aggregate profit of $524,904,087, equivalent to a return of 14.5 per cent.

What Might Have—But Didn't—Happen.

An average return of 6 per cent on the par value of the stock of these concerns would have meant a profit of about $206,000,000 leaving a margin of $319,000,000 available either for a reduction of prices or an increase in wages. Either would have had the effect of increasing the demand for food products, clothing, shoes, automobiles, etc., stimulating industry to that extent, and making more jobs.

At the average hourly rate of pay in America in 1924 this excess profit would have paid for 12,760,000 weeks of work or would have furnished a year's work to cover 250,000 unemployed wage earners. And these corporations are but a small sampling of the total which make up the country's industry.

An Interesting List.

The net profits and the rate of return on capital in the various industrial groups was:

Companies	Industry	Profit	Rate Pct.
4	Motors	$13,362,000	35.5
4	Accessories	3,163,000	14.4
4	Clothing	3,497,000	4.3
2	Leather and shoes	6,927,000	8.0
4	Metals and mining	7,532,000	8.1
3	Mail orders	22,773,000	18.5
5	Tobacco	41,409,000	36.8
8	Oils and pipe lines	14,363,000	10.0
4	Chain stores	34,001,000	32.1
7	Telephone	28,508,000	7.7
20	Other utilities	99,726,000	13.5
9	Steel industry	75,541,000	9.4
42	Miscellaneous	174,095,000	18.4

Understated at That.

These figures understate the rate of return on the cash actually invested in the industry by the stockholders because in such industries as the automobile, oil, tobacco and chain stores generous stock dividends have vastly increased the apparent capitalization.

In spite of a depression which meant unemployment to tens of thousands the 1924 profits of those industrial companies compare very favorably with those of the previous year. In 1923 they produced a total profit for stockholders of $555,068,000 representing a return of 16.2 on the capitalization of that year.

Quake Rocks Belgium

Young Workers Show Extraordinary Spirit in Garment Strike

The Young Workers League of District No. 2 is actively engaged at the present time in helping the workers of the white goods industry who are on strike win their demands for the complete organization of all the shops and an increase in wages. In this strike involving more than 20,000 workers the majortiy are young girls receiving wages as low as $12.00 per week.

The Y. W. L. members who are involved in this strike are showing splendid courage and extraordinary militancy. In fact, one of the Workers Party members has expressed herself that the hardest job that she has is to check the league members.

The league is carrying on splendid propaganda among the thousands of young workers on strike. In this work of propaganda are involved not only the Y. W. L. strikers but crews of Y. W. L. members of other trades at present unemployed who distribute literature and help the union taking down the shops that have not yet been taken down on strike.

Two of our members, Comrades Eda Eisman and Bessie Eisman, members of the Brownsville branch, were arrested while on the picket line on the technical charge of insulting the policeman. They are now out on bail.

A meeting of all Y. W. L. members involved in the strike was held Sunday afternoon, and the demands of the Y. W. L. worked out to be presented to the union settlement committee. The demands include among other things, shorter hours for the young workers, low admission fees and regular vacations.

DAWES AGENT IN PLEA FOR FRENCH-U. S. 'HARMONY'

Fears "Harmful Talk" About Debts

BALTIMORE, Feb. 24.— Owen D. Young, ad interim agent general for reparations payments, and, with Gen. Charles G. Dawes, co-author of the "Dawes" plan for Germany, begged politicians and statesmen of both France and the United States to cease their "harmful talk" about France's war debt in a speech here today.

It was Young's second address since his return from abroad and was made at the commemoration day exercises in John Hopkins university.

Battle is Over Debts.

"We find irritation and misunderstanding," Young said, "between two great nations and two great peoples who have every reason to work together. These two nations are now looking at each other with suspicion and doubt and irritation.

"And why? Because no impartial authority, free from the handicaps of domestic politics in either country, has been able to study the question of the fair amount or the practical method of payment of the French debt.

"I beg the politicians and statesmen of both countries to stop their harmful talk until the facts are found."

Seeks Funds for School.

Young's remarks anent the debt were made to support his contention that some agency must be created to get at facts as a help toward international peace. Such an agency, he said, would be the Walter Hines Page school of international relations to be established at John Hopkins by the endowment fund of whose board of trustees Young is president.

ANNOUNCE FIRST ANNUAL DAILY WORKER BALL IN DETROIT, MICH.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 24.—As the date for the first annual DAILY WORKER ball comes closer, all our charter members of the DAILY WORKER Bricklayers' Union are hustling to get their quota of tickets sold. Everybody is anxious to make this affair a success and if the enthusiasm keeps up this ball will mark a milestone in the annals of Detroit festivals.

The best thing about it is that on March 1 the Young Workers League is going to make their official organ a weekly and the first issue of this same aforementioned weekly is going to be sold to all the comrades at this dance. Of course you realize what this means: It means nothing but, that the YOWLS are going to see to it that the bunch will be there and say this means somethin' doing.

Yes all this is to be at the House of the Masses on Sunday, March 1, 8 P. M., and we pity all the poor people who live in Chicago and other places and can't come to this—The First Annual DAILY WORKER Ball.

EFFORTS TO BANISH COMMUNISTS FROM ORGANIZED LABOR TO FAIL, SAYS LABOR COUNCIL IN AUSTRALIA

(By The Federated Press)

SYDNEY, Australia.—The action of the Australian labor party in throwing the Communists out of the labor movement in Australia is condemned by the labor council of New South Wales in its annual report for the year 1924, just issued.

The labor council says that the Communists were expelled in order that the middle-class labor politicians, now dominating the party, could still further the policy of liberalizing the party and make it easier to appeal to the shopkeepers and local manufacturers by throwing out of the party the only real revolutionary forces in Australia.

"Despite their efforts, however," says the report, "every day, the Communist issue in politics becomes more and more the main issue. The shadow of Communism is over the labor movement. All efforts to banish Communism and Communists are bound to fail. The good old times of playing at politics are gone. Revolution has stepped upon the stage."

LABOR DAILY IN AUSTRALIA PUTS DOWN OWN STRIKE

Communist Censure Stirs Piecard Wrath

(The Federated Press.)

SYDNEY, Australia—Arising out of the dispute at the office of the Labor Daily—the official organ of the New South Wales branch of the Australian labor party, where some of the staff went on strike in sympathy with five dismissed writers, members of the Hurstville Labor league carried a motion censuring E. C. Magrath, one of the directors of the Labor Daily, for breaking the strike at the Labor Daily office and calling upon him to show cause why he should not be expelled from the labor movement.

A few days later the New South Wales executive of the Australian labor party held a meeting, carried a motion of confidence in Magrath, and ordered the resolution censuring him be expunged from the league records. The executive also expelled three members of the Hurstville league who were prominent in the attack on Magrath on the grounds that they were Communist and therefore not eligible for membership in the Australian labor party.

Unionists claim that the expulsion of the three men was due not to the fact they were Communist, but because they opposed "the anti-working class attitude" of Magrath. The paper is still declared "black" by the labor council of New South Wales for victimising the five journalists because they took a prominent part in the formation of a shop committee. An attempt to rescind the "black" motion was defeated by 31 votes to 20.

SENATORS' USE OF 'INFLUENCE' AGAINST LAW

Government Is Making Fake Investigation

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—With one United States senator, Burton K. Wheeler, democrat of Montana, already under indictment in Montana, and proceedings being pushed against him before a federal grand jury for reindictment here in Washington, it became known today that the activities of a number of other senators are under scrutiny—among them Senator Spencer, republican, of Missouri and Senator Bursum, republican, of New Mexico.

Selling Influence.

The indictments in each instance have the same background that they used their influence before government departments to obtain concessions and government action in return for which they received lawyers' fees.

In pursuit of its present policy, the department of justice apparently intent on setting up a standard for committee members, or in other words, to establish a line where a senator's duty to a constituent ends, and where his pecuniary interest in a client begins.

It is an extremely delicate question, and one that the department is approaching with a maximum of caution much caution indeed.

Spencer Firm got $80,000.

In Wheeler's case, he stands accused of seeking from the interior department public lands concessions on behalf of a constituent client from whom he received a fee for his services.

In the case of Spencer, it is charged that he has been instrumental in securing for the Fouke Fur company of St. Louis, an exclusive monopoly in handling government sealskins, while his law firm in St. Louis acts as attorneys for the company. In a speech on the senate floor, defending the seal contract at a time when it was under attack, Spencer admitted his law firm had received fees amounting to $80,000. As a member of the firm he shared in this.

Bursum's case is similar. Charges have been made that Bursum represented the agricultural and livestock corporation of New Mexico in a cattle deal under which he was to have received $2 a head, at the same time he was dickering with the war finance corporation in Washington to accept the security under which the sale was to have been made.

If both indictment and conviction were ever obtained in the cases now pending, it was declared scores of other members of congress might be laid open to the same proceedings.

Mexico in Chains

Mexico is in for an era of the most intense exploitation in its history providing the Mexican workers and peasants stand for it. The friendly attitude of the Calles government towards American capital expressed by its persecution of anti-imperialist activities and expulsion of Communists from its personally conducted unions getting their orders from the A. F. of L. officialdom, has greatly heartened the oil, water power and mining barons.

No richer field for investment exists on the western hemisphere and the concessions received by American capitalists stagger the imagination.

Recent dispatches tell of the immense area under the rule of American capital in the western provinces of Sinaloa and Durango. Here are the great San Dimas silver mines, some 80 miles south of Mazatlan. There are 40 mines in this concession which covers a territory of 250,000 acres.

The water power of the Piextla and Rio Verde rivers is to be developed by American capital and underpaid Mexican labor with the first units of the system generating 200,000 horsepower. There is also an irrigation project for over 300,000 acres of rich agricultural land.

The power plants will supply a number of Mexican cities and another great natural resource whose development forms the basis for airtight political control passes into the hands of American capital.

Is it any wonder, with these great riches to be had for the taking if the Mexican working class can be lulled to sleep, that extraordinary efforts have been made to make of the Mexican labor movement a duplicate in miniature of the American labor movement—feeble and spineless?

The Communist parties of the United States and Mexico, the Trade Union Educational League and the Pan-American Anti-Imperialist league are the only organizations that point out to the American and Mexican workers the dangers of the working class of both nations, the grave danger facing them in this looting of Mexico.

An Unknown Soldier Identified

One of the most novel and successsful stunts used by the capitalist class to dope the minds of the workers with patriotic emotion after the end of the world war was the unknown soldier dodge.

Millions of workers were legally murdered by the ruling class during the prolonged tragedy. When the war was over, the generals were given large sums of money and titles. The privates, those who survived, faced starvation.

But the ruling class responsible for the greatest murder carnival in human history hit on the bright idea that the remaining cannon fodder would accept "honor" in lieu of food, clothing and shelter. To show how democratic the ruling classes were, they picked the shattered form of what was once a human being from the corpse pile and honored it. Each government picked a dead body and "honored" it. Monuments were erected over the graves of the unknown soldiers, and generals who got their first look at the trenches on a sight-seeing tour when the war was over, have busied themselves placing wreaths on the poor victims' graves.

But the French government pulled a boner. Their unknown piece of cannon fodder was made the target for more speeches than there were shots fired during the world war. He was given credit for all the virtues that ever lodged in a human being. But, drat his hide, he turns out to be, not a patriotic French poilin, but a hated "boche," or in other words a German.

This is terrible. It is liable to damage the unknown soldier business irreparably. Perhaps all the unknown soldiers are corpses of the once hated enemy. Chemists may exhume them and submit their ashes to an analysis to learn whether they are Frenchmen, Germans, Irish, Dutch, Liberians, Poles, Chinese or Bushmen. A promising and flourishing industry is threatened with disaster.

Patriotism's Reward

The following letter, taken from the Cleveland Press, is eloquent and supplies its own editorial comment: "Back in the spring of 1917 this great country of ours wanted men to go over and put an end to that racket in Europe. I was one of those who readily responded. A few days ago I received a bonus policy (payable in 1945) for my display of patriotism in 1917-18. At the present time I am out of work and living on one box of Uneeda biscuits (6 cents) a day and getting weaker. The amount of my worldly wealth is exactly 29 cents to date. I am alone in this city and up against it. Not having the ability to sell I am out of luck as that seems to be the only line of work that is open.—Hungry Doughboy."

Now It Is Being Told

Woodrow Wilson loaned or donated $1,500,000,000 liberty loan money to European governments after the war was over without the authorization of congress, according to a series of articles now appearing in a newspaper syndicate.

This news can now be published, but if it was made public during the war the person responsible for dispensing the information would find himself behind the bars.

One of the juicy items of news picked at random out of this scandal dish is connected with Roumania. That country wanted money very badly after the war was over. Its government was busy crushing the labor unions and making forays on the territory of its neighbors, taking particular care to grab whatever it could from Soviet Russia, which was then surrounded by armed enemies and torn by civil war.

The treasury department was without authority to advance any funds to countries not at war. But the state department actually suggested to the Roumanian government that they declare war on Germany in order to get over the congressional obstacle. Roumania did not have the nerve to do this, so Wilson gave them the money anyway.

Another scandal that is rehashed is the Bakmeteff affair. That fashionable burglar lived for years in luxury on the United States treasury while posing as the representative of a government that was as dead as the dodo. Not alone that, but he used those funds to foster counter-revolutionary activities against the Soviet government.

The reign of the so-called progressive President Wilson was one of the most reactionary in the history of this country. That mountebank went to extremes that an open reactionary would hesitate to go. Those who expect anything from progressives in the White House should take a lesson from the experience with Wilson.

Poor Payers; Good Collectors

The French ruling class are not very anxious to pay their debts, but they are good collectors. They owe Wall Street several billion dollars, but whenever Wall Street's representatives suggest a check by return mail or at least a sincere promise to pay, Paris solons make a noise something like the popping of champagne bottles.

If the United States government persists in dunning France for her war debts, France may come back by charging the American government rent for the use of French trenches. This seems quite fair. Wall Street actually conquered Europe in the bloody business campaign known by the dignified title of the "world war."

There are other ways in which France can get back at her creditors. Wealthy Americans are trying to get over the boredom of living by participating in gambling games and other recreations that involve sums of money. They usually leave their money in the gambling dens. A good portion of the profits finds its way into the jeans of the French politicians who run the government. One of those who helped the French ruling class to make ends meet is the son of General Wood, governor of the Philippine Islands. Young Wood made a lot of money gambling in Wall Street. He spent it in France gambling, where he was on the outside.

The general's son cashed a bad check and fled to Spain. The French are hot in pursuit. 35,000 francs may not look like a lot of money to the general's son, but at the rate the French franc is traveling, unless the Paris police catch young Wood before the franc descends further, they will be owing him money.

The Vanishing Home

"Breaking up the home" is a favorite charge made against the Communists by the enemies of the working class.

The crime of the Communists which provokes the charge is that they want to make it possible for all workers to have homes. This is impossible under capitalism and the figures on increase in population of American cities and an analysis of the housing problem shows that more and more of the masses are tenants completely at the mercy of the landlords.

According to a survey made recently by the National Association of Real Estate Boards, over 51 per cent of the city population is living in flats or tenements. Fifty-four per cent of all new housing construction is of some other kind than single dwellings while the United States census figures give us the information that 68 per cent of the total increase of population was in cities.

The rural population is being drawn rapidly into the industrial maelstrom and the homes they leave in the country or village are the last they will ever have.

Dependent upon the capitalist for a job, upon the landlord for shelter, the American masses are a real proletariat. Most of them have not discovered this yet but the pressure of the bosses and landlords loosens a little more each day the grip of the ruling class on the minds of workers—workers whose homes and whose jobs belong to their enemies.

Capitalism breaks up the home. The Communists are organizing the workers for the destruction of capitalism and the erection of a system in which homes and jobs will be the right of all workers.

Many capitalists and their hangers-on, while this process is under weigh, will be without homes but that is something for the capitalists to worry over.

When they decide to work they will no longer be capitalists and the "build your own home" campaigns will take on a new meaning for them.

YELLOW'S QUIT WEEPING OVER PARTY'S CORPSE

The officials of the national socialist party, including a few federation secretaries, were meeting in Douglas Park auditorium yesterday afternoon discussing the hopeless plight into which their party has fallen as a result of its futile collaboration with capitalist politicians.

The socialist party will have to "be rebuilt from the ground up" was the sense of the meeting. It was admitted that the party is dead. The pie-card optimists, however, pin their hopes in a last attempt to revive the already rotting corpse.

The national convention of the socialist party adjourned after issuing a statement trying to explain the fatal adventure in class-collaboration with the LaFollette petty bourgeois third party elements. The party will continue to fight the Communists and the workers and peasants of Russia and will forget that Karl Marx ever lived, it was disclosed in the statement, but in the future, the socialists will carry on this work alone.

The socialist party came home, after three year's woundering, at a banquet given in honor of Eugene V. Debs, and found the old home in such a badly decayed condition that repair is hopeless.

However, with more optimism than brains, one speaker after another expounded the "new socialism" which does not deign to notice the teachings of Marx or the lessons of the Russian revolution. James Oneal, Morris Hillquit, Debs, and many others preached "rebuild the party."

"I am a little embarassed and nervous in the presence of this remarkably splendid and intelligent audience," Hillquit said sarcastically. "James Oneal talks so much in the Marxian phraseology that his wife does not understand him."

This was the closest Hillquit came to mentioning the teachings of Karl Marx. "I don't know what the celebration is all about, but we might as well celebrate anyway," he added.

"This is a divorced party," Hillquit said. "This socialist crowd is as peppy and chipper as a divorcee, and seems to be ready for another wedding." A voice in the back of the hall said, "Maybe they'll try to marry the Communists next." And a Communist who was observing the show, answered "nothing doing."

"We have been on a journey," said Hillquit, "And we have returned to our home to make it the home of all truly progressive and forward looking action."

Abramovich Berates Debs

Raphael Abramovich, who has not had the nerve to attempt to speak in Chicago before a public gathering following the protest of the workers of other cities against his lies about Soviet Russia, was introduced here without casualties. Abramovich said the revolution was a long time off in the United States, and deplored the fact that for a time "Debs has been carried away by the Bolshevik illusion."

Lilian Herstein, who is being intensively cultivated by the "socialists" was the only speaker of the evening who mentioned Soviet Russia in a favorable light. She criticised the "progressives" for remaining silent about Soviet Russia.

The Jewish Forward gave $1,200 to help "rebuild" the socialist party, and Debs added the usual sentimental touch to the banquet.

ASK OLD LADIES' HOME FOR "BROKE" SCHOOL TEACHERS

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Feb. 24.—A national home for aged and infirm school teachers was advocated by Olive M. Jones, principal of Public School 120, New York City, in her talk before the department of superintendence, National Educational Association convention here today.

Miss Jones declared that the average "poor house" to which she would have to go as the only place she could afford in view of her meager pension would be obnoxious to any educated and cultured school teacher.

AS WE

By T. J. O'F

THE latest addition to the red-baiting crew of American hack writers is the stage, and movie clown, Will Rogers. While Rogers satirized the ruling classes he made a reputation for himself as a wit. But now that he has heard the whistle of his masters, and has turned his nimble mind over to the capitalists, his stuff would not do justice to even a respectable half-wit.

IN his syndicated monologue dated Feb. 21, Rogers begins by discussing Americanism and finds that there is no such animal. He finds that the great, great majority of the American people are normal. Only a few reds are abnormal. Rogers does not possess the virtue of novelty in wading in to attack the enemies of his paymasters. He uses all the hairy and hoary fibers that the reactionaries of this country have been hurling at the "reds" for generations. Soap boxes without soap. Faces with plenty of whiskers.

ROGERS did not like the Communist meeting in Madison Square Garden. Practically every capitalist hack in the country took a slam at that demonstration. He did not like the idea of denouncing the capitalist system, under which clowns like Rogers, get along so well. Not that the former movie man does not know better. He does. On many occasions his articles were clever tho veiled attacks on the capitalist system. But he heard his master's voice. He is now competing with that other pen prostitute, Arthur Brisbane, in howling for preparedness. Money is eloquent.

HJALMAR BRANTING, former Swedish socialist premier is dead. His passing will be no loss to the working class such as the death of Lenin was. Branting was a socialist and one of the most useful allies of the allied capitalist during the war and after. In his early days in the socialist movement like many other renegades he suffered imprisionment for his ideals. But he was not of the staff of which martyrs are made and he succumbed to the flesh pots of capitalism. Branting like MacDonald in England was one of the most faithful supporters of the Swedish royal family. Let the bourgeoisie mourn his loss; the workers should not.

F. A. MACKENZIE until recently the Chicago Daily News correspondent in Soviet Russia, has been doing excellent work for his masters since he shook the dust of Russia off his feet. His work is all the more dangerous since his articles, during most of his sojourn in the workers' republic were rather fair, or at least as fair as could be expected from one who saw the drama of the building up of a new order thru capitalist spectacles. While the correspondents of the Chicago Tribune were spinning yarns of imminent Bolshevik disaster Mackenzie warned his readers that Soviet rule was strong and in no danger of overthrow.

BUT he is now in America and no doubt is acting under the instructions of the most bitterly reactionary section of the American capitalist class, who are now unlimbering their ink brigade for a last desperate attempt to block Soviet recognition by

RANK AND FILE LEADS IN STRIKE OF THE I.L.G.W.U.

300 Volunteers Help Organization Drive

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—More significant than most strikes is that the strike of ladies' clothing workers is being carried on by over 300 volunteer organizers. The present struggle of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, is one of the rank and file without the official organizers directed from above, and the volunteers are proving themselves entirely loyal and thoroly capable.

Workers Are Determined

In the third week of the organization campaign launched in the dress industry against the open shop, with a strike called in over 150 establishments, the workers are more determined than ever to continue till all their demands are granted, being encouraged to a firm stand by the action of more than 70 of the struck houses that have already signed up.

When this volunteer committee got the permission of the Joint Board of Cloak, Skirt and Dress Makers' Unions it at once set out to formulate demands and line up the open shops. Meeting resistance it called upon the joint board to pull down the shops that refused to sign up. Over 30,000 workers went out and are sticking tight in all the shops that fail to make the agreement with the union.

The rank and file have proven that they can take charge and carry on work in a most effective manner, flouting the interference of the bosses aided by the police and hired sluggers.

Without pay this committee of 300 is working day and night and getting results that have astonished the whole working class in New York. Their organization campaign is spreading to all industries and the workers everywhere are enthused by the fervor and devotion of the men and women that are so successful in the present struggle. They carry on all picket duty and look after meetings and hall attendance with keen insight and definite orderliness.

Committee is Attacked

Recently a committee visiting a shop was trapped by the bosses and assaulted with knives and scissors and bludgeons. One women was the victim of a slugger who split her head making several stitches necessary. One man was cut with scissors under his arm and badly injured. All in the committee were brutally beaten by the bosses aided by scabs.

Medill McCormick, Parasite, Summoned to the Graveyard

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 25.—Medill McCormick, republican United States senator from Illinois, was found dead in his apartment at the Hamilton Hotel here this morning. The door to the apartment had to be broken down. But death, it is claimed, was not the result of suicide as rumors gave it, but of gastric hemorrhage. McCormick was a multi-millionaire stockholder of the International Harvester company, Chicago Tribune and other concerns.

GERMAN COMMUNISTS USE RADIO TO LISTEN IN ON WORLD, SO AMERICA GETS THE IDEA, TOO

News has just reached this country of the great progress in propaganda methods made by the German Communist Party. The party used not only the time worn machinery of the past such as leaflets, speakers, the press, etc. but is right up to the minute in its use of the most modern scientific methods of spreading its propaganda.

A great many of the party headquarters are already equipped with powerful radio outfits for receiving news of a national and international nature. By this means the comrades listen in to speeches broadcasted from the important gatherings in various parts of the world.

In addition to this use of the radio, the Communist headquarters are used for educational purposes for the workers of the various districts. Concerts are broadcasted and upon festive occasions the radio is used for dances, entertainments etc.

Not to be far behind the German party, the American party is offering the workers of New York City two modern $100.00 radio sets of the finest and most improved pattern to the branch selling the greatest number of subscription tickets to the Paris Commune Pageant Concert and Ball at Madison Square Garden on Sunday, March 15.

The possibilities of winning the radio sets has aroused such great enthusiasm thruout the city that branches have selected various captains and teams to go out and sell the tickets. The concert promises to be a very hard fought battle between various branches that are out to win at all costs

Thieves Leave No Finger Prints in Salary Grab Vote

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Duplicating the performance of the senators who slipped their salary-boost bill thru at a night session and without a roll call, the house membership passed that measure without a record vote. It is a rider on one of the big corporation bills, and will probably escape the veto which has searched out salary raises for ordinary government employes. House and senate members will get $10,000 a year instead of the present $7,500, and cabinet members, the speaker and the vice-president, will bet $15,000 instead of $12,000. The house vote was taken by a count of members standing, and resulted 227 to 93.

FARMERS GOT DEFLATED 70 PER CENT ADMITS GOVERNMENT BUREAU

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 25.—The February Monthly Labor Review of the bureau of labor statistics includes among its special features the quarterly report on changes in the cost of living in the United States, covering 32 of the principal cities of the country and a study of the purchasing power of farmers' incomes.

An article on the purchasing power of farmers' incomes in the state of New York shows that the average labor income was $453 in 1914 and $205 in 1924. By labor income is meant the amount the farmer receives for his year's work above all farm expenses, including interest on the capital invested, and in addition to the use of his house and farm products.

The difference between the earnings in 1914 and 1923 amounted to a reduction of 55 per cent in actual money and of approximately 70 per cent in the purchasing power of the income.

A period of high earnings had prevailed from 1916 to 1919, which coincided with the period of price-fixing by the government, while the later low-income period coincides wth the so-called "period of deflation."

WORKERS PARTY SUPPORTS STREET CLEANERS' STRIKE

Demands City Grant Union Demands

Martin Abern, district organizer Workers (Communist) Party No. 8, issued the following statement on the strike of the street cleaners and garbage collectors in Chicago:

"Garbage and dirt is piling up in the working class streets and alleyways, bringing with it the dangers of disease and death to workers and their children. But apparently endangerment of the health of the workers is of no concern to the city hall politicians and the Chicago capitalists who could easily meet the more than just strike demands of the striking garbage collectors and street cleaners.

Degrading the Workers.

"The pay of these workers doing the most menial and dirty of tasks, yet so socially essential, is so ridiculously small that it is a wonder that they have been patient as long as they have and have not resisted this oppression by strikes before. The Workers Party is wholly with the striking street cleaners and garbage collectors in their struggle and will lend every support to them. In addition it must be pointed out that the dirt and filth which capitalism permits could easily be removed by more extensive use of inventions in the form of better street cleaning apparatus, incinerators, making it possible at the same time for the workers employed in these trades to labor under much more favorable conditions.

Supports Strikers.

"It appears that the object of all capitalist activity and exploitation is to degrade to the lowest level those who are compelled to suffer its existence. And the present situation is but one of the many examples.

"The Chicago local of the Workers (Communist) Party demands that the city authorities pay the increase in wages asked immediately and put these workers back on their jobs without discrimination."

ANGER AGAINST SACCO-VANZETTI FRAME-UP GROWS

Big Protest Meeting in Chicago March First

An organized national demand for a new trial for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, imprisoned for the past five years in Massachusetts for their loyalty to the working class, takes place on March 1. The Workers (Communist) Party, backed by numerous local unions and by the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, is holding meetings protesting the conviction of the two labor leaders on framed up and perjured testimony. Sacco and Vanzetti have been condemned to die for their activity in organizing the textile workers of New England.

New York Mass Meeting.

A mass demonstration will be held in New York City in the Central Opera House, March 1, at 2 p. m. The Italian needle trades, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and many other New York local unions are fighting side by side with the Workers (Communist) Party for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti and other class war prisoners from the capitalist oppressors of labor. The workers will be told on March 1 of the persecution meted out by capitalist "justice" against the champions of the working class who want to do away with the exploiters of labor and put the power into the hands of the workers.

Good Speakers in Chicago.

The Chicago meeting, in Emmet Memorial Hall, Ogden Ave. and Taylor St., will be addressed by Ralph Chaplin, representing the Industrial Workers of the World, Jack Johnstone, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, and Antonio Presi, editor of the Italian Communist newspaper Il Lavoratore.

Miners' Union Gives $50.

The Harpersville, Ohio, local union of the United Mine Workers of Amerira has passed the following resolution demanding a retrial for Sacco and Vanzetti, at the same meeting which donated $50.00 for the Sacco-Vanzetti defense. The resolution stated:

"We, the coal miners of Local Union No. 2059, United Mine Workers of America, with 286 members assembled in our regular business meeting, held in Harpersville, Ohio, Jan. 23, 1925, unanimously adopted the following resolution of protest:

"Whereas, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti are doomed to the electric chair by the ferocious capitalism of the United States—'the land of the free and the home of the brave'—and

"Whereas, we claim that Sacco and Vanzetti were unjustly convicted of the crime they never committed, and furthermore the evidence introduced against them did not warrant the ver-

TRY TO PATCH UP DIFFERENCES BETWEEN MINERS AND ENGINEERS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The American Federation of Labor today undertook to mediate the differences between the United Mine Workers of America and the Brotherhood Locomotive Engineers involving the employment of non-union miners in the New River coal field being worked by the brotherhood in West Virginia. Three members of the federation headed by Secretary Frank A. Morrison, began a series of conferences with John L. Lewis, president of the miners' union and Warren S. Stone, president of the engineers' organization, under resolutions adopted at the El Paso convention of the federation.

CZAR HUTCHESON RULING BACKS HIS SATELLITES

Confirms Expulsion of Chicago Carpenters

William L. (Czar) Hutcheson, general president of the Brotherhood of Carpenters has finally delivered his decision in the case of the five members of Local No. 181, who were illegally expelled by the officials of the local without a trial and without the sanction of the members of the local.

The members were originally charged with having signed a resolution protesting against a scab Landis award agreement signed by Harry Jensen with five contractors in Chicago. The report of the trial committe was "doctored" which means falsified, and despite a signed affidavit from three members of that committee of five, to the effect that the secretary of the committee falsified the report, the president of the local declared the members expelled tho more than 95 per cent of the membership of the local are in a state of revolt against this railroading process.

Finally The Decision

As was expected Hutcheson after a long wait, during which he was enjoying himself in Florida, decided that the officials of Local 181 were justified in their action.

The DAILY WORKER secured a copy of Hutcheson's letter which is as follows in its most important part:

The report of the trial committee does not show that the appellants were reported as admitting they were guilty as charged but does show that they admitted being guilty of violation of Paragraph A. B. and C. of Section 54 of the General Constitution by admitting that they signed the resolution referred to in the charges and inasmuch as said resolution was scurrilous and defamatory in its statements and of a character that would cause discontent and work against the harmony and interest of the Brotherhood they committed an act for which they should rightfully

A. C. W. LOCALS WITHDRAW FROM JOINT BOARD

New York Membership Protests Expulsion

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Feb. 25.—Under the protection and with the collaboration of the capitalist police force, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' joint board machine held its last meeting. The largest New York Local No. 63, notified the board of its withdrawal from all participation so long as Local 5 is excluded, and delegates from Locals 24 and 80 also withdrew as a protest against the officials calling in the police department.

The storm caused by the action of the Amalgamated leaders is becoming greater every day in the New York organization. Every day shows some new development of the struggle to prevent the officials from destroying the union.

Four Locals Now Out.

At the last meeting of the joint board, the delegates of three locals stated that their locals were with-

COMMUNIST ALDERMANIC CANDIDATES INCREASE PARTY VOTE CAST IN THE NOVEMBER PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS

The Communist candidates running in four wards in Chicago's Tuesday's aldermanic election made an excellent showing. A total of 587 votes in the four wards show a decided improvement over a total of 967 votes in 50 wards counted for Communists in the presidential campaign.

Louis Cejka, candidate in the 22nd ward led the Communist field with 192 votes in his ward, almost three per cent of the total vote cast. Comrade Nicholas Dozenberg polled 167 in the 28th ward, two per cent of the vote. Comrade Harry Brooker made almost two per cent of the votes in his ward in getting 126 and Comrade Hyman Epstein made the same percentage in a vote of 106.

All of which, considering everything, may be looked upon as a widening of the sphere of Communist prestige and an indication that the Workers (Communist) Party is attracting ever greater circles of workers.

Popular Interest Small.

The popular interest in the municipal campaign was, thruout, halfhearted. Sharp contests were few. Sentiment at large was not aroused

NEW YORK DRESSMAKERS' STRIKE GETTING GOOD RESULTS; 1,500 ARE OUT

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—A strike of 1,500 dressmakers is getting results already Five hundred workers are reported back in settled shops.

This is the second garment strike of the week, and is aimed at dressmaking bosses who are evading the union terms. It is apart from the strike of 20,000 childrens' dress, house dress, kimono and underwear workers.

Non union dressmakers get in some cases only half the wages paid in union shops, say union men. The union minimum week wages are: $50 for cutters; $44 for operators; $50 for pressers; $31 for drapers; $28 for finishers.

IRISH FAMINE SITUATION IS GROWING WORSE

Free State Government Suppressing Facts

The famine situation in the west of Ireland is growing in seriousness despite denials on the part of the Free State government, declares an official statement issued by the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee from its headquarters at 19 South Lincoln street, Chicago, Ill.

This committee was organized on receipt of a cable from the secretary of the British section of the International Workers' Aid, who is now making a tour of the famine regions. It is affiliated to the International Workers' Aid and was organized on the initiative of the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

Condition Growing Worse.

The statement of the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee follows:

"The condition of the starving workers and peasants on the west of Ireland grows more desperate daily. Help from outside of Ireland has been scant owing to the efforts of the Free State government to suppress news of the famine.

"The Manchester Guardian in its issue of January 30 says: 'In the west, in those parts known as the congested districts, famine is raging owing to the complete failure of the crops of oats and potatoes. The desperate plight of the area is increased by the shortage of turf fuel and there is no available substitute in green timber and brushwood . . . . .'

Bourgeoisie Not Hungry.

"The Irish bourgeois supporters of the Free State in America who dread the loss of dignity thru poverty in the land of their ancestors, minimize the famine and say that the Irish can take care of themselves. The Irish bourgeoisie are not cold or hungry, but unless the workers of the rest of the world who can spare something from their savings send relief, thousands of workers and peasants will die from hunger or disease brought on thru malnutrition.

"The Irish Workers' and Peasants' Relief Committee appeals to the workers and farmers of this country to demonstrate their class solidarity by sending money to their stricken brothers and sisters in Ireland. Besides accomplishing the immediate task of relieving distress it will also strengthen the bond of solidarity that is being forged between the workers of all lands who are caught in the heartless vice of capitalist exploitation.

"The Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee is preparing subscription lists for the collection of funds for relief. Those who wish to assist in the task of raising money for this work should communicate with Thomas J. O'Flaherty, secretary of the above committee, at 16 South Lincoln street, Chicago, Illinois."

WAR BETWEEN BRITAIN AND U. S. INEVITABLE

Admiral Phelps Turns the Cat Loose

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 25.—War between England and the United States was the prospect held out to the women who are attending the "National Defense as Peace Insurance" four-day convention in the capitol, by Rear Admiral W. W. Phelps, in a lecture that created a sensation in political and diplomatic circles here.

It is more than likely that the British ambassador will bring the Phelps speech to the attention of the state department and perhaps call for a disavowal. Coming at a time when it is generally believed that the United States and Great Britain are free from clashing interests that might result in war, the admiral's speech is bound to focus opinion on the inevitability of armed conflict between the two foremost capitalist powers in the world and the logical rival for commercial supremacy.

The Oil Supply

The admiral stated that England was getting a stranglehold on the world's oil supply and that the bulk of it was in England's control today. He said the object of the American open door policy was to help American capitalists secure oil concessions. But England has combatted this principle everywhere, he went on, and successfully.

The admiral continued: "One of the primary objectives of the league of nations, under the leadership of England, is to devise some policy to destroy the American favorable balance of trade.

"Serious differences are brewing with England over shipping policies. These differences can be prevented from developing into a conflit only by a strong navy. That America determines to build up a great merchant marine, fleet, has created against us the bitter animosity of the English shipping interests."

The Inevitable Scrap

Here we have the seed of a war between England and America. An admiral is not expected to be a diplomat. The state department may tell the British government, that the "old salt" is only blowing off a little steam, but just as sure as England fought Germany over commercial supremacy and the exploitation of the near East so will the two great imperialist giants America and British fight for world hegemony. The trouble between the United States and Japan and between England and France are mere skirmishes compared to this coming battle between the two mightiest military and naval powers that the world has ever known. America is out to dominate the world and to grind the workers of all lands under her iron heel.

Hatters, Poisoned by Mercurial Steam, Are Permanently Injured

DANBURY, Conn. — "Hatters' Shakes," the disease arising from mercurial poisoning in the hatters' trade, has aroused the Hatters' Union to the appointment of a committee to confer with the manufacturers for the purpose of eliminating this hazard. The compensation board has decided that this disease is an occupational disease, coming within the scope of the compensation law.

The mercurial poisoning comes from the steam arising from the tubs over which the workers in one branch of the industry toil. In the carroting process, thru which the fur passes before reaching the hat factory, large quantities of mercury are used, with consequent poisoning in the factory. In European factories there is little such poisoning, because of the care used in ventilation and moving the employes from one department to another.

CITY REFUSES TO END STRIKE OF WHITE WINGS

Chicago Is Threatened with Epidemic

The 2,500 striking street cleaners and garbage collectors employed by the city of Chicago began the second week of their strike yesterday. While garbage and ashes continued to pile up on the sidewalks and the streets were littered with rubbish, commissioner of public works, A. A. Sprague broke off relations with the Street Cleaners' Union. The city officials held a conference with representatives of the city council, according to a report in the commissioner's office, and were to definitely decide whether strike breakers would be hired. The garbage littered streets are menacing the working class sections with disease. A widespread epidemic may break out at any moment. The street cleaners and garbage collectors, represented by the president of the Street Cleaners' Union, Michael Carrosso, cut their demands for an increase in pay 50 per cent. Sprague who had previously offered the strikers ten cents a day more pay, withdrew the offer and refused to confer further with the union representatives.

The union officials offered to settle the strike if the laborers were given $5.25 per day, section foremen $6.50 per day, repair foremen $8.00 per day and dump foremen $180.00 per month. Sprague refused to consider this offer.

The dump, repair and section foremen will hold a meeting at 4 o'clock this afternoon at 180 West Washington street, it was announced at their offices, to discuss the strike situation.

Four Workers Burned in Searing Blast of Flaming Oil in Pa.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 25.—Four men were burned probably fatally several others injured and damage estimated at more than $35,000 caused when a searing blast of flaming oil scattered the burning liquid over a "test crew" working in a room of the Duquesne Light company plant, at Colfax, near here today.

The workmen were making final tests on new power equipment when a crossed circuit from the wires carrying 66,000 volts of electricity fired the oil. The entire plant was shaken by the blast which ruined huge generating units and giant turbines.

Anti-Alien Land Bill Defeated by Idaho Legislature

BOISE, Idaho, Feb. 25.—By the narrow margin of one vote the Idaho house of representatives today failed to pass the anti-alien land bill, designed, according to its framers, to prohibit the leasing of land to Japanese farmers to Dec. 31, 1928. The vote was 29 for passage and 30 against.

There was much debate on the measure, particularly as to what possible effect passage would have on Japanese-American relations.

Socialists and State Progressives Adjourn

Altho the socialist national and state conventions declared that the socialist party had severed all connections with the LaFollette "progressive" movement, several socialists attended the state convention of the "provisional progressive party of Illinois" and were told that their seats as delegates were open to them.

Both conventions have adjourned. The progressives are marking time, hoping that the scattered LaFollette forces may yet be collected into some sort of a petty bourgeois party. The socialists are in such state of disorganization that they are frantically trying to keep the skeleton of their party together.

the United States government. Mackenzie's latest assignment is to write a series of pen portraits of the foremost Communist leaders in Russia. He began with Trotsky and gave him a clean bill of health. His next victim was Zinoviev who is not so unfortunate as Trotsky. For every word of praise showered on the ex-minister of war by this capitalist hack, Zinoviev gets ten words of abuse. The workers will understand. It is not likely that Trotsky will appreciate the unsolicited praise of this journalistic menial.

WHAT a collection of servile lickspittles those capitalist journalists are? Not even the stage produces so many men and women willing to do anything in return for the approval of those in power. One of this tribe is James O'Donnell Bennett. He has licked the boots of almost every wealthy man in the United States during his career and his tongue is still in working condition. He is now working on Calvin Coolidge. "Cal" was talking to a bunch of female hypocrites on the question of preparedness. They represented organizations whose members "either bred men for war or are the descendants of women who did" writes Bennett. The world would be something better off if these brainless chunks of protoplasm were never born or bred.

THIS is the kind of putty that the hedge schoolmaster Coolidge peddled his platitudes to. "Rational reduction of armaments" was one of his themes. After Coolidge got thru with them, Secretary of War Weeks, came on, then Major General John L. Hines, chief of staff. "As a result of our women's work in the world war, the war department has now established a womans' relations section of the general staff, with a woman in charge." Convincing proof that the last war would not be the last!

ANOTHER militarist gave a lecture on "Undermining the youth of the nation." This general found nuclei in colleges and universities and in the public schools. The female battalion of death promised aid of course. And as if in reply to the challenge of this war monger, the Young Workers' League, which is the only revolutionary youth organization in the United States, comes out with a weekly newspaper instead of the bi-weekly which succeeded the monthly. The young revolutionists are yet small in number and their funds are low. But evolution is on their side, and some day a red general will be talking to a group of women workers in Washington, not on how to protect capitalism from the workers but on how to defend the workers' republic against the capitalists if any exist by that time.

IRISH RELIEF AND DEFENSE TO BE MEET TOPIC

Dunne and Totten Will Be Speakers

The first general meeting of the Chicago Labor Defense conference will take place this Thursday night, Feb. 26, at 180 W. Washington St., 8 o'clock sharp. Delegates will be in attendance from many unions, including Machinists, Painters, Wood Turners, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Food Workers and others. In addition to Workers Party and Young Workers' League units, many other working class organizations will be represented, including the Slovak Socialist Federation, Workmen's Circles, Lithuanian, Bohemian, Slovak and Russian fraternal organizations.

Two short speeches are on the program, one by Richard Totten, secretary of the Irish Workers' Republican Club and member of the Plumbers' Union on the famine crisis that threatens the very life of large sections of workers and farmers in Ireland. The other will deal with the Michigan cases, and will be by one of the most prominent of the defendants, probably William F. Dunne.

Ways and means of bringing defense and relief work to the attention of Chicago's working masses will be the principal order of business and money raising projects will come in for their full share of discussion. William F. Kruse, local secretary of the conference, has sent out a call to all delegates to come on time so that a good precedent can be set for future meetings.

MEMBERSHIP OF DRESSMAKERS IS DISFRANCHISED

Local Executive Had Defied Fakers

NEW YORK CITY, Feb. 25.—The executive board of Dressmakers' Local 22, has again committed a "crime" against the saintly fakers at the head of the international. As penalty, the joint board decided to take away the right of the membership of the local to elect its own business agent. The fakers now insist on appointing the business agent, also they preferred charges against the executive board of the local.

The "crime" is as follows: The executive board refused to sign a statement, written by Manager Feinberg. Feinberg wanted the executive to sign and circulate a statement that it condemns those who, prior to the election of business agents, issued leaflets attacking certain candidates.

The executive was willing to send out a statement that it was not responsible for the call, but Feinberg insisted on his order.

The bureaucrats could not let this "crime" of refusal pass, so brought charges before the joint board which decided as above.

Notice, Delegates to Local Labor Defense Council Conference

All delegates from unions, co-operatives, workers benefit societies and branches of the Workers Party to the Chicago Labor Defense Council Conference, are requested to attend the general conference tonight at 8 o'clock, in Room 301, 188 West Washington street.

Postal Salary Bill Again Passes House

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. — The postal salary increase bill passed the house today by a vote of 370 to 8.

The bill makes a re-arrangement of postal rates on various classes of matter carried by the postal service to increase revenues in order to meet the additional charges for increased salaries to employes.

It is estimated that the boost in pay will aggregate $68,000,000 a year. The additional revenues from increased charges on matter handled by the postal service is estimated at $61,000,000.

Holiday For Unemployed—Yes

LONDON, Eng., Feb. 25.—"I have never seen so many exponents of elegant leisure as in America," said John Buchan, English author who has just returned from a visit to the United States. "America is a place of a superb holiday," Buchan said. He was entertained by the wealthy society people in America, and had no contact with the masses of poorly paid and unemployed workers.

Police Seek Son of General Wood, Arch-Militarist

BIARRITZ, Feb. 25.—The secretary of the Biarritz casino said today that the casino authorities had not yet decided whether to press extradition proceedings seeking the return of Lieut. Osborne C. Wood to France.

"We have done nothing further about the warrant for Wood," he said. "It is still in the hands of the police. I am going to Paris tomorrow and hope to see some of Wood's friends there."

The proprietor of the Champs Elysses travel agency today filed a claim of 3,005 francs against Lieut. Osborne C. Wood.

"My bill is for automobile hire," he said. "I've taken preliminary steps to attach Wood's trunks in self protection."

drawing from participation in the board, and would not be responsible for the tactics used by the officials of the board. Four locals are now out, including Local 5, which was expelled. Those withdrawing are Italian Local 63, the New York Local 24, and Pantsmakers' Local 80.

At the joint board meeting, Wolf, the leader of the official machine, declared that the reason he called for the police and had stationed them at the door, was that he was afraid the tailors would attack him and beat him. He, therefore, expects to have the police take part in the future joint board meeting, instead of the delegates. He has earned the title of a wolf in sheep's clothing.

More Collaboration With Police.

The Amalgamated bureaucracy, in addition to calling in the police against the membership and the delegates, has also asked the capitalist government, and succeeded in the request, to raise the bail of Comrade Jenkaitis, who was beaten up by the sluggers of the officials at a meeting of the Lithuanian local.

He is now held in $1,000 bail—for being beaten up. Jenkaitis is one of the most active and responsible leaders of the Lithuanian membership of the Amalgamated.

Klan Supports Bill Aimed at Galligan

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 25.—The bill introduced into the assembly here to allow the county board of supervisors to remove sheriffs or other county officers from office, is receiving the support of the ku klux klan, it is rumored here.

The bill is aimed at Sheriff George Galligan, an anti-klansman, who refused to resign his post as sheriff despite the insistence of the klan. Galligan is now outside the county, having agreed to take an indefinite leave of absence from office in order to promote peace in Williamson county, if possible.

Demands Reduced Rents.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 25.—Unless room rent in private homes to students at the university of Illinois is materially reduced at once, Representative Harry M. McCaskin will demand that two dormitories be supplied by the state, he said today.

CLEVELAND Y. W. L. IS FIGHTING USE OF SCHOOLS TO REGISTER AND PERSECUTE ALL MILITANTS

By C. WEISSBERG,

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 25.—Students in the public schools here are being catalogued according to their race and social standing, by order of the board of education. Every pupil is obliged to fill out a detailed information card which he is not permitted to take home. "The items relating to parents are to be regarded as the most significant," according to the page of instructions issued to the teachers. It appears that, having failed to securt a national bill for the registration of workers, the bosses are trying to worm the desired information out of the children thru the capitalist schools.

Register Workers.

This registration is of great significance to the worker. Children who are Jewish or colored must designate that fact on the information card. The children are asked in what countries their parents were born, what language is spoken in their home, and whether or not their parents had any education. Each pupil is asked whether he intends to finish school or not. Those who intend to quit are asked to state their reasons for ont continuing their education. Each child is asked if he earns money outside of school, how much he earns, and where he works.

Bosses Behind Move

"Does your mother help support the family" is another question asked the Cleveland school children. Other questions are: "What is your father's occupation? Where does he work, and for whom? Is he part owner of the place where he works?"

The instructions to the teachers state, "In answering questions relating to occupation of father it is particularly important that answers be as definite as possible in order that the father may at least be accurately placed in one of the larger occupational groups, such as unskilled labor, semi-skilled labor, clerical occupation, personal service, professional, managerial, and employing occupations."

What Does Parent Read?

On the backs of these cards the children must mark the names of magazines, journals and newspapers which are read in their homes.

The school authorities are having a hard time in convincing the pupils that this information is "strictly confidential and will not be used in any personal connection whatsoever." The principal of the Glenville high school declared that the information is needed by a certain "class in city administration, which is studying the sociological background of the pupils attending the Cleveland high schools."

Teachers in other high schools give contradictory excuses for the registration of the workers thru their children. The teachers of the Central high school, for example, have stated that the information "is needed for the Jewish council alliance," a local charity settlement institution. Some teachers in the same school gave still other explanations.

The Young Workers' League is fighting the registration on class grounds. Its members are explaining to the other students that the schools are gathering this information to help the capitalist state discover and persecute the more militant members of the working class. In many schools the students have torn up the cards, refusing to return them, and protesting against the registration of the workers as if they were so many animals owned by the capitalist class.

"The registration will continue," declared Charles H. Lake, assistant superintendent of public schools. But the members of the Young Workers' League reply, "The registration must not succeed. The children of the workers must be taught not to betray the interests of the working class."

"Soviet Rule" vs. "The Empire" Discussion Is Rousing British Labor

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, a storm of controversy sweeps the British Labor Party, bringing to the front, in clear perspective, the various tendencies within this very much blunted political weapon of the British workers.

J. Ramsay MacDonald, the late "labor" premier, one of the best premiers that British capitalism has ever had, returns from his vacation trip in the West Indies just in time to help J. H. Thomas, and other labor lackeys of British royalty, defend the huge expenditure of funds planned for the trip of the Prince of Wales to South Africa, Argentina and other spots on the globe, where he is expected to repair some of the broken down political fences of British imperialism.

David Kirkwood, the Scotch labor member of parliament, declares he was picked by the executives of the Parliamentary Labor Party to launch the attack on the prince. MacDonald comes back with, "It's a lie!" And the fight is on.

• • • •

The position of the MacDonalds and the Thomases is considerably undermined by the debate aroused over the forthcoming report of the British Trade Union Delegation that recently spent six weeks investigating conditions in Soviet Russia. Considerable has already been published regarding the views of these delegates, but the official report has not yet been made. It is expected to be finished very soon and thus place the organized British labor movement pretty much on record in its sympathetic attitude towards the First Workers' Republic.

The capitalist sheet, the London Daily Telegraph, claims to have had a peep at the preliminary drafts of the report and, from its viewpoint, charges it to be "an amazing document."

• • • •

While MacDonald and Thomas lean more and more, if this is possible, toward "their king" and "the empire," the Purcells, Tilletts and Bromleys, who went to Soviet Russia, are more than ever outspoken in their praise of the achievements of Soviet Rule, startling the British capitalists especially when they declared they were much impressed by the maneuvers of the Red Army, "the first disciplined, armed and trained force created and utilized for the defense of working class institutions."

There will be little comfort for the renegades who have joined the ranks of counter-revolution, and weep over the so-called "political prisoners" in the Workers' Republic. The British delegation tells these renegade campfollowers of capitalist anti-Soviet propaganda and intervention that, "we can only express the hope prisoners in our own country interned for similar offenses are permitted to enjoy the same standard of comfort and treated with the same kind of humanity and have something like the same opportunities."

Outside of a few Abramoviches, Goldmans, and of course the grand dukes and all their retinue, Soviet Russia recognizes that the few who still feel that the Workers' Republic isn't just what they want, will in time realize their mistake. In the meantime Soviet Rule must be protected against them. On this Russian policy the British trade unionists place their "O. K." much to MacDonald's chagrin; the MacDonald who still has hopes of overthrowing workers' rule in Soviet Georgia, if not in Russia itself.

• • • •

Abramovich, sitting in the office of the "socialist," Morris Hillquit, in New York City, gives the Times an interview reiterating his attack on the so-called "terror" in Russia. To this the British trade unionists record their conviction that this charge cannot honestly be believed by any unprejudiced person travelling within the Union of Soviet Republics and talking to its citizens.

• • • •

All of which indicates that MacDonald and Thomas and their kind are going to have some hard sledding in the British Labor Party and in the British trade union movement. Red baiters in the British trade unions will face difficult going; an echo of which, it is hoped, will be heard in the American labor movement.

This present discussion in Great Britain within the Labor Party must accelerate the drift of new working masses to Communism. The workers will ask, "If Soviet Rule is so good for the Russians, why shouldn't it be good for the workers of Great Britain?"

To which American workers might add, "And how about the United States?"

COMMUNISTS IN CITY ELECTION INCREASE VOTE

over the issues. The issues made by the capitalist candidates were of the usual election type: "City Beautiful," "clean-up," street car franchise, etc. It was the old stuff. The populace, least of all, the working class, saw little room for interest. The ward machines worked as they always do. Most of the present job holders were re-elected.

Despite the fact that most of the Communist nominees were denied a place on the ballot by the usual political petition tricks, those who remained carried on a stiff fight on a Communist program. Their appeal was made to the workers of Chicago on a program that, so far, stands as the best application of Communism to municipal questions that has been put forward.

Communist Program Covered Issues.

On every phase of municipal life the Communist candidates had a program that put the issues fairly and squarely on a working class basis. Concerning the fake municipal ownership talk that was made a feature of the campaign the Communist candidates said, "Take the ownership of public utilities from the hands of private capitalists and confiscate all franchises." They demanded work or compensation for all unemployed at full wages; no evictions for non-payment of rent; abolition of the use of police to break strikes; union wages, eight-hour day and a five-day week for all workers. Every one of the demands of the Communist candidates were such that they could receive the whole-hearted support of every class conscious worker.

75,000 Leaflets Distributed.

Seventy-five thousand leaflets carrying the program of the candidates and issued by the Workers (Communist) Party were distributed over the city in connection with thousands of leaflets protesting against wage cuts and asking the workers to resist them with strikes. Meetings were held in many wards. On the whole, the campaign showed that the Workers (Communist) Party can go out in elections and get a hearing and real working class support on the basis of Communist demands.

Martin Abern, secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, local Chicago, made the following statement on the aldermanic elections held yesterday:

"The aldermanic elections brought victory again to the forces of reaction and capitalist stupidity. Men representing the interests of one group or another of the exploiters of the workers of Chicago with the aid of the capitalist press, thugs and gunmen, spouting church men and plenty of money from the capitalist war chests, were elected as aldermen.

"Not a single candidate apart from the candidates endorsed by and members of the Workers (Communist) Party had a single word to say on fundamental working class issues such as the race question, the thousands of unemployed in Chicago, the use of thugs and police to break strikes, the traction system as a poli- for a few exploiters and many other tical foot ball and profit institution problems of concern to the workers. Only our candidates presented these issues in the distribution of thousands of pieces of literature giving the program of the Workers (Communist) Party thru meetings, etc.

"Our candidates presented the only final solution to all ills and difficulties of the workers, that is, abolition of the capitalist system and political power and control of industries by the workers themselves.

"Our candidates, Comrades Cejka, Brooker, Dozenberg and Epstein in polling an average 2 per cent of the vote cast in their wards, made a good showing indicative of future gains for Communism in coming parliamentary skirmishes as one of the means towards rousing the workers against capitalism. As for the fashion in which working class candidates are thrown off the ballot, this is probably as good a way as any to show the futility of pure parliamentarism as a really effective weapon of the workers."

YELLOW DOG CONTRACT OF YELLOW CAB

Not Even an "Open" Shop Pretense

The following is an exact copy of a "yellow dog" contract of the Yellow Taxi company which it forces on all its employes. It is sufficient proof that this union-hating concern is not entitled to a red cent of patronage from any unionist or union sympathiser. The Yellow Cab outfit is one of the most hostile upholders of the union wrecking, open shop movement. The contract follows:

"Non-Union Agreement—Yellow Cab Company

"(No.).................... (Date)....................

"The undersigned, whose craft is that of a..........in accepting employment from Yellow Cab company in its..........as.........., does so upon the understanding and agreement with said employer: ....

"(1) That as to said craft, said shop, garage and taxicab business has been operated and will continue to be operated, upon the non-union basis and non-union.

"(2) That said employer will not recognize, nor have any dealings with, any labor union composed of persons engaged in or representing said craft.

"(3) That said employee is not a member of any labor union. While employed by said employer, said employee will not become a member of any labor union and will have no dealings, communications or interviews with the officers, agents or members of any labor union in relation to membership by said employee in such labor union, or in relation to said employe's said employment.

"(4) That it is the intention and desire of the said employer and employee that the employment relation between them be kept entirely free from interference or intervention in any respect by any labor union, its officers or agents.

League of Nations Labor Office Would Chain Crews to Ships

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—International Seamen's Union of America, has issued to the seamen's organizations thruout the world a memorandum protesting against the terms of a proposal made by the conference on the status of seamen, held under the auspices of the Intl. Labor Office at Geneva, in June, 1920, that an international code for seamen be drafted and adopted by the nations.

The report of this Geneva conference urged that "violations of provisions in contracts of engagement between seamen and employers should not be dealt with as criminal offenses, unless they be violations of clauses of a public character maintaining public policy as distinguished from private interest, and even then only at the instance of public authorities."

The I. S. U. points out that the quitting of jobs by sailors on ships tied up at the dock in a safe harbor may be made a violation of "public" interest by hostile public authorities, and the freedom of seamen to quit their vessels be thereby destroyed.

Loom Fixers Object to Short Time Work

FULTON, N. Y., Feb. 25.—Loomfixers are on strike in the American Woolen company plant here. Their demand is for work every day that the local plant is operating.

EASTERN DISTRICT

SPLITTING HEADS ONLY ARGUMENT OF A. C. W. FAKERS

Members Beaten by Thugs and Cops

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Feb. 25.—High handed reactionaries were at their best at the regular union meeting of Local 54, Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, in Brooklyn on Thursday, when they used thugs and police to beat the members, splitting their heads and throwing them out of the building via the fire escape, and causing their arrest.

The trouble started when the progressives asked that the alleged scab record of J. Glaveckas, who had usurped the presidency of the local, be investigated. Also under handed methods of the reactionaries, which recalls a bit of history of the local.

Everybody Satisfied But Reactionary Yellows

Three years ago the local voted to have the election of officers take place in December in order that the new officers might take hold with the beginning of the year. For two years this rule has been followed and the local had been forging ahead effectively in its struggle against the bosses, no one questioning the right of the local to elect in December instead of in January as had been the custom before.

The fly in the ointment, however, was the constant rise of the progressive element which always elected its officers to the chagrin of the reactionaries and their friends among the bosses.

These reactionaries trumped up an excuse for a pile of dirty work in secretly urging upon the members that the December elections were not legal, and that the January meeting packed the house with reactionary elements and by a slender vote carried the motion to declare the December election void.

Yellow Socialist Scab.

J. Glaveckas, yellow socialist and companion of the bosses, who is said to have scabbed in the S. Ackerman shop when the union struck the shop, wiggled himself in as president.

The odious record of the new president could not be forgotten by the progressives and at the February meeting on Thursday they made a motion for an investigation. The move had apparently been expected, for no sooner was the motion made for a clearing up of Glavecka's record, than thugs stationed in the different partr of the hall began to use black jacks on the progressives and throw them out of the building down the fire escape.

Sluggers and Police with Socialists.

In this assault K. Jankaitis sustained a blow that split his scalp several inches, a number of women were seriously injured and thrown out with the men and the police called to make arrests.

Jankaitis was taken to jail and his bail fixed at $500, and in the morning it was raised to $1,000.

After the raid on the progressives, Glaveckas and his followers suspended nine of the most active members of the union for five years, threatening them with expulsion if they offered objections and put up a fight against this highhanded procedure.

The progressives have called a mass meeting of all the members for 7:30 Friday evening, Feb. 27, at 127 Havemeyer St., corner of Grant, Brooklyn.

CAPITALISM AS A WHOLE AIDS COAL OPERATORS TO BREAK UP UNION BY ORDERING SCAB COAL

Total production of coal in the three major nonunion states rose from 116,944,165 tons in 1921 to 173,124,907 tons in 1923 and to 174,290,000 tons in 1924 while production in the three leading unionized states rose from 121,865,048 tons in 1921 to 146,085,617 tons in 1923 and then fell back to 119,420,000 tons in 1924 or lower than 1921.

The production of these states in 1923 and 1924 was:

Tons of Coal	1923	1924
Nonunion
Kentucky	44,777,317	45,000,000
West Va.	107,889,941	110,000,000
Union
Illinois	79,310,075	67,880,000
Indiana	26,229,099	22,340,000
Ohio	40,546,443	29,200,000

Business interests have shifted the demand for coal to the nonunion states to make union miners bear the burden of deflating an industry overexpanded by coal profiteers. Tho scab coal costs more than union coal, capitalist business as a whole is willing to bear the temporary increased cost, in order to destroy the miners' union. Then all miners will be forced to work at starvation wages.

UNEMPLOYMENT GROWS IN GREAT BRITAIN; NOW 11.5 PER CENT

LONDON, Feb. 25.—A slight improvement in employment in England occurred in the latter part of January, but at the end of the month the total unemployed remained higher than in the early part of December.

Among 11,500,000 people who are insured against unemployment, the percentage of unemployed at the end of January was 11.5, against 10.9 at the end of December, and last year's lowest percentage of 9.4 at the end of June.

WAITERS HUNGER AS THEY SERVE HOTEL GUESTS

From $5 Weekly Salary, Worker Sends Dollar

Imagine working in a place where you serve all kinds of food and yet you are starving! This is the situation of one worker who is a waiter in a New York hotel and who writes the DAILY WORKER Wednesday to send his dollar for the insurance policy fund.

His name is James Vassilavas and his letter reads as follows:

"I am working in one of the New York hotels as a waiter and I would like to have the other workers know the life that we live.

"Every day we have to get up at 6 o'clock in the morning (or at 5:30 if we live far away up town) in order to be on the dining room floor at 6:45. From then until 10 o'clock, we can hardly make 50 cents. After 10 o'clock we go out till 11:30 and then must be on the floor again until 3. We have to stand in the dining room like statues.

"We go out again at 3, with 50 or 75 cents, and then we have to come back to work again at 5:30, for the third time. From 5:30 to 9 o'clock, we work—and make at the most $1.00.

"So every day is passing, and we can't make in tips more than $2.50. And even if we do make it, we have to go out and spend half of it every day for food. The meals they give us are fit only for dogs. Nobody can eat that food. Imagine working in a place where you serve all kinds of food and yet you starve to death. We are starving for everything.

"As for wages, we receive $5.00 every week, which we have to turn over to the boss for a decent room to sleep in. If you get a room for $3.00 or $4.00, you will not be able to sleep in it."

CLEAN HOUSE IN CENTRAL UNION OF PITTSBURGH

Beattie, Labor Spy, Hangs to Fakers

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 25.—To the average trade unionist in Pittsburgh, a revolution occurred in the Central Labor Union by the result of the election which was held last meeting, but in reality it is only a change of the personnel of the officers.

During the Beattie trial here, (who was finally expelled as a labor spy), the old officialdom was so discredited that they did not even stand nomination and for this reason it was easier to displace them. But anyone that showed any opposition to the reactionary officialdom and who had an opponent, the officials saw to it that he was defeated. Such men as Jerry McMunn from the Moulders, who at the previous meeting attacked the editor of the fake labor sheet, the Labor Free Press, and Jos. Duty, who lead the fight on Beattie in the executive board, were defeated for the new board.

The Miners' officials with their large delegation were absent from the meeting. It was they who did everything in their power to save Beattie from expulsion, and by this action they completely discredited themselves.

Some of the newly elected officers of the council are: President William Crissman, steamfitter; Vice President, Chas. Miller, stationary engineer; Recording Secretary, P. J. McGrath, street car man; Executive Board, Abott, teamster; Dorsey, Freeman, Lawrence, A. T. McNamara, Roskoph, Sampson, Storm and Weitzel.

Pressmen at Work on Scab Seattle Hearst Sheet Give Cash Aid

SEATTLE, Feb. 25.—Rumors of an early settlement of the strike and lockout that has made Hearst's Seattle Post-Intelligencer a nonunion daily since last June are premature. The defense committee of the printers, mailers and stereotypers is still publishing large advertisements stating that the P.-I. is unfair to the Washington State Federation of Labor, the Central Labor Council of Seattle and vicinity, all central labor councils in Washington state.

The three printing trades unions have been out since May 30, 1924, because the local Hearst management refused to pay the same wages and maintain the same conditions as all other dailies published in Seattle. The pressmen, while remaining at work, are contributing to the defense fund of the sister unions.

TAMPA, FLORIDA, UNIONS HAVE A LOT TO LEARN

Don't Know Yet What Unions Are For

By M. ZEVIN

The Carpenters' Union, like the Central Labor Council, of Tampa, is a "law abiding," small and helpless class collaboration trade union. They are affiliated with the Tampa Board of Trade (elsewhere known as the chamber of commerce).

In their dealings with employers they appeal in the name of "fair play," and "square deal," which they (by the way) always fail to receive.

A few years ago, A. Geiger, with the aid of a few more who possessed plain, ordinary, common sense, proposed that the Carpenters' Union call a conference of all building trades unions in Tampa and work out a program whereby all unions would refuse to work on any job where there was a strike. This proposal was not even given thought let alone action, and received little support either from the officials or the rank and file.

As a result of this, the unions are in a helpless position when it comes to a fight with the employers. Our wage scale is the lowest, 80 cents per hour, and working conditions the worst in the country. Jobs are quite often as far as 20 to 30 miles from Tampa, to which we must carry our heavy boxes of tools daily. There are no street cars in those country towns should one want to spend three or four hours riding to and from work.

There is quite a "building boom" going on around Tampa. But none of it is controlled by any of the building trades unions, and but few are being worked on by union labor, not to speak of having union conditions.

Workmen must find their work in the open market, competing with one another for the job, instead of, as elsewhere, from the union offices. As a result of this bargaining, particularly during the winter season when hundreds of carpenters are coming from the northern states, even the miserably low wage of 80 cents an hour is being cut to as low as 50 cents and sometimes to even 25 cents an hour. It is quite usual here to find "good union carpenters" from up north, working for $2 and $3 a day, and the union is too weak to do anything. A state of chaos exists, the union scale of 80 cents per hour is a paper scale.

"When we came to Tampa we came into the union and applied for a job. We've done that for weeks long, untill all of our funds were gone, and what were we to do? We had to get what we could in order to keep from starving," is the excuse offered for working below the scale.

The local carpenters are suffering too, their wages are being cut daily. Afraid of not getting work, the majority of them do not report the cut to the union offices, thus the vicious circle is completed.

The situation has reached a stage where we must fight or starve. The workers are now in a fighting mood. A lively campaign to strengthen their ranks, and to organizing the unorganized, has been started, with the purpose in view of presenting demands to the bosses and striking if necessary, to enforce them.

A large group of carpenters are urging that two main demands, namely, "the union shop," and "free transportation" shall not be compromised. Many are in favor of amalgamation, and point out, that if the bricklayers, plumbers, painters, electricians, etc. fought as a unit, like the chamber of commerce, the daily papers, the courts, and police departments support the bosses, we would win our demands in short order.

Fifty copies of the DAILY WORKER were distributed by our 74 years young sympathizer, at a joint meeting of both carpenters' locals, and they all acclaimed the DAILY WORKER as the best and only true working class daily paper.

Those who wanted to read real working class news from a truly working class paper, should give their subscriptions to W. D. Landis, 701 Lafayette St., Tampa, Fla.

THIRTY THOUSAND WELSH MINERS ARE NOW UNEMPLOYED

LONDON, England, Feb. 25.—Thirty thousand miners in Wales are unemployed, a news dispatch states. The South Wales Miners' Federation has taken steps to render financial distress to the unemployed miners and their families.

Some time ago the Swansea anthracite miners passed a resolution against colliers working overtime, and doing the work of the day wage men on Sunday, demanding that the unemployed be put on this work.

CENTRAL DISTRICT

"FREEDOM" IS PHILOSOPHY OF OPEN SHOPPERS

Cite Vanderbilt Professor As Guide

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 25.—The Employers' Association is getting out upon a campaign to break up the building trades unions. Breaking up any union is always the function of an employers' association, but the building trades unions are especially getting the attention because of their refusal to accept a wage cut of 12 cents, and in addition have voted by rank and file ballot, not to admit any "arbitration" bunk to cheat them out of what their organized power can get.

An architect, F. McElwaney was to have been the "impartial" umpire. But that's off. There is much call for building trades workers as building is booming and much of it is rush jobs. So the unions do not feel like surrendering.

The Captain Enters The Plot

The employers' association, headed by an animal with a moniker of "captain"—probably a relic of the world war—is broadcasting sheaves of open shop literary efforts to convince the employing contractors of the necessity of fighting the unions.

Captain Anderson, his surname libels the whole of Sweden, sent out a letter to employers last week beginning with a philosophical dissertation from a two-by-four professor of economics in Vanderbilt's university at Nashville. The "prof" talks about "freedom," beautiful, ineffable freedom. In this he, a Vanderbilt hacksaw, sounds almost like an anarchist who pretends he is an I. W. W. Here is his contribution to the open shop:

Capitalist Philosophy Called

"The chief cornerstone of the American theory of industrial life is the freedom of the individual. Freedom of the individual includes the right of a person to work anywhere he pleases under the American flag. Freedom of the individual to sell his labor to anybody, anywhere, at any time. Freedom to buy the labor and products of others without let or hindrance or restriction from any source."

Isn't this a nice philosophy? Perfectly splendid! But for the somewhere near 2,000,000 unemployed the "freedom of the individual to sell his labor to anybody, anywhere, at any time" seems like a horse with a broken back. Nobody can ride the darned critter, nor "sell his labor"—because the capitalists own the jobs and don't make any offers for the free but starving workers to pick up.

The same way with the freedom to buy "the products of others" without restriction from any source. Products are piling up in the warehouses, or factories are running short time on the excuse that "there is no market"; yet millions of people want such products and are certainly restricted from buying them by the miserable scab wages paid by open shop employers. The professor's "freedoms" seem to be all balled up.

"Arise in Your Might!"

Captain H. H. Anderson, the initials probably being for Handsome Harry, lays down the law in three closely typed pages, explaining why building contractors should fight the unions. The "captain" becomes militant, even violent. He says, and he says it twice:

"Cannot our citizenry arise in their might and follow the examples that are laid down by our sister cities?"

The "captain" arises in his might and points out that scab towns are beating Kansas City in drawing "new business concerns." This might not be so attractive to the concerns already located there. And then the "captain" finishes up by quoting the citizens' alliance of St. Paul to prove that he is an excellent instructor in the fine art of scab herding and union baiting.

Says Unions Keep Up Wage Scale While the Unorganized Lose Out

Engineering News Record reports in analyzing its annual survey, shows that at least one-third of the country expects record breaking building booms this year.

The survey divides labor into two groups. One of these described as the more powerful, takes in the highly organized trades engaged in transportation, mining and construction.

For this group the wage tendency has been upward, owing to strength of the unions involved, the urgent demand for the services of the mechanics and the scarcity of apprentices.

The second group takes in shop and factory workers, common laborers and unorganized workers. With this group the wage trend is downward.

ILLINOIS MINERS SUFFER SAVAGE FIGHT FOR LIFE

Companies Attack As Union Weakens

In and around Christopher, Ill., the Old Ben Coal corporation owns several large mines. No. 10, closed down last December, after having worked only two and one-half months during the year 1924. No. 12 and No. 14 are working only two or three days a week.

Mine No. 11 has been closed down for about two weeks. The whistle hasn't even blown since the men running the motors refused to continue work under their present conditions. It has been the custom in all the mines that when a man gets a job on one territory, he was to remain there as long as the territory lasted. But, this company has put into effect the practice of shifting their men all over the field so that they never know from one day to the next where they will be working. This is the reason for the motor men refusing to continue work.

A Fine Scheme.

However, the company was not satisfied with making the conditions worse only in this way. But in an attempt to prepare the ground for a wage reduction, the company has offered to start up the mine again if the men will agree to go down at 5:00 a. m., and if they will go down thru the air shaft, which has a smaller cage and would take more time to let the men down. It would require two hours to either let down or bring out the 700 men working there. The men would have to get up at about 4:00 o'clock in the morning in order to be ready to go down by 5:00, and it would be 6:00 o'clock before they could go home in the evening.

As to the conditions in the mine, it is so filled with men that two men can get only three or four cars a day, many times less.

A 13-Hour Day.

It is such conditions as these that the company is trying to force upon the men, 13 hours per day, from five in the morning till six at night, and this is being attempted in best organized districts in the industry.

No. 11 mine is a test case. If they can put this over in one mine, it will be put into effect in the others as well as eventually forcing down the wages. For altho the men may be working 13 hours, the company will protest that they cannot afford to pay for more than eight hours work.

Once accepting the lowering of these conditions, which the men attained thru long years of struggle, there is no end to the concessions in wages and conditions that the company will force from the miners.

Unemployment Growing.

Conditions in the other parts of the district are not improving, as shown by the fact that within the past week the following mines have closed down: In Eldorado, five mines are colsed down and one working; Coalton, closed down, leaving 900 men out of work; Kincaid Mine No. 8 closed down, letting out 700 men; Nokomis No. 9 closed, 800 men out; on Feb. 18, Klondike mine closed, letting out 650 men. In Sub-District No. 4 of District 12, 17 mines out of a total of 35 have closed down, and the remainder are only working part time.

This only touches the edges of the story, but is sufficient to give one a bird's eye view of the situation in the coal fields of Illinois. Farrington and the remainder of the yellow bellied crew are helpless and hopeless.

"Dig more and cleaner coal" is Farrington's answer to the men who have not dug a ton of coal in six months. "Six hours work, four days per week." "nationalization of mines," "unemployment insurance taken out of the profits of the boss"; such is the solution offered by the progressive miners. And according to the Lewis method of counting 66,000 (?) miners voted for this policy. In reality it received a majority vote.

We are reaching the cross-roads, a little more effort and we will replace the Lewis-Farrington administration with one that will fight in the interest of the miners instead of for the coal operators.

LEFT TURNS

In the miners' election the left wing official vote of 66,000 made Wm. Green look that way.

And the way the miners dig into the labor fakers makes Lewis admit that some of them are sure "hard" coal miners.

NOW YOU TELL ONE!

I know you won't believe this, but it's on the level.

My boss is a big-hearted guy. The gang on the job were all bragging how easy their jobs were. The steamfitter said his was mostly "a pipe"; the plumber said his was usually a cinch and the electrician said his was so easy it would shock them. The boss overheard the whole story and raised their pay.

DUSTIN' OFF AN OLD ONE.

MO—"They say there are 536,000,000 Christians in the world."

BO—"For Christ's sake!"

MO—"That's what they say!"

Every janitor is really half a boss. He can't hire but he's got the job of firing—and he gets fired if he doesn't.

THEREBY HANGS A TALE.

A bill was proposed in Illinois to have pedestrians carry tail lights.

That would be quite useful. It throw a light on what the politicians make of the voters between elections.

Lefty says:

The papers are giving a lot of publicity to a prohibition agent who earns only $2,400 a year and saved $33,000. The A. F. of L. bureaucrats must have been jealous to see a piker like that get so much publicity.

THERE'S A DIFFERENCE.

The discontent among the machinists with their leaders proves the boys in the metal trades are getting good at their trade. They are beginning to note the difference between good steel and bad steel.

AND IN THE CARPENTERS—

The militant left wingers claim they saw to a platform with planks that Hutcheson can't stand on.

Cheer up—if you get board reading these cut ups, you can always nail.

Portland, Oregon, Wobblies in Need of Action Committee

PORTLAND, Ore.—On February 11 the Rowanite (injunction) faction of the I. W. W. dispossessed the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union of their hall located at 109 Second St. True Tuttle, an organizer for Rowan and delinquent delegate of I. U. 120, has taken charge of the hall, charter, records and two cents of said organization.

A representative of the G. E. B. arrived here and since the Rowanites have taken such action, has rented another hall at 121 Burnside street. The Rowanites, who are showing much more spunk than those who depend upon the general office, time, God or somebody else to fight the injunctionite crew, are picketing the new hall, calling all who enter finks and other unsavory names.

So far it has gotten no further than calling names. That's because the I. W. W. is a rip-raring revolutionary union. If a "conservative" A. F. of L. union had Rowan on its hands, the scenery would be littered up with dead and dying.

If anyone needs to see the effect of pacifism on the I. W. W., come to Portland. One cannot imagine the old I. W. W., officered by St. John or Haywood, using comardice under the guise of "moral suasion" on Injunction Jimmie and his splitters.

But, alas, Petrus Jesus Wellnder, who believes revolutionists should be upholstered gentlemen who can "teach" Rowan that injunctions aren't right, and "explain" to True Tuttle that it isn't fair to split the I. W. W.—this impossible idiot is the best the wobblies can afford.

William Ford, port delegate of M. T. W. 510, refuses to turn over funds to the representative of the general office. He is in charge of all properties and is using his position and influence in behalf of the Rowanites.

Some of the wobblies have the queer notion that the way to "fight" Rowan is to give him the organization to play with, that he will ruin it, then the ones who are "right" can say—"See! We told you he was no good!" This might prove that their point was well taken, but, great Scott, what about saving the organization?

Cowards always find a "reason" for being cowards. Portland needs a little "rank and file committee of action."

DAILY WORKER LEADS PRESS IN CLASS STRUGGLE

Lithuanian Paper Passes Resolution

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Feb. 25.— The Lithuanian Communist daily newspaper "Laisve," at its annual meeting held recently, passed a resolution declaring the DAILY WORKER a much more important factor in the class struggle in America than the foreign language workers' newspapers.

The resolution declared:

"Greetings to The DAILY WORKER"

"Dear Comrades:

"The Lithuanian daily Laisve, at its Lithuanian Co-operative Publishing Society, shareholders' meeting held Feb. 15, 1925, in Brooklyn, N. Y., acknowledge, that The DAILY WORKER, the only English Communist daily in this country, is a much more important factor in the class struggle, than any other foreign workers' paper.

"Therefore Laisve shareholders send their heartiest greetings to The DAILY WORKER and extend their hopes for a complete success to our chief organ.

(Signed) J. Nalivaika,
Laisve Co-op. Pub. Soc. Sec'y."

Ever since the shooting at the Lester strip mine in Williamson county, southern Illinois, in 1922, the city of Herrin has been much in the public eye. It was the scene of the great trial in which the capitalists of this state tried to hang the miners who defended their homes and their union against the dregs of the underworld in the role of scabs.

The Trouble Started.

Shortly after the mine riot the ku klux klan came into Williamson county and under the leadership of Glenn Young left death and destruction in its wake. Several shootings occurred with considerable loss to both sides, klan and anti-klan.

The latest shooting affray resulted in the death of the klan leader Young and his foremost opponent, Ora Thomas, deputy sheriff.

What was really behind the klan fight in Williamson county? Who were supporting it? What was it trying to accomplish? In order to get the facts, the DAILY WORKER sent a correspondent, Thurber Lewis into "bloody Williamson," in order to get at the facts.

Lewis interviewed most of the important leaders on both sides. He talked to Sheriff Galligan and to the klan cyclops who inherited Young's mantle. It was no easy assignment, but Lewis is young and hardboiled. He has an interesting story to tell.

The Leading Gunman.

It was not so pleasant to interview a baker's dozen of loaded revolvers to which were attached as many sour looking thugs, presided over by a Kentucky feudist, whose favorite music is the barking of gats and his favorite target a human body. This leading gentleman is Young's successor. He did not say much, but you will like to hear Comrade Lewis tell his story.

The story will be told at the Workers Party open forum on next Sunday evening at 8:00 o'clock, in the Lodge Room of the Ashland Auditorium, corner of Ashland and Van Buren Sts.

Mid-City English Branch Holds Open Meeting; All Welcome

The Mid-City English Branch of Chicago will hold its open meeting tonight at 8 o'clock at the Greek Hall, 722 Blue Island avenue. The speaker will be Thurber Lewis, lecturing on the subject of "The Tactics of the Communist International." All workers are welcome, especially those not yet members of the Workers Party. There is no admission charged.

NOTICE!

Comrades and Branches holding Lenin Memorial meeting tickets, please settle for them at once at the local office. We want to close the accounts. Come any day or evening to Room 303, 166 W. Washington St. and settle for the tickets.

The Workers Party in Action

STAGE SET FOR GALA TIME AT RED REVEL BALL

Brilliant Costumes to Make Judges Wary

The stage is all set for the grandest affair yet held by the Workers Party, Local Chicago, the Red Revel Masquerade Ball. All the branches are participating. The Young Workers League will be out in full force as well as the juniors who have contrived the most cunning and expressive costumes in their efforts to win the big prize offered for the best group costume.

From the reports received from our branches it seems as tho every branch will have a chance at the big prize. The judges at the midnight parade of the masqueraders will no doubt find it difficult to choose from among the many varicolored groups, the twenty to win the prizes. None of the great men whom we have so far approached for the arduous task of judging the best costume have accepted. We will have to resort to challenges, it is supposed.

Get Tickets Early.

All Workers Party comrades and branches and all our friends are asked to provide themselves with tickets in advance because they are only 50 cents in advance (75 cents at the door), to get their costumes and to be put in full force at the masquerade.

Workers Party branches should also not forget to send their representative to the meeting of the RED REVEL Committee this Wednesday and to send in to the local office of the Workers Party the names of those comrades who have volunteered to work at the RED REVEL on various committees.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 8.00 P. M., AT WEST END WOMEN'S CLUB HALL, 37 S. ASHLAND BOULEVARD is the time and place.

Harlem Branch Challenges all in Daily Drive

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—The Harlem Jewish branch announces thru the DAILY WORKER and Freiheit agent, Comrade Ed Schwartz, that the branch has raised a total of $2,500.00 for the Jewish daily Communist newspaper. Comrade Schwartz, who was the branch campaign manager in the drive, announces that the branch has so far raised $78.00 for the DAILY WORKER. Comrade Schwartz issues the following challenge to the other New York branches:

A Challenge.

"We are going to fill Madison Square Garden to the roof on Sunday, March 15, 1925. And we are going to keep our reputation as a prize winning branch. We intend to show to the comrades that the winning of the DAILY WORKER bannet by the Harlem Jewish branch is no mere accident. It is a result of hard work. The members of the Harlem Jewish branch are in the new circulation drive for the DAILY WORKER with both feet. All our shoulders are to the wheel.

"And we challenge all other New York branches of the Workers Party to wrench the prize from us. Don't let us get away with it. To work, comrades, and we will make this affair a success that will overshadow all our previous affairs and entitle us to a New York DAILY WORKER. Yours for 15,000 new subscribers in the city of New York, Ed Schwartz, DAILY WORKER agent, Harlem Jewish branch."

The Red Revel

The only legitimate excuse the Red Revel masquerade ball has for breaking into the limelight is that it is primarily intended to provide the munitions of war for the local and district offices of the Workers Party. Which means it is organized for the purpose of raising funds with which to carry on propaganda against the capitalist system and to organize the workers for the overthrow of capitalism.

This is a legitimate excuse. It is an end that justifies the means. Besides, Communists like to make merry once in a while. It is good for them. Even Karl Marx and Engels used to make merry. One of Marx's favorite pastimes was making a phrenological examination of visitors. Certain heads are interesting, at least on the outside. Marx was more interested in the inside.

Communists and sympathizers will use their feet as well as their heads on next Saturday night. Their heads will be used as background for masks. This means a little more mystery and a little more money for the local office of the Workers Party.

Don't forget the date, time and place. They are:

Date—Saturday evening, February 28.

Time—From 8 p. m. until 1 a. m.

Place—West End Women's Club Hall, 37 South Ashland Blvd., corner of Monroe St.

Get your tickets early and save 25 cents. They will cost 75 cents at the door.

March 15th Demands Your Best, New York

MARCH 15 is the date of the greatest task ever undertaken by the Communist movement in New York City. It is proposed to secure fifteen thousand subscribers for the DAILY WORKER, and to assemble them in Madison Square Garden on that date for press pageant, Paris Commune celebration concert and ball.

To fill Madison Square for an entertainment is a real man-sized job in itself. To fill it with subscribers for the DAILY WORKER is a task truly herculean. It will require the active co-operation of every Workers Party paper, every party institution, every party and Young Workers' League unit, every member to measure up to the possibilities of this occasion.

Judging from the response to the early announcements this co-operation will be forthcoming one hundred per cent. As a conception of what this affair will mean to New York in the way of Communist propaganda and organization spreads among the membership of the branches they are strating to work with an unprecedented enthusiasm.

They realize that the securing of fifteen thousand subscribers for the DAILY WORKER means a tremendous propaganda in itself. A good percentage of them can be made permanent, and will thus become a mighty factor in the ultimate establishment of a DAILY WORKER right here in New York.

They also realize that a Madison Square Garden meeting is worth more for propaganda than a hundred ordinary meetings. In a hall holding only three or four thousand the bulk of the audience always consists of Workers Party members and their immediate friends. Never more than a few hundred non-Communists attend such meetings. But in a Madison Square Garden audience of fifteen thousand we know for a certainty that besides the party members and their families there are at least ten thousand outsiders. Such a meeting is therefore a real achievement in reaching the mass.

To make it a success will test the powers of the New York movement. But making it a success will also develop the powers of the New York organization as no other effort could or would.

See that your branch puts its shoulder to the wheel and helps push. Subscription tickets for the affair have been sent to all branches of the party and Young Workers' League. If you have not received yours, come to the District Office, 108 East 14th street, and get a supply and get busy at once.

Incidentally worth while prizes are offered to the individual and branches making the best records in this work. The contest ends March 15. Begin now and make use of this opportunity during the next three weeks to make Communist propaganda and build the Communist organization.

Young Workers League C. C. C. Meets Tonight

The first meeting of the city central committee Y. W. L. of Chicago, since the city convention will meet to-night 8 p. m. at 722 Blue Island avenue.

The most important matter before the C. C. C. will be the question of the Weekly Young Worker. A thoro discussion will take place on the distribution of the Weekly Young Worker and the organization of the city committee of agents.

Delegates are urged to come prepared to report on the activities of their branches and the plans made by the branches in regard to the Weekly Young Worker.

Other matters of importance will be taken up and all delegates are urged to be present on time. Party members are welcome.

Rudquist Speaks in Minneapolis

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 25.—Gust Rudquist a well known Swedish Communist speaker will speak Thursday Feb. 26, at I. O. G. T. Hall, 1416 2nd St. So., 8 P. M. and in the T. U. E. L. meeting to be held at Jupiter Hall 2514 Lincoln St. N. E. Friday Feb. 27th 8. P. M. Admission to both meetings free.

MANY NEGROES JOIN PARTY AT MASS MEETING

Workers Must Organize Regardless of Color

Twenty-three persons applied for membership in the Workers (Communist) Party at the most successful mass meeting held among the Negroes of the south side in many months. The speakers told the workers present of the demands of the Workers (Communist) Party in the aldermanic campaign.

Gordon Owens, prominent Negro Communist, told of the program of the Workers Party on the Negro psoblem. He made an appeal to all workers of all races to unite to overthrow their exploiters and join the Workers Party.

E. L. F. Doty, Communist candidate for alderman who was ruled off the ballot by the election commissioners, declared that the Negroes of the whole world must unite as a class and work shoulder to shoulder with the white workers, in the unions and the Workers Party to secure control of the government and industries for their class. Comrade Doty told of the pogroms against the Jews in Russia before the revolution, and told how in Russia today the Soviet government is a workers' and peasants' government run for the benefit of the entire working class.

Karl Reeve, reporter for the DAILY WORKER, told of the international struggle of all the colonial peoples for power, and told of the growing revolt of the dark races in India, Africa, Asia and the entire world, under the Communist banner. Comrade Reeve told how the subject races are exploited by the capitalists at less wages than are paid the whites. He told how in America the textile barons exploit the southern Negroes at cheaper wages than are paid the whites, consequently reducing wages for the same work in the north. The only solution, he declared, was the uniting of the workers under the Workers Party banner as a class.

The ku klux klan and similar organizations, are used in an attempt to divide the workers into different races and creeds, and any division of the workers is detrimental to their own interests. Reeve told of the housing conditions among the Negroes on the south side, and quoted from the Workers Party resolution on the Negro question.

Comrade Mahler, who acted as chairman, spoke on the DAILY WORKER and its relation to the Negroes' problems.

WILKES BARRE MEMBERSHIP MEETING

Special membership meeting of all members of the Workers Party in the vicinity of Wilkes Barre is called for Sunday March 1st at 2 P. M. in the Party Headquarters 718 N. Sinclair Boasts That He Won't be Caught; Evidence Don't Count

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. — Harry Sinclair, thru close associates in the capitol, is sending out the word that he will not be caught with any evidence of bribery of Albert Fall, former secretary of the interior upon him.

It is suggested that the discovery that Fall deposited in his own bank account a lot of coupons from liberty bonds that are traced back to a dummy corporation in Canada, founded by Sinclair and a representative of Standard Oil of Indiana, will not prove Sinclair to be implicated. Osler, the head of the dummy concern, who fled to Africa to hunt big game when the court got after him, is declared to be ready to say he never met Sinclair.

Harlem Open Forum Gives Interesting Lecture on Sunday

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—A symposium on literature and art, and the revolution will take place at the Harlem forum of the Harlem section of the Workers Party, Local New York, next Sunday evening, March 1 at the Harlem headquarters, 64 East 104th street. Three speakers will lead the discussion, Simon Felshin, Louis Lozwick and Joseph Freeman. The topic is a very interesting one. The speakers will treat the subject from every angle, as one of them, Felshin, is a poet, Lozowick is a painter, and Freeman a literary critic.

Open Forum Popular.

The Sunday evening open forum in Harlem will continue for two months, as so far it has proven a success. A tentative list of topics and speakers is the following: "Is a Revolution Possible in the United States?" by Israel Amter; "Working Class Education" by Oliver Carlson; "Can there be Proseprity for the American Workers?" by H. M. Wicks; "Religion as an Instrument of Capitalism" by Bourgin; "The Family—Past, Present and Future" by Rose Pastor Stokes; "The Capitalist, Labor and Communist Press" by Ludwig Lore; "Cultural Aspects of the Russian Revolution" by Moissaye Olgin; "Proletcult" by Hyman Jacobson together with a cultural and literary evening.

CALIFORNIA LAW BANS HAIR BOBS BY OTHER SEX

Los Angeles Reports Many Meetings

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 25.—The barbers of Los Angeles have realized for some time past the necessity of doing something to better their condition. At the present time, legislation is pending in the state legislature that if passed will prohibit barbers from performing barber work upon females, and further prohibit barbers from massaging, shampooing, etc., any person regardless of sex.

If this pending legislation should pass, it would no doubt improve the conditions of the workers in China, and would also eliminate a lot of divorces as it would also give the barbers a chance to realize that without a strong organization unemployment would grow in proportion to the enforcement of this law.

Mark Down the Date.

"The Beauty and the Bolshevik" will be shown in Los Angeles on April 8 at the Philharmonic Auditorium at 8 p. m. under the auspices of the International Workers' Aid and the Labor Defense Council. Other sympathetic organizations are requested not to arrange any entertainment or meetings of importance at that date, and individuals are requested not to make any other appointments on that evening. On April 8 the readers of the DAILY WORKER as well as their friends should pack the Philharmonic Auditorium.

March 2, United Front Date.

On Monday night, 6:30 p. m., March 2, another united front conference of the Labor Defense Council will be held, of delegates from all local unions, workers' fraternal organizations, and workers' political organizations to continue the fight for the defense of workers prosecuted under the criminal syndicalism law.

Y. W. L. Meeting Nights.

The Young Workers' League in Los Angeles now has three branches. The main branch meets every Friday night at 224 South Spring street, Room 200. Branch No. 2 meets every Monday night in the Co-operative Building, Brooklyn and Mott, at 7:00 p. m., and Branch No. 3 (Jewish-speaking), meets every Tuesday night, also in the Co-operative Building.

Will Enter Election.

The political committee of the Workers' Party, Local Los Angeles, is planning to endorse working-class candidates of their own and supported by other workers' organizations, in the coming municipal elections in May.

SCRANTON MEMBERSHIP MEETING

Special membership meeting of all Workers Party members in the vicinity of Scranton will be held Sunday, March 1, at 2 P. M. at 2727 N. Main Ave., Scranton, Pa. Comrades, Joseph Manley, A. Jakira and R. Baker will be present at this meeting to outline a plan of action for an important campaign that will be conducted in the Anthracite Coal Region. BUFFALO UNION BACKS WORK OF LABOR DEFENSE

Labor Assembly Gets T. U. E. L. Program

By FRANKLIN BRILL.
(Buffalo Correspondent of the DAILY WORKER.)

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 25.—At the last meeting of the Central Labor Council the program of action submitted by the Trade Union Educational League delegates, covering the local situation, was discussed. The program called for aggressive work with a view of strengthening and unifying the movement in Buffalo.

Of course, the document was referred to the executive board, which, like most kindred bodies in orthodox A. F. of L. units, is made up of the most reactionary members of the assembly. But the T. U. E. L. delegates will give a good account of themselves. They will continue the fight for their program by bringing in specific motions and resolutions for the consideration of the council.

Condemn Syndicalism Laws.

At the last meeting of the International Hod Carriers and Building and Common Laborers local of Buffalo, this militant body of workers unanimously passed a resolution condemning syndicalism laws in the various states and specifically pledged their support to the Communist defendants in the St. Joseph, Michigan, trial.

DAILY WORKER Circulation Increases.

Comrade Dirba, secretary of the DAILY WORKER committee, reports progress in the work of increasing circulation of the DAILY WORKER. Plans have been adopted for the work of pushing the circulation of the Little Red Library and other party Workers Party literature at branch and public meetings.

The Workers (Communist) Party of Buffalo is planning observance of International Women's Day, Sunday, March 15, as proclaimed by the Communist International. The place of the meeting will be announced later. The party will also celebrate the sixth anniversary of the Communist International on Sunday, March 8.

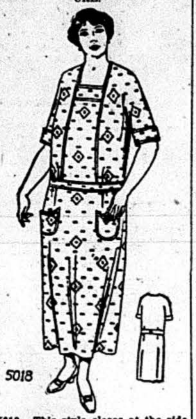
Our Daily Pattern

A FROCK FOR THE MATURE FIGURE.



5018. This style closes at the side of the vest portion. The lines are comfortable and pleasing. Percale, gingham, linen and rep are attractive for dresses of this kind.

The pattern is cut in 8 sizes; bust measure, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54 and 56 inches and waist measure, 35, 37, 39, 41, 43, 45, 47 and 49 inches. To make the dress for a 44-inch bust will require 4⅛ yards 36 inches wide. The width at the foot is 2 yards.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in silver or stamps.

Address: The DAILY WORKER, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

NOTICE TO PATTERN BUYERS—The patterns being sold thru the DAILY WORKER pattern department are furnished by a New York firm of pattern manufacturers. Orders are forwarded by the DAILY WORKER every day as received, and they are mailed by the manufacturer direct to the customer. The DAILY WORKER does not keep a stock of patterns on hand. Delivery of patterns ordinarily will take at least 10 days from the date of mailing the order. Do not become impatient if your pattern is delayed.

BUFFALO, NEW YORK, HAS LIVE DAILY WORKER CORRESPONDENT

The DAILY WORKER has received a letter from Comrade Franklin P. Brill, of Buffalo, that he has been designated by the Buffalo local of the Workers (Communist) Party to send in news items of party activities in Buffalo. This is a good precedent to follow, and every local of the Workers Party in the country which has not yet done so should follow Buffalo's example.

The first story sent in by Comrade Brill, appearing in another column, gives the news of the labor world in Buffalo from the Communist viewpoint. What's doing in town?

ANGLO—ITALIAN OIL MONOPOLY GRABS ALBANIA

Concessions Shuts Out Yankee Thieves

ROME, Italy, Feb. 25.—Italy will participate in the Anglo-Persian company's oil concessions in Albania to the extent of 20 or 25 per cent, as a result of Premier Mussolini's vigorous protest against the British monopoly.

Concerning the monopoly one clause in the hitherto unpublished concession—ratified last week by Ahmed Zogu's rump parliament—is significant.

May Choose Lands It Wants.

The Anglo-Persian company is permitted to choose its 200,000 hectares (494,200 acres) wherever it wishes, in a single parcel or in separate plots. Experts here say that this would permit the company to take over all the profitable oil lands in Albania.

A question now arises as to what the Anglo-Persian company will receive in compensation for granting Italy the right to participate in the concession.

Sinclair Concessions Lapse.

It is pointed out that the oil concessions in Emilia and Sicily, formerly granted to the Sinclair company, have lapsed. Will they be given to the Anglo-Persian company with a window dressing of Italian participation? That seems probable. The result would be that American firms bidding for concession in Italy and Albania would receive nothing but the horse laugh.

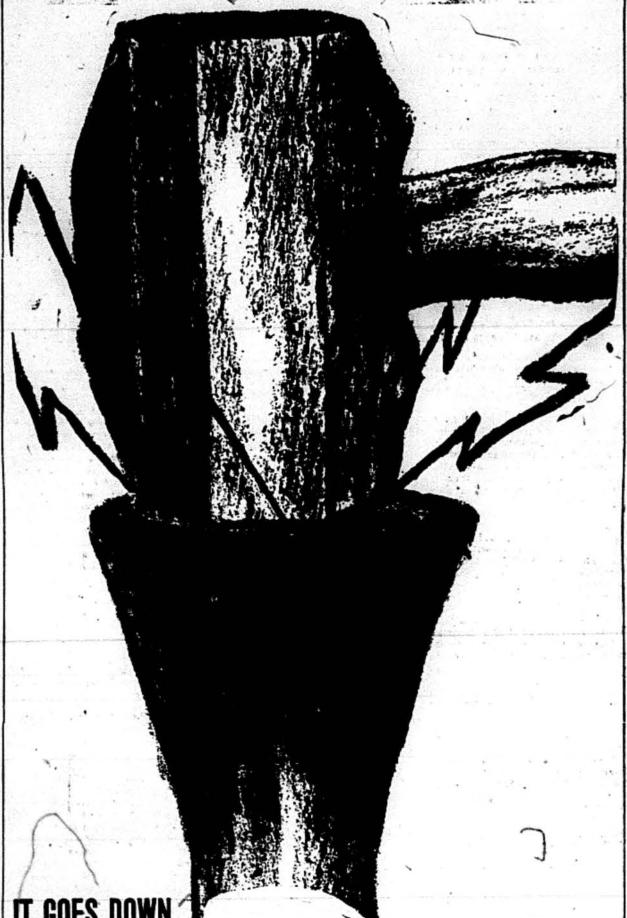
NORFOLK, Va., Feb. 25.—A dozen officers and several members of the crew of the government transport Beaufort are expected to be courtmartialed, it was learned today, as the result of the seizure of more than 200 gallons of wines and liquor on the vessel when it arrized in Hampton roads from the West Indies.

Up With the Hammer! Down With the Spike!



IT GOES DOWN $1,740!

Saturday, the DAILY WORKER announced the contribution of $500.00 to the insurance fund from an old-time friend, who asked that his name be kept secret.

Over the holidays, Sunday and Monday, the gift of this friend was duplicated by branch and individual sales of policies amounting to $507.00.

This brings the total amount raised to date to $19,304.78. The dollar blows struck so far at the spike amount to $1,740.00.

The drive to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER for 1925 closes March 5. That leaves not more than one week to make a final, sweeping, all-inclusive smashing finish. Just one week to finish the job! One week to drive home $30,000!

Branches must make their final collections, secretaries submit their last reports, individuals give THEIR LAST DOLLARS TO HAMMER HOME THE LAST SPIKE.

Letters From Our Readers

Stays on Our List.

To the DAILY WORKER: Gentlemen, hell, no, I mean men and women.

It is 11 a. m. Sunday morning. Your agent has just left my house and I feel so ashamed of not telling you how I prise the DAILY WORKER and how the Workers Monthly is so incomparably better than what I expected to get for my sub to the old Liberator that I wish to make amends somewhat. For the $5 enclosed send me one of those insurance policies.

I am a member of the Commonwealth Land Party (Single Tax) since several years before the Workers Party was organized and therefore feel it my duty to clean up my position in this outfit before changing my allegiance.

Therefore, my immediate job is to compel my own party to come clean on its economics or expel me from membership. I claim that Karl Marx when he wrote the Communist Manifesto, understood single tax better than Henry George ever did, and that the 10th immediate demand in that immortal document is a better definition of the single tax than was ever written before or since by any man.

Thus, my quarrel with the single taxers is not concerning single tax at all. We all agree that the landlord has no right to rob labor by privately appropriating publicity created land values. We all agree that "The earth is the birthright of all mankind" which is the first contention of single tax.

But I go further and declare that the machines of production which are publicly used and on which the lives of the people depend are also public property, an integral part of the commonwealth and that the private ownership of such public property constitutes the private ownership of public property.

And that stocks and bonds and title deeds against such publicly used machines of social production are therefore just as much a part of the public debt as the liberty bonds which were sold to finance making the world safe for Sacco and Vanzetti, and Ruthenberg, and Tom Mooney and the workers of Centralia.

Thomas Jefferson Davis,
Philadelphia, Penna.

P. S. It is so seldom that I am pleasantly surprised in getting more or better value than what I expect. You will permit me to say again that the DAILY WORKER is the best newspaper I have ever seen.

Please keep me on your mailing list.
Thos. J. Davis.

On Labor Misleaders.

The following letter was refused publication in the columns of the Illinois Miner, official organ of District 12, for the support of which the members of the district pay $80,000 a year:

"Support your friends and defeat your enemies" has been the policy of the A. F. of L. for over 40 years, and at no time has its officials lost an opportunity to cut the throat of any independent political movement of the workers, in behalf of the Wall Street parties, i. e.—republican and democrat.

The result of this policy, the vote relative to the child labor amendment, in the various legislatures, by the friends of labor is a disgrace to the labor movement, and more forcefuly than ever shows the impotency of the policy of the A. F. of L. in supporting the candidates called friends of labor on the enemy tickets.

Minority Rule.

In this particular respect allow me to draw your attention to the fact it requires two-thirds of the legislatures to ratify the amendment before it becomes consitutional law, which means that it requires only one-third of the states to vote against it to defeat it.

One-third is the dictatorship of the minority with a vengeance. Much has been said by the fakers against the 'workers' minority' in Russia, as they term it, working and fighting in behalf of the workers, but very little against the Wall Street government minority fighting and working to enslave the children of the nation, grinding their bodies and souls into profits to be worn on the perverted bodies of titled degenerate daughters of idle moneyed parasites.

Where are the boasted friends of labor now? The pet law of Sammy the simp for the time being is set aside, because of Sam's and his bureaucraitc friends' policy of strenghening the enemy parties, by stabbing the Workers Party.

In and out of conventions, we have introduced resolutions and fought for workers' political parties for just such purposes as the child labor amendment and have been bitterly fought by the labor bureaucracy and sold to our friends on the enemy tickets.

Down With the Bullfighters.

At the last convention of the U. M. W. of A. in Indianapolis, in attempting some progressive action looking to a workers' party, we were counted out by the bureaucracy and the late laughable, but very serious favor at El Paso was an insult to the workers, by the big, fat, well groomed, diamond-studded, Himalayan, salaried gentry who spurned the resolution for independent political action and sent it down to defeat amidst laughter and contempt, but in spite of those bullfighting and brewery-loving artists, the workers are organizing and in the near future the republican and democratic parties will go down to ignominious defeat and in the ruins will be found all the labor faking, Wall Street catering, misrepresentatives of the labor movement. The Workers Party is the only party 'of, by or for, the workers of the nation.' Workers, arise in your might and cast your traitorous labor faking misleaders into eternal oblivion.

Box 533, Christopher, Ill.

Alleged Capitalist Friends of Negroes

To the DAILY WORKER—"Beware of Greeks bearing gifts" is a wise proverb.

The capitalist newspaper, the Chicago Daily News, which claims to be friendly to Negroes stated at the time that a Negro was elected judge on the capitalist, republican party ticket, that the progress of Negroes would be evolutionary and not revolutionary, and that there would be no more bigotry.

Of course this statement was made to lull the half awakening Negroes, 95 per cent of whom are composed of farm and wage workers, back to sleep.

Already this capitalist newspaper, The Chicago Daily News, has returned to its Nigger-baiting, like a dog returned to his vomit.

This newspaper contained several weeks ago a lying and filthy black and tan Nigger-baiting news article, which could only be equalled by its contemporary, the yellow Chicago Tribune, a known liar.

A few days ago The Chicago Daily News headlined a news item, "Negro amateur detective from the 'black belt.'"

Negro workers must come to learn that all capitalist newspapers are their enemies, and instigators of prejudices and riots against them.

Negro workers, you owe it to your posterity to read, subscribe to and support the Communist newspaper, the DAILY WORKER.

The DAILY WORKER champions the cause of all workers, black and white.

Gordon W. Owens.

Effective Strike Action

The news of the garment workers' strike sent by our New York correspondent, which we publish in another column, is good news for workers everywhere.

Not only are the garment workers forcing the bosses to toe the mark, but the strike is being conducted by a huge rank and file committee which has assumed responsibility for the conduct of the conflict.

When large numbers of workers are drawn into the important task of directing strike activity as in this case, it is a good sign—a sign that there is a real basis for the development of the left wing.

The theory of the officialdom is that the membership cannot be trusted to make decisions, that the election of officials by machine methods automatically classifies them as the only ones in the union posessing brains. It never occurs to them seemingly that the way to build a fighting union is to bring as many members as possible into the work of directing and carrying out the tasks of the union.

Our story of the garments workers' strike refutes the official theory. When the union membership understands the issues confronting them, when they have a chance to carry out a militant program, they rise to the occasion as in this instance.

The left wing program has nothing in common with the anarcho-syndicalist idea of undisciplined activity with its emphasis on the freedom of the individual. Its program is based on the solid ground of the permeation of the unions with class pride and understanding of the class struggle—on the activity of the most conscious and courageous elements of the union. Insofar as the rank and file committee handling the garment workers' strike is a result of the application of this policy in the union, it marks an important development in the needle trades and the whole labor movement.

The manner in which the membership of the unions affected has thrown itself into the struggle indicates that the rank and file committee has succeeded in gaining its confidence. This is no minor achievement in a labor organization where the official leadership by its attacks on Communists and the left wing which they lead had created a widespread distrust of the union itself.

An Admiral Speaks

The brutally frank statements of Admiral Phelps, relative to the rivalry of British and American imperialist interests in the world's oil fields and markets, has shaken official Washington as nothing has succeeded in doing since certain senators took the lid off the famous Teapot.

The admiral read a paper before the representatives of women's patriotic societies in which the basis of the irreconcilable conflict between American and British capitalism is set forth clearly. Militarists are proverbially more outspoken than their slimier colleagues in the diplomatic service and the deliberate statements of the admiral are without doubt of an official or semi-official nature.

He pointed out the control of the major portion of the world's oil supply by British capitalists and openly accused Great Britain of trying to ruin American shipping. "Serious differences are brewing," he said, "differences which can be prevented from developing into a conflict only by a strong navy."

"Strong navies" occasionally postpone but never yet have prevented war and in this particular case the inference is so obvious that it might as well have been stated openly; it is that war with Great Britain is inevitable and that the processs of preparing the minds of the masses for it should begin.

It is especially significant that just at this time, when the air is filled with rumors of disarmament conferences, for which Coolidge stands sponsor, a high officer of the navy should have been permitted to disclose the real attitude of the administration and its capitalist owners.

The speech of Admiral Phelps is an event of international importance and no one will be more interested in it than the Communist International which long ago called the attention of the world's working class to the danger of just such a world conflict as that mentioned deliberately in a prepared speech by the militarist spokesman of American imperialism.

The C. P. P. A. is now a scrambled egg. It was a rotten egg. Its component parts are trying to unscramble it. But without political gasmasks the job cannot be done.

When the yolk, represented by the railroad brotherhoods, decided to withdraw from the conglomeration that constituted the C. P. P. A. there was nohing for the rest of the egg to do but to look for another yellow nucleus. The socialist brand was yellow enough, but lacked visility. William Johnston offered to fill in during the transition period. LaFollette and his famous collection of freaks will become the new yolk.

The Dawes Plan at Work

The Dawes plan already has effected one of the highest skilled and best paid unions in the United States—the electrical workers.

A New York dispatch tells of the bitter fight now being waged by the manufacturers of electrical apparatus against the efforts of the union to organize and enforce its working conditions and wage scale in the manufacture of electric fixtures.

We quote a portion of the statement made by Charles Eidlitz, chairman of the elctrical board of trade of New York City. It contains the stereotyped arguments of employers with which the workers are familiar and which they will hear with increasing vehemence as the Dawes plan is extended. Eidlitz says:

"In certain lines, particularly small items, the competition from Germany and Japan is already serious.

"The small manufacturer particularly, cannot compete favorably with certain of these small devices, due to the cost of labor and the result of this is that they attempt to compete simply by selling these products at prices that bring no real return in the hope of keeping the demand for the foreign-made product down as low as possible.

"If organized labor were successful in establishing union conditions in electrical manufacturing it would, of course, mean the elimination of piece work and the general increasing of wages, with a corresponding reduction in efficiency. The American manufacturer would soon find himself unable to compete with many of the materials made abroad which cannot be brought to this country today on any competitive basis.

"Assuming, therefore, for argument's sake, that the efforts now being made by labor to unionize electrical products were 100 per cent successful it would mean that American products would disappear and foreign non-union products would take their place and the unions would, for lack of any other material, be compelled to handle and install these or go without it.

"Generally speaking, building material is not exclusively union made. An attempt, therefore, to start in on the electrical industry cannot and will not be tolerated."

It is the officialdom of unions like the electrical workers with its craft form of organization and agreements with the bosses, a comparatively high scale of wages and good working conditions that are the most hostile to the Communists and their program and disdainful of any suggestion that the class struggle is international or that it exists at all.

American finance-capital, as it extends its rule over the world will, however, against its own interests but inevitably succeed in convincing even large sections of the labor aristocracy that no worker is guaranteed immunity under capitalism in this its final stage.

The Communist program is going to get a hearing in many quarters within the next few years where only hostility exists today.

The Chicago Dailies and Negroes

Next to the press of the southern states the capitalist dailies of Chicago are perhaps the worst inciters of prejudice against the Negroes.

Chicago has a large Negro population, one of the largest of any American city, and the capitalist press, if all those who read it believe it, must of had some success in creating the impression that 90 per cent of the Negro population is of a criminal and degenerate character.

Not a day passes that some headline does not emphasize the color of some alleged offender, generally in connection with an attack on the property or person of a woman. The statistics on police court cases, the testimony of judges and police officers is in direct contradiction to the capitalist press.

The proportion of Negro offenders is far smaller in proportion to the Negro population than that of whites.

This is in spite of the well-known fact that an arrested Negro is presumed to be guilty until he can prove himself innocent. Even then it quite often makes little difference if a scapegoat is needed.

In defiance of all these established facts the Chicago capitalist press continues a deliberate policy of fomenting race hatred. Some day there will be a race war in Chicago and then the capitalist press will shed buckets of typographical tears over the "deplorable" situation.

Perhaps the best way of putting at least a temporary stop to this sinister campaign would be for the Negroes to institute a boycott of these foul sheets among their own race and white sympahizers. A substantial decrease in circulation would probably bring some of these papers to their senses for a time.

The Communist Party will certainly give such a move all the support in its power.

The socialist party is now in the wilderness. Whether "Moses" Hillquit will be able to lead them into the promised land is questionable. Like Lew Stone in the movies, the socialist party deserted a faithful wife for the tempting but uncertain joys of more elastic virtue. The wayward spouse, badly scorched, would fain return and begin all over again. But unfortunately the happy ending so typical of screen reel life, does not always hold good in real life. The once happy home is no more.

BIG BRIBE IN OIL GRAFT TAKES U. S. PLUTES TO PARIS

Midwest and Prairie Companies in It

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Feb. 25.— Despite reports that his stay in Paris would be extended and that he would appear in defense of H. M. Blackmer and James E. O'Neill, American oil magnates, should they be called into French courts to give that information they may have in connection with the United States naval oil scandal, George Gordon Battle, New York lawyer, departed today, ostensibly for the United States.

Battle's departure from the United States was almost coincidental with that of U. G. Mengert, counsel for the United States government, said to be the bearer of letters rogatory issued by an American judge in Cheyenne, Wyo., and demanding that Blackmer and O'Neill testify in French court concerning their alleged part in the case.

Blackmer formerly was head of the Midwest Refining Co., in the United States. O'Neill until recently was president of the Prairie Oil and Gas Co. There is a rumored matter of a $2,000,000 bribe by O'Neill to Washington politicians, which account for this gentleman's sojourn in France.

Buffalo announces a rousing mass meeting to be held Friday evening, Feb. 27, at the Labor Lyceum, 376 William street. The principal speech will be made by Joseph Ettor. James Battestoni, of the anti-fascist society of Buffalo, Ray Raymond, of the Buffalo Central Labor Council and others will also speak.

The Buffalo gathering was arranged by a conference of representatives from working class organizations which include the Workers Party, the Central Labor Council, the Molders' Union, and the Workmen's circle. The call for the conference was initiated by the Workers (Communist) Party of Buffalo.

CHICAGO MEMBERSHIP MEETING VOTES FOUR TO ONE TO ENDORSE C. E. C. UNITED FRONT CAMPAIGNS

By a vote of 169 to 41 the membership meeting of the Workers (Communist) Party Local Chicago, Tuesday, Feb. 24 at Northwest Hall, endorsed the United Front campaigns initiated by the C. E. C. of the party which are now being carried on in their many forms by the membership. The following resolution proposed by the City Executive Committee of Local Chicago was passed by the above vote after the membership listened to a splendid report on the party campaigns by Comrade Browder, acting secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party:

"RESOLVED: That the membership meeting of the Workers (Communist) Party, Local Chicago, takes note of the recent victories of our party which show especially in the magnificent showing in the Miner's Carpenter's and Machinist's Unions, and that the party faces a period when the most fruitful work is possible. This favorable sentiment must be used to build our party ever more solidly as the leader of the working-class in America.

"To this end we endorse the campaign now being carried on the pledge our full co-operation to the leading committees of the party."

The Chicago membership meeting was one of a series of meetings called by the C. E. C. of the party in the main cities thruout the country to mobilise the party membership for the united front campaigns of the party.

Browder's Speech

In a brilliant review, Comrade Browder discussed the present political and economic situation confronting the workers in the United States. The following points were made by Comrade Browder: The campaigns against child labor are being conducted on the basis of demands for ratification of the national child labor amendment but pointing out at the same time that the child labor amendment is meaningless without government maintenance of all the school children of the workers and poor farmers and hence calling upon the state and federal legislatures to pass a law calling for government maintenance of those children, the funds for this purpose to come from special taxes on high incomes.

With the revival of the Michigan Communist cases the party has responded nobly in coming whole-heartedly, on short notice to the defense of our comrades. Comrade Browder reported that this work was going forward on the basis, not only of defending our own comrades but as a national and international united front in defense of all political prisoners and that this work gives a splendid opportunity to get a hearing before all labor bodies on class struggle issues.

C. P. P. A. Blows Up

The demoralization and collapse of the C. P. P. A. which occurred in Chicago at their convention within the last week, was due in a large measure to the campaign conducted against the C. P. P. A. by our party members thruout the labor movement. The rank and file of labor was not represented there, and this was to a great extent due to the slogan of the party which said, "Don't participate in the bourgeois C. P. P. A. conference. Unite for independent working class political action under the leadership of the Workers (Communist) Party." The C. P. P. A. was made up of socialist renegades and capitalist hirelings and was not a convention—it was a post mortem.

The campaign against wage-cuts is a real basis for a united front with the rank and file. Wage-cutting has not yet reached the wide-spread national menace that it is certain to within the next few months. But it is already showing its head in the textile industry in particular where our party units are active. Resist wage-cuts by strikes is the slogan of the party and is finding response in the rank and file of those parts of the working class affected. The wage-cut leaflet issued by the party is getting splendid distribution nationally and local Chicago leads with an order of fifty thousand to be distributed in the shops and factories.

The DAILY WORKER

The central instrument around which united fronts rally, Comrade Browder said, is the DAILY WORKER. Local Chicago must move as one man in furthering the scope of our labor daily. Local Chicago has not given the attention of the daily up to date that it deserves and it must remain one of the chief tasks for Communists to negage in.

The victory of our party in the Miners' Union of gathering sixty-six thousand votes for avowedly Communist candidates came as a pleasant surprise and indicates that our endeavors in the unions must be intensified to take advantage of the favorable sentiment that is showing itself. Party work in the Machinists' and Carpenters' Unions is meeting with like success. The T. U. E. L., the party instrument in carrying on our work in the unions, the main organs of working class struggle, must receive the fullest co-operation from party members.

Campaign Against Spy

Other points touched upon by Comrade Browder were, the campaign against the counter-revolutionary spy and yellow socialist, Abramovich, which has prevented his appearing in public in this country, the fight against unemployment, the new campain for Irish relief.

The discussion on Comrade Browder's report was enthusiastic and many comrades participated. The membership showed itself ready and willing to carry out the campaign of the party. With few exceptions everyone who spoke made special reference to the importance of pushing the DAILY WORKER to a position of prominance in the local struggle. The membership showed that it was prepared to go forward with renewed efforts in making the coming subscription campaign a success.

Amendment Snowed Under

The following amendment to the motion of the city executive committee was made by Comrade Nat Kaplan: "Membership meeting points out that recent developments expose a tremendous unorganized sentiment that must be crystalized into Communist organization. We call for the concentration of all party energy on one united front campaign at a time. We point out especially the need for such campaigns on the field of defense, unemployment, protection of foreign born and recognition of Soviet Russia."

This amendment received only forty-one votes as against the motion of the city executive committee of which received 167. The membership showed itself in an enthusiastic mood for prosecuting these campaigns presented for wo-k by the C. E. C. of the party on the basis of its observations of the political and economic conditions of the country and our progress in the working class movement.

Make History on March 5

March is a month of revolution.

IN MARCH, 1871 came the establishment of the Paris Commune, following the first revolution in history in which the working class was openly acknowledged as the only class capable of social initiative.

IN MARCH, 1917 came the great revolution overthrowing the Russian czarist government and bringing into complete power the world's first working class government.

IN MARCH, 1919 came the founding of the Communist International, forming a world-wide organization of workers preparing themselves for the eventual world revolution.

March is a month of revolution.

BUT REVOLUTIONS ARE NOT A MATTER OF MONTHS. History is not made in a month, nor a year, nor a decade. It is a gradual growth, extending thru the minutes, hours and days of all time. And small happenings, as well as stupendous events, have their significance in the historical process.

If the campaign to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER is proved to be a success on March 5th, its last day,—then American Communists can well be proud of the part they have played in MAKING HISTORY.

HAMMERING at a task,—day in and day out; never laying down the TOOLS,—driving in the SPIKES, doggedly,—remembering that the goal, no matter how far off it seems,—is REVOLUTION; this is to MAKE HISTORY.

On march 5th, 1925, one page in American Communist history will be turned. The DAILY WORKER will issue its special Comintern edition. This will be over-flowing with news of the triumph of the past March revolution,—it will be a chronicle of proletarian progress since the establishment of the Communist International six years ago.

In its pages will be a special section devoted to a record of the achievement of the WORKERS PARTY in the past four months struggle to make the DAILY WORKER financially stable for the coming year.

THERE ARE SEVEN MORE DAYS IN WHICH TO COMPLETE THE TASK.

When history turns the page on the 1925 drive to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER, the record of each branch and of each DAILY WORKER reader will be placed on life publicly in the COMMUNIST ROLL-CALL.

UP WITH THE HAMMER!
DOWN WITH THE SPIKE!
LET THE SPARKS FLY WHERE THEY WILL!

Here is my dollar to help MAKE HISTORY by insuring the DAILY WORKER for 1925.

be punished as per Section 54, Paragraph B. of the General Constitution and inasmuch as it is the duty of the presiding officer of a Local Union to announce or impose penalty where said penalty is prescribed in the Constitution for the offense committed, the President of Local Union No. 181 was justified and within his rights and acted in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution in declaring the appellants expelled and I shall therefore concur in his action and dismiss the appeal.

Fraternally yours,
(Signed) WM. L. HUTCHESON,
General President

"Another Liar!"

When the members of Local 181 were shown copies of Hutcheson's letter, they simply said: "Just another liar." The last sentence in the second paragraph is purposely obscured in order to create doubt in the mind of the reader as to what the three members of the trial committee actually wrote. The report of the secretary read at the meeting of the local union stated that the defendants admitted they were guilty. What the affidavit said was that the members did not plead guilty as charged.

So the only count on which Hutcheson could justify the expulsion was that they signed a resolution protesting against the signing of a Landis award contract and condemning the officials who signed it. To protect the union and the rights of the members against official scabbery is a high crime and misdemeanour in the eyes of Hutcheson and his satellites.

The Thugs Failed

Last Monday evening the officials of Local 181 and Harry Jensen the president of the district council, were early at the hall with a gang of thugs. They had the Hutcheson letter and thot foolishly enought that would have a hyponotic effect on the members and force them to surrender.

When the "expelled" members showed up as usual, the thugs attempted to prevent them from entering the hall. The following members of Jensen's strong arm squad were particularly active: John Steffen, slugger-in-chief; Herman Hinzle; Ed. Anderson; Martin Plaw; Jim Jensen and Inar Peterson. These worthies grabbed the "expelled" members and tried to shove them out but despite Harry Jensen's exhortations the effort was fruitless. When the members inside the hall heard what was going on, they rallied to the door and sent the thugs flying in all direction. Jensen's army retreated in disorder and "General" Jensen the Landis award hero retreated ahead of his "flying" column.

Almost Unanimously

As told yesterday in the DAILY WORKER, the membership voted unanimously, with the exception of the sluggers, to seat the "expelled" members. (According to the constitution it requires a two thirds vote of the members present at a local union meeting to expel members after having had a trial in conformity with the constitution. The unanimity with which the members of Local 181 are backing up their fellow workers shows plainly that they were illegally expelled.)

Infuriated by their failure to crush the opposition of the rank and file and feeling that the time to do it was now or never one of the hangers-on, of the faker Jensen, a fossilised pie card artist and political lickspittle by the name of K. G. Torkelson, who has spent his life chasing the pork wagon, sent for the police.

Torkelson was formerly an enemy of Jensen, but the latter evidently had some experience in winning the affections of members of the canine species by hurling meat bones in their direction. He threw a sop at Torkelson in the form of a superintendency. From then on Jensen had a loyal friend which will hold just so long as he holds the cover of the soup pot.

An Amusing Scene

The police had no other effect on the membership except to irritate them. They booed the blue coated gentry.

An amusing feature of the meeting were the antics of "Jim" Jensen, financial secretary of the local. This worthy came up to one of the "expelled" members and grabbed him by the coat removing a button from that garment. But not alone was Jensen not able to move the solid piece of rebel carpenter that he had his mitts on, but it may interest Jensen to know that the button was recovered and is occupying its old place again, just as that carpenter is in the local union despite the efforts of Jensen and his namesake Harry and all the other payrollers and sluggers.

The five "expelled" members have issued a leaflet giving a brief summary of the history of the expulsion and also announcing a mass meeting for Sunday afternoon, February 8, at 2.30 at Imperial Hall, 2409 North Halsted street. The principal speaker will be William A. Reynolds, vice-president of Detroit District Council of the Carpenters' Union.

MINE OWNERS START WAGE CUTS

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

IT is encouraging to note the response of the readers of The DAILY WORKER to the appeal for relief for the workers and peasants of Ireland who are suffering from the tortures of famine. Many have written asking for instructions as to how to proceed with the task of raising funds. The committee is busy getting the necessary material ready for delivery. In the meantime any contributions sent to the Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee, 19 South Lincoln street, will be appreciated. One reader who sent in a check wanted assurance that it would not pass thru the sticky fingers of the Knights of Columbus. No danger.

THE money collected by the Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee will be disbursed under the supervision of the British section of the International Workers' Aid. That organization has established headquarters in Dublin. None but workers and radicals will have a hand in its distribution. Like vultures the capitalists and their henchmen seise on every tragic circumstance like a famine, to increase their popularity by doling out charity. This despite the fact that most of this suffering is due entirely to the exploiting bourgeoisie. Our appeal for assistance to the workers and peasants in Ireland is a frank class appeal.

IN connection with the Irish famine it might be pointed out that this famine-stricken section is the most catholic part of Ireland. This need not be taken as proof that the famine is due to that fact. It is not. But it shows that it has not prevented famine. When the Russian famine raged the catholic priests in Ireland as elsewhere, with few exceptions, blamed the misery of the Russian peasants and workers on the atheistic Communist government. The famine was a visitation from God! It would be well for the catholic workers and peasants of Ireland if they had an atheistic Communist government instead of the collection of Christian hangmen who now run the Free State.

ONE good feature of the work of the International Workers' Aid with which the Irish Workers' and and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee is affiliated is that it brings those priest-dominated workers and peasants into touch with the radical movement in a very practical way. The American government recognized this when it sent its relief organization to Russia and used its food and money to destroy the Soviet government. The capitalists have been drugging the minds of the Irish people for generations with prayer and demoralizing them with charity. Side by side with relief we will carry on a campaign of education designed to show those exploited people that only when they strike to get rid of capitalism and follow the example of their Russian comrades will they be able to get rid of chronic want and periodical famines.

SOVIET RUSSIA PEASANTS HELP STARVING IRISH

Famine Horror Growing, Says London Herald

The Union of Russian Land Workers is taking steps to assist the workers and peasants in the west of Ireland who are now stricken by famine, according to a story in the London Daily Herald of February 15. The headlines in the Herald read: "Send Help to Ireland!" "Starvation Horrors in Famine Area Growing"; "Living like Rats" and "Mrs. Crawford Appeals to Labor M. P.'s."

The Workers' International Aid with which the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee in the United States is affiliated is actively engaged bringing food and clothing to the starving people in the famine area. The following heartrending story was told by Mrs. Helen Crawford, secretary of the I. W. A. to a Daily Herald reporter:

"Surely it was the good God that sent ye here this morning!"

Such was the cry of the mother of a starving family in famine-stricken Donegal, when handed food by Mrs. Helen Crawford, who, as British secretary of the Workers' International Relief, has been touring the desolate wastes of Ireland.

The incident occurred at Teelin, a village visited by Mrs. Crawford in the course of a 300-mile motor tour.

"The car came to a halt outside a little shack," Mrs. Crawford told the Daily Herald yesterday. "A barefooted, ragged little boy looked out from the doorway. The look of suffering on his face drew us to him.

"On investigation, we found that his mother had four other children, all practically half-famished, and shivering in rags. There had not been a crust of bread in the house for days.

"We handed over some food. The look in the eyes of the hungry children as they devoured it was something one will not soon forget.

Ruined Fishermen.

"The name of the family is Donaghey. The father was away, gathering sticks, which he would have to drag many miles. He is one of the fishermen of the district who have been ruined by the operations of big trawling syndicates."

SEEK POSTER DESIGNS TO AID RUSSO-CHINESE EXHIBITION AT HARBIN

HARBIN, Feb. 26.—The joint committee for the organization of the pending Russo-Chinese exhibition, has started the printing of numerous posters whose main idea is the propagation of the rapproachment between China and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. A contest for the best designs of such posters has been declared, and several prizes will be awarded for the best models presented.

The area under the exhibition is to be at least 80,000 sq. yards, in the New Town (Moscow Square). The numerous pavilions, surrounding gardens, turf, etc., are to be artistically arranged.

COOLIDGE SPEEDS UP DRIVE AGAINST THE FOREIGN-BORN WORKERS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 26.—The Coolidge administration has speeded up its drive to extend the immigration laws, by sending Secretary of Labor James J. Davis to numerous meetings to advocate severer immigration laws. In his speech here before the joint session of the Indiana house and senate, Davis recommended that the quota law be extended to all countries from which we permit immigration.

Davis supported the admittance of farmers, skilled and unskilled laborers only when that kind of labor cannot be found in the United States.

JAPS CELEBRATE SOVIET TREATY; HIT OLD PALS

Marks End of Anglo-American Power

TOKIO, Feb. 26.—At the recent great celebration in honor of the Soviet-Japanese treaty, speakers of leading positions in public life called the treaty the beginning of Japan's breaking loose from Anglo-American influence. The celebration was attended by thousands of Japanese most prominent in politics, journalism and industry.

Congratulatory telegrams were read from the Soviet Foreign Commissar Tchicherin and from Karakhan, ambassador at Peking. Speakers declared that the treaty ended the unfriendliness caused by the ill-advised Japanese military intervention made at the request of the American and British governments.

It was also stated that the Wilsonian doctrine of self-determination of nations had been but the hypocritical covering applied by the Versailles treaty solely at the expense of Germany, and that only by the superior power of the Red Army had Soviet Russia been prevented from becoming a similar victim.

POLICE PREPARE TO HELP BREAK STREET STRIKE

Strikebreakers to Be Hired March 3

The striking street repair men and ash and garbage collectors working for the city of Chicago will not return to work at the old wage scale, Michael Carrosso, president of the Street Cleaners' Union, declared yesterday. The strikers said they were not bluffed by Commissioner of Public Works Sprague's statement that the men would be discharged if they did not return to work by next Tuesday.

Private garbage and rubbish collectors who are not organized into the union, made no move toward removing refuse from downtown hotels and large institutions, and it was said by the strikers that the non-union collectors will join them in a sympathetic strike.

Disease Danger Increased

The danger of a disease epidemic was increased when garbage and rubbish continued to pile up on the streets and alleys in front of all dwellings and business buildings. The streets are covered with rubbish, even in the downtown section.

The police department has been made ready to protect the strikebreakers to be hired by the city next week. Acting Chief of Police Mathew Zimmer declared the police department will aid the public works department in the attempt to break the strike.

A meeting of the dump, section and street repair foremen was held late yesterday afternoon at 180 W. Washington street.

The public works department attempted to break the strike by making an offer of higher wages to the foremen if they returned to work, but refusing the demands of the street laborers. This offer was spurned, it is declared.

The ultimatum of Sprague, ordering the men to return to work or forfeit their jobs, was sent to the strikers individually, over the heads of the union officials.

A meeting has been arranged between Carrozzo and the garbage and rubbish collectors employed by private firms, at which the question of a sympathetic strike will be formally considered.

SEVERINO, MICHIGAN DEFENDANT, ANSWERS LIES OF "D. OF J." IN A STATEMENT GIVEN TO THE PRESS

(Labor Defense Council Press Service.)

In the effort to cancel the citizenship of Angelo V. Severino, one of the defendants in the Michigan cases, the United States district attorney of Cleveland in an amended petition makes his main basis of attack on Severino's citizenship by stating that Severino, when he took out a citizenship paper "did not believe in organized government." This is based presumably on the fact that A. V. Severino is now a Communist.

Severino, on being interviewed, has emphatically stated that in the first place, while he is a Communist today at the time he took out his citizenship papers in 1915 there was no such thing as a Communist Party or movement existing and that therefore to make his membership in the Communist Party retroactive to 1915 is ridiculous; and in the second place the Communist movement to which he belongs today believes in organized government.

Further along in his statement he points out that he has always been a believer in organized government and is a believer in organized government today as a member of the Communist movement.

However, his conception of who shall rule this country differs radically from that of those who are attempting to utilize all sorts of untruths to deport him, his conception being that the workers and farmers shall be the organized government of the United States.

To accuse him therefore of being against organized government he points out is simply another untruth added to the many lies the powers that be utilized to misrepresent the character of the Communist movement.

Severino has been a candidate for city councilman and congressman in Cleveland on various occasions on the ticket of the Workers Party and on the platform of the Workers Party.

Severino is especially well-known in Cleveland for his activity as a trade unionist and as one vitally interested in the progress of the co-operative movement in Ohio. He has held various offices in the Bricklayers' Union and large co-operatives in the state of Ohio, having been vice-president of the Co-operative Dairy of Cleveland, and a member of the arbitration board of his union, as well as a delegate to the various of their conventions.

In view of the activities of Severino to accuse him of not being a believer in organized government is exposing the ignorance of the authorities again.

Coal Barons Open War At Cleveland, March 6, On Jacksonville Agreement

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 26.—Operators of western Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio and Indiana, the so-called central competitive field, will meet at Cleveland on March 6, in an effort to break the Jacksonville wage scale agreement for miners which is scheduled to run until April 1, 1927, it was learned from reliable sources here today.

Operators of western Pennsylvania have been invited to the meeting, John A. Donaldson, vice president of the Pittsburgh Coal company told the press. Officials of the Pittsburgh Coal Producers Association will meet next Tuesday to decide whether or not they will attend the meeting, Donaldson who is chairman of the scale committee and a member of the executive committee of the Pittsburgh association, said.

The operators are said to be seeking a re-adjustment of wages because, they claim, non-union mines have cut their wage scales one-third since the Jacksonville agreement went into effect, and thus they say, they are able to undersell union operators.

They fail to state, however, that they have mines in both the union and non-union fields.

COAL MINERS' UNION LOST MANY MEMBERS UNDER JACKSONVILLE PACT

The Jacksonville pact, which was signed Feb. 19, 1924, at Jacksonville, Florida, between the coal operators of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania, known as the central competitive field, one the one hand and officials of the United Mine Workers of America on the other, reads as follows:

"1. This Joint Conference of Operators and Miners of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania, as now constituted, hereby reaffirm the wage scale contracts now existing between the United Mine Workers of America and the coal operators whose interests are represented in this conference, and hereby extends the same for a period of three years, from April 1, 1924, to March 31, 1927, in all of their terms provisions and conditions, it is understood the execution of this interstate agreement extends without further negotiations the district and sub-district agreements now in effect in the district affected.

"2. That an interstate joint conference of the central competitive field shall assemble the second Monday in February, 1927, at Miami, Florida, and the president of the United Mine Workers of America, and the chairman of this joint interstate conference are authorized and instructed to send out notices at the proper time as to the assembling of the conference."

This was the agreement accepted by Lewis in lieu of the proposition for a shorter work day and week and nationalization of the mines made by the progressive miners. This surrender paved the way for the present grand assault on the United Mine Workers of America. The only result of the Jacksonville pact was to tie the hands of the miners. It was more honored in the breach than in the observance by the operators.

Pact Violated by Operators.

Before the ink with which the signatures were written, was dry, the coal barons began to post notices of wage reductions. Union mines were closed down and non-union pits opened. This preparation for the inevitable assault on the entire union was ignored by Lewis who continued his attacks on the militants within the union.

In future articles The DAILY WORKER will show the rapid loss in membership of the United Mine Workers of America thru the traitorous class collaboration and union-splitting policy of Lewis and company and will point out the necessity for new leadership of the miners' union.

LABOR FAKERS AND PRIEST TRICK WORKERS

Workers Party Is Feared by False Leaders

(Special to The Daily Worker)

UTICA, N. Y., Feb. 23. (By Mail.)—Thru a local paper a meeting was called of the New York mills textile workers on February 22. It was announced that Joseph White, organizer of the United Textile Workers, would address the meeting at the union hall.

When the first workers began to come, one said that he was at the Polish church and the priest announced to the workers in the church that there would be no meeting at the union hall.

Polish Priest Mixes In.

As only a few workers came around, inquiry developed that the committee of Local 753 had held a meeting on the Friday previous and postponed the mass meeting until a week from Sunday. Then the committee had went to the Polish priest and told him that there would be no meeting on the 22nd. It is clear that the "leaders" fear to let the workers have a meeting after they read the DAILY WORKER and the Workers Party leaflet on wage cuts.

The textile workers of the New York mills are very indignant and disappointed with Organizer White and President T. F. McMahon. These worthies keep telling them: "Wait" and "Wait." "Don't go out on strike," they keep saying, "there is still a chance for settlement." This is disgusting the workers.

MINE DISASTER LAID AT DOOR OF COAL PLUTES

Even the U. S. Bureau Blames Operators

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 26.—That The DAILY WORKER was justified in blaming the mine disaster in Sullivan, Indiana, on the criminal negligence of the coal operators, because of their refusal to instal safety devices, is more than borne out by a statement issued by Secretary of the Interior Work. When the coal operator's own government is compelled to make this admission it should be evident to all that the charges in the Communist press against the greedy coal barons do not overdraw the picture.

Secretary Work's statement follows:

"It is reported that this mine disaster, the greatest in the history of Indiana, was caused by open lights, which ignited gases in the mine. If so, the Sullivan catastrophe emphasizes the great hazard to the lives of American coal miners in the continued use of the open flame lamp in mines.

"Several hundred thousand open lights are daily carried in the coal mines of the United States, each lamp being a hazard to life and property thru fire or explosion. Open lights have been responsible for many coal mine disasters in the past.

"Records compiled by the bureau of mines of this department covering a period of 17 years show that open flames have been the contributing cause of numerous fires and over one hundred explosions in mines, with a death roll of about 3,000 men and tremendous property damage, the mines being entirely wrecked in some instances.

"Such explosions are preventable. The proper steps should be taken not only to guard against accumulations of gas and coal dust, but to eliminate open flames of every kind from mines, because neither gas nor coal dust will explode without a flame to ignite them.

"The true path of safety for coal operators and miners is to follow the policy of keeping every kind of an open flame, whether from matches, sparks, explosives, candles, oil lamps, or carbide lamps out of coal mines."

Secretary Work further stated that the bureau of mines of the interior department had been issuing insistent and repeated warnings over a long period of years against the danger of open flames in coal mines. He said that future disregard of these warnings would add to the heavy toll of life, the latest of which occurred in the mine disaster in Indiana.

STRIKE STEMS WAGE CUT TIDE IN WOONSOCKET, R. I., TEXTILE MILLS

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Feb. 26.—A strike of four hundred cotton yarn workers at the Forestdale Manufacturing company plant at Forestdale have defeated wage cuts of five and ten per cent, it was announced, and the strike is being terminated after the reaching of an agreement between the United Textile Workers and the management.

This is one of the few cases where textile workers have been successful in steming the wage cut tide. Strikes are continuing at Pawtucket, in the plants of the Pawtucket Hosiery company and the Greenhalg Mills and funds are being solicited from workers in surrounding mill towns.

COOLIDGE WOULD VETO PAY RAISE FOR POSTAL MEN

But the Cabinet Boost Embarrasses Him

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—President Coolidge has told visitors that he is consulting Postmaster General New on the postal wage and revenue bill which is about to reach him, and that he is impressed by the fact that the treasury will have to carry $22,000,000—the amount of the wage increase for the 300,000 employes from Jan. 1 until April 15, when the higher charges for postal service to the public come into force. The intimation is given that he may veto the bill. He can do this by simply failing to sign it, and congress will not be here to pass it over his veto when his ten days period of deliberation has expired. This pocket veto has been used in past administrations against postoffice workers' wage relief.

One circumstance favoring the chances of his signing the bill in the fact that at the same time he must consider the bill increasing by $3,000 the pay of cabinet officers and by $2,500 the pay of congressmen and senators. He cannot easily veto the living wage for postal workers and grant the entertainment bonus for the higher-ups.

Polish Soldiers Invade Soviet Russia, But Hastily Retire

MOSCOW, Jan. 13.—(By Mail)—Kharkov reports that on the night of January 5, a detachment of the Polish regular army some forty men strong, suddenly and without any apparent reason crossed the frontier of the U. S. S. R. and opened fire on Soviet sentries in the vicinity of the small frontier village of Yampel.

Having entered into Soviet territory, assailants came to the local commandment's office which they bombed with hard grenades and opened rifle fire upon. The Soviet guards replied to this shooting, one of the assailants being killed in the ensuing fusillade; after this the attacking body was forced to retreat into Polish territory.

Immediately upon the receipt of this information the government detailed a special commission to investigate the whole affair on the spot.

Claim Death of Sun Yat Sen Is Nearer

PEKIN, Feb. 26.—Sun Yat Sen, dying, South China leader of the national revolutionary movement, was rapidly approaching the end today, according to his attending physicians. He is gradually growing weaker.

Reject "Cal's" Farm Scheme.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26. — By a vote of 203 to 175 the house today rejected the fake co-operative marketing legislation sponsored by the president's agricultural commission, and substituted the pending bill fathered by Representative Dickinson of Iowa.

LaFOLLETTE REVOLUTION MAY SUE FOR AN INJUNCTION TO KEEP "EMOLUMENTS OF OFFICE"

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The federal courts may be called upon to determine the legality of the ouster order drafted by the republican leadership of the senate against the LaFollette insurgent bloc, it was learned today.

The LaFollette group is contemplating an appeal to the courts for a writ of injunction as a "defense" move against the ouster proceedings. The insurgents involved are Senator LaFollette, Wisconsin, and his followers, Senators Brookhart, Iowa; Ladd, North Dakota, and Frazier, North Dakota, all republicans.

Proceeds With the Spanking.

In the face of this threat, the republican committee on committees is going ahead with plans to bar the insurgents from all further senatorial services as republicans by depriving them of majority committee assignments.

Communications have been sent to each of the insurgents asking them whether they desire to be assigned as independents.

The communications were signed by Senator Watson, of Indiana, chairman of the republican committee.

None of the insurgents has as yet replied.

Babies Cry For Emoluments.

The insurgents meanwhile considered filing a suit in the district of Columbia supreme court, asking a restraining order against the republican majority. If such a suit is filed, the insurgents will charge the republican majority is depriving them of their rightful emoluments of office without due process of law or without authority by law.

The emoluments lost by the insurgents if permanently ousted, would be political prestige and the right to succeed to chairmanships of important committees.

"Fighting Bob" Shows no Fight Yet.

Filing of the suit it was said, will depend on the attitude taken by Senator LaFollette. To date, he has shown complete indifference to the republican ouster order altho he will be deprived in the next congress of his right to succeed to the chairmanship of the powerful interstate commerce committee. It was said too that LaFollette had advised his followers against any overt opposition to the majority's will but rather to delay their battle until the republican majority sought to confirm the ouster order by a vote of the senate.

Expect Coolidge to Decide Dispute As Hughes Leaves Cabinet

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Pressure from all the South American countries has not brought from President Coolidge, thus far, a decision of the Tacna-Arica boundary dispute which Chile and Peru asked from him as arbiter, but the White House now hints that a decision may be made just as Secretary Hughes is leaving the cabinet on March 4. Hughes has had the responsibility of preparing the case, and Coolidge is expected to make Hughes' findings his own.

This boundary dispute has led to numerous near-wars between the two republics on the Pacific slope of South America, and, whatever the award coming from this arbitration, a loud protest from one or both countries is anticipated when Hughes' report is made known.

INDIANS REVOLT AGAINST PANAMA

COLON, Panama, Feb. 26—The San Blas Indians have arisen in revolt against the Panama government, following the killing of an old Indian named Peter, by the Panama police. The police had arrested the Indian and shot him down outside the government house at Porvenir.

The word of the killing quickly spread and the Indians are massing against the police on the Island of Naragana. The Indians are well-armed.

An American destroyer has been sent to the scene and will use its guns to attempt to supress the Indian uprising. A few days ago the Indians attacked the capital at Porvenir and in a battle with the police killed six and wounded a score. The Panama government has aided in dispossessing the Indians of their land and instituting the more modern industrial system, forcing the Indians to work as day laborers or factory workers.

Ward Finds Churches Have Freedom of Religion in Russia

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Professor Harry Ward of Union Theological Seminary, also connected with the American Civil Liberties Union, finds considerable religious freedom in the Russian workers' republic, in spite of false propaganda to the contrary, the federal council of churches reports in its weekly information serfice.

Ward after a lenghty visit in Russia reports that most of the government leaders "have a deep and even passionate conviction that religion is a menace to social progress, while at the same time they believe that individuals should have freedom to choose and practice their religion or anti-religion except when it menaces the existence of the state."

Two roots for the anti-religious convictions of leaders of revolutionary Russia Ward finds in the reactionary nature of the old Russian church and in the fact that the new leaders "were nurtured intellectually in the time of the alleged conflict between science and religion."

Of the old Greek church, he cites "its ignorance, its apathy to the sufferings of the workers and peasants, its position as one of the repressive instruments of the czar's regime."

Tibet Fights British Influence in Move to Unite with China

PEKING, Feb. 26.—Panshen Lama head of the Buddhist church with headquarters in Lhassa, forbidden capital city of Tibet, and spiritual leader of that vast province, who arrived in Peking yesterday, conferred with President Tuan Chi Jui today on the possibility of Tibet again recognizing the sovereignty of China after years of virtually independent existence.

The Pekin press is vigorous in its demand that the central government do everything possible thru the visiting living Buddha to overthrow the so-called pro-British party in Tibet and restore the province to Pekin.

It was revealed today that Dalai Lama, high dignitary of these sacred Buddhist temples in Thassa, is the leader of a party that is being supported by British influence which is trying to win Tibet away from China.

The split between Panshen Lama and Dalai Lama, amounting to a virtual schism in the Buddhist church, became so acute and the political situation so serious that Panshen rushed to Pekin in an effort to save Tibet for China.

Labor Defense Council, Philadelphia, Preparing for Bazaar, April 3-4

Philadelphia Labor Defense Council is preparing for a huge Bazaar that will be held Friday and Saturday April 3, and 4 at the New Traymore Hall.

Friends and sympathizers are requested to leave this date open and help collect articles. Allready a radio set, a portable typewriter, several oil paintings, a diamond pin and a number of other valuable article have been donated.

The Labor Defense Council meets every Thursday at 8 P. M. at 521 York Ave. and is already showing signs of real activity. A number of interesting and attractive features will be arranged at the bazaar among them a Costume Ball that will be held Saturday, April 4. For further announcements watch the DAILY WORKER.

CHILDREN AND WOMEN SLAVE IN CHINESE MILLS

In Shanghai 18,000 Girls Under 12 Work

SHANGHAI, China, Feb. 25. — A commission appointed by the administration here investigate conditions of child labor reported that there are 4,500 boys and 18,000 girls under 12 years of age in the 275 factories investigated here in Shanghai. Of the remainder, 44,000 are men and boys above 12 years of age, and 106,000 are women and girls above 12 years of age.

The children are accepted in the factories when they are six years of age. In 38 of the largest cotton industries 7,500 children under 12 and 61,000 women are employed. In the silk industry nearly 50 per cent of the children employed are under 12 years of age.

The conditions of work are very severe. The factory hands, including women and children, work over twelve hours a day. Women and children do night work as well as the men.

Flag Wavers Sore at Success of New York Lenin Meeting

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.— The red baiting "United States Flag Association," in which leading republicans are interested, at a meeting in Carnegie Hall, attacked the Communists, and read a message from President Coolidge wishing them well in their drive to "secure a million patriots to defend the flag in the next war." Coolidge said in his message that there must be "an eternal readiness to spring to the defense of our institutions."

Mrs. Grace Vanamee, who made one of the speeches nominating Coolidge at the republican convention, spoke against "red propaganda."

The flag wavers put up a thirteen year old son of a school teacher to speak against the Communists. This youngster felt particularly perturbed that the Communists had such a successful Lenin Memorial meeting in Madison Square Garden, where fifteen thousand packed the Garden and other thousands could not find room to enter. He charged that Comrade Morris Spector, fourteen year old member of the Young Workers, who spoke at the Lenin meeting was a "traitor."

Cleveland Youth Attend Classes in Communism

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 26.—The first session of the class in the "A. B. C. of Communism" will be held on Sunday, March 1, at 10:20 a. m., at 5927 Euclid Ave. All comrades who joined the Young Workers League after Jan. 1, 1924, must join the class by order of the local C. E. C. Non-members are welcome to join.

Officers of all branches, and C. C. C. and C. E. C. members of the Young Workers League must join the functionary class which wil meet every second and fourth Tuesday of the month at 5927 Euclid avenue. This is also a decision of the C. E. C. The first session will be held Tuesday, Feb. 24.

Young Workers League members are exempt from all other work during the hours of these two classes and must attend. Comrade C. Weissberg, local educational director, will instruct these classes.

Jury Has Senate Strike.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 26. — Marion County Prosecutor Nemy, at the request of republican members of the state senate, today ordered the county grand jury to remain in continuous session until witnesses could be subpoened to testify before the grand jury regarding the "strike" of the entire senate democratic minority.

Branting and McCormick, Two Birds of a Feather to World's Capitalists

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, capitalism bestows its eulogies upon two of its dead; Hjalmar Branting, former "socialist" premier of Sweden, and Medill McCormick, United States senator from Illinois.

Let the workers for the moment study the manner in which all sham differences under capitalism are laid away at these graves; resulting in anti-labor spokesmen of all breeds pouring out their fulsome praise of the services of the Swedish "socialist" and the Illinois republican on behalf of the profit system.

Branting fought Communism with all the bitterness of one of the chief leaders of the Second (socialist) International, who was also a high priest of the league of nations—the black capitalist international; while Theodore Roosevelt, in 1918, urged McCormick's election to the United States senate pledged against "social and industrial Bolshevism."

The New York Times laments that in Branting, "Europe has lost a sincere democrat and an ardent champion of international peace," meaning, of course, the democracy that seeks to keep the world enslaved to capitalist imperialism, and the peace that is advanced with the same ambition.

While the Times, democratic in politics, and one of the most loyal spokesmen of Wall Street, thus lauds Branting, the "socialist"; William Randolph Hearst, the democrat, lauds McCormick, the republican, as "a great and patriotic senator," linking his name with those of Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln and Cleveland, examples of all brands of American "tweedle-dum and tweedle-dee" capitalist politics.

It is Hearst, with his chief echo, Arthur Brisbane, who heaps flowers upon McCormick's remains because he helped keep the United States out of "foreign entanglements," while Vice President-elect Charles G. Dawes, the Chicago banker, author of the Dawes-Morgan plan for carrying out the peace of Versailles, that gave birth to the league of nations, also sheds tears over McCormick's "distinguished public services."

The differences between all of these capitalist lackeys, from Branting, the "socialist," to McCormick, elected to the United States senate by Wall Street's favorite, the republican party, is so small, the clash of principle is so infinitesimal, that they can be put on the shelf at will, or wiped out over night.

The mourning hysteria of the money lords doesn't have a difficult time of it in bridging the chasm between Branting and McCormick. Branting was a boon collaborator with Ebert, Bauer, Richter and other German "socialists" involved in the Barmat financial scandal that is shaking the German republic to its foundations. McCormick as one of the owners, and former editor of the Chicago Tribune, stood ace high with the financial interest of LaSalle and Wall Streets. He voted with the "millionaire bloc" in congress, being one of the "Newberry senators," putting his "O. K." on the seating of the Michigan multi-millionaire, Newberry, who bought his election to the U. S. senate, the "millionaires' club" of the American capitalist state.

So the workers and poor farmers may save their tears. Better unite their numbers and build the power that will not only combat those who take the places of Branting and McCormick, but that will declare victorious war against the social system of plunder and pillage for which they stand.

The fact that both Branting and McCormick attacked Communism should be assurance enough for all workers and poor farmers that they ought to join hands in energetic support of it.

Bankers Want Ancient Whipping Post for Bandits, Not Bankers

TACOMA, Wash., Feb. 26.—As a result of the murder of the manager of their 38th St. branch, the National Bank of Tacoma will close all their branch banks. Holdups of small country banks, of branch banks, and elsewhere are getting more and more common.

As a result, the legislature considers legalizing the whipping post; the clergy demands the bible be read in the schools; the press asasils the moral depravity of the present day.

Needless to say all these kept mouthers of capitalist propaganda never mention the economic forces, the unemployment, the low wages, which drive men into banditry.

Soviet Oil in Big Demand.

MOSCOW—(By Mail)—The decisive success met with by Soviet oil products in the northern part of Afghanistan was the gist of the statement made to press correspondents at Cabul by a representative of the Russian Oil Syndicate, recently arrived at the Afghan capital.

An experiment, which has just been made, he said, in sale of Soviet oil also in the south of Afghanistan, has proved quite successful. A consignment of oil products brot to Cabul at the time of the arrival in the capital of the Oil Syndicate's representative, has been rapidly sold out there owing to prices being cheap and lower than those of the British products. An agreement has been concluded, too, for supplying oil products to a number of public institutions.

EMPLOYERS WORK FOR POLICE TO BREAK STRIKES

Exert Big Pressure for State Police Bill

The Illinois manufacturers' association and the Illinois chamber of commerce renewed their drive to force a "state police bill," in Illinois which would assure them a force of mounted cossacks to break strikes that may occur in their factories. The drive is being concentrated on the Chicago and Cook county senators, most of whom voted against the cossack bill at the last session of the Illinois legislature.

"Eighteen downstate senators out of thirty-two voted for the police bill at the last session," said Harvey T. Hill, secretary of the Illinois chamber of commerce. "While only five Cook county senators out of nineteen supported the measure."

Bosses Want Returns.

The Chicago representatives in the assembly have had enormous pressure placed on them with their campaign funds. The business interests have organized a club of those who have been robbed, the aim being to show that the city police force in Chicago is not adequate to check crime.

The opponents of the bill point out that in the states which have mounted police forces, such as Pennsylvania and New York, crime is as prevelent as in Illinois, the police being used mainly to terrorise strikers.

They give as evidence of the real purpose of the state police the 1919 steel strike, when the cossacks were used to prevent strikers from picketing.

Refused to Break Strike—Morgan is Hounding Owenby

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 26.—Colonel James Owenby, who testified before the judiciary committee of the senate against the appointment of Harlan F. Stone to the supreme court of the United States, has left Washington, declaring that the Morgan and Rockefeller interests are hounding him out of the country.

Owenby said that Stone was unfit to serve on the supreme court because of his previous connections with the J. P. Morgan interests, which he intimated have not been severed. Owenby told how he previously worked for Morgan, amassing a million dollars as part owner of the Westlee Land and Fuel company in Colorado. Morgan, he said, forced the firm into bankruptcy and then took over the entire ownership of the company including Owenby's shares. Stone handled this transaction, Owenby said.

"My row with the Morgan and Rockefeller people commenced when I refused to join in the movement to hire mine guards to shoot down strikers in the Standard Oil mines of Colorado," Owenby declared.

Blacklist of Textile Barons Forces Slaves Back to Accept Cut

UTICA, N. Y., Feb. 26.—The strikers of the Utica Steam and Mohawk Valley mills, 1,400 strong, have tied up those mills completely, only about 30 hardened scabs, including bosses and second hands showing up at the Mohawk Valley mill.

Testimony of several girls shows that workers, who left one mill when the wage cut was put into effect, to go to work at another mill where the cut had not been announced yet, are being blacklisted and fired as quickly as identified.

This again proves that the cotton manufacturers' association is playing one set of workers against another, beating them one mill at a time, and that it has a blacklist system to prevent the slaves—that is all one can call them—from even changing masters. They are being forced to go back to their "own" boss and take what wages are offered.

GERMAN SEAMEN VISIT RUSSIAN PORT WORKERS

Get Fine Reception in Vladivostok

VLADIVOSTOK, Siberia.—On November 26th "our" ship, the German shipowners' "Ruth Kaiser," arrived at Vladivostok. We hardly got on our moorings when our Russian comrades, including the children from the Communist Youth League appeared on the vessel to give us, the German comrades, a hearty word of greeting upon our safe arrival. This gave us much joy. Right there we were invited to one of the clubs for a social evening. This made us feel as good as if we found ourselves in our own home circle. We were very much surprised by the successes of the Communists at Vladivostok.

The "Ruth Kaiser" crew is greatly thankful to the Communist youth who showered upon us entertainments in theatres, concerts, lectures, and meetings, and to the little Pioneers for the hearty attention shown to us. It was real joy to see how the little Pioneers work and how well the older generations teach them. I hope that these little Pioneers will accomplish that which we, the older Communists have not succeeded in doing, while the capitalists and fascists stand in the way pointed out by Karl Marx and Lenin.

The time is nearing when the "Ruth Kaiser" will have to leave Vladivostok, but we still do not want to sail away without a present for the Communist Party of Germany. And then on December 7th a banner was presented to us by seven unions jointly for the German proletariat.

It fell to me to receive, in the name of the "R. K." crew, as a section of the German proletariat, this banner, to the tune of the Internationale. "You will point out to us the way in Germany. You will bring with you in Germany a new breath of life, joining there the ranks of other fraternal banners. You will pave the way in Germany, through capitalism and fascism, and lead onward to the world revolution to the call of Marx and Lenin."

We shall joyfully turn this banner over in the name of the seven Vladivostok unions, to the Communist Party of Germany.

We shall firmly keep in our hearts the ideals of the Communist youth and of the Pioneers and we shall familiarise the German Communist Youth and Pioneers with them.

We thank the Port Bureau for raising the consciousness of our comrades and telling us the truth about the work of the Russian proletariat.

We hope to visit Vladivostok again next year, and to bring with us a present from the German proletariat. Let us not forget the call of Marx and Lenin.

Long live Communist Soviet Vladivostok!

Long live the world revolution and the Third International!

Signed:—Members of the German Seamens' Union and of the Hamburg branch of the German Communist Party. Vladivostok, Dec. 12, 1924.

Progressive Miners, District 1, Election Statement

TO ALL MINERS OF DISTRICT No. 1, U. M. W. of A.

ON the eve of the district elections, the Progressive candidates and their supporters call your attention to the serious problems existing in the anthracite fields and the brazen betrayals by the present administration headed by Rinaldo Cappellini. We call your attention to the sham fight that is now being staged by Lewis against Brennan.

Miners! Do not be fooled again by the election tricks of Lewis, both Cappellini and Brennan are the tools and supporters of Lewis. Do not be fooled by the glib speeches and the fake promises of these misleaders. They always remember your grievances a few weeks before the election and forget them the day after they are elected. Look upon their records of misdeeds and betrayals. Last election you voted for Cappellini. You are still reaping the bitter fruits of that mistake.

DURING this election campaign WE CALL ON YOU TO SUPPORT A PROGRAM AND NOT A MAN. No leader or set of leaders who are not responsible to the rank and file can solve your problems or settle your grievances. You must do the job yourselves. Read and study this progressive program, which is the only solution to your grievances. This program was formulated and written by the miners from the pits. By men who suffer and feel the wrongs and grievances that you feel each day. We have selected from among ourselves men for candidates who accept and will fight for this program.

If you agree with this program vote for it by voting for these candidates.

MINERS' PROGRESSIVE PROGRAM.

1. RETAINING AND DEVELOPING OF THE GENERAL GRIEVANCE COMMITTEES FOR THE BETTER EXPRESSION OF THE NEEDS OF THE RANK AND FILE.

The recent strike in the Pennsylvania mines has ably demonstrated that the General Grievance Committees are essential for the expression and settlement of the miners' grievances.

The grievance committee is in a position to expose the violations of the constitution by the union officials and the violations of the agreement by the operators. The grievance committee is close to, and responsive to the rank and file, therefore, our support should be given these committees, so that they will develop a militant leadership which will enable the rank and file to conduct this fight. The general grievance committees, with the full support and control by the rank and file become the true medium for the expression of the will of the miners.

The sinister forces now working for the dissolution of the grievance committees must be combatted with all the power at our command.

ABOLITION OF THE CONCILIATION BOARD.

2. The many years experience with the conciliation board has convinced every miner in the anthracite fields that no just consideration for settlement of grievances has been received or can ever be expected from this body. Hundrds of grievances are today piled up waiting for settlement, many long months and years in some instances, while the miner still works and suffers under the conditions and evils the conciliation board is supposed to eliminate.

3. DIRECT SETTLEMENTS OF ALL GRIEVANCES BETWEEN THE UNION AND THE OPERATORS WITH REPRESENTATIVES OF LOCAL AND GENERAL GRIEVANCE COMMITTEES PRESENT AT SUCH SETTLEMENTS.

Insofar as we have repudiated the conciliation board, which cannot and does not understand the problems of the miners, we insist that when grievances are being discussed and settled, the rank and file must be represented to better and more effectively present and fight for the interest of the miners.

4. SETTLEMENT OF ALL GRIEVANCES TO BE MADE STRICTLY WITHIN 30 DAYS.

Our past experiences have shown us that no matter how well we develop the machinery for the settlement of grievances, the operators and their henchmen always postpone and delay action until new and additional grievances develop and the old ones are forgotten. We call upon the miners of District 1 to demand that the settlements of all grievances be made within thirty days.

MINIMUM WAGE AGREEMENT.

5. We demand a minimum day rate for the contract miners and laborers that will assure us a day's wages when we must wait for cars, timbers, tools, and other material, or when gas develops in the chambers. The above are the chief reasons why we can not make a shift a day and our wages cannot furnish a decent living for our families.

6. ABOLITION OF TOPPING.

The operators today demand a six inch topping at the breaker and we must put a 9-inch topping at the face. For every car we load, the operators receive a ton and a half of coal for which we are not paid. Abolition of topping with the same number of cars to a shift as today, will assure us payment for every ton of coal we dig and load.

7. A SIX-HOUR DAY AND FIVE DAY WEEK WITH PROPORTIONATE INCREASE IN WAGES.

John L. Lewis and the operators agreed that there are two hundred thousand miners too many in the coal mining industry. Their solution is to eliminate these "surplus" coal diggers by starving them out of the industry. The Progressive miners contend that the mining industry must furnish a living wage to every coal miner.

This can only be done by a six-hour day with the same wages we receive while working eight hours. This is the only cure for unemployment, shortage of cars and many other evils we are suffering today. The six-hour day and the five-day week must provide work and a living wage for every coal miner.

8. AGAINST THE AUTOCRATIC AND ILLEGAL REVOCATION OF CHARTERS BY THE PRESENT ADMINISTRATION.

The right to revoke charters provides a powerful weapon in the hands of the Lewis-Cappellini machine. Its recent use in the Pennsylvania strike has well demonstrated how this power can be used in the interest of the operators and against the just grievances of the miners. As long as the union officials have the power to outlaw thousands of miners who rebel against the intolerable conditions and ignored grievances, the welfare of the miners and the effectiveness of our union are in danger.

The use of the right to revoke charters has been repeatedly used by Lewis to keep himself in power and to throttle every militant miner or local that supports a militant program of action.

9. DIRECT ELECTION OF DISTRICT AND INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZERS.

The power to appoint organizers is another dangerous weapon in the hands of the corrupt officialdom that is being used against the best interests of the rank and file and should be removed without delay.

The only remedy for this is to amend the district and the International constitution providing for the election by the rank and file of all organizers and traveling auditors.

10. SPECIAL INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION FOR THE REINSTATEMENT of ALEX HOWAT, TOM MYERSCOUGH, AND OTHER PROGRESSIVE MINERS.

The expulsion of these militant progressives is another crime in the record of the corrupt Lewis machine and must be wiped out immediately.

The only crime Howat, Myerscough and others have been guilty of was their militant activity in fighting for the interests of the miners against the operators and the Lewis machine. Districts 12, 24, 14 and 26 have indorsed this call for the convention. We call upon the miners of District 1 to endorse this call for the special convention and bring these militant Progressives into our union to help us in our fight.

11. AGREEMENTS BETWEEN MINERS AND TRANSPORT WORKERS.

There must be a real fighting alliance between the men who dig the coal and those who haul it. In the event of a national strike the miners and the transport workers must help one another.

12. NATIONALIZATION OF MINES.

The growing trustification of the coal industry is threatening to destroy the organized miners. By introduction of modern machinery thousands of miners are being eliminated every year. The only solution for these major evils lies in the government ownership with workers control of the mines under the direction of competent coal miners in the interest of society.

13. INDEPENDENT WORKING CLASS POLITICAL ACTION.

Independent working class political action under the leadership of a revolutionary working class political party striving for the abolition of capitalism and the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government.

14. ORGANIZATION OF THE UNORGANIZED FIELDS.

Over one-third of the miners in America are unorganized today. This situation threatens the existence of our union. We demand that an intensive organization campaign be started to bring every miner into the U. M. W. of A.

15. EQUAL WAGES, WORKING CONDITIONS, AND RIGHTS IN THE UNION FOR YOUNG MINERS.

16. RECOGNITION OF SOVIET RUSSIA.

The Progressive miners demand the unconditional recognition of Soviet Russia, not only because trade with Russia would stimulate industry in this country, but also because the Russian workers by their heroic struggle have abolished capitalist exploitation and now own the industries and run them in the interests of the working class.

BEWARE OF SECESSION MOVEMENTS.

The progressive miners are unconditionally opposed to all secession and dual union movements. The unscrupulous actions of the district and International officials have created distrust and despair among many miners, in some instances this has created a sentiment for secession from the U. M. W. of A. The Progressive miners warn you against such movements. We must remain within the ranks of the U. M. W. of A. and settle our differences there in a practical and constructive manner.

THE FOLLOWING CANDIDATES ARE DIRECTLY FROM THE FACE. THEY ACCEPT AND WILL FIGHT FOR THE ABOVE PROGRAM UNRESERVEDLY.

IF YOU AGREE WITH THE PROGRAM, VOTE FOR THESE CANDIDATES.

TWO BIRDS WITH YELLOW PLUMES SING NEW SONG

Need Big Pay for Governor, Not Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 26.—While reporting on the proceedings of the Michigan Federation of Labor convention, Dennis E. Batt and John T. Taylor, delegates from the Detroit Federation of Labor stated at the Detroit Federation of Labor meeting Wednesday, February 18, that the convention had adopted a resolution that the governor's salary be boosted from $5,000 to $15,000 a year.

The two "labor leaders", offered the following reasons for their action: that we must keep politicians honest with large salaries; that the salary must provide a decent standard of living for the office holder; and that the salary must attract men of proper calibre to the office.

But $16 a Week For Sick Workers

On the other hand, these proper calibred labor statesmen, saw fit to approve a report which raised the maximum compensation for injured workers from $14 to $16 per week.

Thus it appears that in the opinion of these two former revolutionaries, $15,000 is necessary to attract the proper calibred politician to provide a decent living and to keep him honest, while workers can be attracted to hazardous jobs with a munificent average "salary" of $832.00 and a promise of compensation when injured of $16.00 a week.

Honest Workers Not Necessary

Comparing the $15,000 for politicians with $832 for the workers would make it appear that these sober and responsible ex-radicals are more zealous for the welfare of capitalist politicians than for workers injured in the productive process.

The $16 maximum compensation is the result of a report of a commission of three appointed by the governor on which John Scanell "represented" labor. Scanell is also an ex-radical and as servile a tool as ever represented capitalism in the ranks of labor.

UNITED FRONT AGAINST BOSSES WELCOMED BY TEXTILE WORKERS BUT FOUGHT BY UNION OFFICIALS

UTICA, N. Y.—The leaflet of the Workers (Communist) Party appealing to all workers to unite upon a broad scale to fight the textile wage cuts with a great general strike, has caused much favorable comment here when handed out to the striking workers of the Utica Setam and Mohawk Valley Cotton Mills.

General Strike Idea Gains

The officials of the United Textile Workers are finding it hard to restrain the workers in the New York mills from making common cause with their striking fellow workers, since the ideas of the Communists are gaining ground with the rank and file members of the union. The officials have had to do a lot of "explaining" that doesn't explain anything to the workers on strike, who see the New York mills workers going to work when all know that the whole group of mill companies are closely organized and working together.

A statement issued by the union concerning the Utica Steam and Mohawk Valley company, shows clearly that the plea of poverty of the mill owners is pure fake.

The authorized capital of this corporation was $10,000,000; $7,000,000 of which stock was issued or sold, in August of 1901, when the concern was organized and chartered.

Since that time, or rather in the period from August 1901 to August 1907 a seven per cent dividend was paid regularly, making a total of $490,000, or for the six year period $2,940,000.

From August 1907 to August 1909 a regular dividend of eight per cent was paid annually, or $560,000 per year, and for the two year period $1,120,000 was received by the stock holders.

For the period from August, 1909 to October, 1917, 10½ per cent, or $735,000 was paid in dividends annually, and for the eight year period $5,880,000. From October, 1917 to December, 1923, 12½ per cent was paid annually, amounting to $875,000, making the amount paid in the six-year period $5,250,000.

In 1922 a five per cent extra bonus was paid representing $350,000 in money, and in 1923 an eight per cent extra bonus was paid to stockholders representing $560,000.

Thus the total received by stockholders in the Utica Steam and Mohawk Valley Cotton Mills in the form of regular dividends and extra bonuses between the time of organization, in August, 1901, and December 31, 1923, on the $7,000,000, the amount of stock out, was $16,100,000. Over twice the amount of the original investment in a period of 22 years.

Aside from these dividend payments all expenses and taxes were paid as well as corporation taxes to the state and nation, leaving in the company treasury a large surplus over and above this 128 per cent paid out in dividends on a $7,000,000 stock issue during the past 22 years, as well as keeping up improvements on machinery and buildings.

It is known that similar profits have been and are being made by all the other companies in the cotton manufacturers association, which, despite these swollen fortunes, are reducing the wages of the workers to below the starvation line.

Put Our Daily Ahead of the "Rote Fahne"

BERLIN.—At a recent conference in Berlin, 62 correspondents and reporters of the Communist daily, the Rote Fahne—the Red Flag—assembled to confer as to the duties and responsibilities of proletarian news gatherers.

Many of the final resolutions adopted by the conference dealt with Communist affairs and with plans for the future development of the Rote Fahne; for forming communications with correspondents in foreign countries, for extending work among the youth and women of the working class.

The Voice of the Masses.

One resolution, however, reads: "The workers' correspondent who lives and works with the working class, whose voice sounds from the very center of the working masses, is the best bond between the newspaper and the working class."

Another reads: "The activity of the workers' correspondent consists in reporting conditions in the shops and mills and mines, in the lives of the workers, and in the bourgeois state. There should be, however, no limit to his purely literary activity. The proletarian journalist and author finds a footing only in the Communist press."

A Collective Expression.

The Rote Fahne has over one hundred contributors, some of whom along with three editors, Steinicke, Apelt and Gentsch, are in jail at present, others being employed in factories, so that they were unable to attend the first conference of proletarian journalists.

"Economic Power" of Lumber Jacks Fades Into Unemployment

TACOMA, Wash., Feb. 26.—The St. Paul and Tacoma Lumber Co. has laid off the night shift. All local mills are now on the five day week. Camps are not opening. Despite the lies of the kept press, business conditions are getting steadily worse.

The city employment office reports 1091 applying for work and only 401 jobs in January. Many of these jobs only lasted a few days.

While Rowan Splits Union Bosses Speed Up Tunnel Workers

TUNNEL CAMP, High Sierras, Cal.—While the only union in the general construction industry, the Construction Workers Industrial Union No. 310 of the I. W. W., is torn to pieces by reactionary injunctionites of the Rowan faction posing as "revolutionists," the big contractors are getting away with the worst kind of slave driving.

This is seen by the way the Southern California Edison company, building the Florence lake tunnel, the longest, widest bore in the world, has bamboozled the construction workers into speeding up, and by this game has saved no less than $6,000,000 for the company. The bosses have even got the slaves to betting against each other's speed.

Wagering huge sums on their prowess as rock drillers, two crews at work on the tunned project have completed construction 22 months in advance of schedule.

Pushed along by "fighting spirit," increased by their betting, the laborers have so reduced the finishing time of the bore that it will catch the "run off" from this winter's melting mountain snows, creating a water storage valued at more than $1,000,000.

This, coupled with the interest saving on $17,000,000, the tunnel's cost, will save the company a total of $6,000,000, officials said.

EVERETT CENTRAL LABOR COUNCIL WARNS WORKERS

Lumber Barons Trying to Beat Millmen

EVERETT, Wash., Feb. 26.— The Central Labor Council here, after finding that the lumber mill owners had been advertising plenty of employment in eastern centers following the demand of their employes for an increase of 50 cents per day, has sent the following circular letter to all other central bodies and the labor press:

February 20, 1925.

To Central Labor Bodies,
Dear Sirs and Brothers:

After investigating statements that the number of idle workers of all kinds had been greatly increased in this city and vicinity during the preceding few weeks, the Everett Central Labor Council instructed its secretary to prepare and send out to points in the United States and Canada, from which the misinformed, misled and unfortunate workers have come, a fair and accurate statement as to the real conditions now existing here.

These men have been attracted here by false and misleading statements inspired and published by selfish interests for the purpose of perpetuating a low wage standard in the lumber and other industries of the northwest. These articles began to appear and the number of job hunters to increase soon after mill operators in Everett learned that a petition for an increase of 50 cents per day in wages of their employes was being circulated. The employers did not wait for presentation of the petition, but forthwith posted notices at their plants that a five-day week would be inaugurated two days later, "because of depressed condition of the lumber market;" yet six of the 14 lumber mills here were then operating night shifts and continued to do so after the short week was established.

Mill workers, whose minimum wages are $3.50 per day while those of organized common labor in other industries are $6, then began to realise that organization was absolutely necessary to maintain decent standards of living. Within the past two weeks the Sawmill Workers' Union, affiliated with the A. F. of L., has signed up more than 300 members and is the largest union affiliated with this council.

The object of this circular letter is to warn workers elsewhere that the reports that jobs are plentiful here are false and that to come here without other means of maintaining existence than their wage-earning power will be merely to increase the already too large army of destitute job hunters.

Recipients of this letter are requested to give this subject as wide publicity as possible.

Fraternally yours,
Everett Central Trades Council,
C. H. Packard, Sec.

BOSSES TEACH CHILD SLAVES IN NEW YORK

Schools and State Are Aids to Explotation

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—The manufacturers of New York, banded together in the "museum for national safety," when faced with the fact that 1,983 children employed in their factories in New York state were seriously injured last year, instead of taking the children out of industry and paying their fathers a living wage, inaugurated a campaign to "teach the children working in the factories safety precautions."

In conjunction with this huge industrial machine which exploits little children, the board of education will teach the children in the continuation schools, who are expected to enter industry when still very young, the safety devices used in the factories. The state department of labor has also enlisted in the campaign to exploit New York's children on a more profitable and scientific basis.

Trustees of the museum of safety, which declares as it aim "the reduction of work accidents among children," include, Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corp.) William D. Baldwin, chairman of the Otis Elevator company, Philip T. Dodge, chairman of the International Paper company, Robert A. Franks, Carnegie corporation, Edwin S. Lott, president of the United States Casualty corporation, David Van Schaak, director Aetna Life Insurance company, Lew R. Palmer, Equitable Life Assurance society and Frederick L. Hoffman of Babson institute.

The trustees are either large employers who do not wish to pay compensation for accidents suffered by the children, or members of insurance companies who do not wish to pay premiums on the insured child laborers.

Charles W. Laffin, principal of the west side continuation school, is aiding in the campaign to cut down the expenses of the employers of children. The children of his school, who are trained at industrial work when very young, are soon to enter industry, to do a man's work for half of a man's pay. Laffin takes these children to visit the "safety museums."

A. A. Hopkins, director of the museum, said, "The big problem now is to educate the workman, particularly the new and youthful employe. The American museum for safety has chosen for its next task the reduction and eventual elimination of accidents to children."

Sixty per cent of the 1,983 accidents to children employed in industry last year, occurred in New York City.

HYPOCRITE TACOMA PAPERS WEEP OVER "POOR CHILDREN" BUT FIGHT CHILD LABOR LAW

TACOMA, Wash., Feb. 26.— Charity is said to cover a multitude of sins. But there are limits. Last year there were too many outsiders drawing big salaries, so when this year's drive started most of the ads were given over to telling how it was purely a local affair. But at the end of the allotted ten days they lacked over $40,000 of the required $220,000.

Hypocrites Fought Child Labor Law

And now the kept press and the backers of the drive are raising a pitiful wail about the "poor children and mothers" who can't be helped. But it doesn't work. There are very few supposedly charitable organizations involved.

The bulk of the money will go to three fake charitable organizations, the associated charities, the salvation army, and the volunteers of America; and four non-charitable organizations, the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the boy scouts and the girl scouts. This is too raw to fool the people.

The papers which are now howling about the poor children, hestitated at nothing in attacking the child labor amendment. Thousands for charity but to hell with justice is their motto.

Labor Council Does Its Duty.

The unorganized workers in the mills are compelled to sign pledges for definite amounts. But organized labor, speaking thru the Tacoma Central Labor Council, refused to help the grafters. It reminded them that the bankers and business men back of the drive have always fought for lower wages and longer hours, and that if it were not for such rotten conditions charity would not be necessary.

Recently the city council refused to do anything to aid the unemployed. It has fought against the union scale of wages for the employes on the municipal power plant.

Council Belongs to the Rich.

At the request of a few rich taxpayers it revoked its plan for a five cents an hour raise for city employes. These few rich men are far more readily listened to than the thousands of workers. The capitalist class steals so much of what the workers produce that they do not have enuf left to live on. So charity becomes necessary.

And the same capitalist thieves ask the workers to contribute for charity. And then steal part of this for agencies for capitalist and militarist propaganda, such as the Y. M. C. A. and boy scouts.

MINE OWNERS GOT RICH BY 'GOING BROKE'

Got Government Pay and Cut Wages

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Germany, Feb. 26.—How profitable was the indemnity paid to the Ruhr industrialists on account of their supposed losses on their "micum" (Mission Industrielle pour le Controle des Usines at des Mines) deliveries to France appears to be revealed by statements by Morus in the weekly Welt Buehne.

Morus asserts that, thanks to the payments by the German government to industries in the Ruhr, the coal industry alone made from $35,700,000 to $47,600,000.

Get 5 Marks a Ton

The coal interests received from the government a profit of 5 gold marks ($1.10) on every ton of coal delivered, plus about $24,000,000 in interest. They also gained $30,940,000 on wage cuts.

Responsible for Dortmund

These same coal mine operators are now paying miners $7 and $8 a week and driving them upon a ten-hour shift to produce coal cheaper than any other miners in the world.

It is these Ruhr mine owners who are responsible for the murder in the Dortmund pits of 138 miners two weeks ago, when an explosion that killed them shook the whole structure of German capitalism and brought the agents of government and even of the Dawes plan, to pay mock homage to their victims.

Tom Bell Speaks at North Side Party Branch Monday Night

On Monday, March 2, another lively discussion is sure to bob up to follow the lecture of Tom Bell on "The Communists in the Trade Unions."

The speaker, who is secretary of the local Chicago Trade Union Educational League will give his lecture on the subject so much in the public eye today—to clearly explain the position of the Communists in their principles and tactics.

Each meeting is thrown open for discussion following the lecture and this is usually a feature of real interest.

The meeting is an open one to which all workers are invited and is held by the North Side branch of the Workers Party at Imperial Hall, 2406 N. Halsted St., corner Fullerton Ave.

WORKERS PARTY WINS FREE SPEECH FIGHT IN CONN.

Waterbury Police Bow to Communists

WATERBURY, Conn., Feb. 26.—Communist speeches were made at the meeting held recently at 103 Green St., but the police dared not interfere.

It was a splendid victory for the Workers Party.

Previous Meeting Stopped.

Readers of the DAILY WORKER will recall that at the Lenin Memorial meeting a snooping Lithuanian detective, Matthew Bolanda, stopped Comrade Balys Krasauskas when he began to praise the Workers (Communist) Party.

The district executive committee of District 15, was determined to fight the case, and immediately forwarded a strong letter of protest to Superintendent of Police Beach, advising him that the Workers Party would hold meetings under any and all circumstances. The meeting on Feb. 20, was arranged, with the same speaker.

On the Right to Speak.

The program began with songs by the Lithuanian children and by the Lithuanian male chorus. The chairman, Comrade Ida Rothstein, well-known needle trades militant, condemned the police for their high-handed action in January, and warned them that its repetition would bring on an energetic fight.

Waterbury a Profit Paradise.

William Simon, district organizer of the Workers Party, spoke on the wage cutting campaign of the capitalists, explaining that it was without justification. He then proved by dividend figures that the Waterbury Brass companies had made monstrous profits, the Scovill Mfg. Co. declaring a few years ago a 200 per cent stock dividend. These profits could provide for the workers against unemployment and lowered wages. He also showed how Waterbury was dominated by a few individuals, like the Gosses, and Chases who were officials and directors in a score of companies, industrial, insurance loans, hospitals, etc. The workers of Waterbury were urged to withstand any wage cut, and to join the Workers Party, which was leading the fight.

The Fight is Won.

B. Krasauskas was then introduced to speak on "Lithuania Freed from Czardom." He presented the subject from the Communist angle. The detective who was present with six burly policemen thruout the meeting, was uncomfortable as he heard the speaker express the same revolutionary ideas, for which he had been stopped before. But the Workers Party was ready for a fight, so the dick backed down.

Krasauskas called on the Lithuanian workers to join the Communist Party, and still no move to arrest. Evidently the detective realized then what a hornet's nest he had disturbed.

The Humorous Side.

A humorous vein was lent to the meeting at the close, when a woman who is a speaker for the church elements, asked what Communism had to do with the Lithuanians. The question drew a smile from the audience of workers. She did not wait for an answer, but walked haughtily to the rear of the hall. She reappeared and then proved the fallacy of radicalism, by showing that her brother, a socialist, was milking cows on a farm, while, who kept her skirts clear from radicalism, owned a photography studio. All that was lacking to complete the ad was a statement of the address of the studio. As she again marched up the aisle, the audience was in convulsions.

And So it Was Won.

The first round in the battle for free speech in darkest Waterbury was won by the Workers Party.

BUILDERS AT WORK

When You Get Disappointed—

BECAUSE you have sent in your subscription and receive your paper—and then receive a letter telling you that your sub has expired and you must renew—don't worry. It may mean that your sub has expired and your name has been taken off the list and then your remittance arrived and you were again put on the list. Of course if your paper fails to arrive be sure to let us know at once. Tell us the dates missing and we will go to the post office to straighten it out.

And don't get disappointed when you have moved and then fail to get the paper. Sometimes we fail to get the notice from the post office and WE DON'T KNOW you have moved. Be sure to write us at once if you have changed your address.

These two causes for complaint are not always the fault of the DAILY WORKER office. At all times our small force is just flooded with work and errors will occur. But every worker is a comrade anxious to do his or her share and striving hard to please every subscriber.

Anyway, don't let this prevent you from "kicking." Make it a comradely "kick"—state the facts and the DAILY WORKER force will immediately get on the trail of the error of ommission or commission and arrange to let you know at once that everything is again O. K.

If you have a DAILY WORKER agent in your branch or city tell him your "kick." But tell him also the facts: names, address, dates—and make him do the "kicking" for you. And that will sure make the office explain or apologize. In fact we will be glad to do it.

CHINESE EASTERN RAILWAY UNDER SOVIET CONTROL IN BIG SHOWING

HARBIN, Feb. 3 (By Mail)—On the occasion of the New Year, Comrade Ivanoff, General Manager of the Chinese Eastern Ralway, sent a congratulatory message to all departments and employes of the line, reading, in part as follows:

"The 1924 export campaign proved to be an unprecedented one for the last four years as regards its dimensions and intensity. The work yielded by the railway during September-December was 24 per cent higher than the work for the corresponding period of 1923 and was done with about the same number of goods cars and only some 8 per cent more engines."

The general manager, accordingly, feels it his duty to note that "the passing of the whole enterprise to new condtions has called forth a wonderful impetus of energy, diligence and careful execution of duties on the part of all the toilers of the railway—which accounts for the fact that such an intensive and strenuous export campaign could be carried out in the most orderly manner and with excellent efficiency."

PEONS SLAVE ON AMERICAN FARMS IN WEST INDIES

Robbed of Land in Haiti

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 26.—American financiers have established a network of large plantations in Haiti thru which small form owners are being turned into day laborers and peons, an investigator for a social welfare organization, just returned from Haiti said in a report issued here. The investigator urged the United States to stop the exploitations of these poor farmers.

"American influence in other of the West Indies has meant the growth of the plantations system and the gradual expropriation of the land of the people," the investigator's report stated. "This same process has been initiated in Haiti since the American occupation thru premissive laws which it dictated and thru the establishment by Americans of sugar, pineapple and cotton plantations."

Tax on Big Fortunes to Be Shoved on the Cockroaches by Cal

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 26.—Administration officials, particularly Andy Mellon, multi-millionaire secretary of the treasury, are figuring on putting over Coolidge's scheme to reduce the taxes on millionaires incomes, and load them onto the petty bourgeoisie.

The campaign is, of course, carried on under the camouflage slogan of reducing the sum of taxation in the country as a whole, but the redistributing of the tax burden is the main idea.

Altho everybody admits that the final figures on taxpayers for the period of March 15th this year will show that more million dollar returns will appear than the year before, the country can expect to be flooded with wild tales about the "injury to business" and the "flight" of big incomes, etc., from the agitators and newspapers of big capital.

Urge Primary Law's Repeal.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 26.—Political circles here today believed consideration of pending bills to repeal the statewide primary law would be considered by the committee of state senators appointed to review proposed amendments to the state election laws.

SOVIET RUSSIA PEASANTS HELP STARVING IRISH

"The people," said Mrs. Crawford, "seem to be cut off from the rest of the world, and live like starving rats in a hole. The countryside is bleak and without timber. The crops have failed, and the peat, on which the peasants depend for fuel, has been submerged.

"Extensive operations of trawling syndicates have destroyed the local fisheries, the main source of the people's living, and the result of it all is that these poor souls are literally and absolutely starving.

"In one place we visited, a woman lay dying of dropsy. There was no fuel in the house and no food. It was ghastly."

Mrs. Crawford went on to describe the efforts of the Workers' International Relief to alleviate the awful distress.

"I want to emphasise the fact," she said, "that with this organisation it is a case of the workers helping the workers in their sufferings. We give relief first and investigate afterwards.

"Our aim is to help the starving toilers, regardless of religious or political views.

Food Depots Opened.

"Over in Ireland," Mrs. Crawford proceeded, "we have succeeded in opening food depots in the various villages we have visited.

"We have taken meal, flour, tinned milk, tea and coal to a number of sufferers. The goods have been co-operative products.

"This, however, has been but a beginning. The need will be great for months to come.

"We have established an Irish committee of the W. I. R., which sits at Unity Hall, Dublin. We are making wide appeals for help. The suggestion has been made that the miners of Great Britain should give coal. The Union of Russian Land Workers is making an effort to help."

Mrs. Crawford is addressing a letter to all labor M. P.'s, asking for their immediate help in the work of organising meetings with a view to securing gifts of clothing, food and money.

The national committees of the W. I. R. in Holland, the U. S. A., Germany, and Russia have already made substantial grants.

Send in Contributions.

The workers and farmers of the United States are urged to send in contributions and collect funds for the Irish famine stricken. All contributions should be sent and all checks made payable to the Irish Workers' and and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee, 19 South Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

munist International because of his refusal to abide by its decisions. To those who criticized the C. I. because of its alleged "heresy hunting" proclivities we submit the following evidence of the justification of its action from the pen of Hoeglund; a eulogy of the traitor Branting: "Lucidity of style, logic of thought aand weight of opinion were his qualities as a writer, while his political judgment, theoretical knowledge and devotion to his cause gave him his position as leader." Branting was about as much of a radical as "Hell an' Maria" Dawes. In fact, Dawes is the idol and perhaps the paymaster of the Second International.

THE Chicago Tribune's British liar, John Steele, packed out some choice paragraphs from the written report of the labor leaders who recently visited Russia and chuckles gleefully over them. But they are not so diabolical after all. We are happy to know that this literary ghoul has done his worst. The fact is that the report is favorable and even the paragraphs that would not sound good to the ears of Anthony Comstock or Henry Ford do not get us very excited.

ACCORDING to the excerpts cabled by Steele, the report says that the dictatorship of the workers' and peasants is exercised thru the Communist Party. This is old stuff. "A woman can procure an abortion by an authorised physician in a state hospital provided she can give the medical board satisfactory reasons why she should not have a child. Necessary reasons are inability to bring up a child or ill health." It is whispered that abortions can be procuerd in "these United States" provided enuf money is available to overcome the doctor's fear of landing in the can.

THE report says that the Soviet system is no more Jewish than it is Sengalese, but that the Jews thru their intelligence and competence have secured high positions in the government. Considerable propaganda is also carried on against the religious dope joints. For all these things we give thanks, as they betoken that the Soviet government is trodding blithely along the high road to prosperity and a better life for the workers and peasants of Russia and thereby giving aid and comfort to the movement for freedom in all lands.

Revere Comrades Plan Red March Membership Drive

REVERE, Mass., Feb. 26.—The Revere branch of the Workers Party will celebrate the month of March in the following way:

We will open the month with a potato-pancake party on Saturday, Feb. 28, at 8 p. m. at Eagle's Hall. There will be food, song and dance. A humerous wall paper will be read off and woe unto the poor workers in the branch.

This affair will be followed by a lecture by Schachno Epstein, editor of the Freiheit on Sunday, March 8, at 8 p. m.

During the entire month an intensified house to house drive will be carried on for new subscribers and members. All members will be mobilized to spend every Sunday between 10 and 12 for the drive.

The Paris Commune celebration on Friday, March 27, at 8 p. m. at Eagles Hall will wind up our March activities. There will be a high class concert and entertainment and speaker.

The Mothers' League of Revere and the Young Workers' League will participate. The Mothers' League is arranging a sociable time for Sunday, March 15, at 8 p. m. and the Y. W. L. a lecture on Friday, March 13, at 8 p. m. Comrade Weisbord will be the principal speaker. All affairs will take place at Eagle's Hall. Our slogan is 50 members by April 1. We now have 30.

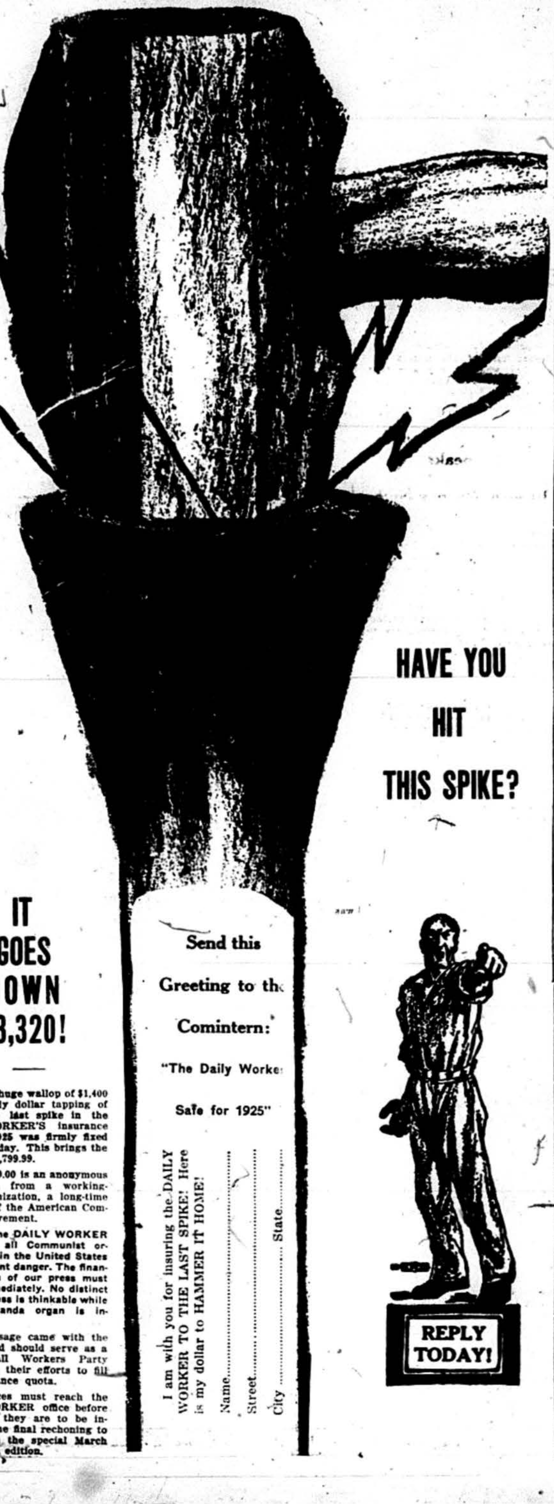
MONSTER BLOW DEALT SPIKE!



HAVE YOU HIT THIS SPIKE?

IT GOES DOWN $3,320!

With one huge wallop of $1,400 and a steady dollar tapping of $179.21, the last spike in the DAILY WORKER'S insurance drive for 1925 was firmly fixed in place Friday. This brings the total to $20,799.99.

The $1,400.00 is an anonymous contribution from a workingmen's organization, a long-time supporter of the American Communist movement.

"Unless the DAILY WORKER is insured, all Communist organizations in the United States are in iminent danger. The financial demads of our press must be met immediately. No distinct party progress is thinkable while our propaganda organ is insecure."

This message came with the $1,400.00 and should serve as a spur to all Workers Party branches in their efforts to fill their insurance quota.

Letters From Our Readers

Miners and "Do-nothing" Policy.

To the DAILY WORKER: The headline in the DAILY WORKER of Feb. 5, "Nothing to Do, Say A. F. of L. Heads" but still drawing their salaries is quite a contrast to the poor devils in this town walking the streets but out of work with many on the brink of starvation.

One hears the cry of complaint and bitterness everywhere. Our line of industry grows worse from day to day. Daily more mines close down. Many are on low production. The situation is desperate.

There was some little hope of improvement when a new power company about 7 miles from here was about to open up. Some 70 men applied for work and were told the rate of pay was to be 35 cents an hour and a 10 hour day. Many refused to start while others driven by absolute need had no other recourse but start. Such work recently has paid $5 and $6 per day. Men with families can't live on such wages. And board for single men is $12.50 a week at the camp houses.

The company, I am informed, is the West Pen Power which will eventually be linked up with the growing colossus, the Super Power, when all the holdings are squeezed out of the small holders and merge the coal, water and gas units. And if the miners should go out on strike the water power will be of great assistance in beating the miners.

At this time with so many men out of work and in desperate circumstances, with the bosses taking every advantage of the men and forcing down their wages, "Nothing to Do Say the A. F. of L. Heads." There is much grumbling at leaders of labor who find nothing to do when such serious problems confront the workers.

Yours truly,

Henry Dendery,
Morgantown, W. Va.

A Conversation.

To the DAILY WORKER: On Ashland Ave., a Negro worker asked me for a match and having this opening I started a conversation with him. He proved to be an ex-salt water sailor, shunted aside after acquiring a stiff limb, and this gave us a good start as I was in somewhat the same boat.

We walked along and soon the dingy stret turned into a rebel turnpike for here was one driven to mental revolt (and ready for action) by life as he found it. In contact with his fellows on the sea and in deep water ports he had acquired an ideology something like this:

This cursed system must go and in this country the chief thing is to get white and black workers united with that end in view. A standard of living here that almost equals that of some of the "best people" in China, Egypt (and other places he had been to) was all to the mustard because the workers here would fight before losing out on that very far and that was just what the present capitalist system could not provide for very long.

"Just from work," I was delaying his home going so we shook hands for the last time and he sang out, "Follow Russia, that is what we will do when our time comes and woe to those who oppose us," but there was a world of sincerity back of it that one would need to hear to apreciate.

Can't say he had read such a lot, but after being told about the Workers Party and receiving the promise of some literature his enthusiasm increased.

Can we not more and more (as Lenin, our leader did all those years) feel this change coming down upon us and miss as few chances as possible (even in a small way) to prepare for it.

Fraternally,

Lee Fillmore.

Capitalism in Joliet.

To the DAILY WORKER:—On Jan. 24, 1925, an election was held in Joliet to increase the school tax rate from $2.75 to $4.00 per hundred valuation. Due to the activities of organized labor the proposal was defeated by organized labor by a vote of three to one.

On Jan. 26, 1925, the school board held their regular meeting and there voted to punish the workers' children by abolishing three kindergarten classes and also to stop the feeding of daily of 30 undernourished boys and girls.

In steps our kind hearted capitalist, Mr. Theodore Gerlach, owner of one of the country's largest calendar making plants where most of his employes are girls and women working for very low wages, most of them as low as $10.00 per week. He publicly announced he would give $1,105.00 to continue feeding the poorly nourished children each day.

One of these poorly fed boys has a sister working in Mr. Gerlach's great plant. She is 16 years old, and is vainly trying to help feed her numerous brothers and sisters. She is assigned to printing little cards and until one week ago, was receiving one cent per card, or $1.00 per hundred.

Generous Mr. Gerlach set a new rate of 80 cents per hundred or a flat 20 per cent reduction. He gave as his reason that one very skilled and able worker earned $35.00 for two weeks' work. This sounds like fiction, but it is the brutal truth. Such is capitalism in Joliet.

A Letter to the Los Angeles Times

To the DAILY WORKER: The following is a letter to the Los Angeles Times, which that paper, of course, didn't print:

Did I hear you say that southern California has been viciously lied about? How could that be possible unless it would be to say something good about it?

Of course, I speak of southern California business men and politicians and the conditions in general more particularly of your attitude toward the tourists—and a word about labor.

As to your attitude toward the tourists, well, I had a room out on Wilshire during November at $7 a week. But on the first of December I was notified that the rent had gone up to $10.50 a week—put up or get out. It was explained that the tourists would soon be piling in and that they would get $2 a night or $10.50 a week until spring—but the tourists are not coming, are they?

Now, as to your politics, to say that it is rotten and the editors absolutely indifferent, is to put it mildly.

Work 12 Hours Underground.

As to the working man and the conditions under which he is forced to work in "southern California," do you know that men are working underground in the 5th street tunnel 12 hours a day? Is it possible that California has no eight hour day for underground work—if not, why not, since it is sheets like yours that contiol the politics of the state?

You have a law in this state (and I wonder how you ever consented to its enactment except that you knew it would never be enforced) to the effect that unless a man works seven days, I believe it is, on a job the fee paid to a private employment agency must be refunded. But in most cases these fees are not returned as they should be—the authorities turn deaf ears to the pleadings of the men for a return of this fee, according to law.

Rob Tourists.

Where there is smoke there must be a fire smoldering somewhere. All the way from New York to California I met tourists—the roads were crowded with them—in automobiles, raving, cursing, and gnashing their teeth—they had been to California and claimed that they had been cheated, robbed and in some cases abused the same as the animals with the mouth disease.

Yes, California is all right. It has some good soil and some nice climates. The tourists and workers were not condemning the soil. They were condemning the grafters.

Jesse T. Kennedy, New York City.

Coal Miners Face Crisis

The coal operators have assembled their forces and are determined to revise the Jacksonville agreement with the United Mine Workers of America.

That such a move would be undertaken by the coal barons has been evident for some time. In all the coal fields there has been a steady but unofficial revision of the agreement. Working conditions have been changed to benefit the operators and such changes have had the same result as a reduction of wages—the miners dig more coal for less money.

These changes have been carried out with the full knowledge of the Lewis administration. In some instances the officials aided the coal operators to carry out the revisions. While exact figures are lacking there is little doubt that thousands of miners are working under what practically amounts to a revised agreement. In districts like the anthracite fields, where there has been mass strikes against unauthorized changes the Lewis administration has revoked charters and otherwise aided the operators.

The unemployment in the industry and the stealing of working conditions that is already an accomplished fact has encouraged the coal owners to open war on the wage agreement. The miners must now fight or accept a cut in wages that is only the beginning of a series of slashes intended to wipe out living standards they have fought for years to obtain.

Here is the final proof of the utter bankruptcy of the Lewis policy. He has deliberately weakened the union by revoking charters and expelling whole districts, he has urged the miners to have faith in the word of the coal capitalists, he has denounced, slandered and expelled Communists and members of the Trade Union Educational League, the most active members of the union. He has said time and time again that the progressive miners were enemies of the union and their program of struggle the road to ruin.

But it is Lewis and his payroll gang that has led the United Mine Workers of America far on the road to ruin. It is not too late to turn back.

The program of the Workers (Communist) Party and the Trade Union Educational League, their call for action against wage cuts and unemployment, points the way.

The United Mine Workers of America face a great crisis. They are at the turning point. If they submit to the demands of the coal capitalists they will have lost the fruit of years of effort.

It must not be. The coal miners must rally to the left wing program, they must repudiate the defeatist policies of the Lewis officialdom, they must utilize this issue to build a rank and file movement so strong that both the treacherous bureaucrats and the coal barons cannot prevail against it.

Street Cleaners' Strike Continues

The Chicago city authorities, like all other employers, are willing to spend thousands of dollars for scabs and police protection for scabs rather than settle with the striking workers who in this case are the men who do the hardest and most unpleasant of all tasks—keeping the city clean—members of the Street Cleaners' Union.

The commissioner of public works has told the union that its members must be back to work by Tuesday or their places will be filled. This means that 2,500 strikebreakers will be recruited if the union does not surrender. It means that the striking street cleaners will have to fight for their right to work at decent wages.

Municipal ownership as a solution of the workers' problems is urged by many reformers. It has been a pet project of the socialist party for years. It was popularly supposed that city authorities would be much more friendly to wage earners than private capitalists. If anything is municipally owned it is the streets and alleys of the city of Chicago—the whole sanitary district is a municipal undertaking.

The city authorities appear now in the same role as any other boss. They talk glibly of strikebreakers and police as means of whipping the striking workers into line. They have tried to divide the strikers by offering a small increase to foremen, etc., as employers always do. If and when scabs are used and the union begins to picket, the heads of the members will be broken just as if the city was a private concern.

It is only a small section of the city employes that are striking. There would be a different situation if the city workers were organized in a municipal workers' union and striking as a unit. There would not be such a defiant attitude on the part of the city officials nor could enough scabs be got together to break the strike.

If the street cleaners and other municipal employes are to cease being beggars at the door of city bureaucrats they must organize a union of all city workers.

Explaining the Sullivan Disaster

The federal governmen can and does send troops to aid the employers in breaking strikes, but it has not the power to enforce safety regulations for workers.

This is the only conclusion that can be drawn from a statement recently issued by the department of interior dealing with the Sullivan mine disaster. The bulletin says:

> "It is reported that this mine disaster, the greatest in the history of Indiana, was caused by open lights, which ignited gases in the mine. If so, the Sullivan catastrophe emphasizes the great hazard to the lives of American coal miners in the continued use of the open flame lamp in mines. . . . . Records compiled by the bureau of mines of this department covering a period of 17 years, show that open flame have been the contributing cause of numerous fires and over one hundred explosions in mines, with a death toll of 3,000 men. . . . . Such explosions are preventable."

The bureau of mines has a number of specific recommendations for the kind of lamps that are safe and according to its statement, these recommendations have been given to all coal mine operators. These recommendations are as follows:

> "In all coal mines the portable lamps for illumination should be permissible, portable, electric mine lamps.
> "In places where fire damp and black damp is liable to be encountered, a permissible magnetically-locked flame safety lamp for gas detection, or equivalent permissible device, should be supplied to at least one experienced employe in each such place.
> "Any employe before being supplied wth a permissible flame safety lamp should be examined by a competent official of the mines to assure the man's ability to detect gas.
> "All coal mines, whether classed as non-gaseous or gaseous in any part, should be supplied with magnetically-locked, permissible, flame safety lamps, properly maintained and in sufficient number for all inspection purposes."

Then comes a statement that every coal miner should paste up where he can read it every day:

> "The acting director of the bureau of mines has announced that the adoption of the bureau's recommendations depend on securing the co-operation of the industry and the state goverment, since it is well known that the bureau has not authority to make regulations requiring the use of permissible lamps in coal mines."

In 1919 the federal government, of which the bureau of mines is a part, rushed troops into every mining district where miners were on strike if the bosses asked for them.

The government issued an injunction against the United Mine Workers of America and tied up its strike funds.

Yet this same government, when 51 miners are sent to their death by the coal lords of Indiana, declares it has no means of preventing a similar disaster. It would never do to interfere with the sacred right of the coal capitalists to rob and murder, by forcing them to use safety lamps.

Our 100 per cent labor leaders claim that American government is a "government of all the people."

Will the coal miners and the families of the victims of the Sullivan disaster believe this much longer?

"Our" Efficient Navy

The Huron, flagship of Morgan's Asiatic fleet, has run aground on the island of Palawan. This evidence of efficiency will no doubt make Japan think twice before she makes any hostile moves.

This reminds us that the navy breaks into print in three ways—when Secretary Wilbur makes a speech, when one of its ships runs aground and when it lands marines to subdue some colonials that owe money to the American bankers.

Perhaps the naval heroes have discovered a new method of putting marines ashore. Enough battleships have been aground lately to make this seem plausible. Maybe the new way is to sail onto an island so the brave boys can step right off without getting their feet wet.

Tired Rebels

We are in receipt of a letter from a comrade who says we don't give enough credit to Daniel DeLeon and that Communist defendants should stand on their constitutional rights—whatever they are.

He ends his letter with the following sentence: "There is on hurry about me—when the workers see the need of organization and show a little horse sense I will be there with both feet."

This is the negative attitude of the tired rebel who has lost what faith he ever had in the working class. This is neither DeLeonism, Communism, socialism or anything but defeatism.

Criticism from comrades who have this state of mind springs from the fact that the Workers (Communist) Party is a party of action. We are disturbers in that we make it impossible for the tired rebels to sleep until the rest of the working class awakens.

Coolidge is impartial. He is against the raise the $7,500 gashouse boys handed themselves and also against the raise the underpaid postal workers want.

Was it Anatole France who said that "capitalism gives rich and poor alike the right to sleep under bridges"?

A news item in the capitalist press tells a story of the life led by Russian czarists in Paris. Four Americans, two men and two women, were arrested in a den by the police. There were also arrested four Russians who were giving an exhibition entitled "Art Spectacles." Ninety-nine per cent of the art consisted in the complete absence of clothes. Besides the four Americans there were thirty-six other spectators. This is the degenerate class that Abramovich is here to defend!

M'ANDREW'S NEW SCHOOLS EXPOSED AS FIRETRAPS

Building Commissioner Orders Them Scrapped

That architects representing building company interests and Superintendent McAndrew the economy expert, were the only ones consulted regarding new school buildings came out when Chief Deputy Building Commissioner Robert Knight vetoed the plans because they do not comply with the fire regulations. Knight's veto throws out the plans for the eight elementary schools that the board has been working on for the last three months.

The plans were worked up from a standard type of elementary school building prepared by Supt. McAndrew's staff of building experts. Upon recommendation of the superintendent they were adopted by the board and the details worked out in the architect's department and approved by Edgar L. Martin, supervisory architect.

To make the buildings acceptable under the building ordinance, there must be two exits in each classroom and wood shops. Exits from gymnasiums, assembly halls and libraries must lead to street. Tile partitions must be increased in thickness from four to six inches. In addition the health department has objected to the ventilating system.

We venture to add that if a committee were appointed on which teachers would serve many other shortcomings in the plans that sacrifice comfort and needs of pupils and teachers would be discovered.

Who is to say what kind of new school buildings go up in the city of Chicago. The architects and managers who can see only economy of space, economy of building and economy of material or the teachers and parents who are concerned with the comfort and the welfare of the children?

Labor Fakers and Priest Join Forces to Trick Workers

the DAILY WORKER could be distributed, he refused. However, 100 copies were sold in the hallway. White tried to explain by saying that the DAILY WORKER and the Workers Party literature would make people "talk" and that it was "against the strike."

Really Afraid Workers Do Understand

When asked to point out where the DAILY WORKER or any other literature of the Workers Party opposed the strike, White would not answer. He could not answer. But he tried to dodge by saying that "people don't understand it, and it will be bad for the strike." Apparently, he is really afraid the workers do understand the daily only too well to suit him.

However, both the DAILY WORKER and the Workers Party leaflet, "Strike Against Wage Cuts," have been read by many workers and, far from White's evasive lies, they all agree that the DAILY WORKER and the leaflet is the best thing for the textile workers they have ever seen.

Illinois Has More Bonus Money.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 26.—The state has approximately $170,000 of the Illinois bonus fund left with which to pay pending claims, it became known here today following a conference between the service recognition board and Governor Len Small in which it was decided to offer to the highest bidder, March 17, $1,650,000 in bonus bonds, the unexpended balance of the $55,000,000 bond issue voted by the people in 1922, the bonds are to bear four per cent interest and are payable in twenty years.

Ammunition for the Workers' Arsenal

By MANUEL GOMEZ.

Working Yourself Out of a Job.

COOLIDGE "prosperity" is a monstrous, two-faced thing feeding on misery and bitter want. It is a crass contradiction, which every day becomes more hopelessly involved.

The United States Department of Labor sent out a report last week calling attention to the relatively high degree of business activity, as evidenced in whole prices, in the fact that the steel industry is operating around 90 per cent of capacity, etc. but the report concluded with the rather puzzled remark that "IN SPITE OF INCREASED BUSINESS ACTIVITY, EVERY ONE OF THE BIG INDUSTRIAL CENTERS HAS CONSIDERABLY MORE UNEMPLOYED WORKERS THAN A YEAR AGO."

The explanation of this strange phenomenon is now revealed in tabulations published by two different government agencies, the Federal Reserve Board and the Department of Commerce. The Reserve Board figures were produced by Leland Olds of the Federated Press in Monday's DAILY WORKER. They show that "the expanding needs of the country due to the increase of population are being met largely without giving employment to the increased number of workers who are growing up." The ranks of the army of more or less permanently unemployed have been swelled by 1,600,000 as compared with the pre-war years.

WHAT THE CENSUS FIGURES SHOW.

Now let us examine some figures just made public in connection with the Department of Commerce's biennial census of manufactures for 1923;

		1923	1921	1919
Value of manufactures (at factory prices	*	$60,481,135	$43,653,283	62,041,795
Average number of wage earners employed		8,763,233	6,946,590	9,000,059
Total wage payments	*	10,985,896	8,200,324	10,461,787
Horsepower of prime movers		241,168,602	(no data)	219,518,152

Thus relatively fewer workers in 1923 produced considerably more goods. Labor is steadily becoming more productive, piling up greater and greater masses of wealth with smaller expenditure of energy. Under capitalism this is no unmixed blessing. The markets for merchandise are limited, even in the present imperialistic epoch, and only a certain amount of labor can be absorbed with satisfactory profit to the bosses. The rest goes to swell what Karl Marx called the "industrial reserve army" of unemployed, whose existence is a weapon in the hands of the capitalist to keep down wages.

While the combined factory prices increased 38.5 per cent between 1921 and 1923, total wages increased only 34 per cent. That is, however, as regards TOTAL wages. But inasmuch as the number of wage earners increased 26.2 per cent during this period the 1923 total wage had to be divided among 1,816,663 additional workers, which means that the individual worker received a very much smaller proportion of what he produced.

VALUE ADDED IN MANUFACTURE

Even these striking figures fail to reveal the full extent of what has been taking place. A correct measure of the actual value created by manufacturing process is not the aggregate value of products as given above (which includes the same values counted several times) but the "value added in manufacture," namely the difference between the cost of raw materials, fuel, etc. and the factory price of the finished products. This amounted to $25,853,151,000 in 1923 AS COMPARED WITH $18,316,666,000 IN 1921, AN INCREASE OF 41.1 PER CENT. Moreover, an important part of the values created by labor are still unrecorded in the totals; they are incorporated in the industrial process itself for the benefit of future generations. An inkling of this can be gotten from the fact that the rated horsepower capacity of engines, water wheel, electric motors, etc., used for primary power in manufacturing establishments, has increased 14.4 per cent as compared with the boom year 1919.

SUMMARY

To sum up. The figures show: (1) increasing productivity of labor; (2) larger output; (3) decreasing share by the workers in the product of their labor—increasing rate of surplus value, or of exploitation; (4) increase of the "industrial reserve army."

Substantially the same trends can be noted at the present time, for the most part greatly exaggerated. That is Coolidge "prosperity." That is capitalism.

N. Y. TEACHERS UNIONS FIGHT NEW SALARY BILL

Gives Too Much Power to Superintendents

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—An appeal to all teachers to unite in opposition to the Downing bill was issued by Dr. Henry R. Linville of the Teachers' Union who said it was a menace to everything the teachers have fought for.

"This bill nullifies the policy for which the teachers have fought for many years, namely, the control of salaries by the state legislature.

"It makes the various groups of teachers the football of local politics. This will divide the teachers into warring camps. It places them at the mercy of the board of superintendents, a body for the most part of political appointees. Even if teachers receive an increase because of an approaching mayoralty campaign, what will prevent these same authorities from taking away what they have given?"

Strong support of the Kleinfeld bill prepared by the joint salaries committees of teachers' associations was announced by the New York Principals Association, the Assistant to Principals' Association and the Teachers' Union.

The Downing bill gives the board of superintendents power to revise salaries every five years. The Kleinfeld bill would specifically fix definite schedules by legislative action at higher rate of pay than are now in force.

If You Own Part of the Philippines, You Can Worry Over This

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The Philippines are "very vulnerable and could be taken away by an enemy," Rear Admiral Hiliary P. Jones, chief of the navy general board, today told the house aircraft committee.

"Of course, we all realize that the Philippine Islands could be taken by an enemy before America could get a fleet there," frankly admitted Jones.

The committee previously had been told by Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, assistant chief of the army air service, that the Philippines, Hawaiian and other American Pacific possessions, "could be captured by Japan in two weeks."

THINGS do not look [illegible] coal miners of the [illegible] states. Their ranks have been decimated by unemployment and the union weakened by the inroads of the non-union coal operators. Now, the Jacksonville agreement of which John L. Lewis boasts so much is the object of attack. According to the latest news dispatches, the coal operators are gathering for a war pow wow to smash the Jacksonville pact. Lewis has been busy for the past few years splitting the union in order to make the operators' job comparatively easy.

THE coal operators, like wise generals, prepared the ground carefully before deciding to make a frontal attack. For years they have been closing down union mines and opening scab pits in Kentucky and southern West Virginia. These non-union fields are now able to produce enough coal to warrant the belief on the part of the coal operators that they can present their ultimatum to the union with impunity.

EVER since the Jacksonville pact was signed the operators have been violating it. Strikes have broken out after the miners had exhausted their patience asking for redress of their grievances. In every instance Lewis sided with the bosses, even going to the extent of lifting local union charters. The Lewis policy has dangerously weakened the union. Not alone has it lost membership, but it has lost confidence in the official leadership and will thus go into action if a strike is in the offing under a very serious handicap.

THE casualties in leadership suffered by the mine workers' union during the past few years, thru the splitting policy of John L. Lewis, number such battlers as Jim McLachlan, Alexander Howat and Duncan MacDonald. These men are still available as rank and file leaders but some of them have been expelled or suspended from membership as well as from office and their effectiveness as leaders on a national scale impaired. Now that the coal barons believe Lewis' tactics have sufficiently weakened the once powerful union, they are ready to open fire. But regardless of treacherous leadership the rank and file of the United Mine Workers of America, will fight in the future as they have fought in the past, and in the forefront of the fight, against the operators will be the Communists in the coal miners' union and the militants under the leadership of the Trade Union Educational League.

LABOR DEMANDS LIBERATION OF SACCO-VANZETTI

Demonstrations Thruout Entire World

Tomorrow the enlightened working-class of the entire world, under the leadership of the Communist International, mobilizes to demand a new trial for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, Massachusetts labor leaders who have been condemned to die by the prostituted courts of the employing class.

The Workers (Communist) Party is conducting Sacco-Vanzetti protest meetings in the principal cities of the country, demanding the release of Sacco and Vanzetti and of all class war prisoners placed behind the bars because they opposed the exploiters of labor and tried to organize the workers to fight for a decent standard of living.

Meetings will be held tomorrow afternoon in New York, Chicago, Buffalo, Boston, Worcester, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Hartford, Bridgeport, New Haven and many other cities.

Case Being Appealed.

Today's issue of the DAILY WORKER is a special "Sacco-Vanzetti" edition which gives the history of the frame up of Sacco and Vanzetti, who were convicted of the robbery and murder of a paymaster in South Braintree in 1919, on perjured testimony. The two labor organizers, who were active in the Hopedale, Mass., foundry strike and the Lawrence textile strike, were condemned to be hanged on March 1, and were denied a new trial. The case is being appealed to the state supreme court, and will be taken to the United States supreme court if necessary.

Big Cleveland Meeting.

Preparations are being made for a packed house at the labor demonstration in Cleveland, Ohio, on Sunday, March 1, at 7:30 p. m., at the Engineers' Auditorium, Ontario and St. Clair, when Cleveland workers will turn out to demand the release of Sacco and Vanzetti, and the cessation of all persecutions of the workers.

This meeting is being held under the auspices of the Cleveland Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Conference, a united front organization formed on the call of the Workers Party and with which the following organizations were affiliated up to the time of the last meeting of the conference on Feb. 20:

Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Joint Board; American Lithuanian Workmen's Literature Society; Auto Workers, No. 195; Carpenters, No. 105; Electrical Workers, No. 38; Glaziers, No. 181; Independent Order Sons of Italy; Italian Anarchist Group; Journeymen Tailors, No. 162; Lathers, No. 2; Labor Defense Council; Molders, No. 218; Painters' District Council, No. 6; Painters, No.

"GET ALL CITY WORKERS OUT!" SAYS T. U. E. L. COMMITTEE TO STRIKING STREET CLEANERS

The National Committee of the Trade Union Educational League with offices at 1113 West Washington Blvd., has issued the following statement on the strike of the Chicago sanitary department workers and threat of the city authorities to break the strike:

Mayor Dever, Colonel A. A. Sprague, commissioner of public works and Chief of Police Collins have finally made up their mind to crush the strike of the white wings. Major Dever, the so-called friend of labor, feels that to yield to the modest demands of the street sweepers would set a bad example and might interfere with the general wage-slashing campaign now being conducted thruout many industries.

The aldermanic election is over, the election "friends of labor" manouvered very skillfully out of an embarassing position. To have used strike breakers during a city election would have defeated the administration forces, so they straddled the fence and bluffed their way thru. Now the strike must be crushed.

Dozens of extra police, sluggers, gunmen will be hired. Thousands of dollars will be spent to crush the strike. Only 2,500 common laborers are effected directly, but the scheme of the city administration to crush out unionism on public works will be strengthened. The school teachers who more than any other labor group, supported and aided in the election of Dever were the first to feel the heavy hand of the city administration. Many attempts have and are still being made to turn all contracts to "open shop" contractors. So the crushing of the strike of the white wings is a part of the general "open shop" drive.

An appeal will be made to the "public spirited citizens" to help keep the city clean. Scare headlines will appear in the capitalist daily papers about the danger of epidemics. All the forces of capitalist oppression will be mobilized to defeat the miserably paid street sweepers. "The public's health is endangered," will be the slogan, or protext, under which the clubbing and jailing of the strikers will be carried on.

Out in all kinds of weather, unsteady employment, sweeping and clearing up of the filth and muck of the city, for which a miserable wage of $5.50 per day is being asked! Hundreds of thousands of dollars will be spent to crush the strike. That would pay the raise asked for by the laborers for many years to come. But the mandate has gone forth, "No wage increase," so another strike is going to be crushed unless the workers mobilize their forces and fight as a unit.

The only way to meet the situation is to bring in other unions. Call out other city workers, to broaden the strike, tie up the city completely so that not an ounce of garbage will be moved until the demands of the strikers have been met. No yielding to arbitration. No yielding to the cry that the health of the city is in danger.

The ones who are endangering the health of the citizens are the city officials who have refused to grant the starvation wage demanded.

Keep your strike line intact.

Increase the strike front. The slogan should be "No Cleaning of City Until Our Wage Demands Have Been Met."

TWO MORE MINES CLOSE, THROWING 800 ILLINOIS MINERS OUT OF WORK

HARRISBURG, Ill., Feb. 27.—Announcement was made here today by the Saline County Coal corporation that it's number seven (Harco) mine, employing five hundred men, would close down for an indefinite period after today's work. The Harrisburg Coal Mining company also announced closing down of it's number one mine for an indefinite period, this mine employs three hundred men. Both mines are near Harrisburg.

CHICAGO FACES PLAGUE FROM PILED UP GARBAGE WHILE SPRAGUE LOAFS

While the filthy condition of the streets of Chicago in working class districts reached a critical point yesterday, Commissioner of Public Works A. A. Sprague, who has refused to deal with the strikers, attended the funeral of the late Senator Medill McCormick, one of the republican bosses in Chicago.

The streets of Chicago are piled high with boxes and barrels of garbage, which overflows and scatters over the sidewalks. But Sprague, who is a democratic politician, pays homage to the republican boss, while the striking street cleaners are refused a living wage, and the city is left open to the ravages of disease.

STRIKERS READY FOR LONG SIEGE, SAYS CAROZZO

Street Cleaners Read the Daily Worker

The street repair laborers and garbage and rubbish collectors prepared for an extended strike at a meeting of the 800 foremen at 180 West Washington street. After a survey of the finances of the striking city employes, Michael Carrozzo said: "We have enough money in the union's treasury to last six months. But we will win the strike soon."

"I do not believe the commissioner of public works will dare to use strikebreakers," Carrozzo added, "but if he does, he'll need plenty of police protection. We are determined to protect our jobs."

Urge Sympathetic Strike.

Carrozzo said he had been conferring with representatives of the employes of private firms which collect ashes and garbage from big institutions. "As soon as it is necessary the private employes will come out of a sympathetic strike," Carrozzo said. "If the strike lasts beyond a day or two all private garbage and ash collecting firms will be tied up."

At the foremen's meeting all plans were laid for a lengthy struggle, strikers present said, and a system of picketing was worked out in case strikebreakers are hired by the city.

"We have it arranged so that as soon as a collector, street repair man or street cleaner is seen in any part of the city, adequate steps will be taken to get him off the streets," one striker said. Those strikers having telephones will be notified when picketing is needed, the striker said.

Sprague Threatens Discharge.

Commissioner Sprague has notified thestrikers individually that they will be discharged if they do not return to work by Tuesday. Many of the strikers think, however, that their demands will be accepted by the city within a few days.

The strike has been entirely ef-

ABRAMOVICH, SURROUNDED BY POLICE, DODGES MENTION OF SOVIETS, BUT STARTS A RIOT

LABOR LEADER BUYS CHUNK OF WINDY CITY

Michael Artery Deeply Interested in Chicago

Michael Artery, Chicago "labor leader" has just bought a $210,000 flat building on Barry avenue. When Fred Mader quit the labor movement, at least temporarily, he complained bitterly that he only had a paltry $100,000 to his credit in the bank. "Had I devoted my life to the real estate business, I would be now worth at least half a million. It does not pay to sacrifice yourself for the workers," wailed the penitent Fred.

Evidently Michael C. Artery, had both ears open when Mader was broadcasting his bitter experience. Artery is head of the Metal and Machinery Movers' local and is the man who made the motion to accept the Landis Award in the Building Trades Council. He is what is known as a "bona fide" labor leader, that is the kind of labor leader who is as unlike the Foster type as unlikeness can go. Artery is "safe, sane and conservative" an "upstanding citizen" and an "upholder of law and order." It pays to be good. Here is the proof.

Juggling Flats.

Michael C. Artery has just completed a neat little real estate deal thru the firm of T. A. McGrogan and Co. He purchased a forty-three apartment building at 719-27 Barry avenue from Louis Dulsky, of Dulsky and Dulsky, attorneys, for the sum of $210,000. Artery gave in part payment the eighteen flats at the southwest corner of Kingston and East 74th place, valued at $130,000.

Where did he get the money? Perhaps the Federation News might tell us. Artery is a "legitimate" labor leader, and no doubt got his quarter of a million legitimately. We hope the shipment that was supposed to come in last week from Moscow for our benefit did not get diverted. In these "highjacking" days anything is liable to happen.

AMSTERDAM INTERNATIONAL, IN COUNCIL, EVADES WORLD UNITY; BRITISH FIGHT WELL FOR ACTION

AMSTERDAM, Holland, Feb. 13.—(By Mail.)—The meeting of the general council of the International Federation of Trade Unions (Amsterdam International), which has been meeting here and considering the proposal for world unity of all unions as proposed by the Red International of Labor Unions for some time, has shown that the unity movement is far too strong to be ignored by the council's right wing. On the other hand, the left wing, consisting of the British members of the council, is yet unable to force the reformist right wingers into action that is called for by the tremendous tidal wave for world unity now sweeping thruout the whole organized working class.

Evasive Compromise Result

The right wing has been forced into what appears to be a concession, yet which has the danger of lulling the fighters for unity into satisfied inaction while the right wing may delay any real action by evasive qualifications which it attaches to any proposed conference between themselves and the Red internationalists.

The object of the right wing became clear at the opening of the council, when Oudegeest, secretary of the Amsterdam International moved a resolution to break off all talk of world trade union unity and of notifying the Russian unions that the whole matter was closed and would no longer be discussed with them.

Reformists Attack British

Jouhaux, the French class collaborationist, ably seconded Oudegeest.

Both attacked Soviet Russia, and, moreover, attacked their own British colleagues of the council, saying that the British had been "under the influence of revolutionary excitement"

BOURGEOIS BURLESQUE IN INDIANA LEGISLATURE COMES TO QUICK END

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 27.—When the Indiana senate roll was called today all but one of the democratic senators who fled to Ohio as a protest against a republican "gerrymander" bill' answered "present." The absentee, Senator A. E. Durham, was said to be in Cincinnati. He did not accompany the other minority members to Dayton, Ohio.

While leaders of the democratic minority declared emphatically that their return to the senate chamber was decided upon only after assurances were received from the majority that the "gerrymander" measure would fail of passage, republican spokesmen placed equal emphasis upon their denial that anything but immunity from arrest had been promised.

BRITISH MINE LEADERS FLAY FRANK HODGES

"Black Friday" Leader for Coal Barons

LONDON, Feb. 27.—Frank Hodges, former secretary of the British Federation of Miners is making common cause with the operators against the union and is being flayed mercilessly by his left wing successor A. J. Cook, who was elected to office on a program drawn up by the Communists.

Cook, secretary of the M. F. of G. B. and Herbert Smith, president, warn the workers of Britain against the speeches and advice of Hodges, who was civil lord of the admiralty in the MacDonald government. Cook points out that Hodges is no longer connected officially with the Miners' Union and it is not likely that one who wore the robes of office as chief of his majesty's navy, will ever again don overalls in a coal mine.

Friends of Russia

The officials of the Miners' Union, and particularly Cook have been consistent friends of Soviet Russia and are now taking a leading part in the effort that is being made under the leadership of the Red International of Labor Unions to unite the world trade union movement. Cook is act-

HOW LEWIS IS WRECKING THE MINERS' UNION

Conspiracy to Drop 200,000 Members

(Second Article.)

When the Jacksonville agreement tieing the miners up to a three year contract was signed, the progressives pointed out that the operators were only abiding their time in order to pave the way for an open assault on the United Mine Workers of America. Their predictions have come true.

The story carried in The DAILY WORKER yesterday and suppressed by the capitalist press, shows that the hour has come to begin the grand attack in the minds of the coal operators. In what condition has John L. Lewis' policies left the union to meet this attack?

At the last convention of the U. M. W. of A. held in Indianapolis, shortly before the Jacksonville pact was signed, John L. Lewis declared that there were 200,000 miners too many in the coal mining industry. His program was, not to curtail the work day from 8 to 6 hours, but to drive that number of miners out of the industry. According to the figures submitted by Secretary William Green, at the last convention, it would appear that Lewis has been successful.

The Figures Tell Story.

According to those figures the paid membership in the bituminous districts affected by the Jacksonville agreement before the agreement became effective was 316,718. Eight months after this agreement took effect, the figures were 198,701 or a total loss in paid membership of 118,017. In view of the fact that the figures quoted for the eight months after the famous pact was signed included all those who worked five days or more, it is no exaggeration to state that one-half of the above membership did not work over half time. The report does not give the figures for the anthracite districts.

Tho Lewis has succeeded in driving at least 200,000 miners out of the union since the last international convention the bosses are not entirely satisfied. It is significant that Lewis' policy was first laid down by the majority report of the United States Bituminous Coal Commission, in 1920, which stated that there are too many mines and miners in the coal industry and that the establishment of the 6-hour day would be an economic crime.

Capitalist Agents.

Working in harmony with the recommendation of the majority report of the government commission, written by coal operator men, the following statement was written by Ellis Searles, John Moore and Thomas Kennedy, representing the United Mine Workers of America and sent to the United States Coal Commission. It was published in the Miners' Journal, June 1, 1923.

"Never was there a greater opportunity for a set of employers to perform a real service to the American public than that which now presents itself to the coal operators. If they will close down 4,000 of the unnecessary coal mines that are now open and operating spasmodically they will reduce the number of surplus miners proportionally and thus reduce the production cost of coal. This, in turn would mean cheaper coal to the consumer. That's what the consumer is interested in. The United Mine Workers' of America cannot close down these mines, because it has no such right, power or authority. Nor can it for the same reason, put 200,-

PENNSYLVANIA MINERS AROUSED AT BETRAYAL OF MEN IN PRISON AND STEALING OF RELIEF MONEY

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 27.—The cowardly betrayal of the miners who are languishing in Moundsville prison for their alleged participation in the Cliftonville riots was exposed at a mass meeting of miners held in Charleroi Sunday, which was called for the purpose of proving that the district officials have stolen money from the organization.

A miner from Avella, Pa., who served four months in Moundsville, told his story of the betrayal of the officials of District 5, who told the miners

IRISH FAMINE VICTIMS WITHOUT FIRE FOR DAYS

Free State Government Fails to Act

ENNISKILLEN, Ireland.—(By Mail)—In the mountainous region of Fuhnadarragh, in South Fermanagh, farmers and their families in 27 townlands are in a desperate plight owing to the complete failure of the potato and oat crops, and the want of fuel.

The whole area is famine stricken. For the past three weeks, hundreds of people have been enduring the pangs of hunger, and some of them would have died of sheer starvation were it not for the efforts of a local relief committee and the kindness of some shopkeepers, who continue to supply them with food on credit.

In the best of seasons the district is poor and barren, and there is very little employment for agricultural laborers. The farms range from five to fifteen acres in size, and are, therefore, uneconomic. Most of the land is of the very worst quality—wet, boggy, and unproductive, and can be worked only with the spade.

Terrible Plight.

In 1923, there was a very poor potato crop, and last year both the potato and oat crops were a total failure. Pig-feeding had to be altogether abandoned owing to the scarcity of feeding stuffs, and many owners were obliged to sell their cattle to procure food for themselves and their families.

Owing to the wet summer and autumn, the turf which had been cut in the spring could not be saved, and the people have been obliged to cut down trees and brambles for fuel. In some places even wet timber cannot be obtained, and for days families have been without firing of any kind to cook whatever food they possess.

In Wretched State.

Most of the farmers have been unable to pay their rents for the past three years, and recently a representative of the ministry of finance of the northern government visited the district to make inquiries as regards the non-payment of the rents. This official afterwards told the secretary of the Fermanagh county council that the people were in such a wretched state that he could not ask them for money, but, instead, he had to give some of them money to enable them to get a decent meal.

The following cases are typical of the destitution which prevails over the district:

Farmer living on six and a half Irish acres of land. Has four children. "Since November 1," he says, "I have not had a single potato to put into my mouth."

The population has appealed to the government, but so far with no result.

Police Again Back Abramovich

employing contractor and leading figure in the socialist party.

Barred Workers Demonstrate.

These barred workers, who merely wished to extend Communist greetings to Rafael Abramovich, counter-revolutionary hero of the socialist party, were not so easily dispersed, however, and the cops had the undignified job of aiding the socialist leaders chase the workers up and down the block as they marched back and forth in columns, militantly holding their lines, singing the International and cheering for Soviet Russia.

The street in front of the hall was filled with high-priced automobiles of the many cockroach businessmen who made up a good percentage of the audience of 400 passed by the socialist real estate contractor "immigration inspector" at the door.

So This is Comrade Rafael!

When finally the conquered hero came, he came completely surrounded by the capitalist government, guarded like the emperor of China in the holy walled city. Police rode with him inside his taxi, and a squadron of motorcycle police surrounded his cab on all sides with gleaming stars, brass buttons and an aura of capitalist authority. "So this is the great socialist leader of the Second International!" the workers howled from the sidewalks.

Inside the hall, chairman Weinstein, the manager of the Jewish Forward, introduced the traitor as "a man from a country you all know," being afraid to mention the magic name of Soviet Russia. The name alone might have started something, so Weinstein passed it up.

Dodges the Magic Word.

Most remarkably, Abramovich, also avoided the delicate subject, talking for an hour without ever mentioning the name of Soviet Russia or its leaders. He confines his remarks to the differences in the labor movement of today. But, queerly enough, every time he made passing mention of the word "Bolsheviki" or "Communism," a large portion of the audience applauded vigorously.

When this happened, Rafael, like unto Milton's character of that name who was sent to teach Adam how to behave in the garden of Eden, cautioned the audience that it was not the time to applaud, that it displeased him and he would not tolerate it.

Attacked by Coalition.

But when, for the eighth time, the mention of "Communism" brought forth applause, socialist thugs, ably assisted by the police, attacked Sam Holsman, an auto worker, beat him up and threw him out along with another worker.

Other workers rushed to Holsman's assistance and one fifth of the audience sprang up with cries of protest at the brutality, began to sing the International and called all workers to leave the hall. About a hundred responded and were marched out between two lines of perspiring police.

Another Brilliant Failure.

Outside, in a blinding blizzard, these ejected workers joined the throng on the sidewalk, singing revolutionary songs and shouting "Down with reactionaries!" "Down with Abramovich!" "Down with the traitorous Second International!"

Three more workers subsequently were thrown out, one with a head bleeding from socialist sluggers. If all the workers of Cleveland who stand willing to fight for the workers' and peasants' Soviet government had been admitted, Abramovich would have had an even more memorable reception to add to his series of brilliant failures to gather aid in this country for the murderers of Russian workers.

fective so far. The city employes entered the twelfth day of their strike with no attempt by the city to haul away the garbage that has been piling up on the streets and alleys where workers live. The wealthy people have hired private firms, who are not yet affected by the strike, to haul their garbage and ashes, but the city has made no move to give the men their demands and clean up the filth that threatens to spread disease in working class districts.

The strikers bought several hundred copies of the DAILY WORKER at their meeting, where over 500 foremen were present, and expressed their gratitude at the support given the strike by the DAILY WORKER. Officials of the union, interviewed at their headquarters at 156 West Washington street, declared the DAILY WORKER editorials on the strike were splendid.

Twenty-five hundred workers are involved in the strike. The unions involved are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Workers to Stick.

Carrozzo visited A. A. Sprague in the afternoon, it was learned, and Sprague is said to have gone into his private office and closed the door in Carrozzo's face.

"There will be no backing down on our part," Carrozzo said. "Our men will pay no attention to the order to go back to work. Sprague has warned that the men will lose their jobs. The civil service, however, means nothing to us. Our men don't seem to get the benefit of pensions and other advantages from it."

Kept Press Shows Colors.

The newspapers have taken a decided turn against the strikers. The Chicago Tribune, in an editorial, declares "city policy denies essential public employes the right to strike." The kept press is printing daily reports that the union officials and strikers are in danger of being jailed to prevent the strike, and the Tribune boasts that "a dose of a jail cell in an outlying police station will bring the union officials to terms."

The Workers (Communist) Party, and its official organ, the DAILY WORKER, has been consistently supporting the city employes in their demands for a decent wage.

IMPORTANT MEETING FOR PARTY MEMBERS IN BUILDING TRADES

INDIANA'S WORKERS GIVE FOR RELIEF OF MINE BLAST VICTIMS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 27.—Contributions coming from all parts of the state, representing almost every hamlet and city, have swelled the Sullivan mine disaster relief fund to $37,000.

Fred Bays, chairman of the relief committee at Sullivan wired acceptance of an invitation to attend a community dance here tomorrow night at which it is hoped to raise $7,000 to add to the relief fund. Days said Elmer Davidson, sole survivor of the trapped mine crew would accompany him.

This city already has contributed $28,000.

Explosion at Open Shop Quarry Kills Many Mexican Workers

DEL RIO, Texas, (By Mail) Feb. 24.—Eight Mexican laborers were killed outright, fifteen were injured—some fatally, and assistant superintendent Harshaw, the quarry foreman and his assistant were also killed today by an explosion at the Southern Pacific's rock quarry 60 miles west of this place.

A small blast accidentally set off a large blast. The dead were brought to Del Rio and the injured were treated at Langtry. This was an open shop job. Harshaw was head of what the company calls the "safety committee." He isn't any more.

British Mine Leaders Flay Frank Hodges

ing secretary of the Miners' International, and the continental labor fakers recently tried to get rid of Cook as secretary, and substitute Hodges. The plan did not succeed owing to the opposition of the British miners whom have not forgotten Black Friday when they were betrayed by Hodges and J. H. Thomas.

Interesting Developments

Interesting developments are taking place in the movement here. The old trade union leadership that supports the yellow socialists MacDonald and Snowden are losing out to the Purcell, Cook, Bramley type who favor closer relations with Soviet Russia. The London Daily Herald, which is now controlled by the General Council of Trade Unions supports Kirkwood and the left wing of the labor party in its attack on the Prince of Wales' junketing trip while the New Leader, official organ of the independent labor party, (socialist) defends the prince and those who stood by him.

A weekly called George Lansbury's Weekly makes its appearance tomorrow. It is expected to take up the cudgels against the New Leader and support Cook.

PROMISE CANADA $800,000 GERMAN BLOOD MONEY UNDER DAWES PLAN

MONTREAL, Feb. 27.—Canada within the next few weeks will receive approximately $800,000 as its first installment under the Dawes reparations plan, government circles here were informed today. Great Britain received 85,000,000 gold marks, of which Canada will receive 4.35 per cent.

LIFTS CHARTER OF CARPENTERS' DISTRICT BODY

Detroit Members Hold Protest Meet Sunday

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 27.—Faced with wholesale indignation among the Detroit carpenters at his illegal expulsion of Wm. Reynolds, vice-president of the Detroit District Council czar Hutcheson, international president, has revoked the charter of the District Council. This is causing a storm of resentment among the rank and file of the affiliated locals.

Saturday Reynolds, against whom the local lickspittles of Hutcheson had sued out an injunction in a capitalist court ordering him not to attend any meetings of carpenters, will face the judge who granted the injunction on a charge of "contempt of court" because Reynolds, not being expelled according to the union constitution, continued atending his local and district union meetings.

Revolt Sweeping Unions.

The carpenters of Detroit are up in arms at the autocratic actions of Hutcheson and his tools, and as similar despotic crimes against the members are occuring in many cities, a wave of rebellion is sweeping the union all over the country.

The Detroit carpenters, in view of the fact that Hutcheson's latest act of revoking the district charter is seen to prelude the setting up of a fake one which he and his tools can control, and in view of the probability of locals being required to adhere to such a council on pain of having their local charters revoked, are boiling with anger at Hutcheson and swearing that they will never surrender to his outrageous and illegal despotism.

Mass Meeting Sunday Afternoon.

On Sunday, March 1, all Detroit carpenters and other interested building trades workers are invited to attend a mass meeting called to register a united protest. The meeting will be held at 2 o'clock in the afternoon at the House of the Masses, and Nels Kjar, one of the carpenters also illegally expelled by Hutcheson from Local 181 of Chicago, will address the meeting and outline a plan of action for fighting the union autocracy.

WORKERS MUST PROVIDE POSTAL SALARY RAISE

The workers are to pay for the raise in salaries to postal employes. If the postal bill which finally passed the house and senate is not vetoed by President Coolidge, the workers themselves will have to provide the funds to raise the pay of the postal employes.

Charges on postal cards will be two cents apiece instead of one cent, and parcel post rates have been increased to provide the salary increase for the poorly paid postal workers. The senate and house refused to consider taxing the incomes of the wealthy to pay for the pay increase.

NEGRO, "SUSPECTED" OF CRIME, LYNCHED BY MOB LED BY COUNTY OFFICER

SHREVEPORT, La., Feb. 27.—Because he was "suspected" of having slain N. A. Yarborough, a state highway guard, Joe Airy, a Negro, was lynched yesterday by a white mob after being wounded by a deputy sheriff. The authorities made no effort whatever to save Airy from the mob and permit even the farce of a trial. On the contrary, the deputy sheriff who wounded him actively led the mob in the ghastly murder of their victim.

Diplomacy in Overalls Puts Recognition Issue Clearly to Cal's Crowd

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, the Coolidge administration at Washington, bending toward the recognition of Soviet Russia, studies a declaration by C. G. Rakovsky, representative of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics in Great Britain, as follows:

> "That under no circumstances, at no price, can we consent that our country, that our Union, which was created by the greatest Revolution the world had ever seen, and at the price of innumerable sacrifices, that this country, which we are determined shall be a Land of Promise for its free toiling masses . . . should ever be transformed into a European China.
> "There will be no difficulty in coming to an agreement once the other countries recognize this fact, and are prepared to bargain with with us as equals with equals."

There is no duplicity about this Soviet diplomacy that talks straight from the shoulder. Rakovsky made his declaration in the open,—to the great gathering of the All-Union Congress of Teachers, at Moscow. Rakovsky unveiled before the teachers the duplicitous face of capitalist diplomacy.

Rakovsky showed that the foreign offices of the imperialist nations were continually prating about the payment of the czarist debts and Bolshevik propaganda. He must have had Washington in view, since these issues have been the keystone of the American capitalist attack on Soviet rule. Rakovsky laughs at these two question as being responsible for the timidity, in Washington, and other capitals, to fully recognize the Bolshevik power and open full trade relations with the Soviet Union. Instead Rakovsky says:

> "The real reason for this was essentially the unwillingness to recognize the Soviet Union as an equal, independent state, the desire to subject her to the same fate as Germany, to apply to the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics some such scheme as that of the Dawes plan."

There is the issue ably set forth. World imperialism opposed Soviet rule from the start. At first the great imperialists, busy fighting the kaiser, thought Soviet rule would fall in its first weeks, or months. It didn't fall. Then military intervention was resorted to. Armies were hurled against every Soviet frontier. But they were hurled back in defeat. Now this latest offensive the diplomatic war against Soviet Russia in an effort to Chinafy it by crushing it under the weight of some Morgan-Dawes plan.

The defeating of this offensive was the great achievement for Sovie rule during 1924, when more capitalist nations were forced to recognize the Workers' Republic than in all its previous existence. The greatest victory was the forcing upon the MacDonald labor government, in England, of treaties recognizing the "complete economic and political independence of the U. S. S. R."

That is the basis on which France was brought into line; it is the basis on which negotiations will be resumed with the present Baldwin tory government in England; it is the proposition that the Soviet diplomats put on the top of the table for Morgan's lackey statesmen at Washington to ponder over. This is not only the shirt sleeves diplomacy that Roosevelt liked to talked about It is two-fisted working class diplomacy that has a wallop behind it that makes five-sixths of the world, still under capitalist sway, stagger before the one-sixth under Workers' rule.

Rakovsky explained the basis for further victory this year when he told the Soviet school teachers that:

> "If you want us to pursue a right line in international policy make it possible for us to do so by strengthening the internal position of the U. S. S. R. Do what you can to develop the productive forces of the country. Raise the cultural level of our peasantry. Create an irresistible base and rear force for our diplomacy and then it will undoubtedly win further successes in 1925."

Thus Soviet Russia carries the truth about its struggle to its own masses of workers and farmers.

In its attitude against Soviet Russia, the American government has depended for its strength upon the most deliberate, carefully planned and costly propaganda campaign of lies and misrepresentation that the world has yet seen.

The truth, supported by the enlightened power of labor, will win.

Lewis Is Wrecking Miners' Union

000 miners out of the industry. But the operators can do it if they will. We challenge them to make the start.

To Cut Union In Two.

"The United Mine Workers of America has a membership of more than 500,000 men who are employed only a part of the time. The union the operators, the industry, the public, and the nation would be better off if there were 4,000 fewer coal mines and if there were 200,000 fewer miners with steady employment for all of them. But so long as the coal operators continue to hire more men; so long as they refuse to reduce their working force to a proper basis; so long as they insist upon keeping open these 4,000 useless mines; so long as they persist in their attempts to operate every possible mine, even at 40 per cent of full time, just so long must they assume responsibility for the demoralization that exists in the coal business."

As will be shown in subsequent articles, getting rid of 200,000 miners has not benefited the organized coal diggers any. There are approximately one million coal miners in the United States but the great majority of them are digging coal in scab pits and John L. Lewis and his reactionary policy is chiefly to blame. The solution for unemployment among the miners, so far as any solution can go under capitalism is the nationalization of the mines and the six-hour day.

COSTUMES WILL DAZZLE GUESTS AT RED REVEL

Masquerade Ball Takes Place Tonight

The Red Revel masquerade ball, which is the talk of radical circles in this city for several weeks will be held tonight in West End Women's Club Hall, 37 South Ashland Blvd., corner of Monroe St.

The Red Revel is an annual event in Chicago, at least for the past three years. This year promises to outdo the others by many hundreds of costumes and general hilarity. The music has been carefully selected with a view to rendering the feet of the guests incapable of remaining stationary. Those who wish a quiet evening conversing entertainingly with their friends can get out of the range of the music. The arrangements committee has taken steps to satisfy everybody if such is possible.

Ready For Execution

One of the most important inducements is a midnight surprise conceived and prepared for execution by three sprightly girls whose names will be held incommunicado for the time being, in order to heighten the mystery. What the surprise will look like, even the publicity agent cannot reveal. Suffice it to say that it will be daring but decent. The surprise will be staged just one hour after the unmasking. This will insure unobstructed vision.

Prizes will be given to the best group and individual costumes. Many of the costumes are original and related to the class struggle. But you had better come and see for yourself.

All guests are expected to be masked. Masks can be secured at the door. Needless to say the committee has provided refreshments of a very high order, including delicious sandwiches endorsed by the Amalgamated Food Workers, and coffee that carries the Greek label. If you have not secured your tickets already you can purchase them at the door.

KLAN MURDER IN HERRIN SUBJECT AT OPEN FORUM

Thurber Lewis, who investigated ku klux klan activities in southern Illinois for the DAILY WORKER, will speak next Sunday at the Workers Party open forum on "The Truth About Herrin."

Comrade Lewis had a very exciting and interesting experience in carrying out his assignment. He interviewed representatives of the warring factions and unearthed proof that confirmed the suspicion that the ku klux klan was supported by the business elements for the specific purpose of destroying the local organization of the United Mine Workers of America.

Ran Booze Joint.

That the enforcement of the prohibition law was merely a screen for anti-union activities of the klan is shown by the fact that Glenn Young, the leaing klux raider, ran a moonshine parlor on Madison street, Herrin.

During his investigation, Lewis talked with klansmen and anti-klansmen. He interviewed Sheriff Galligan and the successor of Glenn Young, a veteran Kentucky feudist who was surrounded by revolvers and gunmen when Comrade Lewis approached him.

What Sheriff Galligan, the widow of Ora Thomas, the state's attorney who prosecuted the Williamson mine cases, and others had to say about the war in Herrin and Williamson county will be graphically told next Sunday by Comrade Lewis. The lecture will be delivered in the Lodge Room of Ashland Auditorium, corner of Ashland Blvd. and Van Buren streets.

THREAD TRUST FACES STRIKE AT BIG MILL; MC MAHON STALLS IT

WILLIMANTIC, Conn. Feb. 27.—The Willimantic mills of the American Thread company, the largest mill of the thread industry in America, may be closed by a strike, as the workers have voted in favor of a strike if the attempt to enforce a wage cut of 10 per cent is not stopped and the old wage allowed to stand.

The strike vote was taken ten days ago, but the workers have ben held down to their jobs by T. F. McMahon of the United Textile Workers Union, who has promised them to try to get a conference with the company agents.

FIGHT BILL TO DEPORT ALIENS BY WHOLESALE

Foreign-Born Workers Subject to Espionage

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—The American Civil Liberties Union announces a united campaign to defeat the house bill "opening wide the doors to deportation of aliens." Many trade unions, societies and liberal groups are supporting the union in its war on the bill H. R. 11794 which passed the house last week and is coming before the senate immigration committee.

Demand Public Hearing

A public hearing is demanded by the union in a formal request and similar demands have been made by the other organizations interested. The bill changes the present deportation law, giving the department of labor power to deport for alleged cause ANY ALIEN "at any time after entering the United States, instead of within three to five years" as at present.

"The dangers of this bill are incalculable," says the Liberties Union in a formal statement. "It is not part of a general immigration bill. It does not deal with quotas or other regulations for the admission of aliens. It deals solely and specifically with the expulsion of aliens who are already in this country, no matter how long they may have been here. The bill opens the doors to deportation in many cases for trivial or technical reasons and subjects every alien to espionage and intimidation. None can feel secure with these provisions in force.

Innocent Workers Convicted

"Any alien convicted of an offense for which he is sentenced to imprisonment for a term of one year or more, is liable to deportation, instead of as at present those convicted of an offense involving moral turpitude committed within five years after entry. The courts frequently convict innocent persons, especially so when they are aliens.

"Aliens frequently get one year sentences for very slight offenses. Two small penalties amounting together to 18 months, also are grounds for deportation. This bill violates the constitutional provision against an ex post facto application of a law. It makes deportation retroactive on aliens who have been here long before the drafting of the bill."

The Chicago meeting will be held in Emmet Memorial Hall, at 2:30 p. m. Ralph Chaplin of the Industrial Workers of the World and Jack Johnstone of the Workers (Communist) Party and the Trade Union Educational League, will be the speakers.

History of Case.

Two days before Sacco and Vanzetti were arrested in Brockton, Mass. —May 5, 1920—Andrea Salsedo, an Italian printer plunged from the fourteenth story of the Park Row building in New York city. He had been held by the department of justice for two months charged with being a radical. Whether he was first killed and then thrown out or was thrown out alive or driven insane by the tortures inflicted on him and jumped while insane will never be known.

Sacco and Vanzetti were friends of his. They were arranging meetings thruout New England protesting against what they called his murder. They were never able to hold any of the meetings as they were arrested on May 5. For two days they were held as reds. But suddenly they were charged with having committed a payroll hold up and having murdered two pay roll guards at South Braintree, Mass., April 15, 1920. Wm. J. Flynn, then head of the department of justice bureau of investigation evidently didn't want to have anything to do with a "red" case which would open up the whole question of how Salsedo had met his fate.

The Frame-up.

For weeks Sacco and Vanzetti were taken thru the towns of Massachusetts where lived the persons who had seen the South Braintree hold up and murders. They were made to dress as had the bandits and were forced to assume certain poses suggestive of the hold up and murders. Under the circumstances a number of persons were found who said that they recognized them as the bandits and murderers.

But the persons who made these so-called "identifications" were so muddled that the state had to bolster its case up. Lola Andrews, a woman of loose habits and a questionable past, was gotten at by the prosecuting attorney. She was threatened and intimidated. Carlos Goodridge a petty thief and bigamist then in jail charged with larceny volunteered his services in return for a suspended sentence on the larceny charge.

Louis Pelzer, a boy who worked in the factory near the scene of the hold-up, was kept at work as soon as he agreed to identify Sacco, altho he was a totally inexperienced workman. When the trial was over he was fired. He then told the defense he had helped to swear away the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti to keep his job. When the frame-up gang got him another job he swore he had lied to the defense and that his identification was a true one.

The experts who took the stand to say that the bullet which killed the man for whose murder the defendants were on trial came from Sacco's gun have just recently admitted that they didn't believe there was any proof that the bullet did come from Sacco's gun. They say that the prosecutor knew their opinion and so put his questions as to preclude the possibility of their giving their true opinion.

Roy E. Gould, a man who saw the murder and hold up and who had one of the bandit's bullets pass thru his coat, gave his name to the police after the murder but was never called as a witness by the state. Why? Gould could not be bulldozed by the police and the district attorney. He is not the sort of fellow to take part in framing innocent men. So he was passed up by the prosecution in favor of a young boy who would lie to keep his job, a woman who didn't want her questionable past raked up, and a horse thief, petty larceny artist and bigamist.

There were other witnesses against Sacco and Vanzetti but these three were the stars. They are the people who put Sacco and Vanzetti in the shadow of the electric chair and who helped to suppress the facts as to the murdering of Salsedo.

anything to do with the socialists as a party, Hillquit again advanced to the tribune and moved that the socialists have nothing to do with the liberals.

THIS is generalship of a very high order indeed. Grand Duke Nicholas Nicolavietch, of the czar's armies used to pull off similar stunts when his long legs were breaking all speed records in getting as far from the German armies as possible. When the capitalist press carried the news that the grand duke was 20 versts nearer the Ural mountains on a certain day than he was the day before, his publicity expert made it appear that the general was pulling off a very dirty trick on the Germans, that "Nick" had all this planned out a long time in advance and that his retreat was merely a sprint to "carefully prepared positions."

WITH Hillquit and his disappointed maneuvers it is a case of sour grapes. They chased the liberals and labor fakers for three years and boasted about their success in remaining on good terms with them, while they pointed with scorn at the Communists, saying: "You damn revolutionists, who take your orders from Moscow! We have you isolated. We have kept you out of the C. P. P. A. and therefore out of contact with the American working class. We are now in the labor movement. Our goal is reached!"

BUT odds bodkins, it is not so. While the socialists were fawning on the labor fakers and holding up LaFollette's vestments the Communists were going to the masses of the workers and poor farmers. The result can be seen in the virility and vigor of the Workers Party; it's sure and steady growth; the strength of its press and the success of its campaigns. A few years ago the socialists had a daily paper. Today they have only one weekly and that exists only on the bounty of the Jewish Daily Forward. The Forward would have dropped the liability long ago, but for hatred of the Communists.

THE Workers Party, that was "isolated from the masses" by the socialist stool pigeons of the labor fakers, has a powerful daily paper that relies for its support on the revolutionary workers. Its campaigns for the defense of the Michigan defendants, for Sacco and Vanzetti, against child labor and Irish famine relief are reaching millions. It is the only party in America that stands on the class struggle and is organizing the workers for the overthrow of capitalism. It cannot be isolated from the masses because it fights for the interests of the masses and knows how to reach them. It is true that it is isolated from the labor fakers and the stool pigeons of capitalism in the labor movement. But that is its sincerest wish.

WHAT has the socialist party gained by its betrayals? It has not gained in numbers. A few of its leaders undoubtedly have made material gains. Entirely disregarding the treason of the socialist party to the working class, the brilliant maneuvering of Hillquit in trying to transform the socialist party into an American labor party, by slipping the metamorphosis over on the labor officials ended in a glorious fizzle. The socialists are back now where they started from, minus their principles, which they threw overboard long ago, and their army, which either joined the Workers Party, kept on going, or deserted the working class political movement altogether. If this is success, then Morris Hillquit is a brilliant leader.

THE Milwaukee Leader rejoices that there is no new party but a bigger socialist party. Both Berger and Morris Hillquit declared before the elections that LaFollette was a socialist. Yet both now denounce the new progressive party, that was born without a name under the inspiration of LaFollette. The socialist party now consists of a group of old leaders anxiously scanning the horizon for followers. "Moses" Hillquit instead of leading them into the promised land, led them back into Egypt only to find the Nile run dry.

FRENCH CAPITALISTS AND HERRIOT WAR ON IMMIGRANTS; TERROR AIMS AT SMASHING THE LABOR UNIONS

PARIS.—(By Mail.)—The united front of capitalism against the workers of all lands becomes more apparent every day. The Herriot government is aiding the white guard governments of Italy and Spain by persecuting and expelling the revolutionary workers who have sought asylum in France from the chaos and oppression existing in their own countries. Every foreign worker suspected of reading red labor papers, or of belonging to the unions of the C. G. T. U. (left) is constantly menaced with expulsion. Only those who are members of reformist or fascist organizations are left in peace.

The government is pushing to the last extreme its hatred of all those who refuse to submit to capitalist exploitation. The French police, aided by foreign spies, is carrying on a real reign of terror among the immigrant proletariat. They have no rights—to possess a picture of Lenin, to speak of the Russian revolution, even in private, or to discuss the interests of the proletariat, brings swift vengeance.

Expelled for Having Lenin's Portrait.

In Lorraine, Mussolini has sent his own thugs to see that this piece of dirty work is carried thru. Acting under fascist orders, the police have forcibly entered and searched the hundreds of workers' dwellings, and workers who have been found in possession of Communist papers or leaflets, or even a photograph of Lenin or Matteotti, have been beaten up, and then ordered to clear out.

In one house two women who dared to remonstrate when the police smashed up their poor furniture in the course of their search for "subversive literature," were brutally maltreated. The chief object is Riscossa, a Communist paper published in France for circulation among the Italian comrades.

In several cases workers have been submitted to torture in order to force them to declare thru what channels this paper came into their hands.

Spanish Miners Suffer.

In the mines of the Campagnie des Mines d'Azin, in the north, the chief engineer made up his mind to get rid of all the Spaniards who were working there, despite that fact that they had been recruited on contract by the company. A wage cut was in order, and the company wanted to substitute more submissive workers for the Spaniards. The Spaniards, holding out against the cut, were accused of revolutionary activity, and the expulsions began. Some of the men were summoned from the mine at 10:30 in the morning, and by 12:30 had already been driven across the border into Belgium.

These are just a few of hundreds of similar cases of workers who have been brutally expelled without explanation, without delay, pitilessly torn away from their wives and children who are left to starve. The expulsions are not only being applied to the recent refugees, but also to foreign workers who have been living in France ten, and in a few cases even twenty years.

To Break Up Unions.

Aside from other considerations, these expulsions of class-conscious foreign-born workers involve a very real danger for the workers of France. Taking this opportunity to rid France of a number of workers with revolutionary tendencies, is only a secondary matter with the Herriot government: the chief object is to frighten immigrants away from the workers' organizations, so that unorganized and defenseless, they will be compelled to accept any wages or hours that the bosses choose to give them.

The government does not at all desire to put an end to immigration, but it does want the immigrant workers to remain unorganized, in order that there may be a steady supply of scab labor on hand to break the resistance of the revolutionary French workers.

Workers Fight Back.

Numbers of the workers are answering the terror directed against them by taking their stand beneath the banner of the revolutionary unions and organizing for resistance. "But," said one of the Italian comrades, "our resistance cannot be really effective unless the French proletariat comes to our aid!"

The Communist deputies have repeatedly brought up the question of exclusions in the chamber of deputies, but the socialists and the left bloc have taken absolutely no action in the matter.

Commenting on this fact, L'Humanite, the French Communist daily, writes:

"Thus it is to the working class alone that we appeal. All workers, unions and federations must show their solidarity with these hunted foreign workers. In the continual arrival in France of new foreign contingents we see the will to break down the rights of the workers, replacing by unorganized workers those affiliated with the left unions. The proletariat must fight for the defense of comrades of all nationalities who are the victims of oppression."

MAX SALZMAN SPEAKS TODAY AT NEFFS, OHIO

Max Salzman, organizer of the Young Workers League, who is on a tour of the Pittsburgh district of the Workers (Communist) Party for the League, speaks at a general membership meeting at Neffs, Ohio, today.

Comrade Salzman announces two changes in his dates. He speaks in Powhatan Point, Ohio on March 1st and in Neffs, Ohio, on Feb. 28th instead of the reverse as was previously announced.

Comrade Salzman's dates follow:

March 2—Yorkville, Ohio.
March 3—Martin's Ferry, Ohio.
March 4-5—Dillonvale, Ohio.
March 8—Pittsburgh. District organizational conference.

Using Yellow "Labor Leaders"

The American capitalist press is only too glad to tell of the efforts made to save British capitalism by British labor leaders of the Frank Hodges, John R. Clynes and MacDonald type.

These gentlemen, whose badges of leadership are somewhat tarnished due to their betrayals of labor and the publicity given those betrayals by the Communist Party of Great Britain and the left wing press, are calling loudly for a truce in the war between British capitalism and British labor. Hodges is a clever fellow and bases his demand for peace upon the depression in British industry without actually telling the workers to quit fighting.

Clynes, however, is less diplomatic. He says, according to dispatches:

"The best service which labor leaders can render just now is to concentrate upon and support any efforts which are being made to strengthen and improve the trade of this country."

Here we have the whole philosophy of the followers of MacDonald—the belief expressed in word and deed that capitalists must first be fat and happy before labor can ask even a decent wage. According to this doctrine the royal family must also be kept in good humor—so MacDonald and his henchmen vote to increase the travelling allowance of the prince of Wales.

This acceptance of capitalism with all its appendages is the most characteristic feature of social-democracy all over the world; it is shown also by the labor officialdoms of countries like the United States where the labor bureaucracy rejects all the theories of the social-democrats. In their sabotage of the labor movement, their war on the left wing and revolutionary elements of the labor unions, their kowtowing to capitalism and capitalists, the heads of the American federation of labor and the British labor party are as one.

The British capitalist press praises the "sanity" of the American trade union officials and the American capitalist press returns the favor.

This is supposed to aid in keeping the workers of both countries in their places. To do this is the great international problem which the whole capitalist world is trying to solve—with rather poor success as the growing strength of the drive for world trade union unity launched by the Red International of Labor Unions proves.

Reaction in the Amalgamated

The Hillman Amalgamated machine is wasting no time in getting down to the business of expulsions of left wingers now that it has decided to follow the trail blazed by the officialdom of the International Ladies' Garment Workers.

In New York the whole executive boad of Local 5 has been removed from office and three of its members suspended. The indictment against these workers shows the lengths to which the Hillman machine is prepared to go. It recites that the executive board declared a strike on a shop that fired two workers over a private matter and then went down in a body and picketed the place. This evidence of militancy is so rarely seen in executive boards that this one, it seems to us, should have been given some kind of a decoration instead of being removed from office. Perhaps the other executive boards were frightened by the precedent set and afraid that the officials might get their high-priced suits all dirtied up on some picket line if the thing became fashionable.

The important thing, however, is the open war of the Hillmanites on the best elements in the union—a war that is welcomed in warm words by Justice, official organ of the I. L. G. U., in its last issue.

A new united front against the militants in the needle trades is probably in process of formation. It will be met by a united front of the rank and file organized around the Communists and the Trade Union Educational League.

That reaction in the Amalgamated is not going to have easy sledding is shown by the sympathy and support given Local 5 by other New York locals of the Amalgamated.

Every capitalist government, the jingoes and social-patriots of all lands, believe of profess to believe that the idea of the overthrow of capitalism as the only road to freedom open to the working class is an imported product.

They try and fail to treat it as they do commodities of foreign manufacture—by excluding those who hold this idea from their territories. But capitalism itself is both the soil and seed of social revoltion. It does not need to be imported. Like Topsy, it "just grows."

The Chinese Eastern railway, under Soviet Russian management, shows an increase of 24 per cent in business over last year. More bad news for the imperialists of America, France, Great Britain and Japan

Russian Aid for Irish Famine

The workers and peasants of Soviet Russia are the first to come to the aid of the famine stricken Irish workers and peasants. This is one more of those acts of working class solidarity that the workers have come to expect from the masses of Russia. It is a symbol of the advance of the revolution and a rebuke hurled in the teeth of the British imperialists, their Free State government vassals and the hierarchy of the Roman church that keep the Irish masses in ignorance and poverty

The pious wails of the priesthood rent high heaven when the Russian workers and peasants suffered from famine in 1921. They were being punished because they had gone against god, said the cossacked and cowled brethren of the cross.

The Irish workers and peasants have not fought and won a revolution, they have not rejected Mammon and thereby offended orthodox christianity but they are hungry nevertheless.

The Russian workers and peasants, having no capitalists to feed, have enough food to spare for relief of other workers and peasants who are less revolutionary, but more poorly fed.

It is not charity that comes from Russia. It is simply a method by which the Russian masses show their knowledge of the troubles of other workers and their desire to help.

In the imperialist press there will be no praise lavished on the Russian workers and peasants for the manner in which they have come to the aid of their comrades in Ireland. The reason is not only that there has been a revolution in Russia, but that it was not a Russian revolution but part of the world revolution.

British imperialism and its hangers-on in parliament and parsonage are very much afraid that the Irish workers and peasants may come to know and understand this fact.

Connecticut Conservatism

There is humor in the story of our victorious fight for the right to carry on Communist work in Waterbury, Connecticut, where, at a successful meeting a woman proved that Communists were crazy because her brother, a rebel, had to milk cows for a living, while she, a believer in things as they are, had a well-paying little business.

We get a laugh out of this, but some food for thought remains. Unwittingly, this woman had hit upon the crux of the whole question of the causes of revolutionary movements. Her brother is not milking cows because he is a revolutionist—he is a revolutionist because he is milking cows.

Please do not misunderstand us. Every worker is not a revolutionist any more than every businessman is a capitalist, but the workers as a class are revolutionary because they are at the bottom of capitalism's social scale. If all workers could be businessmen and enjoy incomes of $5,000 per year and up, even the most ardent Communist would give up hope of revolution.

This cannot be. There are millions and millions of workers and working farmers who have no option but to continue the daily round of monotonous toil or starve.

The only way these millions of useful workers who have no photograph galleries and grocery stores and cannot get them, can become their own masters and masters of the tools and materials they work with is to make war upon and defeat the state power of capitalism.

This is what we mean when we say that the working class is the only revolutionary class in society.

In spite of the remarks of the Connecticut lady, we are not discouraged. Capitalism has not enough photograph galleries to go around.

Greeting "The Young Worker"

The Young Worker, official organ of the Young Workers League of America, is now a weekly.

The volume of its voice has doubled—it speaks now 52 times a year, instead of 26, to the youth of the working class in this, the most powerful capitalist nation in the world. The Young Worker is part of the Communist press of the world. It carries to young workers in the factories, mines and workshops and to young students the Communist call to struggle against capitalism and its strongest weapon—the capitalist state.

The Young Worker alone in the United States speaks for the sons and daughters of working men and women and with its older brother, the DAILY WORKER, appeals to them on the basis of their class interests. It is ably edited by young workers—not by grayheads.

Its approach to the problems of the young workers is a result of its correct belief that the daily battles of the working class are of primary importance and that they must be organized into a movement international in outlook and affilialion; that out of the daily struggles grows the conflict that must end in the victory of the working class—young and old.

The DAILY WORKER is very happy to see the growth in the Young Workers League indicated by the enlargement of its press, a growth that the weekly Young Worker will stimulate immensely.

Long live the Young Worker!

Long live the Young Workers League!

Long live the Communist Press—the Herald of the World Revolution!

Can any working man continue to believe in the even-handed justice of capitalism when he sees the textile barons, who led the fight against child labor and whose dividends run into staggering sums, using their enormous power to cut the wages of workers who receive from $15 to $21 dollars per week?

BRITISH FIGHT AMSTERDAM FOR WORLD UNITY

while in Soviet Russia, and had "made rash promises." Oudegeest and Jouhaux clearly were not influenced by any "excitement" for revolution.

Fred Bramley of the British delegation opened up the fight for unity in reply. It was an achievement in itself, and will go down as the best speech Bramley has ever made, and the only pity is that it wa made in private council and is lost to the world's workers.

Bramley Frays Oudegeest

Bramley showed both surprise and displeasure at Oudegeest's insinuations against the sincerity of the Russian unions' efforts to reach unity. He clearly pointed out that Oudegeest had dodged and evaded the offers of the Russians and never made any effort to meet them.

Bramley Uses Plain Talk

As Oudegeest and Jouhaux had taken exception to the statements of the British delegates made both while in Russia and in England, as of no importance because they were "merely individual statments." Bramley caustically asked why no reference had been made to the British delegation's collective statements concerning Georgia, the improved and happy conditions of the Russian workers, and so on.

Bramley excoriated Oudegeest's methods of suppressing these and other matters in the publications of the Amsterdam International and the bitterly hostile correspondence carried on by Oudegeest in vain attempts to prevent the growing friendship between the English and the Russian workers.

British for Unconditional Meeting

Coming to his positive program, Bramley offered, in the name of the British General Council of Trade Unions, a resolution calling for an unconditional conference between Amsterdam and the Russian unions, in which a heart-to-heart talk could take place upon a later world congress, which might or might not follow. This resolution was supported by Fimmen of the International Transport Workers and Cook of the Miners International, while Mertens of Belgium and Grassman of Germany supported Oudegeest. Bitter argument followed on both sides, with the British standing like a rock for the decision of their general council.

Reformists Fear Outside Pressure

Knowing that the rank and file of European unions would never support their insolent refusal of offers of unity and faced with the solid left wing bloc of British, the reformists adjourned and there was much scurrying about the American Hotel, where the meeting was held.

When the next session opened Stenhuis of Holland moved their tricky compromise resolution, declaring the readiness of the I. T. F. U. to meet the Russian delegates in the city of Amsterdam, providing the Russian unions declare their desire to affiliate to the Amsterdam International.

Tricky Motives In Proposal

The motives of the right wing could not be hidden. They hate the idea of meeting the Russian unionists, but they hate still more to have the largest and strongest section of Amsterdam, without which Amsterdam would not last a single day, the British unions, going over their heads and conferring with the Russians.

Another resolution from Switzerland for an unconditional conference to be held at Moscow was offered. Amsterdam, being one of the few capitals hard for Russians to visit because Holland has not recognized Soviet Russia yet, was unsuitable.

The Vote On Three Proposals

The left wing pressed the British resolution. But it was defeated by a vote of thirteen to six. The sam vote showed on the Swiss resolution. Then the Stenhuis resolution carried by fourteen to five, the five being the solid British delegation supported by Fimmen.

The council's meeting was marked by the most disgraceful lies in the capitalist press, which brazenly stated the complete falsehood that both Bramley and Purcell had "repudiated" the idea of a world congress as a "Communist trick." Tracing these outrageous lies to their source, it is discovered that none other than Sassenbach of Germany gave out such "information."

Socialist Insists On Lying

Even this was not enough. Mertens, in the council, moved that this alleged "repudiation" be recorded in the minutes, and Purcell and Bramley vigorously objected and proved by the London Herald that all other reports were lies. Yet Sassenbach saw to it that Mertens' motion was spoken of in the evening Het Volk as "carried."

The British delegates are determined that, come what may from the tricky motion with conditions attached now to be sent to the Russians, the existing arrangement for an Anglo-Russian unity committee to propagate the world unity of all unions shall not be abandoned, but shall be pressed enthusiastically until unity of all unions of the world in one body shall be realized.

BUILDERS AT WORK

IF ALL GOES "JAKE" IN KENOSHA—

WE will have a circulation much larger very soon in this town where Comrade Alex Tishon is DAILY WORKER agent.

The local comrades are not entirely satisfied. There has been trouble in regular delivery. We are now trying to get this matter straightened out at the post office to aid the comrades in the splendid work they are doing.

They have secured a number of boys to sell the DAILY WORKER on the streets and at factory gates. In order to stimulate the sale the local DAILY WORKER Committee decided to give a prize to the boy who sells most copies during the month.

But they also have an eye on the future in Kenosha. Comrade Tishon writes:

> "The boys sold the Thursday issue on Friday and yet the results show up well. Will yet you hear from me soon for more copies if all 'goes jake.'
> "There are three large plants here. each employing about 5,000 workers and the party is planning on having a nucleus in each of them. When this is done and the members have some news to tell I will have them write it up and send it in to the DAILY WORKER. This will make a hit with the readers here."

We will promise the Kenosha comrades that this will also make a hit with our other DAILY WORKER readers. But why wait until a nucleus is formed—no matter how soon this will be? Send in your letters now and "make a hit" with Kenosha workers at once.

In the meantime we want our readers and agents to note that these live Kenosha comrades are doing and planning work for the DAILY WORKER and the shop nucleus that is sure to build up the local Communist group as nothing else will.

The movie showing of "Polikushka" on Saturday, Feb. 28, at the German-American Home, 660 Grand Ave., is a particularly good time and place not only to enjoy yourself, but also to give the DAILY WORKER agent, Comrade Tishon your sub. Tell him you want to volunteer your services to build the local and take a good look at the ad of the DAILY WORKER on the screen.

that their only hope was to plead guilty to the charge that they were responsible for the Cliftonville riots.

Betrayed Miners Into Prison Hell.

This the men were not inclined to do. However, after being promised that their families would be taken care of just as well as if the men had taken care of the families themselves, the men agreed to plead guilty and were sent to jail from a few months to a number of years.

He told of how he had to slave 400 miles from his home, working on a road using a 16-pound hammer breaking stones from seven in the morning to five in the evening, seven days a week. And this all because he was an active fighter in the 1922 strike.

Proof of Stolen Funds.

Proof that the district officials had stolen funds of the union thru padding the strike relief they were supposed to have given the striking miners, was given when Brother Steve Susa and his wife told how the district officials padded the relief they claimed to have given them.

In giving the proof on this, the following letters were read:

Sturgeon, Pa., Dec. 15, 1924.

To the Internal Revenue Agent,
Brownsville, Pa.

Dear Sir:

The moneys received by Steve Susa from my partner (since dead) since March, 1920, to my best knowledge and belief is as follows;

From March, 1920, to Jan., 1921, he received in relief $18.00 each week.

From Jan., 1921, to June, 1921, he received in relief $18.00 each week and $20.00 for service.

From June, 1921, to March, 1922, he received in relief $14.00 each week and $20.00 for service.

From March, 1922, to July, 1923, I have no knowledge of what he received except from me which is as follows: From Sept., 1922, to July, 1923, he received $20.00 each week.

Yours respectfully,
(Signed) Robert Gaitens.

Gaitens is an organizer for the miners in District 5, and is part of the Fagen machine.

Counteracting this statement is the letter of Steve Susa which is as follows:

Dec. 28, 1924.
Springdale, Pa., Allg. Co.

Dear Sir:

Here I send you a copy of my amount of money I made during the three years 1920-1921-1922 up to 1923.

In Jan., 1920, to June, 1920, I received in relief (six weeks I received nothing) $6.00 each week in credit, just a slip to the store.

From June, 1920, to Feb., 1921, I received in relief $18.00 each week in cash.

From Feb., 1921, to March, 1922, I received in relief $14.00 each week, and $15.00 for transportation (this was expense for the local union).

From March, 1922, to July, 1923, I received service money each week, $20.00.

This was expense and relief together.

(Signed) Steve Susa.

The difference in money which the district officials claim to have turned over to this miner for relief is over $1,000.00, and in spite of the attempts of the district officials to cover this matter up thru threats, it is being known to every miner in the district.

The wife of Steve Susa stated that while the government revenue agents came up to them before, regarding the difference in these statements, last week when she went to the revenue office in Pittsburgh, she was told that the matter was dropped.

Labor Faker Thieves and Government United.

This makes it appear that in spite of the fact that the evidence is in the hands of the progressives, the government is co-operating with the miners' officials in order to hush up this matter.

This is just one case. How many more cases of this sort of robbery has been going on, only the district officials and the revenue officers know.

The stealing of these funds and the betrayal of the Moundsville miners goes hand in hand. A letter was read from one of the boys in Moundsville prison in which he says that the machine is keeping them in jail and that they (the officials) would not dare stay in the state once the men got out of jail because of the information they had against them.

It will be remembered by the readers of the DAILY WORKER that immediately after the formation of the Moundsville Prisoners' Defense Committee on Dec. 21, 1924, a number of miners were released from prison, but they still keep in jail twelve of the best men the United Mine Workers have. These men are serving sentences from 5 to 10 years for their participation in the 1922 strike.

Membership Aroused at Betrayal

The membership seeing that the district officials are doing nothing to get these men free are aroused. They decided at this meeting to hold a conference, to which all workers' organizations are invited, in the city of Pittsburgh on March 15, in order to acquaint all the workers in western Pennsylvania with the cowardly betrayal of these militant fighters in the miners' union.

They also decided to notify the district officials of the United Mine Workers, that they must get on the job and earn their salary and win back for the miners the conditions which the officials lost for them, otherwise they will demand a special convention to remove the district officials and expel them from the union.

Dance for Defense in Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 27.—The Cleveland International Workers' Aid Committee and the Labor Defense Council will hold a joint dance, Sat., Feb. 28, at the Carpenters' Hall, 2226 E. 55th St. The proceeds of this affair will be for the purpose of aiding in the defense of C. E. Ruthenberg, and the other Communists involved in the so-called "Michigan cases."

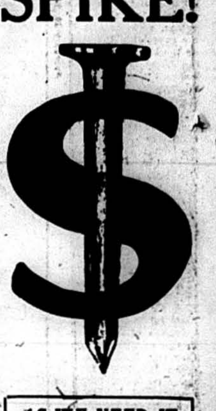
Spend Your Sunday Evening at the Open Forum.

Party Members! Show Your Hospitality!

Lodging for some 30 comrades from out of town will be needed during the duration of the Party Intensive Training School in Chicago. The school will last for two weeks commencing March 15 and lodging for the comrades will be necessary for that period.

Comrades in Chicago who can spare accomodations for one or more comrades and donate same for this party work will aid the party school immensely. If you have such accomodations please get in touch with the district office immediately, Room 303, 166 W. Washington St. Tel. State 7985.

DRIVE HOME THE SPIKE!



AS WE NEED IT

By T. V. O'FLAHERTY.

At the rate the spike is going down, unless our readers send in their dollars right away or sooner, they will miss an excellent chance to try their muscle on the capitalist system. Perhaps most of you would rather have a fat bourgeois under your sledge, but take it from me, this spike, representing sharpedged Communist propaganda, will make things more uncomfortable for capitalism than if you dopped a fistful of ants inside some money barons' underwear.

That $1,400 donation swings a wicked wallop. I know there are many thousands of our readers who have not yet sent in their dollar. March 5 is near. On that day the names of those who helped to insure The DAILY WORKER for 1925 will be published. Every reader of our daily who can afford one dollar will participate in the spike-driving contest.

This year promises to be an unusually interesting one. Big strikes are looming on the horizon. The coal barons are getting ready for war on the miners' union. It will be a bitter fight. The coal barons are powerful, but the miners are great battlers—the best in the American army of labor. Their official leaders are corrupt but The DAILY WORKER will help rally the workers against the bosses despite all handicaps. It will support the rank and file against their enemies, the coal operators, and in support of progressive leadership.

The Soviet government, thru its growing power, has forced the proud capitalists of the United States who own and control this government, to take steps looking toward recognition. But the capitalists are by no means united on this question. There are powerful elements who fear that Soviet recognition will have a demoralizing effect on the capitalist system in the United States. The DAILY WORKER will urge unconditional recognition. The Russian workers and peasants owe the United States capitalists nothing. The capitalists of the United States caused the loss of thousands of Russian lives and the destruction of millions of dollars worth of property thru invasion and plottings. Other interesting struggles are on and in sight. The DAILY WORKER must be insured. It is the most powerful weapon in the arsenal of the American working class. You cannot afford to miss the opportunity of insuring it for 1925. Send in your dollar!

Here is my dollar to save our paper:

The Lessons of "MacDonaldism"

By A. G. BOSSE.

THE NATION'S editorial "Ramsay MacDonald's Achievement" in the issue of Oct. 22 is a strange admixture of insufficient knowledge, half-truths, and inglorious admissions. Its enthusiasm at the record of the labor government, accords very poorly with the latter's day by day record of broken pledges, compromises, and even betrayals of principle. Liberalism in excelsis!

Let us follow the Nation's outline of this "amazingly impressive record."

Foreign Policy. 1. MacDonaldism sold the German workers to allied finance-imperialism thru the Dawes plan The 10-12 hour day, reduced wages, increased unemployment (as in the case of the German railwaymen, 143,000 of whom are to be sacked), increased taxes on the workers, who now pay 90 per cent of the taxes, etc., are Germany's share. For England the following threatens: "the grave danger to British industry and increased unemployment, which may result from the Dawes report being put into operation" is called to parliament's attention by the national union of manufacturers.

REGARDING Poincare, MacDonald astonished him with "determined friendliness" just as the election in France was coming on. The French liberals were also astonished at such friendliness at such a time. The Franco-British breach was temporarily healed, but the surgeon was the American bankers' compulsion, not MacDonald. This "massive achievement" (the forcing of the Dawes plan on Germany, etc.) was a colossal betrayal of MacDonald's election pledges on the Versailles treaty, on pacifism, and on nationalization (MacDonald denationalized the German railways in his support of the Dawes plan.)

2. On Russia, the facts were these: When the negotiations nearly broke up, it was MacDonald (and Snowden) who ordered the rupture, against Ponsorby's wishes. He (MacDonald) was compelled to "climb down" by prominent trade union leaders and labor M. P.s who threatened to expose him to the labor movement. MacDonald insisted on full compensation to bondholders despite the fact that the £40,000,000 of railway and harbor bonds were to a great extent bought by speculators at 1-10 to 1-100 of their value; that many ports are now Latvia's and Esthonia's; that British intervention smashed much of the Russian railways. MacDonald's own party showed up the falseness of British claims in "Russia's Counter-claims" by W. P. Coates, published by leading labor M. P.s. MacDonald stood completely on Baldwin's and Lloyd George's claims, despite his election pledges of full recognition, peace on a working basis, extensive credits, etc. Since he was to be defeated on the Russian treaty he could at least have remained true to his position as a laborite and a socialist. If you are to be defeated anyway, why not at least retain the confidence of the workers? But that is not the way of a yellow socialist.

3. As for disarmament, we can quickly dispose of great achievements there. Building five cruisers when the liberals were opposed to it was not quite the acme of pacifism and disarmament. The specious excuse of replacement could not do away with the real fact that they are a new type, as the Observer said, as complete a revolution as dreadnoughts were eighteen years ago: "practically the whole of our present cruisers will be rendered obsolete" (and then MacDonald would "replace" more cruisers and destroyers). Snowden said the employment of 15,000 men was the excuse. Ammon (navy dept.) gave this away when he said there was "no warrant for any such suggestion." He continued with the real reason, "We have placed first and foremost the needs of the navy." No "blah" about giving employment. And a tory was heard to say, "Well, we've no need to turn these fellows out." Walsh (war minister) considered the army "a non-party question," and announced there would be "no policy of further reduction in the fighting arms." This pacifist disarmer urged employers to let their men off "to join the territorial army." Thompson (minister of air) had an attitude "toward the development of the air service which is decidedly sympathetic"(London Times). He was accelerating work on war planes and engines and following out Baldwin's policy in this: intensifying anti-aircraft training; spending $15,000,000 more on air forces than was spent by the bourgeois government in 1922-23.

The labor ministers refused to divulge any information in regard to explosives, the "mystery towers" at Littlechampton, relative aircraft strength, etc. Munitions being made in Australian state factories under the council of ambassadors were none of parliament's business. The pacifist government would take care of that in time for the next war. As the French Communist Cachin said regarding the French left bloc, they wanted "reformism without reforms and pacifism without peace."

IMPERIALIST POLICY. 1 Capitalism has not in the least been modified by the labor government. On the contrary, it has if anything benefited greatly by it. A tory government would have had to spend much more money on housing, unemployment, and the like than MacDonald has. The British bourgeoisie has "got away with murder" thru MacDonald.

2. The labor government also sent armored cars, machine guns, and troops into Ireland to fight against a republic. The labor government "honorably" insisted on carrying out every treaty made by a capitalist government preceding it, except when such treaty promised self-determination, dominion government, or a similar small measure of freedom. Examples of this will be given in items 3, 4, and 5. J. H. Thomas insisted that the Irish question was closed and that his government would give no consideration to complete national freedom thru a republic to Ireland, at that time or in the future. Irish political prisoners imprisoned by previous governments, and now held in Halloway and Wormwood Scrubs prisons were kept there despite protests to MacDonald and Henderson. Only Georgia wrings their hearts.

3. To call the Nation's account of India an "achievement" is rather strange. MacDonald's bullying and imperialistic ultimatum to India when a word of friendliness was expected could have been sent by Curzon or Churchill. To say that he kept the Indian question in "suspense" is to be absolutely without knowledge of the situation. Agnes Smedley's article in the Nation on the Akali Sikhs some months ago is one instance of "suspense" in turmoil. Thousands of peasants are rotting in jail still, some as a result of the 1921 Moplah uprising, some as political prisoners, after a mockery of a trial or none at all.

The labor government more fiercely accentuated persecution in India than any previous government since the war began. Bombay strikers were refused the right to form a trade union, under the labor government. Politicals were jailed for trying to form a labor party. Hundreds of strikers were shot and jailed for striking when their pay was held back eight weeks and they were starving, as happened in the Cawnpore and Bombay mills. Police spies were the sole witnesses at the Communist Cawnpore trial, where the defendants were sentenced to four years at hard labor for doing what is perfectly legal in England—forming a labor party. In Beghar, 111 poor peasants were arrested and a complete press censorship resulted, with the labor government absolutely silent until exposed.

BOYS and girls were murdered at Jaito in February, while Sidney Webb expounded British "Kultur:" "He believed that the British race had its mission in the world." Richards (under secy. for India) said the Sikh jathas "were disposed of peacefully," and it took a tory to bring out that they were "peacefully passed into jail;" Mr. Richards made no answer. The grim massacre of Jaito and the 72 peasants sentenced to death in Chauri-Chaura, the shooting of unarmed workers from armored cars in Bombay, and the Cawnpore Communist trial which illegalized a workers' and peasants' party—all these were MacDonald's measures to insure the peaceful imposition of a big wage cut by the employers of India. And this with wages at ten to twenty cents a day, while profits averaged 63 per cent (Indian Year Book: "profit works out at 63 per cent"). Otherwise the Indian question was in suspense under the labor government.

4. Egypt and the Sudan. Along with MacDonald's taking the biscuit, one might mention this fact: MacDonald continued the government subsidy to Asquith's Sudan Plantations Syndicate, which makes only 35 per cent profit; and by a strange coincident, MacDonald found his government supported by Asquith. I dont say that there is any relation between these facts. I simply mention them together. British contractors were making fortunes building dams and railroads and taking the land away from the Sudanese peasants. Military planes shot Sudanese and Egyptians because MacDonald refused to return the Sudan to Egypt (which was coerced also by British control of the upper Nile). Labor's premier continued to violate article 8 of the Anglo-Egyptian agreement. Serfdom and forced labor made British treatment of Sudan worse than under any previous regime.

Egypt told the same story. Persecution of Communists, and leaders of the Confederation of Labor, police frame-ups, the proposition to send 10,000 troops to "independent Egypt," the absolute refusal to carry out promises made by some sixty premiers since Gladstone to grant Egypt independence—this was only a small part of MacDonald's record. In the Socialist Review for Feb., 1922, one may read some of the "bunk" MacDonald used to pour forth on Egypt: "Here, if the pledged word of England means anything, we went for purely temporary purposes . . . the prime minister . . . anxious to convince his alarmed reactionary colleagues that he had not altogether retained a radical faith, decided to put his mailed boot down upon Egypt . . . and wrecked all hopes of a settlement." This exactly characterized MacDonald's actions in Egypt.

5. Item 5, as well as 4, is an admission of a great negative achievement. Irak is one of the sore spots of the empire. Its theft from Turkey has resulted in Turkish incursions, and it will be a miracle if war is avoided. Oil, and proposed cotton cultivation are the excuses for bombing innocent tribesmen and peasants. Mr. Leach's statement of no change in policy was honest, but very modest. His government treated Irak worse than Curzon ever dared to. Coercion of the national assembly thru reprisals and gold failed to persuade even an assembly owned completely by England, until last minute military action. A labor protest forestalled a tory mandate over Irak, which MacDonald put across. Curzon and Churchill tried a trick in Persia which failed; MacDonald succeeded, as elsewhere.

THE rest of the labor government's foreign policy can only indicated, for lack of space. Included in this record of achievements was: flogging, forced labor, and shooting of natives in New Guiena; broken pledges of self-determination for Cyprus; fomenting revolution in Brazil; inciting insurrection in the Turcoman steppes, to discredit Russia and alarm Persia; doing the same in Soviet Bokhara, and spending enormous sums on Afghan rebellions; suppressing more Communist papers in the Cologne sector in four months than the tory government did in a year; interfering with the military in Ruhr elections; deporting German workers from Cologne; falsely imprisoning Communists to 27 years in jail, prohibiting meetings of the Rhineland factory councils during the election campaign; answering, in March, a protest sent in January, with the reply that MacDonald "was obliged for the information;" attempting thru its ambassador on the Inter-allied Danube Commission to make all strikes and lockouts illegal in Hungary when the Hungarian government, of bloody Horthy tried to make illegal only strikes in public service; upholding Mrs. Evans in Mexico when she actually took up arms against the Mexican nationalization law, and supporting the oil agent, Cummins, there to the extent of breaking off relations with Mexico; interfering with gunboats on the side of the Canton fascisti against the South China government of Sun Yat Sen; compelling Premier Theodore of the Queensland labor government to withdraw the just taxation of great estates; welcoming the royal murderers of fascist Italy and Rumania; merciless slave-driving in Kenya; etc., etc. If I've left out a few minor "achievements," I think we can judge the situation from what has been presented.

DOMESTIC POLICY. 1. The military policy has been discussed under foreign policy, item 3. As to Singapore, it was chosen as a naval base, after the Washington agreement forbade such bases in the Pacific. Singapore is about 200 miles beyond the limits of the agreement, and is practically, if not technically, a violation of the agreement. The MacDonald government gave up the naval base project, ostensibly; but it was kept as an oil tankage station. Lord Haldane said of it that it "would be something of great offensive possibility." It will yet see a naval base.

2. As to the budget, and the promise of a free breakfast table, it is interesting to note that the taxes on a working man's £2-10s. was equal

WHY NOT LIKE THIS? - By Jack Gaveel (Hamburg)

TODAY, I was aboard the Russian steamer, Garibaldi, which is loading in Hamburg for London. From London she is going back to Leningrad with a mixed cargo, containing a lot of machinery, however. All Russian steamers have changed their names since the revolution. They have all been re-christened and renamed after men whose work for the revolution has gained them immortality.

I knew that the Garibaldi was lying in the Hansa harbor, but the Hansa harbor is big and has at least three landings. I asked the boy on the harbor ferry that was taking me across, but he couldn't tell me either. So I had to depend on my own wits to locate the ship. Well, there I stood, well for'ard on the ferry boat as it was cleaving the wind-swept and tossing waters of the Elbe with eyes peeled for the black funnel and the red flag of the Garibaldi. You must know that the Garibaldi is an old friend of mine. I have been on her before the same as I have been on the Karl Marx and the Trotsky. And sure enough, just before we got to the last landing I spied her, a small black steamer, lost amongst the pretentiously looming hulks of her big Dutch. English and Norwegian neighbors. And only for her big red flag with the bright hammer and sickle in the upper right hand corner she would have remained inconspicuous and hidden from my eager and searching gaze.

A BOLSHEVIK ship in a foreign and hostile port amongst thousands of ships all flying long established and respectable flags is a new and unexpected sight. As a revolutionist, it does you good to look at it. It gives you confidence. It conjures up before your mind glowing visions. It makes the blood run quicker thru your veins. She may be a rusty old tub but that only raises her more in your opinion. For raggedness always marched side by side with the red flag. The red flag on her stern, its entire length unfurled to the harbor's breeze, is a bold and uncombattable challenge of capitalist commerce and civilization. Uncombattable I say, as the iron laws of trade are stronger than man's petty prejudices and hatreds.

"Is this possible," you say, "a foreign ship raising the red flag of revolt unchallenged and unhindered in the staid old port of Hamburg?" But it is a fact. There is the ship and that's her flag. And in it there is that which makes you like the unrelieved and hopeless drudgery, the soulless and grim routine of this capitalistic world, of this vast Elbe harbor with its slave ships manned by slave crews. The rumble and thunder of the cranes and wenches, the hissing of the escaping steam, the clanking of the chains, the tooting of whistles great and small, all this is like sweet music to the ears of the dreamer. Listen—that's the International and Marseillaise. Dead hopes are revived, new ambitions spring up and new resolutions shape hemselves.

AFTER I had picked my way across some slippery and partly submerged logs and across a number of scows and lighters I managed to get within hailing distance of the Garibaldi. Yes, there was somebody in her stern. One of the crew, a Russian no doubt. I knew they were expecting me. So, "Hello there, Garibaldi," I hollered at the top of my voice to make the sound carry across the tumult and uproar of the harbor. Yes, he has heard me. He is looking my way. I point at myself and then at the ship to make him understand what I want. "Yes, the ship, take me over to the ship." Ah, he's got me. Yes, he's making for the boat tossing down below, alongside of the ship. Five minutes later I'm aboard.

THEY were glad to see me back, I'd been on her before. I was again struck by the fact that on this ship they have no watchman. When you board any other ship in this harbor, a watchdog of the shipowners is always waiting for you at the top of the gangplank to inquire into your business, past history, family connections, etc. I later asked the sailors of the Garibaldi why they have no watchman aboard and they replied that on Russian ships every member of the crew is a watchman because Russian ships are as much the property of the men as of the state. Well, they led the way aft and down into the firemen's quarter.

MUCH has been written about working conditions in Soviet Russia, but to get a real idea of how workers are treated in and under the Red Republic you must see for yourself. Never on any ship have I seen anything like this. Here everything possible has been done to make the seaman's life bearable. The men sleep in new and clean bunks. The whole place is kept scrupulously clean and is well ventilated. And there is no overcrowding. And just think aboard this ship they have showerbaths for the crew. Quite a contrast, as you see, to the filthy and beastly conditions that generally prevail on the ships of the capitalist nations. The chuck is plain, but wholesome and plentiful, as I can testify because this was my second dinner aboard the Garibaldi. As for the pay, here's an example: A. B.'s get about six pounds and firemen seven pounds a month. But what I wanted to get at is the share that the crew have in the management of the ship. For after all, this is the most important part. So I interviewed some of the members on this point. They want to great pains to explain to me. To give you everything they said would take too long so here is the gist of it: On board Russian ships the captain's sole function is that of getting the vessel to its destination and in the exercise of it he can of course take such measures as he shall deem fit to further the desired end.

THERE'S none of that needless "bull-dosing" of the crew which is customary aboard capitalistic steamers. Each man has his work cut out for him and as the welfare of the ship is identical with that of the seamen, all do their duty faithfully and to the best of their ability.

Any time the men have a grievance a meeting is called to trash the thing out. If it's anything serious a committee is sent to lay the result before the captain. And the skipper is compelled to listen to the men, consider the question and do everything in his power to bring the matter to a satisfactory solution. In fact meetings are called regularly both for educational and other purposes. A radical and extensive library is carried on board. As you can see a spirit altogether different from that which rules on the ships owned by capitalistic nations. This new and democratic spirit permeates every inch of the Garibaldi from its captain and officers down to the humblest members of its crew. Take this captain of the Garibaldi. You think you are looking at an American stiff. No uniform with brass buttons for this seaman. He's a sailor as truly as any stoker or coal passer. And he wants the world to know it. A plain black hat, a ditto coat, a big muffler and there you have the uniform of the captain of the Garibaldi. Nothing to distinguish him ashore he does not keep aloof proudly and disdainfully from his crew. No, he goes ashore and uptown together with his men. He talks to them, laughs with them and they all have a good time together.

A LEAKY old tub, with her rudder I had been there reminded me of what an official of the Schiffahrtsbund had told me about a rotten old trawler in Hamburg harbor. He had been aboard this steamer a week or so ago to try and prevent her captain from taking her out in the condition in which she then was.

A leaky old tub, with her rudder as good as disabled, because the rudder chain had been tied together in several places with hay wire, with her plates coming loose and her boiler on the verge of exploding, she was a sight to see and entirely unfit to go out. Her crew was fed on potatoes, bread and rotten meat. Sleeping quarters were in the most impossible places, little lousy boxes crammed and knocked into any old nook and corner without the least regard for the comfort of the men. And in these so called sleeping quarters the foor consisted of a number of planks laid across a big hole full of water. Fresh water there was none except some twenty gallons.

THERE is no reason why all ships cannot be made just as good as those of Red Russia. But for that, one thing is pre-essential. That is the international industrial roganization of all the Marine Transport Workers. When seamen shall have the power to stop shipping in all the ports of the world thru a mighty international organization of all the marine transport workers linked up with all other workers then shall the Red Flag fly from ALL ships and seamen be treated like human beings instead of dogs.

Florida As Seen By A Worker - By H. C. Fillmore

Much of Florida is flat, uninteresting country, with great tracts of gray sand covered with pine trees. The relatively high lands are all sand, the lower lands black soil shading into pure muck as in the everglades. The big planters (there are 6,000 acres of orange trees in one block owned by one company near Lake Wales) are full of hope for the future. The small growers and back woods planter is not so optimistic and complains bitterly about the state of the market, the cupidity of the buyers, and particularly of the railroads who, he says, charge as much for moving the crop 200 or 300 miles to Jacksonville as do from Jax to New York.

Lake Wales lies in the Ridge District. That is a district where the monotonous level of the wooded plains of Florida is broken by a succession of relatively high ridges and valleys between, many of which contain lakes. The "realtors" are impressing their optimistic psychology on all the cockroach business men of the hundreds of little towns that are springing up, fed by northern money. Some of the town laborers are also infected and are trying to buy town lots and shares in orange groves out of their puny wages. In few other places in America perhaps does this custom more certainly necessitate theh laborer's family doing without proper food, because rents are high (exceptionally so in the winter, due to the tourist influx) and so is food, and wages are low; not far from the absolute minimum required. This is not mere literary license; not Marxian phraseology, but fact gained from observing how the laborers live; moreover, living it out with them.

To those who prate so knowingly about the American standard of living I would suggest they try "making both ends meet" on a wage of from 15c to 30c an hour, while paying $20 a month for a shack to live in and with milk ranging from 17c to 25c a quart. Other food prices being higher than in Chicago except for meat, which is a trifle cheaper. Even without investing anything the white laborers' children, and himself as well, show a poor physique. The blacks show up better due to living in poorer dwellings, a lesser desire to keep up appearances, and a better knowledge of real food values.

Just a few miles from the little town of Lake Wales lies the home of the Mountain Lake Club, where a pack of wealthy northerners make their winter home. They have lots of room among the wild pine ridges and lakes, and have built a fine golf course, a great clubhouse and each one has his separate bungalow. There we find Edward Bok, the karo syrup king, President Suspender King and scores of others with prominent money bags and abdomens. Last winter they gave work to many laborers and what do you suppose they are doing? Oh, you would never guess. Bok and some others were building a BIRD SANTUARY, that is, they put a big crew of men and trucks on and ranged the country for miles round about and dug up all the huckleberry and other kinds of bushes they could find. They hauled them up on top of a ridge and by using lots of manure and water, right here in the woods, where presumably the birds have always lived quite happily, they started a fine, exclusive plantation of their own for the birds. No doubt they figure that all the nicest birds in the neighborhood will come inside and the fences and guards will keep undesirable persons out and the sweet singing of the birds will help soothe the tired nerves of the poor, weary millionaires.

Both white and black labor is employed apparently impartially all over the place. The southern white laborer who has not been used to working close to Negroes doesn't know what to make of this. They say, "The nigger is the cause of the low wages, he ought to be segregated somewhere, perhaps in Africa," and I would come back with inward malice, "Why I think the blacks do very well, indeed. They seem to do as much work as we and do it just as well. I rather like to work and talk with them."

One hangover from the old is evidenced in two water buckets, one for the whites, another for the blacks. Over I go for a drink and when cautioned against the blacks' bucket say: "These blacks look good and healthy to me. I was brought up on a farm and we never watered white and black cows separately."

A truck driven by a black passes and the old line whites tell you of how only few years before such a condition would not have been allowed. You restrain your anger and say: Why he seems to me to drive that truck just as well as anyone, and does his best to get as much money as he can for it, just like a white man."

Summing up one may say that blacks and whites are coming together down here, are growing slowly to understand one another.

You might think that an organization like this Mountain Lake Club, composed of men who have more money than they know what to do with would pay the laborers pretty well. The truth is they pay just what they have to and no more. 25 cents and 30 cents an hour and this maximum only because living in Lakes Wales is very high. At Plant City where our (?) winter strawberries mostly come from, a farmer offered me $1.50 a day, from sunrise to sunset. Listen to the karo syrup king when the park superintendent told him that to keep his grounds in order during the summer he would have to pay a man $3.00 a day. "Damn it, man, there is not work enough here to keep him busy. A man ought to care for two or three places. These caretakers are half asleep anyway. They don't know what work is." And you ought to have seen his indignant red mush, and pot belly shaking as he said it.

Letters From Soviet Russia

The Village of Chasovnia, Okhtomsk Volost, Moscow Uyezd, Moscow Gubernia.

DEAR Comrades:

Our Soviet village has in many ways outstripped the former backward and czarist village.

I WANT to tell you about our life and want to tell you about our life and doings. First of all let me tell you that our village is now under the administration of the village Soviet, which is elected by the peasants themselves. It has happened that "kulaks," well-to-do peasants, traders, etc., managed to get into the Soviet. But last autumn we decided to elect to the Soviet only poor peasants, in order that it should work for our interests.

THE last Soviet was weak, and we have made up our minds that those who have four cows and three horses must not be admitted to the Soviet. One of these people wanted very much to get in. He was very persuasive and almost succeeded in befooling the peasants. But thanks to the Young Communist League, which exposed his machinations, he was not admitted to power. The Soviet was elected. It is a good business-like and diligent Soviet. It is only a fortnight since the election, and already the village Soviet is showing what it can do. It proposes to introduce electricity into the village.

THE "Ukhtomtok" (Ukhtom Current) company has been formed in the volost, and the members of our village Soviet have got into touch with this company. They found out what is required and set to work. They collected money among the peasants and have already begun to erect the necessary posts. Towards the spring we hope to have in our village "Ilyitch's little lamp"—electricity.

THE kulaks and traders were cheating the villagers right and left and made their lives a misery. At last the peasants could not stand it any longer. They called a meeting and discussed ways and means for getting rid of these kulak elements. Finally they made the following decision: "We must establish a co-operative," we must organise our own shareholders' co-operative. No sooner said than done. They began to organize. It was difficult at first, there were very few members, but the state of affairs soon improved. The peasants began to pay more attention to their child, and they also managed to obtain credits from M. S. P. O. (Moscow Soviet of Consumers' Societies) and from the Moscow and District Credit Union.

THE business was extended, and now this co-operative has a clear profit of 7,000 rubles, and has opened two branches in the villages of Gakarevo and Jhilino, as well as a bakery here in Chasovia. As the profits are considerable, the society has been able to establish a mutual aid fund. Poor peasants receive loans for cattle, implements, etc. In addition to the mutual aid fund, the society assigns money for cultural-educational work. On the initiative of the society, the village reading room has been organized and is the cultural center of the village. The village reading room is an ordinary peasant hut, fairly spacious and decorated with posters and portraits of our leaders. It has a little library of agricultural political works, as well as newspapers and periodicals.

THE village reading room boasts also of an information bureau, where peasants can get satisfactory answers to all questions of interest to them. There are two study circles: an agricultural and political circle. Shortly a "bezbozhnik" (freethinker) circle will be formed. The village reading room publishes its own wall newspaper, which reflects the life of the village. This newspaper exercises considerable influence over the peasants, especially the younger peasants who are eager to contribute to it.

SPECIAL work among women is also carried on. A sewing and general needle work school has been opened for them. While the girls and women sew, knit or embroider, someone talks to them on political subjects or reads the newspapers. The work of the village reading room is in charge of the Young Communist League, which is assisted by the schoolmaster and the agronomist.

THIS is how we live and how most of the villages of the Soviet Union are living . . . . Won't you tell us about your own life?

J. HETLING,
Village Correspondent.

Yalta, Dec. 28, 1924.

DEAR COMRADES: Recently a closer connection has been established between Russian and foreign comrades. I would like to tell you how we lived before and how we are living and struggling in our Soviet country.

On the other hand, we would like to get better acquainted with you and to know all your joys and troubles, for altho far away you are our brothers whom we remembered thru all our struggles.

TO be united one must know each other, one could not do better than correspond with one another. Our desire to do so is very great, and I am sure that you will agree. Not only the workers of big factories who are the most class conscious people among us, but even the peasantry and the rank and file workers of the Soviet Union are anxious to keep in touch with the workers of western countries and to share their thots, hopes and experiences.

COMRADES, if you consult the map you will find among the vast territories of our republics right in the south in the middle of the Black Sea a little peninsula called the Crimean Soviet Republic. In its most southern part there is our famous port—Sebastopol, and not far from it the health recort Yalta famed for its beauty.

Our club is in one of the streets of Yalta, which you would probably not be able to discover with the help of a magnfying glass.

The Crimea deserves its appellation—the pearl of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. All the year round it is flooded with bright sunshine and washed by the green waves of the sea. All the year round it enchants people with the beauty and magnificence of its mountains, its panorama and its luxuriant vegetation. It is the best place imaginable for rest for recuperating one's tired organism.

OUR czars and capitalists knew that full well. Magnificent palaces, villas and parks are to be found all along the shores of the Black Sea. They belonged to those who oppressed and sucked the blood of the people from Nicholas the Bloody down to his lackeys, the dukes, earls and capitalists.

The Crimea had a longer and harder fight than other parts of our country for its liberation. The white bands of Denikin and Wrangel abhorred by Russian and foreign workers alike, made the Crimea a point d'appui in their struggle with Red Moscow, and had in this the support of the British and French fleets.

And it was only after the fierce struggle which lasted three years that our Red army defeated these bandits in 1920, drove away Wrangel and handed over the Crimea to the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union.

THE Crimea became at once a proletarian health resort where the workers of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics can recover their health after the long years of war and famine and devastation. The palaces and villas formerly the pleasure ground of a handful of debauched parasites, were converted into sanatoria and rest homes for the workers.

The Soviet government granted large sums of money and the necessary personnel to make these health resorts fit to provide rest and recuperation for the sick. In spite of the terrible famine of 1921, which affected not only the Volga but also the Crimea, the local workers did their utmost to repair the havoc wrought by the whites.

They repaired the electrical power station, the drains and the buildings and increased the number of sanatoria. The health resort is now in full swing.

TENS of thousands of sick working men and women from the bench find rest and health here during the season. Here you will find miners from the Donetz basin, Moscow textile workers and metal workers from the Urals. Over 2,000 persons have gone thru one department alone of the health resort during the spring and summer season. And we have hundreds of beds of the Central Insurance Administration, as well as trade union and factory sanatoria, etc.

This is how we have converted the former czarist and bourgeois Crimea into a proletarian health resort. Our industry here amounts to repairing shops to mend the health of the workers of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. And from here they go to take part with renewed strength in the building of the edifice for the creation of which every one of us is working—the edifice of a World Workers' Commune.

THE workers who belong to the "Third International" Club" are principally workers employed in the sanatoria and vineyards, and also members of the Medical and Sanitary Workers' Union and of the Land and Forest Workers' Union. Comrades, we would like to correspond with you regularly. We will ask you to tell us how you live and work, and we for our part will endeavor to tell you about what can be of interest to you concerning our life and work. We will tell you how we learn to live and construct our life according to new methods, getting rid of all the relics of the old social order.

WE will exhibit your letter to our club and we will send you all the answer to these letters. In the dark days of bourgeois repression, let the knowledge that the workers of the Soviet Republics are always with you and that true to the injunctions of Lenin they are holding high the banner of the first workers' and peasants' republics, put courage into your hearts.

Awaiting your reply,

With fraternal greetings on behalf of 1,000 members of the "Third International Club."

Luba Gendina, secretary of the management board.

BROTHER!

(Answer to a letter, a poem—or is it my heart? I do not know.)

By JOHN LASSIN.
(Translated by Simon Felshin)

Brother!
The mountains gleam,
Fragrant are the trees,
You came, to call me, and I am going.

Brother!
Oh, yes:
Our hearts are one,
Our hearts are one,
Our lungs are one,
And the blood too is one,
The hot, the rebellious—our blood.

Brother!
You gave me your hand,
And I feel the contact:
How the veins throb,
How soft and smooth it is,
And clings to mine.

Brother!
For the hand is not a single hand,
It is the hand of all humanity:
A voice that calls,
A word that rings,
A hand that leads,
I am going . . . I am going . .

Brother!
I have no more body,
I am only a word light as a flame,
It soars, soars into the far infinity.

Brother!
In men's hearts there soars,
In slaves' hearts there trembles
A blaze setting aflame
The chilling hearts.

Brother!
My brother in the fight,
In pain,
In rebellion,
In struggle,
You stretched out your hand to me.

Brother!
We stride forward on stony paths,
At the head of daring rebel armies,
You, I, we: the slaves . . .
Into infinity
We slaves march,
We conquer in the fight,
In fever; out of black slavery
Into the land of eternal light.

Social-Democracy Strips Itself Naked

Out of Their Own Mouths . . . .

EBERT, social-democratic president of Germany, last December brought suit for libel against the press and individuals of the monarchist persuasion who had accused him of "treason" during the war.

The documents introduced and the testimony given at the trial have just reached us and they constitute the most damning indictment of the social-democracy ever compiled.

WE publish herewith the second installment of a series of articles composed largely of this matter—most of it taken from the social-democrat press of Germany which published it to show that during the war the German socialists of the Second International outdid the monarchists and capitalists in support of the kaiser, the imperialist war, in crushing the strikes and the revolution that followed the war.

Out of their own mouths . . . .

Heine "Protects" the Overpowered Socialist Workers.

HEINE (Barrister): On January 8 the strike broke out among the dock workers of Kiel. On January 29 the social democratic leaders entered the strike committee. The social democrats did not prepare the strike, and their leaders entered the strike committee solely for the purpose of protecting the overpowered socialist workers, and in the interests of national defence.

Kaiser Socialist Scheidemann as Witness.

SCHEIDEMANN: I did not hear Wallraf's speech, tho there is much contained in it to which I could give my agreement. The strike broke out without our knowing anything about it, and deputations were sent to us asking us to participate. We declined to do this and sent the delegates away. But when our own followers begged us to join the strike committee, we did so with the expressed intention—here I betray no secret—of putting an end to the strike as speedily as possible by means or negotiations with the government.

There was a strong feeling against us in the functionaries' meeting, as "sabotagers" of the strike.

The workers wanted to stop the electric supply as reply to Kessel's commands.

If we had not entered the strike committee at that time, this court would not be sitting today, precisely as we prevented Russian conditions in 1918. And no newspaper would exist today which could abuse us. What we did was done for love of our fatherland!

SCHEIDEMANN: I hear of this leaflet for the first time. When we entered the strike committee, we did this mainly because of the danger that unknown wirepullers would attempt to seize the movement. It is utter nonsense to maintain that we favored the strike internally.

We should have been fit for the lunatic asylum had we done this, after pursuing for four years the straight line of defence of native country.

Heine (barrister): Did not the greater importance accruing to the strike thru the participation of the social democratic party have the effect of extending the movement?

Scheidemann: By our participation in the strike the workers were united, and thus the movement could be much more quickly settled than would otherwise have been possible. If anonymous wirepullers had got the matter into their hands, there is simply no saying what might have happened

CHAIRMAN: Could you issue the slogan for the breaking off of the strike?

Scheidemann: That was entire impossible. All we could do was to take part, in order to bring the affairs to a favorable end.

Scheidemann: . . . We exerted every endeavor to induce the general commission of the trade unions to take part. This was in accordance with the intentions of the government.

Ebert Ready to Cry—for the Fatherland!

HEINE (barrister): Do you remember that Ebert declared that the Philistine view of peace at any price did not come in question for the social democratic workers?

Scheidemann: Yes indeed; he declared that national defence was unconditionally imperative. At this session Ebert was called away to receive important military information from Major v. Bussche. This information was so affecting that Ebert almost wept when repeating it to the party committee. He said: "Now it is more than ever our duty not to fail at this moment."

It was not that we rejected the demands themselves as such, for these were good enuf in themselves, but we could not agree to the use of the strike as weapon of extortion.

(Vorwarts, Dec. 12, evening edition.)

Against the Amnesty.

LANDSBERG: Was the demand for an amnesty a particularly critical point?

Scheidemann: The case was precisely the same as today, when our party rejects the amnesty demands made on such a large scale by the Communists.

(Berlin Rote Fahne, Dec. 12.)

Their King's Evidence.

DR. LANDSBERG (barrister): Did you not consult with Prince Max of Baden on Sept. 23, 1918?

Scheidemann: Prince Max of Baden declared to Ebert and me that he would not undertake the government unless the social democrats participated. The tenor of his speech was that we had held strictly to the line of defence of native country, and that we must hold to national defence.

Noske as Witness.

NOSKE was then heard on the preparations for the Jan. strike. He declared: On Ebert's suggestion I became the intermediary between the party and the government in September, 1918. I am thoroly familiar with Ebert's standpoint with regard to the strike, for I was his intimate friend, and there was hardly any political problem which we did not discuss together, I must say that I am surprised at the way in which a man of such irreproachable character and great patriotism as Ebert has been dragged thru the press and meetings during the last few years.

WHEN the revolution set in, after shots were fired in consequence of the events in the navy at Kiel, the admiralty feared—not that a revolution might break out—but that the shooting might bring about a strike of the dock workers. It was Ebert who proposed sending me to Kiel, since my relations to the navy might enable me to prevent a rising among the workers. As you will probably know, I went to Kiel; I did not, however, find any strikers there, but 30,000 mutineers. I say all this for the purpose of illustrating my close connection with Mr. Ebert.

He Broke Up the Strike.

LANDSBERG (barrister): It is said that the fictitious letter sent by Mr. Pfutze to Kloth contained the statement that a secret party resolution had been passed, to the effect that the party should externally disapprove of the strike during the war, but should support it internally.

Witness Noske: That is perfectly ridiculous. The party never came to any such decision. Had I desired it, there would have been a strike at Chemnitz in January. I do not know who it was in Berlin who suggested my being sent to Chemnitz during the critical days of January. In Chemnitz the question of a strike was actually being discussed, and, when the movement threatened to break down in Berlin, it was intended to organize the insurrection on a broader basis. I attribute it essentially to my efforts that these radical tendencies were defeated. The now fugitive Brandler, late government director in Saxony, and the radical deputy Heckert, were in Chemnitz at that time, and endeavored to organize the strike. I succeeded in first postponing the vote on the strike since I knew that the Berlin strike would break down meanwhile. The radicals reproached me later on for dragging the matter out and thus breaking up the strike.

(Vorwarts, Dec. 13.)

Arrest of Rosa Luxemburg.

WITNESS GENERAL VRIESBERG: I should like to emphasize the following:

One day an agent of the social-democratic party came to us and requested the arrest of Rosa Luxemburg or of another woman. We made the arrest.

I was the more astonished that it was precisely Mr. Ebert who then attacked us severely in the reichstag, and spoke of the case with the introductory words: "Another word on the military terror."

(Vorwarts, Dec. 15.)

Upon this von Stein, general of the artillery, former minister of war, was heard.

Chairman: The defence asserts that from 1916 onwards the German S. D. party deliberately thwarted the measures of national defence.

Witness: I cannot say anything about that, as the party leaders did not invite me to their meetings. But there were difficulties enuf.

On one occasion, when a metal workers' meeting was about to be held, we were applied to by an agent of the social-democratic party, who asked us to forbid the meeting, as their right socialist wing was going to be driven to the wall by the radicals.

I prohibited the meeting, and was subsequently severely criticized by Scheidemann in the reichstag for doing so. This I did not understand.

Groner on Social Democrats.

THE retired reichminister, Groner, was then heard, and made the following statement:

I am not aware that the social-democrats did any harm to the defence of the country. On the contrary, I have always found Mr. Ebert to possess the fullest understanding for national defence.

Heine (barrister): Do you know anything about Mr. Ebert's activity for keeping the army together after the breakdown?

Witness: Yes indeed. The present President Ebert did his utmost to carry out the wishes of the military headquarters. At that time Mr. Ebert discussed the situation with us every day, in full agreement, and endeavored to carry out everything which we suggested and recommended.

(Vorwarts, Dec. 15.)

Hindenburg to Ebert.

HEINE (barrister): Are you aware that General Field Marshal Hindenburg, was prepared to co-operate with Mr. Ebert?

Witness General Groner: General Field Marshal von Hindenburg was in entire agreement with this co-operation. He was also agreed with our entering into an alliance with Mr. Ebert at that time. I know of a letter in which Excellency von Hindenburg wrote to Mr. Ebert that he, like Mr. Ebert himself, was willing to place certain feelings and wishes in the background for the sake of the welfare of the fatherland, and would work in collaboration with him.

Landsberg (barrister): Can you confirm the statement that the letter written by Hindenburg on Dec. 8, 1918 commenced with the following wording:

Dear Mr. Ebert! That I apply to you in the following lines is explicable by the fact that I have been told that you, as a faithful German, loving your fatherland above everything else, are prepared to place in the background your personal opinions and wishes, as I too have been obliged to do, in order to serve the fatherland in its need. For this reason I have allied myself with you to save our people from the threatened ruin. I should like to remind you of your appeal of Nov. 9, in which you say:

"The new government of the reich cannot fulfill its task unless the whole of the authorities in town and country lend a helping hand. I know that many will find it difficulit to work with the new men who have undertaken to rule the reich, but I appeal to their love for our people. If our organizations fail us at this difficult hour, Germany will be plunged into anarchy and the profoundest misery. Help us by fearless and persevering work everyone remaining at his post, until the hour of release arrives."

This is followed by several points dealing with discipline in the army, and with the necessity of the speedy convention of the national assembly. The letter then goes on:

"The fate of the German people has been placed in your hands. It depends on your decision whether the German reich will revive. I am ready and with me the whole army, to help you without reservation for this aim. We all know that after the regrettable issue of the war, the reconstruction of the reich is only possible on a new basis and in new forms. What we want is that the restoration of the state is not postponed for generations by a foolishness and blindness completely destroying every pillar of our social and economic life . . .

"Signed: Hindenburg."

Witness: I can fully confirm the authenticity of this letter.

A Herald of Revolution

By M. D. Litman

THO nothing officially can be noticed, business boycotts and petty horse-play among American "Babittry" is the order of the day. The crux of these boycotts, takes place in the smaller communities where the Babitts make it their business to know the affairs of each other. Protestant cockroach businessmen of the three K.'s variety are boycotting catholic and Jewish small-town merchants and they in turn retaliate. Some leases are never renewed and in some towns the streets are painted with such words as "Kigy," or "Akia" and "Ayak." Kigy means "klansman I greet you." Ayak means "Are you a klansman?" Akia means "A klansman I am." With the above gibberish the knights of the knight gown recognize each other.

In the manufacturing centers, advertisements calling for "christian help" are not common. Evidently christians make good slaves. The masters are seeking to feed the most willing slaves first and they choose their workers according to the particular brand of religious opium they inhale. An artificial line of gentile, catholic and Jew is tightly being drawn and all the prejudice and witchcraft of old is arrayed to befuddle the uncouth.

So long as this sort of horse-play is confined among the various elements of two-by-four bank patrons, known as the middle class, the harm done, tends to weaken the unity and strength of the capitalist state, but of late, thanks to our efficient Mr. Ford, the poison has reached some elements of the working class and we must not permit this poison to retard, even for a moment the forward march to Communism.

The French revolution—the very expression of industrial capitalism's coming of age — cold-storaged the witches of medieval religious and racial prejudice temporarily. The capitalist state became the concilliator between the budding businessmen who needed stability and the church which was becoming too clumsy to minister the new state.

A convenient wedlock, however, between church and state—each party to the contract maintaining their own home but living amicably together—was affected. This wedlock is now successfully operating in most western democracies. To bring the war to the people, the almighty on high and the state, have worked hand in glove.

Sign of Revolution.

Whenever the working class begins to get conscious of the fountain-head of exploitation and bourgeois society is threatened, the handmaids of that society will unearth the old stinking carcass of religious and race hatred and create a condition of intolerance, which for a while holds back the forward march of the working class. It is the last connivance and calumny—after that the deluge. There only remain internal military suppression and external invitation to mercenary troops to hold the working class in leash. We are now passing thru the state of intolerance. When it becomes clear to the workers that they have been misled and that they are not divided along religious and race lines, but only along class lines, they will know what's to be done.

Up to 1914 the United States industrial development was so intense and rapid that the various phases of intolerance that were rampant in Europe could not develop here. The Negroes suffered the most up to that time and if there had been no Negroes to roast it can be supposed they would have roasted foreign-born workers or the next minority that "heroes" pick on.

Religious intolerance began to be felt in America during the few hard years prior to the world war, when it was necessary to give the workers a dose of prejudice in order to stem the tide of industrial unrest that was sweping the country prior to 1914. With the coming of the great carnage and with "plenty of jobs" for the slaves and profits for the masters and with a war on hand which gave them a better subterfuge than internal intolerance; mainly. "death to the Hun" and "patriotism," we experienced a lull.

Post War Hatreds.

The war has been fought, workers have returned to jobs which machines and capitalist efficiency have replaced. The world market is ruined and an age of specialization, such as has never been heard of before, is confronting the American worker today. The American land squatter has long ago lost title to his land, and has been reduced to tenantry. Such a condition presents a most fertile soil for the capitalist apologists. They come before the people and tell them that "foreigners," "catholics" and "Jews" are depriving them from their profits and from their jobs.

The smallest and most unprofitable enterprises are in the hands of the so-called foreigners. The hardest mine and farm labor is being performed by so-called foreign labor; yet, there is that politically and class ignorant "native son," who allows himself to be misled by this drivel of hatred. To show their patriotism, some bosses are handing out the "easy" mine and mill and factory jobs to natives and take pride in employing none but "christian, white, Americans."

The Ku Klux Kraze.

Born inside of the stinking carcass of race and religious intolerance and germinating from the swamps of southern United States, the klan is the agency which has rendered the most service to American capitalism. The old decayed carcass of hate and intolerance was dressed up in a white robe and placed on a horse and is now being paraded around before the uncouth.

Conflicts must result from this campaign that will tend to weaken the capitalist state organism and will make the state a weaker enemy of the working class. Sectional disputes in regards to authority will arise and with it internal warfare into which the working class led by Communists will throw their forces and organize the first step towards Communism—the dictatorship of the proletariat.

CAPITALISM, with its powerful weapon, the school, is burying its poison fangs still deeper into the hearts of the children by at last establishing in New York City, religious instruction for public school pupils. At a meeting a few days ago of Roman catholic priests, Jewish rabbis and protestant ministers, it was decided that such opiate must be administered as often as possible to as many scholars as possible. The attempt will be made to inoculate the 1,200,000 New York public school children, with this virus instead of 400,000 now receiving such injections in one way or another.

Catholics At It a Long Time

It has also developed that the catholics, always working jesuitically, have been for the last two years giving religious opiates to children after school hours. This was announced by no less an official than Dr. William J. O'Shea, superintendent of schools, who made no explanation of how they do it and whose children they are teaching.

Cardinal Hayes, chief of the opium squad of the catholic branch of worship, has given his "august" sanction to this movement and his Machiavelli, Dr. Lavelle, is the active force carrying out the cardinal's dictum.

It was declared with pride that the public school officials are in favor of this religious instruction for the school children and the immediate establishment of such teachings seems to indicate that capitalism knows what it is doing and that it needs must be done to withstand the onset of labor waking up to the wiles and oppressions of capitalistic ethics and sweatshops.

These medicine men have now arranged for one day a week of religious instruction in one school, P. S. 46, at St. Nicholas avenue and 156th street. They are wily in announcing that instruction will not be given in the school building, but in places apart. The Jews, protestants and catholics will have separate classes. It is also intended not to dismiss classes early to receive this instruction, but it will be done after school hours. They will catch first, it is said, the part-time class children who, deprived by the niggardliness of the capitalist politicians, of full-time lessons, will be pounced upon by the witch-doctors and given as frequent doses as possible, of this venomous narcotic, so that they may be "good," meaning docile workers for capitalism.

Superintendent O'Shea, to calm the people who might be disturbed by this new plan to take possession of their children mind's minds, says that attendance at these classes will be purely voluntary. But they will work on children they find not attending in a similar fashion to the catholic witch-doctors who dangle a devil before the eyes of a terrified child and its mother.

The Mephistophelian horror enters the trustful souls and they are dulled in spirit by the poisonous fear. The parent relents, the child is staggered by fear and successive doses of the opiate render it immobile and thoughtless. Thus the public school will continue its efforts to create imitative monkeys out of the magnificent potentiality of adolescent human brains.

Capitalism is forever alive to its interests and it knows the child is its future earner of profits. If it doesn't receive opiates enough it will join the Communists who strike directly at the villainies and abominations of profit-making.

It is a frightful step towards bringing the working class into subjection and its effects will be far-reaching if it continues.

In the whole city of New York with its 7,000,000 people only the Workers (Communist) Party combats this menace in an organized manner.

VANZETTI AND JUDGE THAYER

Victims of the Textile Barons in New England

IN "The Story of a Proletarian Life" Bartolomeo Vanzetti describes the manner in which Judge Webster Thayer sentenced him to fifteen years in prison on the charge of attempted highway robbery. "There was not a vibration of sympathy in his tone as he did so," says Vanzetti. "I wondered as I listened to him, why he hated me so. Is not a judge supposed to be impartial? But now I think I know—I must have looked to him like a strange animal, being a plain worker, an alien and a radical to boot."

The modesty which is part of the make-up of Vanzetti never told him that the reasón Judge Webster Thayer hated him was that in addition to being "a plain worker, an alien and a radical to boot" ne was a man of fine intelligence devoting that intelligence to challenging the system of which Thayer is part.

ONE did not need to sit long in the court room of Superior Court Judge Webster Thayer in Dedham while Bartolomeo Vanzetti was there to realize that the two strongest personalities in that court room were Thayer and Vanzetti. The cage in which Vanzetti sat faced the bench on which Thayer sat. Vanzetti never took his eyes from Thayer and Thayer knew it.

Thayer is a good lawyer in the sense that he knows the law. He has a fine brain which he has concentrated on legal problems. Vanzetti has a fine brain which he has concentrated on ideas of brotherhood and the bringing about of a better system of society. Thayer has an education gotten in the best schools and univerities in the country. Vanzetti educated himself in the time left him after earning a living for himself.

THAYER knows Blackstone, the decisions of the supreme court and the statutes of Massachusetts. Vanzetti knows Marx, Dante, Mazzini, Hugo, Zola, and strangely enuf the bible. Darwin, Spencer and the other scientists are more than mere names to Vanzetti. He has studied them and said "my teeth were not made for such bones; nevertheless I proceed to gnaw them desperately, and I believe not uselessly."

Vanzetti's understanding of English is far from perfect, Thayer can make the language of Milton and Shakespeare do tricks for him that it was never intended to do. The legal implications of his slightest remark always seem to be limitless.

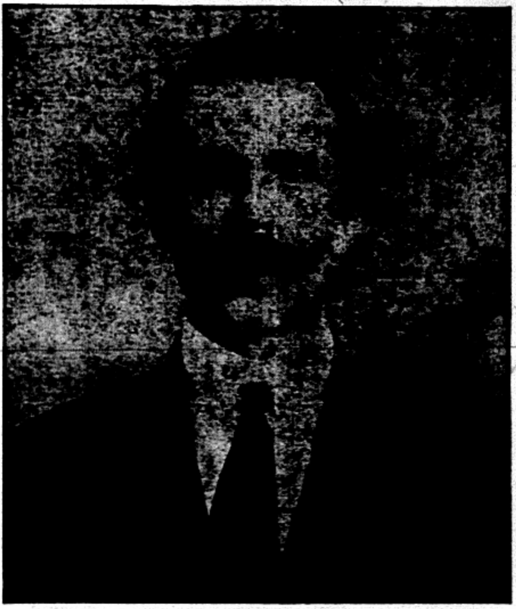
WITH all the advantages on the side of Thayer one would assume he would be a good enuf sport or enuf of a gentleman to refrain from taking unfair advantage of Vanzetti. But Thayer is neither gentleman nor a good sport.

Thayer knows and knows well that he is trying much more than a murder case when he is trying Sacco and Vanzetti. On the slightest provocation he will deliver a lecture from the bench on the dignity of the law and the importance of upholding it. To these arguments in defense of capitalism Vanzetti can answer nothing. But his steady gaze fixed on Thayer is a challenge. It is a challenge of which Thayer is conscious and he always seems to be addressing his remarks directly to Vanzetti.

BUT on one occasion Vanzetti did answer. It was during the hearings relative to the alleged insanity of Sacco. Thayer had just committed Sacco to the hospital for observation. He then delivered a talk on the idea that "this is a government of laws, not men."

Sacco had been on a hunger strike for twenty-nine days as a protest against the frame-up which had put him and Vanzetti in prison. Thayer was pointing out that an individual could not stop or impede the workings of the law. That the law was more important than persons. "The time will never come I hope when one person can make his will felt over his fellows. When the word of one person will have the force of law," he said. The harangue lasted about ten minutes when Thayer reached this point in his argument.

Nicola Sacco, His Wife and Son.



Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

NO doubt thru the mind of Vanzetti flashed pictures of the frame-up that had brot Sacco and himself into the cage in the court room as prisoners and he snapped in a loud,clear, challenging voice, "We are at that time now."

Baliffs harried about the court room bellowing, "Silence in the court." The clerk rapped his desk and a guard rushed to the edge of the cage where Vanzetti sat. The judge continued droning out his remarks.

BUT Vanzetti had at last challenged the bunk of the judge to whom he was compelled to listen. That little scene which was over in a moment symbolized vividly the challenge which the working class hurls in the face of existing society. It might well have been a part taken from a symbolic drama transplanted to real life.

Today Vanzetti lies in the Bridgewater state hospital for the criminal insane legally a crazy man but in reality suffering from the effects of his years of prison life locked away from the free air he loved. Thayer has rendered his final decision in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti by passing the buck and refusing their demand for a new trial saying the supreme court could reverse him if it wished.

VANZETTI'S future seems to hold but two possibilities, life in an insane asylum or death in the electric chair unless his class frees him. Thayer's future seems secure. For his part in the now world famous case "The People of the State of Massachusetts vs. Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti" he will probably be given a judgeship in the supreme court of Massachusetts. There his life long ambition will be realized and he can continue to play a part in what has been called "the immortal adventure of the law in Massachusetts."

Lines to the Unorganized Unemployed.

Too many boots, and your feet are unshod,
Too many suits, and you shiver with cold,
Too many houses, you bed on the sod,
Too many meals, so your rations are doled.

Over-production—the warehouse is full;
Over-production—you starve on the street;
Over-production—a nice little lull
With plenty stored up—but nothing to eat.

Think of the boss that you love feeding fat,
While you tighten your belt and go begging a meal;
Think of the banquet his family it at
As you prowl by the shops and are tempted to steal.

Over-production—you speeded like hell;
Over-production — you took little pay;
Over-production—you did your work well;
Over-production—of Bosses today!

MUSIC • LITERATURE • DRAMA

THE REVOLUTIONARY THEATRE.

MEYERHOLD is the spirit of the revolutionary drama in Soviet Russia. He it is who has swung the theatre directly into revolutionary activity, while at the same time, heightening the artistic effects and making of the theatre a spectacle splendid as nothing has been before, rich in art, in propaganda in broad, and yet simple effects.

Meyerhold has spoken the last word for revolutionary drama in Moscow. His dynamic genius sweeps everything before it and produces a theatre that means death and oblivion to all bourgeois ideals of society and art After Meyerhold one is no longer interested in or held by ordinary drama, no matter how poignant. Why? Because Meyerhold crushes in his overpowering dramatic and satirical scope all the bourgeois ideals of the world —that world of polite society, of brutal exploitation, beastly governmental diplomacy and cruel expression. Meyerhold makes you feel the very essence of these things and side by side with this, he raises the Communist ideals of struggle, of sacrifices and of comradeship.

There is practically no scenery on the Meyerhold stage, and all the effects are produced with wonderful groupings and with lights from the wings that achieve enormous and poster-like effects. It is clear and strong and is the beginning of a new world drama.

There is no reason why the nucleus of such a theatre should not be started in America. There is opportunity for a theatre of this nature in this country, such a theatre working in direct contact with the party.

The Workers Drama League, which produced the beautiful pantomime for the joint bazaar under the direction of Sadie Amter, may be the beginning of such a movement. Indeed, interest and enthusiasm for this new field is so great that there is every reason to believe that the Workers Drama League will do great things in the future.

Dr. Arkotev, who produced the "Dawn," in Moscow, will produce a splendid spectacle, "The Paris Commune," on March 15, at Madison Square Garden, for the benefit of the Workers Party press. This will be a magnificant pageant, in which hundreds of comrades will take part. The fifteen thousand who will crowd Madison Square Garden to witness this original production will carry away with them a picture for life.

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

IGOR STRAVINSKI, the great Russian composer, directed the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in four of his own works on the regular program of last Friday and Saturday which was given at Orchestra Hall.

By way of contrast with the advanced modernism of Stravinski Mr. Stock opened with the Beethoven seventh symphony, crystal clear, dancing music, sparkling diamond-like under Frederick Stock's baton.

Then came Stravinski. This short, vigorous person who has upset the music of three continents with his surpassing genius, opened his section of the program with an arrangement of what the program called "The Song of the Volga Bargemen" for wind and percussion instruments. Stravinski intended that this world famous tune should, in his arrangement, become the national anthem of the new Russia. There is a certain amount to be said for him in this. The tune is distinctly Slavic, is well known and is a song of labor. Stravinski's arrangement is short and has tremendous power. But the composer overlooks the most essential point. National anthems are born out of war. The song that carries a nation thru revolution will be the national song of that nation after the revolution is consummated. So it is that neither Stravinski's "Song of the Boatmen of the Volga" or Grechaniov's "Hymn of Free Russia" have displaced the International.

Followed a fantastic scherzo written by Stravinski in 1908. This piece proves that Stravinski can, if he will write as clear a melody, in the old fashioned sense of the word, as Ravel or Elgar. It is light and clever music attempting and failing to describe the activity of a bee-hive. Far be it from me to accuse Stravinski of plagiarism, but there are moments in this scherzo that are too reminiscent of Dukas' "Sorcerer's Apprentice."

Then a masterpiece of the fully ripened genius Stravinski—"Le Chant du Rossignol," which is in English "The Song of the Nightingale." Based on an old story of Hans Christian Anderson this work exists in three forms, first as an opera, second as a ballet, and, in the third form played on this occasion, as a sympaonic poem. It is concerned with the story of the Chinese emperor who had a pet nightingale that left him cold when he got a mechanical nightingale as a present from the Mikado of Japan. But when the emperor is sick and death sits on his pillow, the mechanical bird is broken, and the real one appears, charming death and saving the ruler's life.

It is impossible even to attempt description of this music. The best description is the apt metaphor, the appropriate analogy. But there is no analogy to be made to "The Song of the Nightingale." It is unique, it is like nothing else played as music, it is only to be experienced.

The program ended with a suite in five movements drawn from the ballet "The Fire Bird," one of the Russian's early creations. There is much pep and brilliancy of color in the suite, but coming as it did after "The Song of the Nightingale" it was too much of a let-down.

LIONEL TERTIS, THE GREAT VIOLA PLAYER.

Mr. Stock's eighteenth Symphony program of this season, given in Orchestra Hall last Friday and Saturday, was one of a double significance. It was given over completely to the work of contemporary English composers with an English scoloist, and, of the four compositions making it up three were descriptive of cities.

Lionel Tertis, the great viola player, was the soloist. He presented, for the first time in this town, two movements from a suite for viola and orchestra by Benjamin Dale. Most of the music is simple stupidity, but there are in it spots and patches of a peculiar violet colored music that the viola tone seems to inspire.

The viola is the day laborer of musical instruments. No orchestra of any size is complete without it, no string combination bigger than trio can dispense with it. Yet, with the single brilliant exception of the Berlioz "Harold in Italy" symphony there exists scarce a solo spot of importance for it. The viola works, but without the reward of a chance to stand out. out.

Lionel Tertis is a phenomenon. He arrived on the scene as a soloist on an instrument that has only a paltry solo literature. And at once his contemporaries began making a literature for him. The music for solo viola that is pouring out of London today is due to Lionel Tertis.

It is worthy of note that the instrument Tertis uses is larger than the average viola. It has a different tone too, something like a sort of soprano violincello, if such a thing were possible.

The program opened with a symphonic movement descriptive of Paris at night, written by Frederick (before the war it was Fritz) Delius. The opening and closing sections, a wistful little tune in the oboe, suggest somewhat the spirit of the town at night, but the rest of the composition is a falure.

This was followed by the London symphony of Ralph Vaughan Williams. The London symphony has been discussed here before, so we shall not go into details again. It is without doubt Williams' materpiece to date, and one of the great pieces of program music. Williams sees London as it really is, and in his music the pathos of London, the horror and hunger of London, the romance and the mystery of London, almost the very smells of London are all brot out by a master hand. The four movements concern themselves with, first, the noise and clang of heavy traffic, second the pathos of the Bloomsbury district in the twilight, third, the heart rending gayety of a Saturday night in the slums, and last the Hunger March "of those whom the city grinds and crushes, the great army of those who are cold and hungry and unable to get work." (Quoted from Albert Coates, the English conductor.)

The windup of the program was the "Cockaigne" overture of Edward Elgar. Elgar sees London as a sort of sublimated Sunday comic supplement in this overture, and tries hard to cover up the poverty of his ideas in masses of tone.

THE civic orchestra gave its second Orchestra Hall concert of the season last Sunday afternoon, with Frederick Stock and Eric Delamarter conducting. Th eprogram opened with an overture called "In Bohemia" by Henry K. Hadley. This is better music on the whole than most of Hadley's work. It is light, it is melodious, and it is not in the least Bohemian.

This was followed by the fifth symphony of Schubert, which was given its first Chicago performance. Connected with this work is a history of romance of the sort generally associated with some paintings. The manuscript score of the symphony was sent to Russia and lost there. Later it was discovered and just last year it was published in Vienna. But there is considerable doubt as to the authenticity of some of the ten symphonies of Schubert. It is thought that some of them, including the work played on this occasion, are forgeries. It certainly seems that this fifth symphony is not genuine Schubert, for it is in Mozartian style and so long that about two-thirds of it had to be cut to make it into a program at all.

The symphony was followed by the prelude to "The Deluge" that well-worn old timer of violin solos, here played by Charles V. Hrych, the concert master.

Miss Margaret Farr was the soloist of the day, playing the Liszt fantasia on Hungarian folk melodies. It is customary for pianists to vie with each other to see who can give this war horse the most eccentric performance. Miss Farr's interpretation was of the most eccentric.

The shadow weaving march movement of Chaykovski's sixth symphony and the Strauss waltz "Wine, Women and Song" wound up the show.

THE Chicago Mendelssohn club gave its second program of the season at Orchestra Hall, last Thursday night. Because of the illness of the club's conductor, Harrison Wild, Calvin Lampert, the accompanist for this foremost of men's choral organizations, took the baton. Louise Harrison Slade, contralto, was the soloist.

The Mendelssohn club programs are built up mainly of English and American music of many different sorts and degrees of worth. On this particular program the outstanding composition was the one called "Siberia," by a man named Starke. In it the song of the protesting, exhausted prisoner condemned to Siberia by a czarist court, sung by a solo voice is constantly circled and framed by Cossack cries in the chorus.

Beside this solo with the club, Mrs. Slade did two groups alone, one group of songs by John Alden Carpenter, which are very bad, and another group of Louisiana Negro songs that are not quite so bad. Mrs. Slade can interpret with considerable feeling and insight, but unfortunately was not in good voice on this occasion.

An Appeal to Proletarians of the World

FELLOW peasants: A wave of savage and cruel persecution has descended upon the careworn, toiling peasantry not only in Europe, but also in other parts of the world.

The landlords and the capitalists are dealing out a bloody revenge to the best sons of the toiling peasantry for the only offense that they dared raise their voice against the oppressors and exploiters of the village.

In Bulgaria the stalwart champions of the peasants' cause are being murdered; in Rumania the peasants are being shot in their hundreds and entire villages are being levelled to the ground by artillery fire; in Poland the infuriated generals and landlords are threatening death to millions of peasants, shooting and imprisoning every day some of the best sons of the toiling people.

Everywhere, in Czecho-Slovakia and India, in Corea, Italy and Egypt, in Peru and Canada, in America and China, everywhere the attempts of the peasants to improve their lot, to obtain land and human conditions of existence, are met with stubborn resistance on the part of landlords and capitalists, who drown such attempts in a sea of peasant's blood.

Hundreds of thousands of widows, mothers and orphans of peasants, who were either murdered or imprisoned for the cause, are left without any means of subsistence.

Thus it was in Rumania, thus it happened in Poland, Bulgaria, Czecho-Slovakia, Esthonia and other countries.

Fellow Peasants and Peasant-women:

Do not trust the hypocritical "pacifist" twaddle of the funkeys of the bourgeoisie and the landlords in the camp of the Second International, do not put your faith in the dope administered by the priests who are the champions of landlordism.

Continue the fight for your cause, for land and power, and let there be no peace between wolves and sheep, between landlords and peasants. The organization which renders aid and comfort to the victims of your fight against capitalism and landlordism is the International Red Aid.

The industrial workers of all countries, who are engaged in the same fight against capitalism and landlordism as yourselves, have long since appreciated the great worth of this organization, which has been so helpful to them, and they are joining it in masses.

Fellow peasants: Join the ranks of International Red Aid (I. R. A.), support and strengthen the only organization which renders aid to the victims of the revolutionary struggle of the peasants for land, freedom and power.

I. R. A. will solace the lives of your imprisoned comrades and will plead on their behalf before the workers and peasants thruout the world.

Raise your protest against the cruel violence practiced by the master class.

Demand freedom for the imprisoned fighters.

Down with the terror practiced by the landlords and capitalists! Long live the fight against the landlords!

Long live the toiling peasantry thruout the world!

Peasants and workers of all countries, unite!

The Presidium of the International Peasants' Council. Signed: Smirnov (U. S. S. R.), Dombal, (Poland), Burgy (Germany), Vaseilles (France), Rydlo (Czecho-Slovakia), Hero (Scandinavian), Gavan (Mexico), Ken Hayachi (Japan), Al-Quac (Indo-China).

to that of a bourgeois' salary. Snowden told the unions he had no money for widows' pensions; the army needed £45,000,000 and the navy £56,000,000, not to speak of the air forces. Now as to whose budget Snowden's was. The corporations profit tax was dropped, also the phone charges reduced; the McKenna duties reduced and inhabited house tax withdrawn—all for the benefit of the middle class. For the workers, food taxes were reduced, and the cost of living somewhat lowered. With the sliding wage scale prevalent in most industries, a wage offensive would naturally result. But even without that, the capitalists found a way to make up previous prices for the workers. Tea imports were restricted, and prices raised, with terrible exploitation on the colonial plantations and profits as high as 150 per cent (Makum Tea Co.)

RUMORS of a sugar shortage of 3 million tons in world consumption were floated and the price was jacked up, with fortunes for the refiners. A wheat-harvest scare was manufactured, and flour went up 23 per cent from April to August, 1924. The chemical and drug trusts, with a complete grip on the market squeezing out all undersellers. And so it goes. The government went wild preventing strikes, and moved not a finger to stop profiteering. Boys are earning 10 to 25s. a week ($2.25-5.75) and agricultural laborers getting such low wages (27s.) that even liberals had to protest and vainly fight the labor government for a 30s. minimum wage. And Snowden's cure was a beet subsidy and a tariff to wipe out unemployment, with 3,000 workers more in the beet industry! In August, 1924 the cost of living generally was as high as before the budget. The capitalist class was the only one to benefit. Why, Snowden told us: ". . . solution of the unemployment problem, in the opinion of the government, is to be found in the full development of all our national and natural resources, and in the scientific organization of production, ending with the elimination of waste in every sphere and every department." Sounds "kind-of-like" Coolidge and Mellon, doesn't it? Its significance was that it incites wage reductions, increases unemployment by a more efficient capitalist method of exploitation, invites subsidies, etc. What tories couldn't dare try, Snowden did for them, and labor must be grateful! And the rude Communists call him a lackey of capitalism!

3. On education, much was pledged, and nothing done. Regulation of the flow of young workers into industry, training and maintenance, and similar pledges meant nothing in their lives. Minors didn't help elect MacDonald and Snowden.

4. The housing problem was wretchedly bungled. The building trades workers were to be bamboozled, while building material profiteers were to abandon themselves to an orgy of unregulated profits. Pledges to "commandeer" factories, "ration surplus housing accommodations," "abolish slums, promptly build an adequate supply of decent houses, and resist decontrol till the shortage is satisfied," all petered out in ineffectual plans to build 2½ million houses, if the banks would finance them, the builders listen to reason, the workers surrender wholely to the employers. the next government be willing. We'll take into consideration that the labor government had no majority. But we'll check up on their sincerity by looking at similar instances where they had power. A little case, but indicative is this: The workers took over four houses which had been empty nine years, offered to repair them gratis and pay rent for them. Henderson's police put them out without a warrant. One was a group of man, wife and three children living in a twelve foot room, with ceiling cracked and walls full of holes. Protests availed nothing, Poplarism, Glasgow evictions, (in two months labor evicted more workers than the tories did in a year; the government refused to support Wheatley's claims and tried to keep the law the same) etc. show the same insincerity and bungling, even discounting the lack of a majority.

UNEMPLOYMENT, according to Baldwin, was endemic. It had broken the backs of previous governments. It increased under MacDonald's rule. Far more than a million out of work, and about 100,000 on government relief work, at starvation wages. "Radical" Wheatley reducing the dole at Sheffield, against the wishes of the capitalist members of the board of guardians. The same Wheatly telling unemployed to go to the work-house. Pledges on degrading domestic work cracked wide open. Snowden telling the country he didn't mean to keep his election pledges on unemployment, with an increase of 100,000 unemployed from July to August. Shaw telling labor to "wait and see" if he had any plan. And they waited, and saw not. His remedy was the "restoration of our foreign trade," for which the unemployed were duly thankful. Baldwin had said, "If you have a particular remedy, you will have the support of the house and the country," but they didn't even dare him, simply proposing what he had failed in trade revival.

THE unemployed workers' charter wasn't even looked at by MacDonald, and their demands of suitable housing, reduced hours of work, government relief, occupational training centers, weren't even advocated for their propaganda value in a future election. Why? Let MacDonal exposes himself: "Society is always badly treated . . . when these grievances (unemployment) are taken up by political parties whose sole interest is to clap a salve and a poultice on them, and like a quack doctor, pocket a fee and quiet the patient with an expectation." (1920). The labor party rank and file meant sincerely what they pledged, but MacDonald and his crew of professional politicians, imperialistic pacifists, and opponents of socialism and strikes betrayed the workers. Court peacockism, laudation and defense of colonial brutality and exploitation, and placating of big business corrupted labor's present leaders. If the labor party is not to degenerate as did the German social-democrats, it must find a new leadership. Let Stressemann tell what the German MacDonalds did: "The chief successes of the social-democratic participation in my cabinet were that . . . . it was possible for me . . . to inflict a military defeat on the Communists in Saxony and Thuringia, and this defeat, in its turn, has cleared the way for the abolition, without any resistance, of the 8-hour day and the so-called 'conquests of the revolution'." Regarding the same clique, MacDonald said in 1919 of Lenin's condemnation of them, "Condemnation which was fully deserved and to which I fully subscribe." And then he tried to sell out the British workers to financial imperialism in the same way.

WHAT MacDonald should have done was to present labor's demands to parliament, gone outside parliament to the unions and mobilized them, brought their pressure to bear on parliament as did the young bourgeoisie in 1832, dissolved parliament if defeated and appealed to the workers again, this time with a program that would bring them enthutiastically together under labor's banner. They might not have won this year, but they would have avoided betrayal, and won in another couple of years with a real majority. Then the housing, unemployment, nationalisation, colonial, disarmament program could have been put thru. Russia did exactly that, and has held the key positions for the workers.

MACDONALDISM still runs its course. When his crowd on the front benches of labor hypocritically question the tory government on Egypt, the Zinoviev forgery, Singapore, India, etc., the tories simply point to the labor government's record as a precedent and that ends the discussion. However, there are signs of an awakening. The labor party executive committee has seen the writing on the wall, and reversed the decision forced on the last labor party conference by MacDonald and his crew during the excitement of new elections to parliament. The vote at the conference of 1,800,000 to 1,500,000 to expel Communists is now changed to a decision to refer the matter to the next conference.

Meanwhile the local labor parties have disregarded the last conference decisions and put up Communists as candidates for parliament. Expulsion has failed, and the C. P., among others, is now demanding an all-in-all-conference of all labor and socialist and Communist organizations to make the labor movement a class movement of labor, and not of petit bourgéois careerism and liberalism.

MEANWHILE the Communist Party moves ahead. The Workers Weekly sells nearly 50,000 copies weekly; a national minority movement is being started, and shows signs of great support; the united front campaign in the unions and labor parties progresses rapidly; and with an intensive campaign on for the shop nucleus reorganization, the C. P. is becoming the kind of section of the International Communist Party that is needed in Britain.

CRISIS FOLLOWS DEATH OF EBERT IN GERMAN REICH

Spokesmen of Capitalism Show Their Regrets

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

BERLIN, March 1—Frederick Ebert president of the imperial German socialist republic, died Saturday morning after a short illness following an operation to remove his appendix.

Ebert's death may be followed by a political crisis as the nation is already torn with class struggles and reeking with graft scandals is which Ebert himself was alleged to have been involved.

Baldwin Sends Regrets.

The tory government of Britain has sent its official regrets and Coolidge president of the capitalist republic of United States, cabled his regrets, as did Secretary of State Hughes, who said in part:

"I have the most agreeable memory of President Ebert, having been received by him while I was in Berlin, where I formed a high opinion of his great ability and the part he played in the development of German democracy since the war."

Among other condolences arriving from capitalist governments was one from Mussolini of fascist Italy, and accompanying it was a message in the name of the pope from the papal secretary of state. So far as known, the Soviet government has omitted both flowers and regrets.

Regrets Are Real.

That these regrets for the passing of the well-known social-democrat are real and have a profound foundation in the conduct of Ebert and the whole social democracy during and since the war, is seen in the fear of international capital that Ebert's death may precipitate an election in which the rising Communist vote may disturb the right wing majority in the Reichstag and interfere with the workings of the Dawes' plan, which Ebert's regime had imposed upon the German workers.

While Ebert's son and social-democratic cronies are striving to picture Ebert as having been "hounded to death" by his political enemies, these point out that the alleged worry he was supposed to have suffered has

War Head Says He Censors and Alters Reports of Officers

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 1.—Secretary of War Weeks admitted on the stand before the aircraft congressional investigating committee, that he censored reports of army officers before allowing them to be printed. "I wanted to be sure nothing was printed that would cause disturbance," Weeks said. Weeks also admitted that reports of officers were frequently held up a year before being made public.

RUSSIAN COMMUNIST NEWSPAPER GREETS THE DAILY WORKER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KIEV, Russia, March 1.—The DAILY WORKER has received the 'ollowing letter from the "Proletarskaya Pravda," the Russian Communist newspaper published in Kiev, Ukraine. The letter congraulates the DAILY WORKER on the irst anniversary of its initial publiation. It says:—

"Dear Comrades,

I am glad to thank you for the DAILY WORKER, which we began receive some days ago, and conratulate you on the first anniversry of your paper. May it live and ecome the paper of all the workrs of America.

Will you be so good as to send "The Workers Monthly"—all ues of 1924 and the recent issues.

As to our paper, "The Proletarsa- Pravda" we are now sending it your office. Best greetings.

Recognize Russia!

STATEMENT on the recognition of Soviet Russia by the Central Executive Council of the Workers (Communist) Party.

The resignation of Secretary of State Hughes has been followed by an official announcement that the Coolidge administration will open negotiations with Soviet Russia to determine the conditions on which a trade agreement and treaty will be made.

The United States is the only government of importance that has not yet recognized the government of the Russian workers and peasants. The United States is the wealthiest and most powerful nation in the world and impending recognition of Soviet Russia by its strongest and most bitter antagonist has the greatest significance for the American working class and the international revolutionary movement.

Hughes Suffers Defeat.

1. What are the reasons for this change of front by American imperialism?

2. What must the attitude of the American working class be towards the negotiations?

1a. Hughes, who carried over the Wilson policy and rabid hatred of the workers and peasants' government into the Harding-Coolidge administrations, has suffered a political defeat at the hands of Senator Borah. Borah is the progressive figleaf of the Coolidge administration and his middle-class following demands and forces recognition for itself. The Coolidge forces cannot afford to alienate this group which Borah leads.

1b. Russian trade has shown the falsity of the Hughes contention that it is of no consequence in the world markets. The utterly reactionary southern cotton plantation owners are now competitors for the Russian markets. They alone are a powerful economic group and their need for markets is great, due to the dislocation of the American textile industry because of increasing Chinese and Indian competition.

Success for Soviet Diplomacy.

1c. The success of Soviet diplomacy in China and the Far East, the acquisition of the Chinese railway by the Soviet government, the powerful and increasing influence of Soviet Russia among the peoples of the orient.

1d. The Russo-Japanese treaty and the rights to the development of the oil, coal and iron on the lower half of Saghalien Island given Japan.

1e. The change in the policy of the Standard Oil interests from that of encouragement of counter-revolution to a policy of trade with Soviet Russia—a change forced by the successful military resistance of the Soviet Union, by the increasing rivalry between American and British oil interests and the necessity for buying additional oil reserves from the rich stores of the Baku region.

1f. The entry of the American capitalists into European affairs on a scale hitherto unknown—the Dawes plan, the huge loans to France, financial and economic penetration of the vassal states, etc.

1g. The absolute impasse reached in the question of allied debts to America—a question to which no answer can be framed until formal relations are established with Soviet Russia.

2a. The Coolidge government will try to assume an aggressive role in the coming negotiations. It will lay down as conditions that the czarist debts to America must be paid, it will try to insist on change in the Soviet government, it will demand that Communist propaganda be prohibited.

It will try to save its face before the masses of the American workers to whom it has said a thousand times that it would recognize no government that warred on capitalism.

Resurrect Lie of Counter-Revolutionists.

All the hoary lies of the counter-revolutionary blackguards will be resurrected, dusted off and used. It is not improbable that a new attack on the Workers (Communist) Party of America will be launched. Already the American capitalist press is trying to discredit Zinoviev and drive a wedge into the sections of the Communist International. American capitalism will try to deprive the Soviet government of all popular support in the United States while the negotiations are in progress.

The Workers (Communist) Party of America calls upon the workers of the United States to demand unconditional recognition of the workers' and peasants' government of Russia.

It calls upon the workers to hold mass meetings, demonstrations, and send strong messages to the president, congressmen and senators demand unconditional recognition for the first workers' and farmers' government in the world.

It calls upon the American workers to show by their words and actions that they see in Soviet Russia the great friend of the toiling millions in industry and agriculture, that no matter what the capitalist rulers of America may do, the American workers recognize Soviet Russia as the leader of the workers' struggle, the first fortress of the world revolution, a power for the working class and against their oppressors in every land.

Workers (Communist) Party of America,
Central Executive Committee,
William Z. Foster, Chairman.
C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary.

WORKERS IN CALIFORNIA FIGHT THE CRIMINAL SYNDICALIST LAWS; CHEER FOR CLASS WAR VICTIMS

By S. GLOBERMAN

LOS ANGELES, March 1.—A successful protest meeting against criminal syndicalist laws was held at the Music Art Hall under the auspices of the Labor Defense Council.

The crowd enthusiastically demonstrated its opposition to those tyrant laws and cheered lustily for Ruthenberg, Foster and all others who are victimized by the ruling class for their devotion to the working class.

Gorman Is Chairman.

"The cause for Communism cannot be crushed," said the chairman of the meeting, Comrade Dave Gorman. "We are abolitionists and you know now what Garrison, John Brown and many others received from the ruling class.

"We are expounding principles which are more painful to the idlers to the parasites, than the abolitionists of the past, inasmuch as they fought for reforms, changing from chattle slavery to wage slavery, while we are aiming to abolish all forms of slavery."

Bush Denounces C. S. Law

Comrade Bush, in his speech on what criminal syndicalism laws mean to the workers of this country, pointed out the reason why it is that the Workers (Communist) Party is now bearing the brunt of persecution.

He showed that it is the duty of the workers to support and defend the Communists for in defending the

"THEY MUST NOT DIE!" CRY HEARD IN MANY LANDS

Many Sacco - Vanzetti Meetings in U. S. A.

The protest of the workers against the continued imprisonment of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, now facing death in Massachusetts in labor's cause, rang thru the world yesterday.

Led by the Third (Communist) International the workers voiced their protest against the frame-up of the two trade union organizers.

At meetings conducted by the Communists in all the principal countries of the world, the working class speakers declared that "Sacco and Vanzetti Must Not Die," and rallied the workers to fight against the onslaught of the capitalist courts against the organized workers.

Big Meeting in Chicago

The Sacco and Vanzetti meeting in Emmet Memorial Hall, Chicago cheered William F. Dunne, editor of the DAILY WORKER, Jack Johnstone, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, and speakers representing the Industrial Workers of the World and other labor organizations.

Mass Meetings were held in New York, Pittsburgh, Boston, where Benjamin Gitlow was the principal speaker, Cleveland, Ohio, where Robert Minor, Communist speaker, writer and cartoonist spoke, Warren, Ohio, Hartford, Waterbury and New Haven, Conn., Detroit, Mich., and many other cities.

Huge demonstrations were scheduled to take place in Paris, Rome, Berlin, London, and the principal industrial centers and cities of Europe, as well as thruout Soviet Russia.

Prisoners of the Class War

"Sacco and Vanzetti are in jail because there is a class struggle," Dunne told the several hundred enthusiastic workers who crowded the hall. "They symbolise the fate that the capitalist class would visit on every fighting worker."

"America is the land of the free and the home of the brave," said Ralph Chaplin sarcastically, "If you don't believe it, read the capitalist press. We can't blame our bourgeois friends who are not working for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti. They think

Traction Lines Run Down Under Bankers Control

The annual report of the Chicago surface lines, just made public, discloses that under the mis-management of Samuel Insull and the bankers controlling the lines, net receipts were $1,308,700 less during the year ending Jan. 31, 1925, than the preceding year.

The report declared that 5,300,000 fewer pasengers were carried in 1924 than in 1923.

Vienna Bakers to Strike.

VIENNA, March 1.—The bakers of this city threaten a general strike if their demand for a ten per cent increase in wages is not granted.

COMMISSION WOULD PROBE STANDARD OIL BUT NOT PRICE RISE

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 1.—The federal trade commission has recommended that the department of justice investigate the results of the Standard Oil dissolution decree, declaring that concerns connected with the Standard Oil are still operating as a monopoly. The commission, however, did not object to the recent rise in the price of crude oil, kerosene and gasoline which the Standard Oil company was able to insitute because of its monopoly.

The report stated that "some members of the Standard Oil group are fortifying themselves by acquiring control of independent companies and entering new branches of the industry."

The Standard Oil company a few weeks ago declared a general raise in the price of crude oil and oil products.

INSURANCE COMPANY WENT BROKE BACKING BOSSES IN STRIKES

NEW YORK, March 1.—The Employers' Mutual Insurance and Service company, bankrupt and in receivership after claims of $6,000,000 filed in one year by corporation policy holders it was insuring against strike lossees is now trying to recover unpaid assessments which the insured companies refused to pay. There are a dozen big publishing plants among the dead beats.

Mine Barons Open Big Offensive On Union Coal Miners

The entering wedge of the most gigantic open shop offensive ever waged against the organized workers in this country was inserted into the western Pennsylvania and Ohio, sectors of the United Mine Workers of America, when the operators of those two sections of the group of soft coal states known as the central competitive field arranged for a meeting to be held in Cleveland, Friday, at which war plans will be made looking towards the smashing of the miners' union and eventually placing the entire coal mining industry on a strictly non-union basis.

Keyed to a high pitch of optimism over the rapid advance of the open shop movement in the coal industry, within the past two years, the operators of western Pennsylvania feel that this is the opportune time to smash the union that has stood between the coal barons greed and industrial feudalism for the diggers.

The operators in Illinois and Indiana, where the union has not yet reached the level at which the coal barons wish it to be before opening the attack, have not joined openly in the offensive.

They have not accepted the invitation to attend the Cleveland conference, tho they admitted that the movement had a deep interest for them. It is understood that they are heavy contributors to the financial pool which is backing the conspiracy.

The Plan of Attack.

The Ohio and western Pennsylvania operators are expected to declare a suspension of coal mining immediately after the Cleveland meeting, unless a more cautious policy prevails. Should the original intention be adopted, the mines would be opened after April 1, on a strictly non-union basis. The miners will be offered the 1917 wage scale which means a 25 per cent cut.

The initiators of the open shop drive were among the first to sign the Jacksonville agreement which was hailed by John L. Lewis as one of the greatest victories in the history of the miners' union. The operators signed with their tongues in their cheeks and were awaiting an opportunity to break the agreement. Their excuse now is, that non-union coal is driving the union operators out of the market, and unless the union agrees to a wage scale that will enable them to compete with the non-union operators, they will be obliged in the interests of self-preservation to break with the union.

Owned By Same Interests.

It happens that the non-union mines are owned by the same interests that own the union mines. Very cleverly, the coal operators exploited the Kentucky and West Virginia bituminous fields until the production was sufficiently heavy to supply the market in the event of a strike for a period long enough to insure victory for the coal barons. A progressive labor leadership would have thwarted this danger by throwing the entire weight of the organization into the unionization of the scab pits. But this was the last thing that occurred to Lewis who had his hands full expelling honest and courageous leaders like Howat, McLachlan and MacDonald from office and from the United Mine Workers

IRON WORKERS' LEADER SPEAKS TO LABOR BODY

McNamara Indicted on Trumped Up Charge

J. J. McNamara, former secretary of the International Union of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers was cordially received by the delegates to the Chicago Federation of Labor yesterday, when he was given the floor to explain the campaign now being carried on against him and the structural iron workers in Indianapolis, by the state and the employers' associations.

McNamara is now business agent of the Indianapolis local of the iron workers' union and is under indictment on a charge of blackmail. The only truth in the indictment McNamara explained, was that he approached employers with the request that members of his organization be employed on classification of work to which the organization was entitled.

First of its Kind.

The employers boast that this is the first time such an indictment has ever been voted in the United States and if they are successful in convicting McNamara, it will give the bosses another legal weapon with which to fight the workers. The Chicago local of the iron workers voted to support McNamara in his fight and pledged financial assistance. The local sent a letter to the Chicago Federation of

British Business Men Show Eagerness to Do Business with Russia

MOSCOW, March 1.— As reported from London, the British government has been approached by a group of industrialists belonging to the conservative party and interested in doing business with the Soviet Union, with a request that the report of the British representative at Moscow on the social and economic conditions in the U. S. S. R. be published by the government, and also that the latter send a commission to Russia for an "impartial study of the situation."

STRIKING WHITE WINGS ARE SENT BACK TO WORK

Get Small Raise As Snow Brings Crisis

Michael Carrozzo, head of the Street Cleaners' Union, agreed with Commissioner of Public Works A. A. Sprague to send the 2,500 striking street repair men, street cleaners and garbage collectors back to work this morning after reaching a compromise agreement. The pay of some of the foremen, including the dump foremen, has not yet been determined, but the street cleaners, and laborers are to receive an increase in wages of fifteen cents a day. They originally asked a raise of 50 cents a day.

The street cleaners who wear uniforms are to be paid $5.25 a day under the new agreement, instead of $5.10 a day. Street cleaners not wearing uniforms will be paid $5.15, also a raise of 15 cents. The foremen benefit most by the new agreement. Repair foremen will be paid $7.85, an increase of 60 cents per day. Section foremen will get $6.40 per day, or a 15 cent raise.

The strikers will be called together at a general meeting to act on the agreement. It is thought they will agree to go back to work under the compromise.

The snow which covered the city added to the paralysis of the street cleaning forces, and had the men remained out on strike for several days more, they would have been able to make better terms with the city some of them said.

The city employes went on strike Feb. 17, and had been in strike for two weeks. Commissioner Sprague promised to "recommend to the finance committee that the raises be paid," but it is understood, according to Carrozzo, that the finance committee will agree to Sprague's recommendation, as Sprague was in conference with the committee before making a settlement.

COOLIDGE SIGNS AMENDED POSTAL PAY RAISE BILL

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 1.—President Coolidge signed the postal bill granting an increase in pay to the government postal employes. The salary increase is retroactive until Jan. 1, 1925, instead of until July 1, 1925, as was provided in the original bill. The postal workers were deprived of this back pay at the insistence of Coolidge.

The postal bill signed by Coolidge forces the workers to pay the salary raise, postal rates have been increased so that postal cards will cost two cents apiece. Parcel post and other mail rates have also been increased.

Capmakers in Los Angeles Endorse the Labor Defense

LOS ANGELES, Calif., March 1.—The Millinery Workers' Union, No. 48, and the Capmakers Union No. 26 have passed the labor defense resolution.

DAILY WORKER BUILDERS WIN FIRST PRIZE!

The DAILY WORKER builders are always on the job. They even went to the Red Revel Saturday and started "boring from within" among the merry-makers.

And the result was that they succeeded in running away with the first prize of $50.00, offered for the best group in masquerade. The amount was given to the DAILY WORKER to help drive home the "last spike" in the 1925 insurance campaign.

The builders pageant had been arranged by the North Side English branch of the Workers Party. It centered around a revolutionary figure, a beautiful girl in red carrying a flaming torch, symbolical of the DAILY WORKER. Following her came the militant workers, miners, machinists, carpenters, textile workers,—each with the tool of his trade.

"The International" was played by the orchestra for the grand march, with all the marchers singing. The DAILY WORKER builders army was in advance, led by Josephine Herd representing the revolution.

The second prize of $25.00 was awarded the Greek dancing trio, Emma Bleckschmidt, Elsie Newman and Hilda Reid, who presented two classical dances, exquisitely done.

Natalie Gomez as a Spanish dancer won the third prize of $10. Both of the latter prizes were donated to the Workers Party. Book prizes were awarded several others.

AS WE SEE IT

The militarists no longer take the trouble to cloak their intentions. What the pacifists, those of them who are sincere, overlook is the fact that peace is impossible under capitalism. The conflicting interests of the capitalist states produce war just as sure as itch accompanies small pox.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE is in a quandary over what he should do with the bill for an increase in congressional salaries to $10,000 a year, which awaits his signature. The congressmen generously passed this bill tho they opposed one granting a paltry increase to the postal clerks. "Silent Cal" is looking for a compromise which will satisfy the solons and also soothe the feelings of the thrifty rural voters. It is quite possible "Cal" may refuse to sign the bill on the ground that such action would be a gross waste of lead pencil.

CAPITALISM and morondom breathe easier. King George, Mussolini of Italy, and Gloria Swanson, of the screen, are recovering. But on the other hand there is a revolt in Kurdistan, financed by the British, and the Turks who are at the receiving end of this unpleasantness are asking France to rattle its saber at the lion. Anything is liable to happen at any time in any place where oil squirts.

A. A. PURCELL, president of the International Federation of Trade Unions and also head of the British Council of Trade Unions is touring England lecturing on what he saw in Russia. Among the ideas Purcell is driving home is loyalty on the part of the workers to their own class. The workers should have no other patroitism except class patriotism says Purcell. This is not sweet music to the ears of Ramsay MacDonald and his fellow socialist traitors. Rather strange that socialists should be the strongest bulwarks of capitalism in Europe and all countries. Yet such is the case. The European socialists are the most valiant defenders of the Dawes plan.

of America. In fact most of the militant miners are convinced that Lewis and the coal operators are working hand in hand. Whether there is an agreement between them or not, it is certain that the Lewis policies have played into their hands and as a result of those policies the very life of the miners' union is imperilled.

To Seek Conference.

The first move of the operators will be to seek an audience with the officials of the miners' union looking towards a modification of the Jacksonville pact. They know that only a special convention of the union has power to consider such a proposal and they also know that Lewis fears to call a convention. At the last convention, Lewis rode the storm of opposition against his autocratic and reactionary rule by representing himself as the best manger the miners ever had and pointed to the good relations existing between the operators and the officials who were not tainted with Communism. That gag no longer works.

Bosses Preparing.

While Lewis was expelling radicals from the union, and thus robbing the organization of its brain and backbone, the enemy was carefully preparing the ground for the grand offensive. The zero hour has struck and the first guns in the most titanic open shop struggle ever waged in this country will be fired in Cleveland next Friday.

The news of this offensive is being carefully suppressed by the capitalist press. Tho the information was carried by every news service in the United States and came into the editorial rooms of the capitalist dailies over the wires, not a word was published outside of the coal journals which are read only by the "trade." This is the most important piece of news that broke in this country for many years. It is one more proof that when it comes to big issues of vital importance to a powerful section of the capitalist class, the boss press is silent.

AIRCRAFT PROBE INDICATES THAT SOMEBODY LIED

When Is a Muzzle Not a Muzzle?

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 1.—The little storm in a teacup going on between Secretary of War Weeks and General Mitchell of the aviation service as to the alleged sabotaging of the air service as charged by Mitchell against the high officials of the army and navy, brought out some statements contradicting Mitchell, at Weeks' testimony yesterday before the committee of investigation. But Weeks also admitted by contradicting himself that Mitchell was "muzzled."

"I don't want you to think that the military airplane situation is as deplorable as it has been said to be before this committee," said Weeks, adding that the air service has 1,592 planes.

Who's A Liar?

"How many are first class planes?" asked Committeeman Prall.

"Two hundred and five bombardment, pursuit and attacking planes," declared Weeks. Mitchell had previously told the committee that the air service had only 19 fighting planes.

Weeks declared that no army officer is "muzzled." He said, "After the first bambing tests, Mitchell made a good many statements which the navy department resented. The secretary of the navy repeatedly called on me and said many of Mitchell's statements were untrue. To avoid disturbance, I directed Mitchell to submit to the department all his articles. He did this for two years. Last fall, however, he wrote two articles for magazines. These reflected upon the navy."

Mr. Weeks Gives A Definition

"Mitchell went to the president and asked if he could print the articles. The president said he would have no objection if he submitted them to his superior officers for approval. Mitchell then went ahead and printed the articles without submitting them, not only violating my instructions but those of the president as well."

"Did you say there was no muzzling in the army?" asked Congressman O'Sullivan. "Yes," replied Weks.

"Didn't your orders constitute muzzling," pressed the committeeman. "Not at all," replied Weeks.

never been hitherto connected with appendicitis by medical experts.

Connected With Barmat Scandal.

Part of these worries have come thru Ebert's connection with the notorious Barmat scandal, somewhat rivalling the famous Teapot Dome case with which the name of Harding was joined just after his death. Barmat had intimate relations with Ebert, was a visitor to Ebert's home and had made magnificent gifts to the wife of the social democratic president of the nation. This was admitted by Ebert himself.

Much has been done by the capitalist press of foreign lands to conceal this scandal against the integrity of the leaders of the German republic, as it was feared that the odium might also attach itself to the Dawes' plan of reparations, with which Ebert and the social democracy are so closely involved.

Perhaps the most astonishing thing of Ebert's recent past from the viewpoint of the working class, is his libel suit against a nationalist newspaper for having accused Ebert of treason by aiding strikes of workmen during the war.

The most prominent figures of German political life were put on the witness stand by Ebert, who, moreover, appeared in person to prove beyond all question that Ebert loyally supported the kaiser during the war and opposed every strike. The only question raised by the newspaper in defense, which was that Ebert and other leaders of the socialists had actually participated in committees of striking workmen during the war was completely shattered by Ebert and his witnesses.

One after another they proved by document and deed, that the social democratic party of Germany had entered such strike committees during the war solely for the purpose of betraying the strikers, breaking up the strike movement, limiting its demands and duration and working for the benefit of the "fatherland" and not for the benefit of the strikers.

FRAZIER ALSO CRAWLS ON HIS BELLY BEFORE WALL ST. RULE

WASHINGTON, March 1.—"I've always been and am now a republican," Senator Frazier, one of the LaFollette insurgents, declared in the senate today, when he was attacked for betraying his party. Senator Norbeck, of South Dakota, raised the question during a discussion on farm relief legislation.

"That's cheering news," Norbeck retorted, "I remember that when the senator was governor of North Dakota he came down into my state and campaigned for the farmer-labor ticket."

Frazier countered by declaring that his father and three brothers were republicans,

"They Must Not Die!" Cry Is Heard in Many Lands At Big Meetings

that Sacco and Vanzetti are only a couple of 'wop murderers.' But we know that Sacco and Vanzetti are victims of the class war.

"There will be hundreds of such victims in the jails of the country unless we make it our business to serve and protect these two working class fighters who are about to become martyrs to the cause of the working class."

Louis Antolini spoke in Italian. Resolutions were adopted as follows:

Demand Release of Prisoner's

WHEREAS, the refusal of Judge Webster Thayer to grant a new trial to Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti is equivalent to a death sentence to these two workers and

WHEREAS, the case of Sacco and Vanzetti has attracted universal attention and sympathy on the part of the organized labor movement which has recognized it as one of the most dastardly frame-ups against workers in this country, all evidence pointing to their innocence of the murder falsely charged against them, and which puts them in the same category as the infamous frame-ups against Tom Mooney and Warren Billings, now incarcerated in Folsom prison and other victims of capitalist government, and

WHEREAS, unless the working class compels the release of these two innocent men, they will either die or will rot in jail for years, be it therefore

RESOLVED, that this mass meeting assembled in Chicago demands a new trial for Sacco and Venzetti and condemns the efforts of the capitalists and their governmental lackeys to railroad these two workers to the electric chair, and be it further

RESOLVED, that it calls upon the workers, organized and unorganized, thruout the world, to protest and demonstrate for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti and for all other class war prisoners, and to send a copy of this resolution to the president of the United States, Judge Thayer, the DAILY WORKER and other labor papers.

Pamphlets written in English, Jewish and Italian dealing with the Sacco-Vanzetti case were sold.

Washington Streetcar Workers Demand More Pay, May Face Strike

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Employes of the Capital Traction Co. in the District of Columbia, to the number of about 1,000 have served notice of a demand for an increase in wages of 12 cents an hour from March 30. The present wage is 58 cents, reached at the end of the first year of service. For the first three months it is 52 cents and the next nine months 56 cents an hour.

Under the existing agreement with the union, the men or the company may at any year apply for a reopening of the wage agreement, by giving notice before March 30. If the dispute over a change is not adjusted by conference committees it is sent to a board of arbitration.

The other street railway system in the capital is the Washington Railway & Electric Co., which fought a long and costly battle with the union ten years ago, and has had no agreement with the union since that time. It pays the same scale as does the organized road.

Inasmuch as a merger of the two systems is likely to be completed within the coming year, the present demand is resisted by the influence of both corporations and their spokesmen in the local business community.

Cal's Commissioner Denounces Cal's Bureau Chief's Bill

WASHINGTON, March 1. — The Dickinson co-operative marketing bill was denounced today before the senate agricultural committee as a "camouflage" by Robert D. Carey, chairman of the president's agriculture commission.

Carey charged the bill, already passed by the house would drown the farmers under a flood of advice without giving them material help. He said it was written by Henry C. Taylor, chief of the bureau agriculture economics, and would make his bureau "dictator" to the farmers.

"It provides for two junkets annually to Washington for fifty members of an advisory council," Carey added. "They would get $25 a day for this trip.

Plan Paris Commune Celebration March 21 in Philadelphia, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Mar. 1.—The city central committee of the Workers Party is planning to hold a celebration of the Paris Commune and the establishment of the Hungarian Soviet Republic for Saturday evening, March 21, at the Eagle's Temple, corner Broad and Spring Garden Sts. A musical program is being arranged and prominent speakers are being secured to address this meeting.

Rouse Working Class Against the Threat of Era of Greater Trusts

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, the Literary Digest, weekly organ of the comfortable middle class, claims to be highly excited because it has made the startling discovery that "The Trusts Have Returned." But it also expatiates at great length on "The Return of the 'Trust-Buster'," assuring its readers, in essence, that all's well with this capitalist world.

• • • •

The gist of the impression that the Literary Digest seems to want to convey to its readers is contained in the cartoon reproduced from the Washington, D. C., Daily News, showing a bunch of dinosaur-looking animals, labelled "Monopoly" and "Trust," occupying the front yard of an hysterical individual with the initials "C. P.," standing for "Common People" branded on the seat of his pants. "C. P." exclaims, "Good Night! We thought those things were killed off long ago!"

In this one picture the Literary Digest seeks to convey to its millions of readers, including a couple of hundred thousand small bankers, that trust-busting was a highly successful endeavor in the past, that the watch dogs are on the job at Washington, and if anything is wrong now, that it will be carefully and quickly attended to, insinuating that that has been the case in the past.

There is, of course, nothing to show that trustification has been halted in any great basic industry, or anywhere else for that matter. No effort is made to prove that any trust-busting effort on the part of the government has succeeded in its purpose, according to the hopes of LaFollette and his "Back to 1776" program.

If the readers of the Literary Digest displayed any initiative of their own, in doing their thinking, which they never will, they would behold several startling revelations in the mass of material that is presented to them.

FIRST.—Congress proposes to the Federal Trade Commission that it investigate the General Electric Company (the super-power trust), and the American ToBacco Company.

SECOND.—One of the subsidiaries of the General Electric Company is the Electric Bond and Share Company, that "practically controls the public utility business of the country." But the stock of this great trust is carefully distributed, to the largest number of individuals, so that any attack upon it, becomes an attack on large numbers of nervous, timid, coupon-clipping bondholders of the middle class.

THIRD.—The trusts have a powerful spokesmen in Coolidge's cabinet in the person of the multi-millionaire, Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, himself the largest stockholder in the Aluminum Company of America, the Aluminum trust, that sneaks into every American kitchen and takes its excessive toll of profits on every aluminum kitchen utensil in use.

Harlan F. Stone, the late attorney general, was supposed to have discovered some of the crimes of Mellon's aluminum trust, but he has since been elevated to the United States supreme court, and the sugar trust lackey, Warren, of Michigan, is slated to take his place.

Thus the great trusts bulwark their fortress against any and all attacks. The middle class is held quiescent thru the fact that millions of its members hold a share or two of stock in these great corporations. That is part of the meaning of the effort to sell stock even to the working class, an effort that has been successful to some extent due to the collaboration of the labor aristocracy with the capitalist class.

And in the powerful seats of its own capitalist government it has its own carefully handpicked spokesmen.

When the workers and poor farmers fully awaken to this situation they will speed the development of their own class power as against the organized strength of the whole bourgeoisie.

The trust problem will never be solved under capitalism. The growing threat of monopoly is increasingly aggravated until capitalism goes. Then the great trusts will fall into the hands of the new ruling class—the toiling masses—that will retain the highly organized efficiency of the trusts, at the same time depriving them of their power to plunder mankind.

• • • •

Soviet Russia today is being electrified for the sole purpose of bringing this great benefit to the workers and peasants.

The United States is being electrified in order to bring profits into the cash boxes of the General Electric Company.

Labor's task is to end the profit nightmare of capitalism that produces the General Electric Company and inaugurate the Communist society where one class will cease to prey upon another; where classes altogether disappear with the abolition of class rule and its accompanying oppression.

Child Labor Bill Loses in House of Minnesota, 68 to 56

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 1.—The Minnesota house of representatives has rejected the child labor amendment to the federal constitution by a vote of 68 to 65. The amendment will come before the senate.

There is a possibility that the house will reconsider the amendment which would give congress power to regulate or prohibit the labor of children in industry who are under 18 years of age.

Investigate Federal Judge to See If He Is "Fit" for Office

WASHINGTON, March 1.—An investigation into the fitness and official acts of Federal Judge George W. English, sitting at East St. Louis, Ill., was authorized by the house today and a committee appointed to conduct it.

The investigation was ordered after Representative Blanton, democrat of Texas, withdrew his objection, which had hitherto held up the probe.

Give your shopmate this copy of the DAILY WORKER—but be sure to see him the next day to get his subscription.

Would Slash Garment Wages.

ST. LOUIS.—That clothing for the next fall season will be 10 per cent higher in price was forecast at the annual convention, Missouri retail clothiers' association, meeting in St. Louis. One of the excuses advanced was the "high wages in the garment trades controlled by union scales." One speechmaker thinks "there should be an adjustment in wages of clothing workers and other highly paid crafts, to conform to living costs."

Coal Trust Murders Miners.

HAZELTON, Pa., March 1.—Two miners were killed in two different mine accidents here. John Hopeck was killed by a premature blast of dynamite in a mine owned by the Haddock Coal company.

Anthony Swankola was killed by a fall of coal in the Treskow colliery of the Lehigh and Wilkes Barre coal company. The latter accident was caused by improper safety precautions, miners said.

Those Foreigners Are Dangerous.

KIMBALLTON, Ia., March 1.—Because Marie Midtgaard, Danish born, was a foreigner and had a limited command of the English language, the school board members attempted to oust her from the position of physical training teacher in the public schools. After a long legal battle, Miss Midtgaard won the fight.

PROFESSOR HAS HIGH REGARD FOR MOLDAVIA SOVIET

Says the Young Republic Cannot Fail

MOSCOW. — Professor Young, an expert adviser of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia, while in Odessa, told of his impressions of the newly-formed Soviet Socialist Republic of Moldavia which he had just visited.

"This young republic"—he said—"is still under way of organization, but I was satisfied that those at the head of it are men of experience. They, and, more particularly, the president of the government, are popular among the people there, and the general impression is one that the new republic has all the elements of vitality.

"The creation of the Moldavian republic and the impetus it is bound to giv to Moldavian culture and language cannot fail to strongly impress all the Moldavian nationals in Bessarabia. However,"—emphasised Mr. Young—"my personal close acquaintance with the local conditions has fully convinced me that the formation of the autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic of Moldavia is no political maneuver on the part of Moscow in the Bessarabia issue, as is sometimes erroneously urged in Europe, but that that this act was quite a natural consequence of the national policy of the U. S. S. R., one of whose leading slogans is complete national freedom of all the people of the Union."

Prof. Young further dwelt on the big natural resources of Moldavia, which, he said, had a right future as an economic and political national entity.

IRON WORKERS' LEADER SPEAKS TO LABOR BODY

Steel Trusts' Power.

McNamara, who was sentenced to a long term of imprisonment in the state of California in connection with the expulsion in the Los Angeles Times building, was introduced by President Fitzpatrick with a few remarks on the power of the steel trust. This industrial octopus, Fitzpatrick declared, is more powerful than the United States government, forgetting that the U. S. government is but the executive committee of all trusts and the financial power that owns and controls them.

Another incident that caused prolonged discussion was the failure of the committee on transportation to make a report on the traction ordinance. The members of the committee of which Oscar Nelson is chairman, were severely castigated by the delegates, tho Fitzpatrick took occasion to speak in their behalf. It appears that with one exception the members of the committee failed to attend their meetings with the result that no report was made to the federation. The majority of the delegates had points of order to make and question to ask. The final result was that a motion was carried urging the committee to have a report ready at the next meeting. The motion was equal to a vote of censure.

Another motion was passed instructing the C. F. of L. to refer whatever action the federation may take on the traction report of the transportation committee, to the local unions affiliated with the central body.

Isolated Textile Union Local Agrees to Trust Arbitration

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass., Feb. 27.—The Monument Mills at Housatonic, which had been closed for one week following the announcement of a 10 per cent wage cut, opened this morning under conditions that an arbitration board be formed which will decide the question now before the union. The union agreed to submit to the board's decision.

BUILDING TRADES WORKERS STRIKE ON HOTEL SHERMAN JOB

Building trades mechanics and laborer were on strike this morning at the new annex to the Hotel Sherman being constructed in the loop adjoining the hotel.

The strikers charge that George Fuller, the contractor, permitted carpenters to install hollow metal doors and trim in the building. The carpenters have been outside the building trades department of the A. F. of L. following disputes over decisions of the national jurisdictional board.

The board ordered the trim work given to the sheet metal workers and when the contractor disobeyed this ruling the strike was called, it was said.

NEGRO WRITER, BACK FROM SOVIET RUSSIA, SAYS REVOLUTION SOLVES RACE PROBLEMS; PEOPLE HAPPY

Returning after an eight month visit to Soviet Russia, Lovett Forte-Whiteman, well-known Negro writer and lecturer, emphatically refutes the current lies of the capitalist press, which claims that Russia is a land of starvation and unrest. "On the contrary," says Forte-Whiteman, "there is absolutely no such thing. Everywhere, in both the cities and the remotest villages, all are wearing warm, new clothing, are eating substantial food and feel a general contentment with the Soviet regime.

"This is not," says Forte-Whiteman, "the experience of a mere flying visit, but of months of the closest contact with the most obscure peasants and workers in every part of the vast territory, covering one-sixth the land area of the globe, ruled by the workers and peasants themselves through their Soviets or councils."

Shared Lives of All People.

"I had the advantage of extensive travel throughout both European and Asiatic Russia, and shared the life of both the great and the humble, the famed and the unknown, from state receptions where I was greeted with royal welcome as representative of 12,000,000 American Negroes, to the huts of peasants on the edge of th Black Sea, wher the warm hospitality of simple people gave me the best their family life afforded. I have, indeed, spent much time among the peasants on the Polish border, in the Ukrainia and Turkestan, and learned intimately just how the peasants live."

Forte-Whiteman attended many peasant conferences, and flatly denies the capitalist lies about the alleged differences between the comfort of the city and the alleged privation of workers and peasants in the country districts. All effort is being made by the Communists and the Soviets to give the country districts, in addition to the material requirement they already have, the benefit of modern culture never before known to them.

Culture Taken to Peasantry.

"Millions upon millions of books are being carried to the peasantry," he says, "every village has its school, the use of the radio is widespread and is being rapidly pushed, and the peasants generally know and appreciate the vast improvement, of which they could never dream under the czar. This makes overthrowal of the Soviet power utterly impossible."

Revolution Solved Race Problem.

"No country in the world was more burdened with racial problems than was Russia under the czar. In the Crimea it was Tartar against Turk; in the Caucasus it was Georgian against Armenian; in the East a myriad problems, with Moslem against Christian; in Ukrainia, Christians against Jew. All this is gone, the revolution of the workers has blown it away like a dark cloud driven by a clean wind.

"I was always convinced that the racial conflict, particularly the problem of the Negro in America, was solely a product of the capitalist system of exploitation, and that it would vanish with capitalism. My visit to Soviet Russia has proved that my idea is correct. With all its previous race problems no country was more burdened, but—presto! the working class revolution came, and today no country on earth has less race conflict. In fact there is none. The Negro problem of America will persist until it meets the same solution.

Forte-Whiteman expressed deep appreciation of his reception in Russia as a representative of his race, so terribly oppressed in America. During the recent battles between the nationalists and the agents of imperialism in China, he was invited by many military divisions of the Red army to lecture on his interpretation of the events. He spoke before many army schools and famous fighting divisions, being made a member of one, the celebrated third cossack cavalry of Ukrania and presented with a history of the division which played such a noble part in the defeat of Wrangel.

Forte-Whiteman, while in Central Asia, was entertained by the president and cabinet of the Soviet Republic of Bokhara, feted and received in the palace of the overthrown king, or emir, and in Turkestan, was given royal greetings as a representative of the American Negro workers, the Tashkent military school students and faculty officially extending the welcome, before the public building adorned with greetings in English which read, "Long live the American proletariat" and "Long live the social revolution!"

IT'S "LENIN PLACE" NOW IN FRENCH CITY AFTER BITTERLY FOUGHT STRIKE

DOUARNENEZ, France, March 1.—As a result of Communist assistance given to the striking sardine cannery workers, and the Communist mayor's attitude toward the strike, in which he led the picket line and forced landlords to remit rentals, bringing down upon his head the storm of capitalist criticism and Paris authority with warrants for his arrest, the ancient Square of Holy Cross in this city has been renamed the Lenin Place by the newly elected city council.

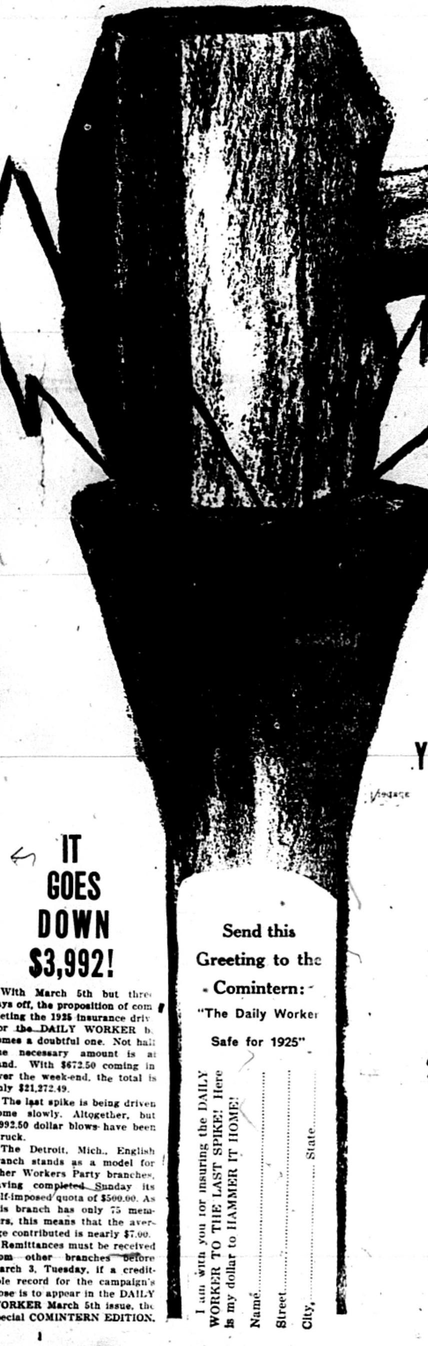
SPIKE LOOSE!

More Blows Needed By MARCH 5



Send this Greeting to the Comintern:

"The Daily Worker Safe for 1925"

I am with you for insuring the DAILY WORKER TO THE LAST SPIKE! Here is my dollar to HAMMER IT HOME!

Name..

Street..

City,.......................... State..........

HAVE YOU SENT YOUR DOLLAR?

REPLY TODAY!

IT GOES DOWN $3,992!

With March 5th but three days off, the proposition of completing the 1925 insurance drive for the DAILY WORKER becomes a doubtful one. Not half the necessary amount is at hand. With $672.50 coming in over the week-end, the total is only $21,272.49.

The last spike is being driven home slowly. Altogether, but 3,992.50 dollar blows have been struck.

The Detroit, Mich., English branch stands as a model for other Workers Party branches, having completed Sunday its self-imposed quota of $500.00. As this branch has only 75 members, this means that the average contributed is nearly $7.00.

Remittances must be received from other branches before March 3, Tuesday, if a creditable record for the campaign's close is to appear in the DAILY WORKER March 5th issue, the special COMINTERN EDITION.

MANY ORGANIZATIONS SEND THEIR DELEGATES TO CHICAGO MEETING FOR LABOR DEFENSE AND RELIEF

More than fifty delegates answered the roll call at the first meeting of the Chicago Conference for Labor Defense and Relief last Thursday. There were trade unions and co-operatives, fraternal and benevolent organizations of many different languages, and various workers' political groups. An executive committee was formed of five of the delegates from each of these major component parts of the conference, making fifteen members in all.

Among the unions represented were the Amalgamated Food Workers, the Wood Turners, Machinists No. 390 and No. 337, Painters No. 275, and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Local 6. Among the fraternal organizations were those of the Slovaks, South Slavs, Czechs, Germans, Jews, Lithuanians, and Russians. Among the political organizations, the Workers Party, Slovak Socialist Federation, and the Irish Workers Republican Club.

S. T. Hammersmark was elected chairman and William F. Kruse, secretary. After the reading of the call and list of accredited delegates, George Maurer, national secretary of the Labor Defense Council, told the story of the Michigan raids, and of the trials that resulted in the conviction and jailing of C. E. Ruthenberg, secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party. He described the legal procedure up to the present point of appeal to the United States supreme court, and dwelt on the political situation in Michigan as it affects immediate trial for Robert Minor and the other co-defendants.

Following his speech the following resolution was adopted:

Resolution on Criminal Syndicalist Cases.

Whereas, the Michigan criminal syndicalist law and others of its type are deliberate attempts on the part of the bosses to suppress the activity of the labor movement, and

Whereas, the use of this law against the Communists on no other charge than the holding of a convention clearly proves the anti-labor intent and purpose of this law,

Whereas, the suppression of any one section of the labor movement, if successful carried out, would endanger the very existence of all other sections, therefore be it

Resolved, that we, the Chicago Defense and Relief Council, in meeting assembled, call upon all organizations thruout the country to rally to the aid of these workers who, because of their working class activity were first singled out for attack, and be it further

Resolved, that we pledge ourselves to raise all possible financial and moral support for these defendants in the Michigan criminal syndicalist cases, and to all others in similar circumstances.

The matter of the Sacco and Vanzetti case was gone into. Maurer gave the history of the case and urged support of the nation-wide protest meetings to be held thruout the country, on a united front basis, on March 1. The Chicago meeting was arranged for Emmet Memorial Hall, with Jack Johnstone of the Trade Union Educational League, and Ralph Chaplin of the I. W. W. At other meetings Joseph Ettor and Arturo Giovanitti were speakers. The delegate from the Amalgamated Clothing Workers stated that his union had responded twice to Sacco-Vanzetti financial appeals and urged more detailed publicity on the progress of such cases. Delegate Arnold of the Painters raised the question of the shortness of the time, but it was explained that since these meetings were nation-wide on a set date this could not be changed. All delegates took advertising matter for the meeting with them.

The following resolution was adopted:

Resolution on Sacco-Vanzetti Case.

Whereas, brothers Sacco and Vanzetti, well known for their activity in the labor movement in Massachusetts, were framed up on charges of murder, on which charges the prosecution is trying to railroad them to their death,

Whereas, labor, thruout the world, has protested against this frame-up and demanded their freedom, and

Whereas, protest mass meetings are being held thruout America on March 1, to demand their release, therefore be it

Resolved, that this conference for Labor Defense and Relief pledge itself to work in every way possible for the release of these working class prisoners, and to support the mass meeting to be held in Chicago at Emmet Memorial Hall on March first.

Irish Famine Action Taken.

Richard Totten, representing the Irish Workers Republican Club, told of famine conditions now threatening the very lives of 750,000 Irish workers and peasants, and of the failure of prominent Irish politicians to adequately aid the starving workers. Secretary Kruse reported on the action taken abroad by various national units of the International Workers Aid, how the Russian, British and other committees were already rushing relief into the famine stricken districts, and of the appeal issued by the American committee, headed by Thos. J. O'Flaherty.

The following resolution was adopted:

Resolution on Irish Famine Relief.

Whereas, in Ireland, a famine in food and fuel, brot on by floods and the ruination of the fishing banks by big British capitalistic syndicates, now threatens the very life of 750,000 of our Irish fellow workers and peasants, and

Whereas, for reasons of political expediency, certain Irish ruling politicians have failed to take any adequate action for relief, leaving this duty entirely to the labor press and the labor movement, therefore be it

Resolved, that the Chicago Defense and Relief Council, respond to the need of the Irish workers and farmers, and pledge its financial and moral support to them in all their struggles.

Plans of Work.

Various ways and means of enlarging the conference were discussed by practically ever delegate present. Secretary Kruse reported on past activity and outlined the program for the big International Unity Demonstration at Ashland Auditorium on Sunday afternoon, March 29. This is to take the form of a gala Labor Show in which all program members will be given by working class organizations and the artist friends. Thus there will be Finnish and Czech gymnasts, Lithuanian Children's Chorus of 300 voices, a Jugo-Slav Tambourita Band, a Dance pageant and many other numbers. An Irish play, "The Tinker's Wedding" will be presented by the Community players. A prominent Lettinsh operatic barytone and an Italian basso, as well as a Russian ballet-master and his pupils have volunteered program numbers. The financial proceeds are to benefit the Irish Famine Relief and the Labor Defense.

It was moved that copies of the resolution and proceedings of the conference be sent to all working class organizations in Chicago. A committee of fifteen was elected to carry on the immediate tasks of the conference and another full meeting is to meet subject to the call of the executive committee.

BLANKET WEAVERS WALK OUT AGAINST SPEED UP AND LOW WAGE SCALE

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., March 1.—Twenty-five weavers of the Norad mills at Brayville walked out on a strike as a protest against the present scale of wages.

The wage of 60 cents a pair for blankets brings their pay to less than that of unskilled labors in the same mill. The weavers are also required to run two looms on blanket work which is another point of bitter discussion amongst them. Practically all weavers of this department are out. The plant is better known as the Old North Adams Manufacturing Co.

Klan Plan to Dope Youngsters with Bible Fails Passage in Ohio

By GEORGE PAPOUN.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 1.—Efforts of the klan to introduce compulsory bible reading in the public schools of Ohio met with defeat in the house of representatives of the Ohio legislature, now in session, when an amendment to the original bill was tabled, which under the rules, tabled the original bill as well.

The klan element in the legislature is up in arms at this defeat of one of their pet measures for keeping the children of the workers under the influence of religious bigotry. The bible-reading bill provided for the reading of at least ten verses of the bible every day, and the memorizing of the ten comamndments by pupils above the fourth grade.

In the mining sections of Eastern Ohio, many teachers are acting as recruiting agents for the Sunday schools, insisting that their pupils attend them.

With the intensification of the class struggle, comes an intensification of the weapon of religion as well as of all other weapons, as a means of keeping the workers in subjection. They should fight these efforts all the more because of the especially strong influence wielded by religious superstition and tradition.

The klan without doubt will strain every nerve to pass the bible-reading bill by some means or other, and all workers should protest as individuals and thru their organizations against the passage of any measure to introduce religious propaganda in any form whatsoever into the public schools.

FEMALE PLUTE SEES 'MOSCOW' IN CHILD LAW

Big Capitalists Lead the Opposing Chorus

ALBANY, March 1.—A charge that the proposed child labor amendment to the federal constitution "comes straight from Moscow where it had its inception" was made by Mrs. Edgar S. Shumway, representing the Brooklyn Women's club, at a hearing on the amendment before the senate and assembly judiciary committee.

Mrs. Shumway has Hysterics.

"This amendment was known of in Soviet Russia before it ever was heard of in the United States," Mrs. Shumway said. "It is nothing but a move to nationalize the children of America."

Russell R. Whitman, representing the New York State chamber of commerce declared that "Every extreme radical and red in the country is loyally behind this amednment."

The arguments lasted for four hours. A majority of those who spoke were women, the advocates stressing the fact that both the republican and democratic platforms pledged the parties to ratify the amendment.

Another Indignant Opponent.

William McCarroll, representing the New York city board of trade and transportation, introduced the speakers in opposition to the amendment. He characterized the proposal as "an indictment of parenthood" and "an insult to every parent and child."

Strike of Brownsville Laundry Drivers Gets Victories for Union

NEW YORK, Mar. 1.—The strike of the Brownsville laundry drivers is forcing the bosses one after the other to sign up with the union, the last two being the Stadium and the Hinsdale laundries, which have deserted the owners' association in face of what they consider a losing fight with the union.

William Berman, who was brutally beaten by thugs under the direction of Dorfman, the president of the owners' association, is still in the hospital and not able to attend the mass-meeting to be held tonight when the question of general strike will be settled. The bosses are shivering in their boots as they await the decision of this meeting.

Doctors at the hospital declare that Berman will not be able to get out for five weeks at least and may not get well at all. In the meantime the union is keen on winning the strike and the entire membership is lined up solidly.

The Erasmus and the Clovelen laundries are still closed, no attempt being made by the bosses to use scabs, fearing that patronage would be withdrawn permanently if scabs were used during the strike.

A Special Meeting of the
IRVING PARK BRANCH
will be held MONDAY, MARCH 2, 8 P. M. Very important business. Every member should attend.

The Workers Party in Action

PARIS COMMUNE PAGEANT FOR COMMUNIST PRESS TO BRING NEW DAILY WORKER READERS

By CHARLES KRUMBEIN.

NEW YORK, March 1.—If you knew that the Workers Party is having a Paris Commune Pageant, March 15, at Madison Square Garden, for the benefit of the Communist press, you would want to help, would you not?

If you were told further that a "Paris Commune" one-act spectacle, wherein the entire audience participates, has been arranged for you, you would be interested. If, besides that there will be folk dances by the different language groups in native costume, a gymnastic exhibition, the Freiheit Singing Society, a one hundred piece orchestra, but that is not all.

Admission to the affair is free; all you have to do is sell five subscription tickets. Each ticket entitles purchaser to one month's DAILY WORKER, or actually every purchaser also gets free admission to the Garden.

Free Trip to Convention.

Further, a free trip to the next national convention of the Workers Party will be given to the comrade selling the greatest number of subscription tickets. Two $100 radio sets are to be given free, one to the branch selling the biggest number of tickets, and one to the branch selling the biggest number in proportion to its membership. Is this not a worth while prize to keep in your branch especally when you get it for helping your own paper? There are a number of other prizes which you will read about in the press.

Remember, the profit from the affair will be divided amongst the papers in proportion to the tickets sold by the respective language sections. The more tickets you sell the more profit for your language paper. There is room for 15,000 in the Garden; 15,000 tickets sold means 15,000 new readers for the DAILY WORKER.

We are sure that you readily realize the importance of gaining 15,000 new subscribers for the DAILY WORKER, while at the same time helping all the other party papers. Get the livest comrade on the job; forward his name and address to us at once. THE CONTEST ENDS MARCH 15, at 9 P. M. Subscription tickets paid for up to and including March 14, count half point extra.

SOVIET REPUBLICS PREPARE FOR PARIS ART EXHIBITION

MOSCOW, March 1.—It is reported that the departments concerned are busily engaged in preparing the participation of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in the international exhibition of decorative and industrial arts to be held in Paris this year, April to October. The special Soviet pavilion will occupy an area of some 325 square meters, and besides that the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics will be prominently represented in the main building and the various art galleries of the exhibition. The committee in charge of all the preparatory work is under the chairmanship of Comrade O. D. Kameneva, the well-known Soviet woman leader in this branch of activities.

WORKERS AND PEASANTS OF SOVIET RUSSIA GIVE AID TO CHINESE MASSES

(By Rosta News Agency)

MOSCOW, Feb. 6.—(By Mail.)—In a letter to the editor of the Izvestia, Li Chia-ao, Chinese representative at Moscow, extends his thanks to the promoters of the big concert recently arranged in aid of the Chinese inundation relief fund. The affair was a big success, and several thousand rubles were collected.

MOSCOW, Feb. 6.—(By Mail).—It is reported that the "Hands off China!" society actually numbers over three million members thruout the Union of Socialist Soviet Russia. The society is mainly engaged in popularizing questions of political, social and cultural life of modern China.

North Side Branch to Hear Lecture

Tom Bell, local secretary of the Trade Union Educational League will speak tonight at the North Side branch meeting of the Workers Party at Imperial Hall, corner Halsted and Fullerton Ave.

The subject of his lecture will be "The Communists in the Trade Unions" and it should prove one of the most interesting of the year. A discussion will follow and no charge is made for admission. All workers are invited.

"ANISE" SPEAKS ON SOVIETS IN CLEVELAND MEET

Just Returned from 3 Years in Russia

CLEVELAND, March 1.—Cleveland workers will have a splendid opportunity to hear a first hand description of conditions in Soviet Russia as seen by an American newspaper correspondent, when Anna Louise Strong, who writes under the name of "Anise" for the Federated Press and the DAILY WORKER, speaks at a mass meeting to be held at the Engineers Auditorium, Wednesday, March 4.

Comrade Strong spent three and a half years in Russia as a famine relief worker and newspaper correspondent, travelling thruout the country and visiting all the principal industrial and agricultural districts.

Studied Trade Unions.

Her observations centered mainly on the trade union and cultural organizations of the workers and the care and development of the workers' children. The latter subject is especially interesting and timely in view of the many lies and slanders which have been printed in the capitalist newspapers of this country, purporting to be a true description of the treatment accorded the hundreds of thousands of children who were left homeless orphans thru the merciless blockade intervention and famine.

Nails Lies of Kept Press.

Childrens' colonies and childrens' homes are new and strange to most American workers who should eagerly grasp the opportunity of learning something about this tangible evidence of the progress and development of the Soviet Republic of Russia.

The meeting, which is under the auspices of the Workers (Communist) Party, will be held at the Engineers' Auditorium, Ontario and St. Clair Sts., Wednesday, March 4, at 8 p. m. Admission will be twenty-five cents.

ALL NATIONS TO CELEBRATE NEW YORK WORKERS PARTY FESTIVAL

NEW YORK, Mar. 1.—A good proof of unity in our party is the interest shown in the Spring Festival and Dance that is to be given the Harlem English branch of the Workers Party, Local New York on Saturday evening, March 21 at the Harlem Casino, 116 Street and Lenox Avenue. Comrades of all nationalities and languages are preparing to come in order to make it a real international affair. There will even be Japanese there. All parts of the globe will be represented.

Real Proletarian Affair

In order to make it a real proletarian affair the price has been made low enuf to be within the reach of the lowest paid worker. The admission price is only fifty cents, including wardrobe. To make sure that you will be there get your tickets now, as they are selling out fast. A limited number of tickets have ben printed. Buy your tickets when they are sold at the branches.

GALA MOVIE SHOW IN MILWAUKEE.

All Usual Trimmings—But in Red.

The showing of "The Beauty and the Bolshevik" at the Pabst Theater next Saturday, March 7, will be a proud and happy occasion for the workers of Milwaukee. The theater is one of the finest in the city and the committee in charge has been studying the best presentation methods of the leading theaters and is translating them into working class terms. In the place of the stiffly starched mannikin ushers by which cunning showmen try to give their patrons the illusion of superiority, there will be friendly young workers to guide the audience to their seats. Of course, there will be costumes—but they will be on the order of Red army uniforms.

The able and energetic committee in charge has left nothing undone to assure a crowd. Thousands of invitations have been mailed to sympathizers and to the school teachers who have on past occasions shown their great interest in educational pictures of Russia. Placards are being displayed on the street cars and hundreds of posters are being put up. The measure of success is usually in direct proportion to the hard work put into the arrangements. On this basis the Milwaukee show should be very successful indeed.

Oklahoma Town Demands Work for All Jobless

PICHER, Okla., March 1. — Seven hundred persons in this town have signed petitions demanding that congress guarantee to all the right to work for six hours a day at wages of $6.00 a day. The petition reads:

"We, the undersigned, petition congress for an amendment to the constitution which guarantees work to all who apply for a six hour day, a thirty hour week; to wages of adults to be not less than $6.00 per day.

"We petition congress for an amendment to the constitution which guarantees work to all who apply for it."

Use "Moral" Bluff to Put Over Law Against Radical Literature

ALBANY, N. Y., March 1. — The clean books bill, giving sweeping powers to courts to take books off the market for alleged offenses against public morals, seems doomed to defeat because it would interfere with the business interests of publishing houses.

This measure is sponsored by Senator Love of Brooklyn. It is pointed out that the bill would undoubtedly be used to stop publication of books crossing conventional lines on other things than sex. Books dealing with advanced social and economic theories would be subjected to censorship at the whim of judges, district attorneys and petit juries.

Senator Love, in his final argument before the committee admitted that the numerous books he wanted to present as evidence of the need for censorship had not been found to violate existing obscenity statutes. His proposed bill, he urged, would enable more drastic censorship than that now possible.

BEAUTY INVADES STEEL TOWN.

The hard pressed workers of the steel mills of Gary, Ind., will have a chance to see the first great Russian feature film made in co-operation with the Red army, when the "Beauty and Bolshevik" picture is shown at the Eagle Theater, this Tuesday, March 3.

In order that workers on both night and day shifts can see the film it will be run continuously from noon until midnight.

Arden Open Forum Meeting.

ARDEN, Deleware, March 1.—H. M. Wicks, of New York, spoke here before the Arden open forum on 'The Political Situation in the United States."

He traced the development of the political parties in this country and pointed out how all attacks on the labor movement were preceded by attacks on labor's most militant, revolutionary wing.

He also stressed the importance of prompt assistance to the Labor Defense Council on behalf of the Communists arrested in Michigan.

KENOSHA, WISC., LABOR SEES "POLIKUSHKA" AND APPLAUDS IT

Several hundred people applauded the movies "Polikushka," and "In Memoriam—Lenin" when the pictures were shown Saturday night at Kenosha, Wis. The crowd was not as big as expected thanks to a misunderstanding, but a fairly good crowd attended the three showings. Short talks were made in Russian and in English on the present situation in Soviet Russia and the Communist press. Many copies of the DAILY WORKER, the Tribuna Rabotnicza and the Novy Mir were sold. The last paper was sold out before the second show ended, as most of the crowd was Russian. The profits of the show will be divided between the International Workers' Aid and the Russian Communist daily, Novy Mir.

Objections to Fire Traps Called Absurd by New School Head

Before construction of the eight proposed school buildings proceeds, the necessary changes that are required by the city building department will be made. The stairway walls will be thickened and more doors will be put in the assembly rooms and gymnasiums, the doors to lead directly to the street exists.

Miss Grace Temple, the new vice-president of the school board, showed her colors when she refused to discuss the building plans further than to say the objections of the building department were "perfectly absurd." The school architect, however, admitted that the former building plans were fire traps and said the changes would be made.

N. Y. Legislature Discusses Woman and Child Labor

ALBANY, N. Y., March 1.—Shorter hours for women and children has been the leading issue before the legislative body for the last few weeks.

Laws for the 44-hour week for women and children, for the 48-hour week for workers of both sexes, for the 48-hour week with certain industries exempted, and for the regulation of hours by state authority have been sharply debated in committees.

REGIMENT OF LOBBYISTS FIGHTS MOVE FOR WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

ST. LOUIS, March 1.—The abundant cash of the anti-union associated industries, which keeps Missouri the only industrial state without workmen's compensation hits John Hammer, a concrete laborer, hard. Hammer's back is sprained by an industrial accident.

He has six undernourished children, a wife dying of tuberculosis, and 95 cents in cash. His only recourse is a damage suit and the usual farcical outcome of such proceedings offer no hope to victims of injury. The generosity of their grocer has kept the family from starving, but with the bill now in three figures, this cannot last.

Winter wind whistles thru the two-room shack. A small stove furnishes heat. A caller found an almost empty coal bin and no food in the house.

Union labor is working for a compensation measure in the present session, but the associated industries has a regiment of lobbyists on the job.

Attention, Milwaukee!

On Monday, March 2, there will be an important meeting of all DAILY WORKER branch agents and all live-wires who wish to help in this most important party work.

Don't fail to attend this meeting and all following meetings of the DAILY WORKER branch agents which will be held on every first and third Mondays of each month.

COMMUNIST·CHILDREN'S·COLUMN

A Letter to Russian Leninists.

Dear Russian Comrades: We, the American comrades, are sending our heartiest greetings to you! We hope that some day we will also succeed in the same way as you have.

Here in America it is pretty hard for us, children of the working class, because most of us must work in the factories before we are old enuf to get and education. The time we should be spending in school we have to work in the factories of our greedy capitalists. In America the capitalists make children work because they are cheaper while their parents walk the streets without any work to do.

That is why we wish to succeed in the same way as you did. We wish to make America equal to all children so that we will all get the same education, and destroy child labor.

With heartiest good wishes, The American Young Leninists.

East Pittsburgh Runs Benefit Movie.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 1.—The success that the Russian movie, "Beauty and the Bolshevik" recently scored in Pittsburgh will be reported on Feb. 28 in the nearby town of East Pittsburgh. Proceeds will benefit the funds for the relief of class war prisoners of the International Workers' Aid. The educational picture, "Russia in Overalls," that is also to be shown is of special interest in this iron and coal center in that it shows the operation of the same industries in Soviet Russia.

Organize Nucleus at Orient.

ORIENT, Ill., March 1.—Shop nucleus No. 2 of Orient has just been organized. It is a unit made up of coal miners who can be expected to be on the job on all issues. They are getting ready to take up the Sacco-Vanzetti resolution at the next local union meeting.

Massachusetts to Force Arbitration on Paper Workers

HOLYOKE, Mass., March 1. — The state minimum wage commission has given notice that it proposes to establish a wage board for stationery manufacturers and asks the paper mill owners to nominate members for the board.

The board is to consist of seven members, a chairman appointed by the commission, three representatives of the employers and three of the employes. If the required nominations are not made the board has power to fill the vancancies. Local concerns who will be affected are the White & Wyckoff Co., Whiting & Cook, Inc., Highland Mfg Co., and the Eureka Blank Book Co.

DEFENSE BODY HOLDS CONFAB IN CLEVELAND

Many Unions Follow Communists' Lead

CLEVELAND, Ohio, March 1.—The next meeting of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense conference will be held on March 6, at the Labor Temple, 2536 Euclid Ave., to hear the report of the March 1 demonstration, and discuss the future of the conference. At the last meeting of the conference, it was pointed out that not only will it be necessary to keep up agitation until Sacco and Vanzetti are released, but there are also many other cases of a similar nature which must be fought thru by labor, such as the Tom Mooney case; the numerous I. W. W. persecutions; the Michigan cases involving Wm. Z. Foster, C. E. Ruthenberg and many other Communists; the attempt to revoke the citizenship papers of A. V. Severino of Cleveland, for his political beliefs. There is also the life sentence meted out to Domenick Venturato, because of the killing of a scab at New Lafferty, O., in the 1922 coal strike, and which those workers familiar with the situation are thoroly convinced that Venturato is innocent of. The sentiment among the delegates was that something should develop out of this conference and the mass meeting, to assist in the general defense of labor against persecutions by the capitalist courts.

More Unions Assist.

The conference when first organised issued a call to the unions to affiliate if they had not already done so upon the original invitation by the Workers Party, and as the various organizations act upon this call, more affiliations are being secured, and the March 6 conference will show quite a few in addition to those already secured.

Vermont Loggers Work from Dawn Till Dark

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., March 1.—Loggers employed by the Hoosoutonic Lumber company at Hartwellville, Vt., are working from daylight until dark in the nearby mountains in an effort to get out 80,000 logs which have been cut and bring them to the mill before the snow is gone and the wood has to be left where it is cut.

Camp No. 1 at present has 35 men staying there at all times and last Sunday all to beat the sun which carried away the heavy snowfall of the past month. Choppers have been halted and extra teams hired to carry the logs over the wood roads which are from two to four inches deep with a hard bottom.

AMERICAN FINANCE ALLIED TO GERMAN BIG CAPITAL IN PLOT TO BEAT DOWN WORLD LABOR

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Who rules Germany today? The great capitalists who control the basic industries, answers the Annalist, financial organ of the New York Times. Under the head Heavy Industry in the Saddle it says:

Big Capital Owns Government.

"Heavy industry has become a state within a state. The power behind the scenes of the heavy industry magnates is enormous. They have so far run Germany's side of the commercial treaty negotiations in Paris. They threaten to upset Chancellor Luther if he refuses to recognize their pact with the German nationalists under which the latter agrarian group supports iron duties while heavy industry supports food duties.

"They have compelled the government to promise compensation for losses of iron, steel and coal during the Ruhr occupation. The mass of the local population was getting no compensation for its losses. Why should only the coal and steel magnates be compensated? The answer to this question is that, as events have proved, the coal and steel magnates have the power."

Same the World Over—Except Russia

The Annalist is not simply describing the prevailing condition under capitalist in Germany, but also in England, France, Italy, Japan, the United States and all the industrial nations.

The agreement which German magnates have forced, proclaim that the manufacturers of finished goods would abandon their opposition to heavy industry's demand for a big increase in the iron and steel duties.

This would tend to keep the prices of iron and steel used in Germany well above the world level. In return the heavy industries would create a special fund out of which to pay the manufacturers a bonus equal to the difference between the home and the world market price of all iron and steel used in producing finished goods for export.

To Undersell On World Market.

This agreement will enable German manufaturers to dump cheap finished goods on the world market, underselling the workers of England, France and America. German workers will foot the bill thru paying artificially high prices for what they consume.

American Capital in German Industry

Will American capitalists suffer along with American labor? Certainly their American enterprises will get only part-time employment. But they now have millions invested in Germany. In January they took $12,000,000 worth of Thyssen Steel Works bonds.

They are thus financial partners of August Thyssen who led in negotiating the agreement which will enable German industry to undercut American.

They are collaborating with German capital in the game of pitting one group of workers against another to secure cheap labor—this time on a world scale.

CHAUFFEURS, CAB AND TRUCK MEN ORGANIZE UNION

Springfield Workers Seek Improvement

SPRINGFIELD, Mass.—An organisation drive was started at a general meeting of chauffers, cab and truck drivers, teamsters, helpers and automobile mechanics employed in Springfield, at Central Labor Union Hall. The new union will be affiliated with the A. F. of L.

The principal objects of this drive as stated by the men are the establishment of an eight-hour day for all classes of chauffers and increases in the various wage scales.

Taxi drivers are now compelled to slave 14 to 16 hours a day, seven days a week and as a recent canvass of taxi drivers has shown, practically none of them are getting more than $18 a week. Some of the Springfield cab companies hire their men on straight salary, others on commission, in either case the weekly wage seldom exceeds $18.

An effort will be made to establish an eight-hour day and a six-day week in this class of work, and to fix the minimum wage of all taxi drivers at $33. This will compel the employers to organize their business on a three-platon basis.

Ice Cream van drivers are now getting wages ranging from $18 to $28 and work 10 hours a day seven days a week. Efforts will be made to establish the Chicago scale here.

The drivers of trucks, such as moving vans, who make out-of-town trips on regular schedules, to Boston, New York, Albany and intermediary point, will demand pay by the hour instead of by the trip. They are now supposed to get on an average of $15 a trip, which occupies two days and one night. In addition they are supposed to be allowed $3 a trip for expenses. They will ask for 50 to 75 cents an hour.

The teamsters in this city at present get from $10 to $18 a week for a 10 to 12 hour day. They will seek an eight hour day and higher pay.

The helpers on furniture vans, also work from 10 to 12 hours daily at an average wage of 25 cents an hour. They will also demand higher pay and less hours.

The auto mechanics, now receiving less than 75 cents an hour, will demand $1 an hour.

RED CROSS OF RUSSIA FOUNDS NEW DISPENSARY

Arbeiter Ring Gives $15,000 for Work

NEW YORK, March 1.—The Russian Red Cross has established a venerial dispensary in the Homel district, where the ravages of the white guard counter-revolutionary armies left this disease in their wake. The statement of the American representative of the Russian Red Cross, D. H. Dubrowsky, concerning the arbeiter ring, which donated fifteen thousand dollars for this work, follows:

In view of the statement of the Central Committee of the Arbeiter Ring which appeared in the Yiddish press some time ago, we herewith wish to call to your attention to a communication from the Central Committee of the Russian Red Cross, a photostat copy as well as a translation of which we herewith append. The communication of the Central Committee of the Russian Red Cross speaks for itself.

We wish, nevertheless, to emphasize that the American office of the Russian Red Cross certainly had reasons to believe that the Arbeiter Ring would follow up the first generous contribution of $15,000, with a campaign for additional moneys to help to support the upkeep of such a hospital. The upkeep alone, it is needless to say, with the greatest economy possible, would require tens of thousands of dollars annually.

The Russian Red Cross not seeing its way clear to cover the upkeep of the hospital and not being in a position for the present to undertake the financial responsibility of a successful continuous operation of a hospital and at the same time wishing to comply with the wishes of the members of the Arbeiter Ring who so generously contributed toward such a humanitarian institution and finally decided to open for the time being a venereal dispensary in Homel, bearing the name of the Arbeiter Ring with the ultimate hope in view of enlarging the dispensary when finances permit, into a hospital.

The dispensary, meanwhile, will fill a great need for the numerous hostile invasions and the years of civil strife left a terrible legacy in Homel district in the form of venereal infections. Persons familiar with conditions in districts subjected to the terror of guerrila warfare will understand that to the people of Homel this dispensary of the Arbeiter Ring will be a priceless gift.

The translation of the letter from the Central Committee of the Russian Red Cross, Moscow, telling of the founding of the dispensary states:

To the Representative of the Russian Red Cross in America, Comrade Dubrowsky:

The Central Committee of the Russian Red Cross begs you to inform the Arbeiter Ring of the following:

Taking into consideration that the only donation of the Arebeiter Ring does not allow the Central Committee to provide a more or less continuous functioning of a hospital in Homel and that the Central Committee does not possess the material means to take upon itself fully the upkeep of such a hospital, but at the same time wishing inasmuch at it is possible to fulfill the wishes of the donators, the Central Committee has taken all necessary steps for opening in the city of Homel, a venereal dispensary bearing the name of the Arbeiter Ring.

The Central Committee hopes in the future, when it will be able, to convert the dispensary into a hospital.

But for the time being for the reasons above mentioned, the Central Committee is compelled to limit itself with the opening of a dispensary.

We will provide further detailed reports of the operation of the dispensary.

Chairman of the Central Committee, Russian Red Cross:
(Signed) Z. Soloviev.
Secretary Central Committee:
(Signed) E. Korovin.

BUILDERS AT WORK

Unusual Building Activity in Milwaukee.

A SUGGESTION TO YOUR C. C. C.

A LETTER just received today from Comrade Shklar of Milwaukee not only shows a local campaign gathering "full steam ahead" but includes so many practical features, that we want all of our readers to note carefully every sentence he writes:

> "Dear Comrades: At the time we received your letter it was decided to compel every DAILY WORKER agent to become a subscriber, since we had several cases where the agents were not subscribers themselves. We have followed this up by compelling every city central committee delegate to become a subscriber and now we will go down the line until every member of the party is a subscriber to the party paper. This I believe will not only add greatly to the growth of the party but also will help us in building up a party ideologically unified.
> "We expect to go over the top with our quota in the near future and I really believe that you allowed the branches too much time in which to raise it.
> "We have in this city a large circle of sympathizers who generally attend our meetings and we intend to assign a certain number of names to every party member to visit for the purpose of securing subscribers to the paper and also to establish connections for the possibility of securing new members.
> "IN THIS WAY WE WILL BUILD UP THE PARTY AND THE PAPER AT THE SAME TIME."

Just note the last sentence. These comrades realize fully that to build the party it is essential to "Build the DAILY WORKER." One is part of the other and when every local acts on this truth a growth in both is sure.

When we say that local Milwaukee is ACTING and not simply talking, we should mention the fact that this letter from Comrade Shklar outlining the local plans included 21 new subscriptions that prove unusual "building" activity among the wide-awake Milwaukee Communist BUILDERS.

We suggest that comrades in all locals could read Comrade Shklar's letter to their C. C. C. for action!

SOVIET PRESS SHOWS ADVANTAGES OF THE RUSSO-JAPANESE TREATY

MOSCOW, Jan 23 (By Mail).— Following the conclusion of the Russo-Japanese treaty in highly appreciative terms, the Soviet press points out to the mutual advantages of this move

The Pravda writes that a Soviet-Japanese-Chinese rapprochment has a far-reaching importance for the peaceful solution of the Far Eastern questions and the development of Asiatic peoples

The Izvestia maintains that the agreement reached is the most important for Japan, bearing as it does not only on Japan's immediate economic interests, but on her further political interests, too. The destinies of Japan as a great Pacific power are closely bound with the future developments of Soviet-Japanese inter-relations. The paper emphasises that "with a secure Soviet rear, Japan may look upon her western shores as safe in the event of complications in the Pacific."

The Economischeskaya Zizn, a leading organ on economic and financial questions, foresees a certain regrouping of international forces in connection with the restoration of friendly relations between the U. S. S. R. and Japan, more particularly a more speedy solution by America of the issue of full resumption of relations with the Union of Soviet Republics.

Rakovsky States His Views.

MOSCOW, Jan. 24. (By Mail.—The friendly co-operation between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Japan and China will certainly have the most favorable consequences, C. G. Rakovsky, Soviet representative at London, at present in Moscow on a business trip, said to a correspondent of the Izvestia in reference to the Russo-Japanese treaty. At the same time, he pointed out that the conjectures of the European press as to the conclusion of a Soviet-Japanese alliance were unfounded.

Replying to a question regarding the effect the new treaty could have on the relations between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Britain, Rakovsky stated that he expected "nothing but good results. England ought not nor can she look upon the Soviet-Japanese treaty as directed in any way whatever against her. It is our keen and sincere desire," emphasized the Soviet diplomat, "to have with England relations of peaceful co-operation, for which the necessary basis was created by the now rejected Anglo-Soviet treaty."

Hits Back at Herriot.

Referring to Soviet relations with France, Rakovsky expressed profound astonishment at the protest of Herriot against Rykoff's, the president of the council of people's commissaries, recent statement on the question of debts: "Had it been any French paper hostile to the U. S. S. R. that should have interpreted in so utterly a wrong manner Rykoff's speech, it would not been difficult to understand the fact, but for Mr. Herriot to venture such an interpretation is really extraordinary, seeing that the French premier is well acquainted with the views of the Soviet government on this matter and knows that the Union is willing to pay.

"At the same time, however," concluded Rakovsky, "Herriot is perfectly well aware that the actual possibility of such payment, which burden the Soviet government cannot lay on the shoulders of the workers and peasants of the Union of Soviet Republics, can be created by France herself by offering financial assistance to the U. S. S. R. in one way or another."

DANISH LABOR FACES BATTLE WITH EMPLOYERS

General Lockout and Strike Loom

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, March 1.—The temporary falure of negotiations between the trade unions and the employers' associations for the renewal of the old agreements, which were coupled to a demand for increased wages, led to the issuance of strike notices on the part of several of the unions. This was countered last night by a lockout notice from the employers.

Great Battle Coming.

The employers have not yet decided which of the unions will be included in the lockout, but it is believed that Denmark is now confronted by a great labor fight if the present difficulty is not settled at once.

The Copenhagen Typographical union voted last night to reject a new agreement which had been offered. This union will strike on Saturday morning with the result that the Copenhagen newspapers will not appear.

Conditions Favor Strike.

Today the govenment arbitrator is taking measures to bring the opposing parties together in an effort to obtain postponement of the strike while fresh negotiations proceed.

Whether he will succeed is doubtful, as the moment for a strike from the labor point of view is particularly favorable.

The C. P. P. A. Is Dead—Long Live the Workers (Communist) Party of America!

(Statement on the Conference for Progressive Political Action and the role of the socialist party by the Central Executive Committee of Workers (Communist) Party of America.)

The Conference for Progressive Political Action (C. P. P. A.) is dead. It was conceived by its leaders' treachery. It carried on its existence as a servile tool in the hands of middle-class politicians and reactionary labor bureaucrats. It therefore died in disgrace, and no one, except the socialist party, will shed a tear over its death. The class-conscious workers and poor farmers of America will sigh a breath of relief, and will say: The C. P. P. A. is dead—Long live the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

The C. P. P. A. came into existence some three years ago because of pressure from below. It was the urge and the demand of the rank and file in the labor movement that compelled the reactionary bureaucracy of the railroad and other unions to form an organization for joint political action. The workers demanded effective political action against the growing power of oppression of the capitalist government, and the reactionary labor bureaucrats pretended to be in agreement with this demand of the workers. Hence the formation of the C. P. P. A.

But this demand of the workers for real political struggle against the capitalists was never satisfied. From its very inception, the C. P. P. A. was nothing else than a new, camouflaged edition of the old Gompers policy of non-partisan politics. The C. P. P. A. having inscribed on its yellow banner the discredited Gompers motto of rewarding friends and punishing your enemies, soon became the tail end of a group of petty bourgeois politicians led by Senator LaFollette. Instead of leading the workers to struggle and achievement, the C. P. P. A. became an instrument in the hands of these middle-class politicians and reactionary labor bureaucrats for hampering and obstructing every genuine move on the part of the rank and file for independent political action. The American working class will forget the fact that it was with the help of the C. P. P. A. that LaFollette and Gompers succeeded in destroying the farmer-labor movement in the months preceding the last presidential elections.

The net results of the activities of the C. P. P. A. are merely these: It enabled LaFollette and the reactionary labor bureaucrats to play middle-class politics at the expense of the workers and poor farmers. It prevented in a large measure the crystallization of a genuine movement of workers and poor farmers for independent political action against the capitalists. Thus the C. P. P. A. has performed a great service to the capitalists of the United States.

Now the C. P. P. A. is no longer in existence. It came to an end on February 22, 1925, because neither LaFollette nor the reactionary labor bureaucracy had any further use for it. The reactionary chiefs of the railroad unions decided to keep aloof from the third party movement and to resume the old game of playing politics with any capitalist politician that might be serviceable for the moment. Hence their withdrawal from the C. P. P. A. and its subsequent death.

The second meeting of these so-called progressives, held after the sine die adjournment of the C. P. P. A., went on record in favor of a new party based not on organizations but on individuals. The LaFollette crowd and the second-rate bureaucrats of the railroad unions have proven by this decision that they are mortally afraid of organized labor's influence within the third party movement.

In other words, these middle-class politicians and labor reactionaries are perfectly willing to be supported by labor, but not directed or controlled.

On the eve of this last meeting of the C. P. P. A. the Workers (Communist) Party of America again spoke to the workers and poor farmers of the United States on the nature and prospects of the C. P. P. A. and the LaFollette movement. We said: Nothing that is of any benefit to the toiling masses can result out of this combination. We maintained during the last three years that the C. P. P. A. is serving the interests of the capitalists—big and small—and not the interests of the workers. We strenuously opposed the false contention of the socialist party that out of the C. P. P. A. there will rise a political party of workers, a labor party. We branded the alliance of the socialist party with the C. P. P. A. and LaFollette in the last elections as black betrayal of the working class because we know that this combination is just as hostile to the interests of the workers and poor farmers as are the parties of big capital, the republican and democratic parties.

Now when the socialist party, thru no fault or irtue of its own, finds itself outside of the third rty movement, it is again raising its voice in r of working class independent political action. Hillquit and his friends, having been kicked out of the renovated LaFollette-Johnston combination, are again talking about labor parties. But the workers will not believe them. The class-conscious workers and poor farmers have not forgotten yet that it was the socialist party in alliance with the C. P. P. A. that assisted LaFollette and Gompers to fight and destroy the young farmer-labor movement that was struggling towards national crystallization during the years of 1922-1924. The socialist party cannot be trusted. It has betrayed the toiling masses many times in the past. It will betray them also in the future.

The Workers (Communist) Party of America calls upon the workers and poor farmers to learn their lesson from the long list of betrayals of the C. P. P. A. which culminated in its disgraceful death. The lesson to be learned is the following: Do not entrust your interests to the middle-class politicians and reactionary labor bureaucrats. Rely upon your own organized struggles on the economic and political field against the capitalists and their government. Join the ranks and follow the lead of a real working class political party that fights uncompromisingly for the overthrow of the rule of capital and for the establishment in the United States of a workers' and farmers' government.

The C. P. P. A. is dead.

Long live the class struggle!

Long live the united front of labor against the united front of capital!

Long live the Workers (Communist) Party of America!

Workers (Communist) Party of America.
William Z. Foster, Chairman.
C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary.

Sacco and Vanzetti

The Sacco-Vanzetti case is uppermost today in the minds of hundreds of thousands of workers.

The state of Massachusetts and the capitalists that own it, their judges, prosecutors and perjured witnesses, have not abated their efforts to railroad these militant workers to the electric chair for a crime they did not commit.

If Sacco and Vanzetti escape death at the hands of the state's hired murderers, they face the living death of life imprisonment. Tom Mooney is buried in San Quentin altho the world knows that he is innocent and Massachusetts capitalism may prefer to intern Sacco and Vanzetti in its dungeons and hope that the working will forget them.

They must not be allowed to wear a mask of mercy while carrying out this devilish scheme. To the millions of workers who already know what American capitalist justice means for our class must be added more millions until not one worker is able to say that he does not know that in the United States two members of his class are being tortured to death for loyalty to the workers.

Capitalism does not want the working class to know the full measure of its hatred of those workers who challenge it.

Let the workers know what vengeance capitalism exacts for opposition to its rule and organize for freedom from persecutions of individual workers and the overthrow of a system that lives by oppression of the whole working class.

The Street Cleaners' Settlement

The street cleaners' strike is "settled."

The streets of Chicago will be cleaned again and as for the rank and file of the union they have already been given the vacuum treatment.

The mass of the union membership will receive the huge increase of 15 cents per day while foremen will get four times this amount.

The settlement has most of the earmarks of the dealing with city hall officials and general neglect of the interest of the union membership that has many times disgraced the Chicago labor movement. Many Chicago business agents simply use their unions as a basis of power in corrupt political circles. Whatever the membership gets as a result of a strike like that of the street cleaners is usually only a percentage of the loot extracted by the business agent.

There have been revolts against these crooked practices from time to time, but the graft in Chicago is so rich that so far the only changes that have been made are the personnel of the clique that gets the boodle.

The dozens of unions into which the Chicago labor movement is divided, the huge sums dispensed by the capitalist political machines, make is possible for each business agent to have a little satrapy of his own by which he forces payment of tribute and on which he also levies tribute.

There will be no real progress in the Chicago labor movement until the left wing, composed of sincere and honestly militant workers, cleans out this Augean stable and sends the filthy crew of Chicago labor fakers down the river with the rest of the garbage.

Communism again broke into the fight for child labor in New York the other day. When one of the speakers ardently advocated the abolition of child labor before the woman's civic club, one of the flashily dressed women jumped to her feet and yelled: "Forty-five minutes for Communism and one minute for Americanism." The discussion of poetry and the arrival of refreshments restored order.

Coolidge will kiss his father's bible as part of the inauguration ceremonies on Wednesday. That means the beginning of four more years during which he will obediently kiss the feet of the Wall Street rulers of America.

The Administration Party Is Not the Union

By EARL R. BROWDER.

IF the group of officials of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers (or any other union) who make up what we call "the administration party" stand for the class struggle, fight for the interests of the working class and against the employers at all times, and always conduct the struggle without surrender or compromise—then there is no need for a left wing. Then the administration party is identical with the best interests of the union.

BUT if the administration adopts a line of surrender, of class collaboration, of repression against the rank and file coupled with close relations with employers—then the administration party has interests that are opposed to the interests of the union. Then in order to fight for the best interests of the union it is necessary to fight against the class collaboration policies of the officials.

WHY is it necessary to repeat such a simple, ABC proposition? Because there are still some confused comrades, who really believe that a left wing is necessary, but who yet think they believe at the same time that loyalty to the union means obedience to the dictates of the administration party. They think that when Samuel Levin or Sidney Hillman calls upon them to sign a statement against the left wing or any section of it that Levin or Hillman is the union and they must obey. This is a silly proposition; in some cases it is used to cover up a surrender to the reaction, while in others it is merely lack of understanding.

LOYALTY to the union is a great principle. It is the very basis of the left wing. But loyalty to the union must be understood as loyalty to the class struggle, not to the men in office.

WE have a case in point in the Local 5 situation in New York. The executive board of that local demanded the reinstatement of two members fired from a shop. When this was refused the executive board of the local itself went on the picket line to force the reinstatement. They won. But the higher officials, altho they did not dare come out against the reinstatement and even claimed that it was they who got the men back to work, suspended and expelled the men who fought for the protection of the members of the union. In order to be loyal to the union, the members of Local 5 had to struggle against the higher officials, who demanded submission.

THERE are times when loyalty to the union demands obedience to orders from whoever is in office. Such times are when the union is acting against the employing class, when a strike is called, when a big wage movement is under way, whenever the working class is engaged in struggle against the exploiters. Solidarity for the struggle is a first principle of every true left wing group. But that principle cannot be carried over to demand solidarity of treason, solidarity of surrender, solidarity in support of policies which mean death and disaster to the union.

THOSE very men in the A. C. W. who today demand from the left wing submission to class collaboration in the name of loyalty to the union, themselves gained what standing they have in the clothing industry in the struggle against "loyalty" to the traitorous unionism of Rickert and the United Garment Workers. Under pressure from the fighting rank and file they went so far in loyalty to the garment workers that they split away from Rickert and the A. F. of L. And every union man who values real unionism more than red tape applauds the glorious days which saw the birth of the A. C. W. of A At that time loyalty to the union meant struggle against the administration party.

THOSE were the days when there was born what has been called "the Amalgamated spirit." It was a spirit of struggle against capitalism and against treachery and class collaboration within the union. If it meant anything at all it meant the spirit of the revolutionary proletariat.

BUT the officialdom that rose to power out of the heroic days of the foundation of the A. C. W. of A have themselves surrendered to the policies of class collaboration. They are making every possible effort to wipe out the differences between themselves and Rickert. It is no accident that during the election campaign Sidney Hillman sat upon the same committee for the support of LaFollette upon which sat Rickert himself. Today the principal difference between them is that Rickert is still a stupid and open reactionary, while Hillman is a clever and camouflaged one.

WE have an illuminating bit of evidence of the length to which the A. C. W. administration party has travelled the road to reaction, in an editorial in Justice, official organ of Sigman, Perlstein, Yanofsky & Co., issue of Feb. 20. It says:

> "We are rejoicing, indeed, to see that the Amalgamated had chosen . . . and is now marching in step with the entire labor movement."

"The entire labor movement" means Sigman, Gompers, Rickert. And it is true that the Hillman administration is exerting every effort to get in step with Rickert, with the Gompers' bureaucracy, with the class collaborationists of the entire labor movement.

LOYALTY to the union, loyalty to the "spirit of the Amalgamated," loyalty to the class struggle, today means what it did in 1914 and 1915. It means a relentless struggle against surrender to the employers; it means the crystallization of the healthy proletarian forces within the union into a left wing with a real program of class struggle; it means to fight against the policies of Rickert, of Gompers, which are rapidly becoming the policies of the Hillman administration.

THE revolutionary traditions of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers must be rescued and carried on by the organized left wing forces within the union. For the struggle against the employers, for higher wages, for a fighting union, for working class political action, for amalgamation of the divided unions into one great industrial union, for support of Soviet Russia, for the class struggle, for international solidarity with the revolutionary workers of the world—these are the things that demand loyalty from the awakening rank and file of the garment workers.

It is loyalty to these principles, and carrying them into action, that constitutes the only true loyalty to the union and the only true "Amalgamated spirit."

RED BAITERS COMPELLED TO RETRACT LIE

Hibben Drops Libel Suit for Apology

NEW YORK, March 1.—Following Captain Paxten Hibben's re-commissioning in the reserve corps of the army and the implied vindication of him from charges of "holding beliefs favorable to enemies of the United States government" the Boston Transcript has printed a retraction of its savage attacks upon Hibben.

One Lie Among Many

In R. M. Whitney's infamous series entitled: "Reds in America," published by the Transcript in October 1922, Hibben was pictured as an arch-conspirator, secret representative of the Communist International in the U. S. and an international spy.

Hibben actually was engaged in relief work for starving Russian children and because he has consistently favored recognition of Russia by this country has been subject to abuse and persecution, including an army inquisition into his fitness to hold his commission.

Swaps $100,000 Suit For Pedigree

Hibben now withdraws his $100,000 libel suit against the Transcript. Hibben accepts the Transcript statement that he is a fine fellow against whose personal character nothing can be said and who is "always shown as having been exceedingly loyal."

John Haynes Holmes forced immediate retraction from the Transcript by threat of libel action in 1922 but Hibben's case was delayed until Sec'y. of War Weeks, a close friend of the Transcript owners, could start military proceedings designed to injure Hibben's chances.

Dockmen Injured by Acid.

NEW YORK, N. Y., March 1.—Sixteen men were overcome by fumes from a broken drum of acid in the hold of the Clyde Line steamer Lenape being loaded at a North river pier. The men were taken to a hospital, where two are reported in a critical condition.

FIGHT CRIMINAL SYNDICALISM LAWS

Communists they defend their own interests. He pointed out the hypocrisy, falsehoods that are being perpetrated upon the workers and their children.

Schneidermann Speaks for Y. W. L.

Comrade Schneidermann, secretary of the Labor Defense Council, also spoke on behalf of the Young Workers' League, among other things, he said, "The youth fears no wars, no uprisings, nor prisons.

"No force can resist the trend of the times, and at the present the youth is patriotic for revolution instead of war. We are tired of fighting for 'the human race,' we are ready to fight for our class—the working class, persecution cannot suppress those who dare to stand by the truth."

How Police Celebrated.

Reverend Robert Whitaker then spoke. He started out "Today, Washington's birthday, in Los Angeles was celebrated by the police by dragging Leo Gallagher by force from a platform.

"The meeting was being conducted by Rev. Whitaker and Rev. C. J. Taft, (both prominent figures of the Civil Liberties Union) at the Public Plaza. Gallagher was speaking to a crowd of unemployed and homeless workers when an officer of the law grabbed him charging him with inciting a riot.

"The real reason why Gallagher was arrested was because he dared to defend the I. W. W. on different occasions. At the same time ten others were arrested. This is the way Los Angeles police celebrated George Washington's birthday."

Mother Bloor's Speech.

The last speaker was Mother Bloor. Her speech was loudly cheered. "When I came here," she said, "I was told that the chamber of commerce and other capitalist organizations, such as the American legion, etc., are boasting that Los Angeles is the white spot of America. I came to help to make the white spot 'red.' Comrades," she continued, "I am calling your attention to the fact that in the state of California there are more political prisoners than in all the states combined.

"Some of you say that you are tired already, and you feel like retiring, but I say to those, don't say you are tired, we have just started our work.

"I am not tired, I would go tomorrow to prison to take the place of our comrades, Foster and Ruthenberg, for they are not tired, they fight earnestly, and sincerely, not only the capitalist reactionary class, but all the black forces of capitalism, and that is the reason why the capitalists raise the cry of the 'Red menace.'"

At the conclusion of the speech, Mother Bloor called upon the workers to unite to build effective organizations so that when the hour of the revolution strikes the workers of America will be able to fulfill their great historic mission in destroying capitalism and establish Communism.

The city convention of the Junior Young Workers League of Chicago was held yesterday at the Soviet School, 1902 W. Division Street. It was opened at 3 P. M. The roll call has shown 22 delegates present, one delegate of the National Executive Committee of the Y. W. L., one fraternal delegate from the Workers Party and one from the Young Workers League of Chicago.

Albert Glatzky, age 13, was elected chairman, Philip Boyer, age 12, assistant chairman, Jessie Harris, age 14, secretary and Babe Cohn, age 11, assistant secretary.

Comrade Sam Hammersmark greeted the convention in the name of the Workers Party.

Comrade Sydney Borgeson of the N. E. C. in his report stated that according to information from the Young Communist International the Juniors of the United States have the second place in the movement of the Communist children, with the Russian comrades holding the first position. This statement was greeted with an outburst of applause from the delegates and the many visitors, children and adults that crowded the Soviet School.

A detailed report about the convention wil be given in the next issue as the report came in about closing time.

International Workers' Aid Active in Germany

BERLIN, (By Mail)—At a meeting of the enlarged German central committee of the International Workers' Aid recently held in Berlin, the work of organization was gone into in detail.

The chairman reported that special help had been extended to 36,000 locked-out workers and their children over the Christmas holidays. He commented enthusiastically on the constant growth of membership of the I. W. A., the only non-party organization in Germany, where members of differing political views are working together for a common end. This proves, he said, that such an organization is not only a necessity, but that it is a possibility as well.

To Create German Children's Homes

One of the first tasks to which the committee devoted itself was the raising of funds for the establishment of a children's home in Grossenhain, Saxony. The district committees of Berlin-Brandenburg, Saxony, Turingia, and Laustiz, were obligated to collect money needed in their districts. The committees for the Rhineland and Ruhr were put in charge of the home to be opened at Romscheid. A motion to name this new home the "Clara Zetkin Home" was carried unanimously.

Work within the factories and trade unions, whence most of the German I. W. A. membership is drawn was taken up in detail. A resolution greeting the efforts of the Anglo-Russian unity committee was carried. The agitation for the realisation of rights confered by the social-welfare legislation was supported and efforts will be made to get direct representation of the I. W. A. of these committee of action. During the month of March every I. W. A. member in Germany is expected to enlist a new fellow member. The meeting closed with three cheers for international solidarity of the working class.

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THERE is food for thought for Negroes and other oppressed peoples under the yoke of American imperialism, in the following excerpts from a lecture delivered by Albert Bushnell Hart, professor of government at Harvard university, in Washington recently: "The United States has taken over the government of six of our neighbors—Haiti, Honduras, Nicaragua, Porto Rico, Cuba and Panama. Marines are located in each of these nations to protect native presidents who were friendly to the United States. Uncle Sam does not intend to treat these people of darker races as equals, for there are certain interests which he feels must be protected regardless of other moral considerations."

THIS is illuminating. Of course, it is no surprise to those who have studied the methods of American imperialism. But it is refreshing to have a blunt, goosestep professor say right out in meeting what this government has been practising. The DAILY WORKER has repeatedly pointed out that most of the South American republics were but the puppets of Washington. Now comes one of the money power's paid professors and admits it. Thanks professor.

MANY conflicting statements are emanating from Washington relative to the recognition of Soviet Russia by the Coolidge administration. Despite the knowledge that conversations are already being carried on between representatives of both countries, the capitalist papers opposed to recognition continue to suppress this news.

THE death of President Ebert of Germany adds to the worries of the bourgeoisie of that country, and to those of the rest of Europe. The yellow socialist was a faithful servant of capitalism and his loss will be felt. Perhaps they can afford to lose him now better than at any time since the kaiser fled to Holland. Not that Ebert was possessed of extraordinary intelligence. His usefulness lay in the fact that he was a leader of the social democrats, an organization in which the German workers once had confidence, in which large masses still have confidence, despite the orgy of treachery thru which it has passed since the standards of war were unfurled in Europe in 1914.

IT was Ebert and his colleagues of the social democratic party who saved Germany for capitalism when the kaiser's armies were defeated on the western front in 1918. The bourgeoisie admit this, tho they have now recovered sufficiently to dispense with their services as government functionaries. But at the first sign of danger, the socialists would again leap to the rescue of the master class. Note the defense of the British royal family by Ramsay MacDonald and company. The German workers have learned a good deal since 1918 and it is not likely that the social democrats will be as successful in playing the role of trained rams that lead the sheep to the slaughter, as they were in the past.

NEW YORK IS HUB OF TEXTILE INDUSTRY IN U. S.

Anti-Labor Plans Are Hatched in Metropolis

By ROBERT MINOR

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, March 2.—Not Boston, not Providence, not New Bedford or Fall River—but New York, is the center of the American textile industry.

All Refer at New York

The fact that the big American "Rome" is now the managing center of all things financial, technical and mercantile—all phases of the cotton and woolen industry (except labor's own organizational phase!)—is a fact which disturbs all of the past reckonings on the prospects of the textile labor movement. The spreading of the textile industry to the South, and the strengthening of finance-capital control have shifted the center to New York.

Thru the city of Boston, the old "hub" where the local merchants with patriotic bravery display the woven wares "made in New England"—you may wander in vain to tap the original sources of information on the big anti-labor plan in reference to some source "in New York." Even the big library of old, spectacled Boston is cold to the trail. In the once traditional center of all things textile of the Western hemisphere, you cannot even buy or borrow a look at most of the textile journals.

Old Providence, too, whose surrounding Rhode Island textile mills once move upon their looms the very history of the American capitalist republic, is now only a provincial outpost of the textile industry. You can-

STONE DONS THE BLACK ROBES OF CAPITALIST JUDGE

Joins "Bill the Fat" on Supreme Court Bench

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Harlan Fisk Stone, of New York, resigned today as attorney general and was sworn in at noon as an associate justice of the United States supreme court.

The oath was administered by Chief Justice Taft. Garbed for the first time in his black judicial robes, Justice Stone took the chair at the extreme left of the chief justice and participated in the day's proceedings altho he had no part in the rendering of decisions or opinions.

Solicitor General James M. Beck will act as attorney general until the nomination of Charles Beecher Warren to that post is confirmed by the senate.

SUPREME COURT STRIKES AT LABOR THRU UPHOLDING "COMPANY UNIONS" ON THE PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The Pennsylvania railroad company's plan of "company unions" with joint committees to arbitrate and settle labor disputes was held legal today by the supreme court of the United States.

The test of the legality of the plan was backed by the American Federation of Labor, thru the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks. It sought an injunction restraining the Pennsylvania system from support of associations of its employes from expenditure of railroad company funds for this purpose, or permitting any officer of the railroad from serving on the company employe committees.

It was claimed the Pennsylvania system plan nullified provisions of the transportation act of 1920 which set up a railroad labor board.

GIVE RAPHAEL WARM WELCOME IN PITTSBURGH

Next Sunday to See Big Counter Meet

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 2.—Three hundred workers were denied admittance to the meeting of Professor Raphael Abramovich, menshevik counter-revolutionary, by several vigilant socialists serving in the role of St. Peter at the entrance of the meeting hall last night.

Denied admission, these hundreds of workers began a demonstration outside the hall. At the request of the yellow socialists the police attacked the demonstrators, several were beaten by the "allied interventionists" and six were arrested, including one girl.

Just Like Intervention.

All arrested were held on a charge of "inciting to riot" in spite of the fact that it was the socialists who incited all the riot there was. Certainly it was the socialists—just as Abramovich and his ilk in Soviet Russia, called in the capitalist governments to shoot down the workers—who urged the capitalist police force to attack the workers on the street who were peacefully and legally, even under capitalist definition, demonstrating.

Those arrested were later released on $1,000 bail each.

Capitalist newspapers this morning give lurid details and streamer headlines, saying, "Bolsheviks Storm Anti-Soviet Meeting." They say that brickbats were thrown thru the windows and that police squads responded to the request of the socialist counter-revolutionaries and put down the rebellion with riot guns.

Somebody Smuggled in Brains.

Even with the immigration officers guarding the door, eyeing everyone and questioning a great many who looked intelligent enough or proletarian enough to be a Communist, still all was in vain. Somebody had smuggled their brains in with them, and when Abramovich spoke there were cries of "Scab!" "Traitor!" and other unsweet appellations directed at his head.

A considerable part of the audience protested his lies with the usual result, socialist stoolpigeons and capitalist cops rough-housed and ejected them.

A rousing meeting is expected to be held here next Sunday, when Bob Minor will address a great mass meeting and tell just who this Professor Abramovich is who, like the Raphael in the Book of Tobit, has come to overcome the demon of American Bolshevism, but has instead been overcome by it.

British Sit Tight and Keep Mum While Waiting for Calvin

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, March 2.— The foreign office announced here today that Great Britain had formulated no policy regarding the publication of the report of the German control commission, the French demand for security or the Geneva protocol. The disarmament conference question, as has been indicated many times, is held in abeyance, awaiting a move from President Coolidge.

BORGLUM WOULD ROT IN JAIL FOR LIFE IN FIGHT TO COMPLETE HIS DREAM

NEW YORK, March 2.—Gutzon Borglum, noted sculptor wanted in Georgia on a malicious mischief charge, began here today what he characterized as a fight to complete the Stone Mountain memorial to the confederacy despite "small-minded enemies."

He arrived here without baggage from Greensboro, N. C., where he was arrested for the Georgia authorities and where he gave bail.

The sculptor vowed he would "rot in jail for the rest of my life" rather than be denied a chance to complete his dream of nine years.

STRIKE COMING IN WOOLEN MILLS OF PROVIDENCE

Vote Down New Loom System of Work

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 2.—A general strike looms in the wollen and worsted mills. At a mass meeting of weavers of the Puritan Mills of the American Wollen company, held in Plymouth theatre yesterday, it was voted to refuse to run one fancy and one white loom.

A committee was elected to notify the agent of the company. There is already placed about ten sets of looms ready with this kind of work in them. This is the same kind of work against which the Nemasket mills of Middlesboro has been on strike for the past six months. Until now the Plymouth workers never considered making common action with the Middlesboro strikers.

This morning the committee notified the agent of the decision of the weavers. The looms in which is the work in question, will be suspended; no one will touch them. On Wednesday night, if the work is not taken out by that time, a mass meeting will be called.

Any strike movement starting here, is expected to spread to all other woolen and worsted mills and to be as successful as it is widespread. James Reid of the Amalgamated Textile Councils spoke at Sunday's meeting.

TRUTHFUL REPORT OF BRITISH UNION DELEGATES TO RUSSIA ATTACKED BY CAPITALIST PRESS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, March 1.—The final completed report of the delegates from the British general council of trade unions to the Sixth Congress of the All-Russian trade unions, is just avialable and is meeting with a torrent of hostile attacks from the capitalist press of Britain. This, of course, is not unexpected, in view of the abuse these delegates received a few weeks ago, when the preliminary summary of their finding on what they saw in Soviet Russia was given out.

The final report is an illustrated volume of 350 pages, containing great detail of conditions concerning the workers of Soviet Russia and the achieve-

CARPENTERS OF DETROIT PLAN WAR ON FAKERS

Mass Meeting Demands Recall of Officials

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

DETROIT, March 2.—At a meeting of carpenters of the Detroit district of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America held in the House of the Masses, yesterday, a resolution was unanimously passed demanding the recall of the present officials of the district council, who have done nothing for the benefit of the membership of the organization, but have injured the union by devoting their time to securing injunctions in capitalist courts against loyal and active members of the brotherhood.

Hutcheson's Rubber Stamps.

Aside from drawing their salaries these officials, according to the speakers did not even obey the constitution. They were acting as rubber stamps for "Czar" Hutcheson, president of the international, who acts as if the union were his personal property. The officers of the district council who are paid to attend to the needs of the membership were charged with gross negligence. Several speakers told of calling up the office and receiving no answer.

The present trouble in Detroit came to a head when William Reynolds, president of Local No. 2140 was expelled without trial. The entire membership rallied behind Reynolds who was dragged into a capitalist court by the fakers under an injunction, which seeks to prevent him from attending meetings of his local and of the district council of which he was president. Comrade Reynolds was in court last Saturday but the trial was postponed until today. As this is being written in the morning the developments are not yet known.

The Chicago Cases.

Nels Kjar of Chicago, was one of the principal speakers. Kjar showed how five members of Local 181 were illegally expelled by the local officials under orders from Harry Jensen, president of the district council in Chicago, and by "Czar" Hutcheson. The international president was carrying on a pogrom of expulsions thruout the country, Kjar, one of the "expelled" members, said and urged the carpenters in Detroit to keep up the fight until the fakers were thoroly defeated.

A committee was organized at the meeting to fight the Reynolds case. The secretary of the local of which Reynolds is president, paid a tribute to the work of its presiding officer, declaring that Reynolds had done more work voluntarily for the organization than Sharrock and company did for pay. Officials of practically every carpenters' local in Detroit were present at the meeting. The meeting pledged a fight to the finish for Reynolds and against the fakers.

Sixty-two locals from all parts of the country have endorsed the fight in behalf of Reynolds. The committee that is handling the Reynolds case is notifying all locals. Many letters were read at the meeting winding up with "we are with you in a fight to the finish."

The meeting made it quite clear that the real union men were out to get rid of the fakers who were drawing good pay and doing nothing but providing jobs for lawyers and hounding good trade unionists out of the industry. Another mass meeting was arranged for next Saturday in the House of the Masses at which every carpenter in Detroit is expected to be present.

'REDS' PROTEST AGAINST RETURN OF MILLERAND

PARIS, France, March 2.— Huge demonstrations were held by the Communists here and in other cities in France, against the return of former president Millerand to active political life and against his "nationalist" declarations defending a government ruled by bankers and industrialists. Millerand spoke at Chateau Marseilles, while Senegalese troops patrolled the streets with fixed bayonets to protect the upholder of the capitalists.

M. Caillaux also spoke in Paris. He declared that "the present government is the only chance the country has to keep on its feet at present." Caillaux said he expected to succeed Herriot as premier.

Marshal Foch's military committee has charged Germany with extreme violations of the disarmament provisions of the Versailles treaty.

MINERS' LEADER HAMMERS SPIKE IN "DAILY" DRIVE

George Voyzey of Verona, Ill., the progressive candidate for president of the United Mine Workers, who got over half as many votes as John L. Lewis in a bureaucrat-counted contest, sends in his dollar Tuesday for a last drive at the spike to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925.

"I am very desirous of meeting the comrades of the DAILY WORKER," he writes. "The DAILY WORKER is the life-blood of our party. While it is healthy, our organization can function best.

"Inclosed is one dollar for another blow with the hammer. The last spike must be driven home."

600 TOILERS DIE, 2,000 INJURED IN RIO DE JANEIRO

Catastrophe Takes Big Toll in Brazil

RIO DE JANIERO, March 2.—More than 600 persons, nearly all workers, were killed and more than 2,000 were injured in the explosion of tons of dynamite and thousands of litres of gasoline on Caju Island, Police Commissioner Salvador of Concelicao estimated today.

At this time an official government bulletin announced that 316 of the dead had been identified and 1,811 injured tabulated. Many bodies, it was feared, were burned to ashes in the fire that followed the devastating blast.

Commissioner Salvador made his estimate after a visit to the smouldering island.

Navy Scandals Revealed in Napa "Suicide" Probe

NAPA, Calif., March 2.—Charging that he was locked up as insane in order to surpress scandals in the navy alleged to have occurred when the fleet was in Asiatic waters, Lieutenant Frank Kennedy will be brought before the superior court on a writ of habeus corpus to determine whether he is insane.

Kennedy's attorney charges that he was spirited away from Mare Island navy yard to the Napa state insane asylum, following the apparent suicide of his friend, Lieutenant Albert Burleigh at the navy yard on Feb. 15. Kennedy charges he was locked up because he resented attentions of his superior officer Lieutenant Christie to his wife.

COAL BARONS IN PRELIMINARIES AT CLEVELAND

Arrange for Opening of Anti-Union Drive

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, March 2.—Preliminary conferences are being held here by the coal operators responsible for issuing the call for the conference which will be held here next Friday, of the coal barons of Ohio, western Pennsylvania, and as many of the other bituminous fields as will send deelgates.

Would Revise Wage Scale.

The object of the conference is to open war on the miners' union thru a revision of the Jacksonville agreement, which was entered into one year ago. The Ohio operators initiated the battle and the western Pennsylvania operators have joined openly with them. So far the Illinois and Indiana operators have not decided whether to join in or not, but Phil H. Penna, secretary of the Indiana operators' association, has called a meeting of the members of his association to decide on what steps to take.

Penna is the Judge Gary of the coal industry and he is one of the most bitter enemies of the coal miners' union. At a conference held in Milwaukee a few years ago, Penna made a violent speech denouncing the union and upbraiding the operators for their lack of militancy. "You will indulge in all kinds of threats but in the end you will walk up and sign on the line dotted by the union," he bellowed. An associated press reporter who was present, immediately dashed for the door, knowing that he had a first page story, but he was caught by the operators before he reached a telephone and the story was killed. Whatever Penna will decide on doing will be given careful consideration by the entire coal industry.

The call for the meeting to be held here next Friday did not mention the revision of the wage scale. Its object ostensibly is to "discuss the situation in the coal industry of the central competitive field."

Two members of the Illinois operators' wage scale committee have written the Ohio committee for further information.

Indiana Operators Confer.

TERRE HAUTE, Indiana, March 2.—A conference of Indiana coal operators met here today on the call of Phil H. Penna, secretary of the association. It is yet too early to ascertain what their action will be relative to attending the Cleveland conference next Friday. Indiana operators complain that the Jacksonville agreement makes it impossible for them to compete on the market with coal mined under non-union conditions. One of them said:

"It is not at all unlikely that ac

PUNCH AND JUDY OPENS NEW SHOW AT SPRINGFIELD, AS JOHNY WALKER BEGS FAVORS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March. 2—The Punch and Judy act of a labor union lobby trying to convince the capitalist legislature not to be a capitalist legislature, opens again today in the 54th Illinois general assembly, when the Illinois Federation of Labor, which, of course, does not believe that the working class should have a political party of its own, will try to persuade the judiciary committee, composed wholly of lawyers, that it should report favorably Johnny Walker's favorite excuse for spending money at the capitol, the anti-injunction bill.

The One Solution Ignored.

Ignoring the fact that the same legislation has repeatedly been rejected in previous legislatures, and wholly oblivious to the fact that injunctions are to be abolished only by mass violation, Walker is "marshalling his hosts" of shyster lawyers to oppose the manufacturers' association, which seems to have all the trumps.

The anti-injunction bill sets forth the "inherent and inalienable right to organize trade and labor unions" and declared that no "restraining order or injunction shall be granted by any court in the state or by any judge or judges thereof."

Walker Solicitous of Property Rights.

A second section reiterates the right of "free speech, free press and assembly" and again asserts no injunction shall be granted. In a third section it is provided no restraining order or injunction shall be granted as the result of a dispute over terms or conditions of employment "unless it be necessary to put irreparable injury to property or to a property right of the party making the application." And that "nothing shall be held as property unless it is land, goods, money or the product of labor or nature."

Section four, the hoary defiance of Gompers against economic fact, declares "the labor power of a human being shall not be treated as a commodity."

Elsewhere it is provided that no restraining order or injunction shall be issued "restraining or enjoining any person or persons from terminating any relations of employment or from ceasing to perform any work or labor, or from recommending, advising or persuading others to do so" and also provide for "peaceful picketing."

WESTERN ELECTRIC WORKERS INVITED TO CICERO PARTY DANCE

A grand international frolic and dance will be held in Cicero at Liberty Hall, 49th court and 14th St., Saturday evening, March 21. Admission will be thirty-five cents.

Workers at the Western Electric company are especially invited to attend this affair, and get acquainted with the Workers (Communist) Party. The Cicero English branch which is conducting the affair, announces that after the branch's debts are paid the money left over will be used in buying DAILY WORKER insurance policies.

"TO HELL WITH EUROPE" IS NEW BRITISH POLICY

Chamberlain Says England Comes First

LONDON, Eng., March 2.—Foreign Minister Austen Chamberlain has outlined the policy to be pursued by the British government toward Europe, in a secret memorandum distributed to government officials. Chamberlain's document puts the interests of the English property owners before all else.

It says, in effect, that Europe is in an unstable condition, and if necessary, the British government must let the workers of Europe starve rather than interfere to the detriment of the English interests.

The policy of isolation is out of date, however, Chamberlain states, not because England can benefit the masses of Europe, but because airplanes make the English subject to attack from France or Belgium and an alliance with Europe is necessary to prevent such an attack.

"PROGRESSIVES" PLEAD TO STAY IN CAL'S CAMP

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 2.—Republican senators who masquerated under the title of "progressive" during the last election campaign, have made official requests that they be permitted to crawl back into the good graces of the party of Coolidge and Wall Street.

Replying to a query from the committee on committees as to what political party they wished to register under as candidates for committee appointments, Senators Ladd and Frasier of North Dakota and Senator Brookhart of Iowa replied boasting of their long years of service in the party owned by big business.

"It is my desire that I be assigned to committee as a republican," wrote Brookhart, who assailed President Coolidge during the campaign, and supported LaFollette, rump republican.

Senator Ladd pleaded to be allowed to remain with the Coolidge party, citing his long record as a politician loyal to the republican party. Frasier wrote a similar letter to the committee.

Senator LaFollette was asked as to his position, but ignored the letter from Watson.

Royalty Attends at Church Rites for Deceased Socialist

STOCKHOLM, March 2.—Hjalmar Branting, socialist premier of Sweden under the monarchy, was buried yesterday in great pomp and ceremony. Branting died suddenly last week.

A great funeral procession moved from M. Branting's house in the suburbs thru Stockholm toward the six centuries old church, Stor Kyrkan, where funeral services were conducted.

Inside the church were King Gustave and the entire royal family, the members of the diplomatic corps and Ira Nelson Morris, former United States minister to Sweden.

They hopped off this morning from Macon, Ga. Eleven of the twelve planes that set out were in the group that reached Miami.

COOLIDGE RECOGNIZES CHANGE

WASHINGTON, March 2.—President Coolidge is reported by his official spokesman to be impressed with the fact that conditions relating to Russia and the problem of American recognition have changed in the past few months. He deplores public discussion of the matter just now, and discourages questions from visitors dealing with this subject.

STRIKERS NOT PLEASED WITH NEW CONTRACT

Only 500 Were Back at Work Yesterday

Five hundred of the 2,500 striking street laborers employed by the city of Chicago were back at work yesterday, following the settlement of the strike by Michael Carrozzo, business agent of the union.

The wage scale agreed to by Commissioner of Public Works Sprague and Carrozzo, as given to the DAILY WORKER by the officials of the union, gives the street cleaners and garbage collectors a raise of only fifteen cents per day, but raises the repair foreman's wages 60 cents per day. The wages of the dump foremen and teamsters have not yet been agreed upon.

When asked if the laborers were satisfied with such a small increase, Carrozzo smiled and said, "They've gone back to work, they must be satisfied otherwise they would have continued striking."

However, it is known that the strikers at the meeting on Sunday in Musician's Hall, gave some trouble before Carrozzo induced them to return to work. The fact that only 500 of the strikers went back to work out of the 2,500 who were out, shows that the strikers are dissatisfied with the settlement, some say.

The wage scale according to the terms of the settlement gives the street laborers $5.20 per day, the street repair foreman $7.85 per day, and the section foremen $6.40 per day.

tion will be taken at the Cleveland conference to reduce the wage scales, despite the agreement that has yet two years to run. Tho the agreement fixed the scale for a three-year period, the operators are justified in breaking the agreement when to keep it would mean a suspension of their business."

The Special Assessment.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 2.— It is now believed that the two months' special assessment levied on the membership of the United Mine Workers of America by the international executive was for the purpose of meeting an emergency such as the attack of the coal operators promised in the near future. While this was not admitted at union headquarters, Ellis Searles, editor of the Mine Workers' Journal and sometimes mouthpiece for John L. Lewis admitted "that there is a chance for a labor disturbance developing."

Working With Stoolpigeons.

Searles who has been working in conjunction with the department of justice, in fighting the radicals, is one of the slimiest capitalist lickspittles in the trade union movement. His chief usefulness is in his subserviency to the autocrat, John L. Lewis, and his willingness to do any dirty work for money.

When the Jacksonville pact was signed, Searles used up gallons of ink praising it. Now, he has to admit that it will not succeed in eliminating strife in the coal industry. As a matter of fact, it accomplished just what the operators wanted. It strangled the union until the coal barons were ready to take the offensive. Lewis and his stool pigeon, Searles, had the good will of the operators while they were warring on Howat, McLachlan, MacDonald and the other militants in the coal miners' union. Lewis and Green were dining with the capitalists and assuring them that they were perfectly safe and sane. Now, the time is ripe for the dirty work. But it is not Lewis and his fellow traitors that will suffer but the rank and file of the miners.

Will Lewis call a special convention to decide what steps should be taken to meet the emergency?

Sticking Close to God

PLYMOUTH, Vt., March 2.—With the old Coolidge family bible tucked in a corner of his suitcase, Col. John C. Coolidge, father of the president, today started for the inauguration at Washington. It is on this family bible that the oath of office is to be sworn by President Coolidge.

Hobbs Pleads "Not Guilty."

LONDON, March 2.—William Cooper Hobbs, Elderly Lawyer's clerk, pleaded "not guilty" in a loud voice when arraigned in old Bailey today, charged with defrauding Sir Harri Singh, wealthy young prince of India of $750,000.

SIKHS TO DIE FOR FIGHT WITH INDIAN PRIESTS

Objected to State Ruling Religion

LAHORE, British India, March 2.—Fifty-four defendants were found guilty of conspiracy in the Baban Akali conspiracy case. The defendants belonged to the "reformist" Sikh faction, which was organized to wrest the Sikh shrines from control of a manager appointed by the government. The Sikhs in this faction, altho basing their organization on opposition to interference of the government in their religious affairs, are said to be friendly toward Soviet Russia.

Four of the defendants were sentenced to death, nine to life imprisonment, and the others to long terms.

In 1881 the government incited the trouble by placing a manager in charge of the Sikh shrines, altho the majority of the Sikhs were opposed to his rule. Fighting has frequently broken out between the Sikhs and the priests in charge of religious affairs.

Mussolini Seriously Ill, Is Rumor in Rome

LONDON, Eng., March 2.— Word has come from Rome, via Paris, that Premier Mussolini is seriously ill here with ulcer of the stomach, but that owing to the censorship, the people of Italy believe Mussolini is only slightly indisposed with a cold.

The reconvening of the senate and the chamber of deputies has been postponed indefinitely, altho much important legislation is impending. Physicians attending Mussolini declared they are unable to tell how long Mussolini will be confined to his bed. It is declared by some fascisti that Mussolini suffered a severe hemorhage or a stroke of paralysis.

Like No Man's Land.

RIO DE JANIERO, March 2.—A no-man's land from which all buildings had disappeared, where holes twenty-five feet deep had been driven by terrific blasts, was found on Caju Island today.

Government Withholds Reports

Private official reports to which we had access gave the information that there were 600 workmen on Caju Island at the moment of the first blast. None escaped, the reports stated. The total population of the island was not definitely known.

News of the explosion was not published in Rio de Janiero as the government did not wish to alarm the country further.

Your correspondent visited the scene of Friday's catastrophe. He was taken over in the police boat, the only correspondent granted official permission to visit the island where hundreds of lives were wiped out in the dynamite and oil explosions.

Partly Raze Workers' Quarters.

A crane weighing three tons was blown a half mile to the island of Conceisco. In addition the tons of dynamite and thousands of litres of gasoline which exploded, 1,400 casks of pitch exploded in the flames.

Buildings of five stories on surrounding islands were knocked down by the force of the blasts. Workmen's quarters at Ponta Rola and in Xichtheroy City, a town of 35,000 population, were partly razed.

During the second night 29 police wagons were busy all night transporting the wounded from neighboring islands to the hospitals. The government transformed its barracks into hospitals as an emergency measure.

Find More Corpses in Ruins with 274 Bodies Already in Morgues

BUENOS AIRES, March 2.—More bodies were being taken from the black ruins of Caju Island, where tons of dynamite and power were touched off Friday by blazing gasoline from two lighters, said advices today from Rio de Janerio.

The gasoline still was blazing 24 hours after the first blast, converting the bay into a steaming cauldron and sending clouds of vapor over Rio de Janerio, adding to the stifling heat of an already sweltering tropical city.

Later advices from Rio said that 274 bodies had been brought from Caju Island and placed in morgues in the city.

Chicago Juniors' Convention Maps Out Future Work

The Chicago Young Workers' League Juniors' city convention held Sunday, March 1, was an inspiring occasion for the visitors who filled the hall as well as for the ardent little delegates from the 19 Chicago Junior Groups.

The convention opened with the singing of the International and such singing and such fine spirit must be witnessed—it cannot be described. Then the little "Leninists" plunged right into work and kept it until a complete program of action for future activities was drawn up.

The organizers' report laid the basis for discussion with the question: What are the tasks for the future? And then plans were made for the following program:

To get more and more comrades into our ranks. To work in the schools thru the school nuclei. To increase the sale of the Young Comrade.

Under the head of educational work outdoor meetings including games and discussions for the summer with a view to drawing the neighborhood children into the games and discussions were decided upon.

For the group meetings educational discussion of the articles in the Young Comrade on American History (the history told the way it really happened). These stories will also be taken up in a number of debating teams to be formed which many juniors are eagerly awaiting.

The new sports director was instructed to arrange for a well trained baseball team and for many hikes and picnics during the summer and for a complete sports registration of the Chicago Juniors.

The following members comprise the new Junior C. E. C. Organizer: Philip Boyer, Secretary, Deana Echelis, Educational Director: Albert Glatsky, Social Director: Babe Cohen, Sports Director: Jack Cohen, Literature Agent: George Jura, Publicity: Margaret Sungail. Editorial Committe: Margaret Sungail, Rose Plotkin and Minnie Epstein.

Short, Simple Lesson of Greater Monopolization in the Bread Industry

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, the "open shop" war against the workers' unions and the trustification of the bosses' dollars stand out as the two big manifestations of the nation's growing baking industry.

Sixty per cent of all baking in this country has been taken out of the home and put into factories, just as the spinning of wool has disappeared from the early New England fireside and gone into the great mills fo the woolen trusts, also one of the most bitter of the labor-baiting monopolies.

There is the Purity Bakeries Corporation, for instance, that is taking much space these days on the financial pages of the big dailies, in its new financing ventures. In fact, this "Bread Trust" having only been incorporated on Dec. 1, 1924, has been most active in getting its grip on the smaller corporations already in existence, until it now has 24 plants in 22 cities in ten states, from New Jersey to Missouri, and from Minnesota to Texas.

The bread monopolists, in order to get the public to invest its dollars in bread trust shares, advances the familiar arguments of the capitalists. They show the saving under trustification, resulting in benefits that accrue exclusively to stockholders. No mention is made anywhere that the workers in this industry, among the most cruelly exploited anywhere, are entitled to any benefits.

Let labor get this straight. All the benefits of monopoly production under capitalism are seized by the capitalists. Any benefits the worker gets he must fight for with his own organized strength. The Purity Bakeries Corporation, for instance, and the same applies to all the trusts, claims that the "benefits of combined operation" are the following:

"The bringing together of the several subsidiary companies under a single management will permit a standardization of general policy and manufacturing processes, a co-ordination of advertising effort and a more economical purchasing system and will naturally result in operating and merchandising economies, WHICH SHOULD BE REFLECTED IN INCREASED PROFITS.

"In addition THE PROFITS are expected to reflect the steady increase in production resulting from the constant growth in population in the twenty-two large cities, and the many surrounding smaller ones, which the several companies serve, as well as from the new business which is constantly developing as the American housewife recognizing the purity and nutritive value of the products of the great sanitary automatic bakeries of today, turns from the home-made to the bakery-made product. The opportunities for expansion in this direction will be better appreciated when it is realized that approximately 40 per cent of all the baked goods consumed in the United States is still baked in the home by the housewife."

There is something in that statement for every bakery worker to ponder over. Increasing monopolization will make it easier to introduce more expensive and greater labor-saving machinery, throwing more workers on the industrial scrap heap; forcing those who remain to toil under inhuman conditions as mere appendices of the continually developing machine monster.

The bakery worker needs his union to fight for wages, hours and conditions. But he needs the kind of union that enters the class struggle in the war against this profit system. He needs an organized vanguard to lead in that struggle. That organization is the Workers (Communist) Party in the United States, American section of the Communist International, that directs the fight for the abolition of capitalism, when all the benefits of the machine age will accrue to the workers; not to the profiteers. That is the short, simple lesson growing out of the greater monopolization of the bread industry.

published. As already pointed out, it was a hearty tribute to the splendid work being accomplished by the Communist government. The paid liars of the capitalist press, sought to twist certain paragraphs into an attack. There is nothing farther from the truth.

A FORMER Russian nobleman named Andre Avinoff, entomologist in the Carnegie museum, discovered a feminine Utopia in the wilds of the Himalayan mountains, in West Thibet. Each woman can have as many husbands as she pleases. The minimum is set at three, by general agreement. A woman unable to support at least three husbands is considered of very low calibre. Of course, the husbands help to pay expenses. They tend the looms and find recreation in knitting contests. This discovery was made before cross-word puzzling became the fashion.

THE men for whom there is no active demand are sent into monastaries until the glut in the market is relieved. A movement to demand equal rights for men was crushed with great cruelty by the female tyrants, and the leader of the crusade beheaded. This drastic action, however, caused a revulsion of feeling and threats of connubial sabotage drove the female bureaucracy to resort to more subtle methods. Signs were hung up in the homes suggesting that the husbands smile, much after the fashion of an American United States cigar store. It was pointed out that as men were the weaker sex, their place was in the home, and equal rights would constitute a serious menace to the marriage system and would break up the home. It's a good yarn provided the Russian nobleman was not lying.

HARD DRINKING TO MARK CAL'S INAUGURATION

Bankers Are Flocking to Washington

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 2.—The national capital is overrun with office seekers, bankers and manufacturers, who supplied the money to elect Coolidge, society people who are making Coolidge's inauguration the occasion for indulging their liking for "high life," and morbid curiosity seekers.

General Charles Gates ("Hell an' Maria") Dawes, who has formally resigned his banking interests, but who still retains his financial holdings, was met on his arrival by a delegation in "plug hats" and long tailed coats.

At the same time revelations of debauchery among the officials of the government and their families were made by Congressman Frank D. Scott, republican, and his wife, in Scott's divorce suit.

Fred V. Sikes, house detective at a hotel where Mrs. Scott stayed, told in his deposition of alleged parties in Mrs. Scott's apartment which he said were featured by heavy drinking and general hilarity.

Mrs. Scott will take the stand at Alpena and will elaborate on her previous charges of "high flying" and hard drinking among the Washington congressional and official set.

STORM LOOMS IN GERMANY OVER NEXT PRESIDENT

Ebert Is to Be Buried This Thursday

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, March 2.— Storm clouds of political conflict hover over Germany as the remains of the social democratic president Ebert lie in state at the palace on Wilhelmstrasse, where the crowds who came to gaze could see only dimly at a distance thru the silk curtains the flickering candles lighting the reception hall and glancing from the bayonets of the Reichswehr guard.

American Imperialism Mourns.

Across from the palace the American flag fluttered at half mast over the United States embassy, the first of the foreign legations to lower its colors in signal of sympathy. American imperialism, as the crowds knew, has cause for mourning.

The official program includes a memorial ceremony at the presidential palace on Wednesday afternoon, and a cortege down the Unter den Linden to the reichstag, where the deputies will be expected to pay their farewell to Ebert. The interment will be at Heidelburg on Thursday morning.

A hot controversy is raging, meanwhile, over Ebert's successor, frequently mentioned candidate seems to be former Chancellor Marx, who can hold the votes of the middle parties, the centrists, social democrats, democrats and others.

The nationalists of the extreme right, while regarding Ebert as a political enemy, are quite restrained in their remarks as to Ebert's political life.

No Crocodile Tears for Traitors.

The Communist daily, The Rote Fahne, has no tears so shed over the passing of Ebert. There is no hypocritical sentiment about the Communist opposition, which regards Ebert as the incarnate symbol of treachery to the interests of the workers.

"It is a cowardly maxim that one shall say only good of the dead," it says. "That does not count for us, particularly at this grave. Fritz Ebert was the personification of treason and counter revolution."

Politicians Take Pleasure Trip As Workers Here Sweat

Democratic aldermen and local politicians have left for a vacation in Hot Springs, Arkansas, to "recuperate," they said, from their activities in the aldermanic campaign.

Included in the party going to Hot Springs while the workers of Chicago fight to hold their jobs and make enough money to eke out a mean existence, are George Brennan, democratic party boss; Arthur O'Brien, private secretary to Mayor Dever; Francis X. Busch, corporation counsel; Aldermen Dorsey Crowe, Joseph McDonough, Dennis Horan, Al Horan, and Martin O'Brien, chairman of the democratic managing committee.

The aldermen have been accused of leaving to dodge the fight on Mayor Dever's traction ordinance, which will go to the voters in April.

GREEN THINKS COLLABORATION MAY BE DANDY

Labor "Leader" Says "Wait and See"

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 2—The effort of big corporations like the United States Steel corporation to inveigle their employes into class collaboration schemes by persuading or forcing them to buy shares of stock, is not condemned by William Green, cautious follower in the foot-steps of Samuel Gompers.

In fact, says Green, it may be a good thing. He says, "It may take the form of workers using their power as stockholders to humanize the industrial policy of business." This is the sugar-coating for the class collaboration pill.

But William is a cautious person, dreadfully cautious. Knowing that wherever and to the extent that such a scheme has been tried out, the workers—far from "humanizing" industry, have been bamboozled into working their daylights out, producing millions of profits for the large, wealthy stockholders to get a few extra pennies in "dividends" from one or two shares of stock—knowing all this, Green is cautious enuf to say:

"Thus far the matter is in the experimental stage. When it goes far enuf to enable us to get an idea of its tendency to mold the conduct of a large section of the workers, we will know whether it takes them out of the labor movement."

That it is the business of a labor leader to know what direction such schemes take the workers, seems to be no business or concern of Green, the "leader" of American labor. Evidently, after "a large section of the workers" has been tricked into class collaboration with the bosses to their own injury and that of their class, Green will then know about it, at least.

Critics of Green among the left wing elements say that when such a thing happens, Green will be among the leaders of such a decadent section.

Women Labor For Less.

LATVIA, March 2.—When unemployment relief work in the way of road repairing and similar labor was offered to unemployed registrants, it is said that while the men were rather reluctant to accept the work, at 130 marks a day, so many women applied, at a wage of 100 marks a day, that it was difficult to find work for them.

STARVATION STALKS THRUOUT SOUTHERN ILLINOIS AS MINERS SEARCH VAINLY FOR EMPLOYMENT

By ALEX REID.

CHRISTOPHER, Ill., March 2.—Economic conditions in southern Illinois are fast approaching a crisis. The social life of the miners is a disgrace to civilization. Unemployment is on the increase. Mines are shutting down thruout the field, and hungry miners, gaunt and lean, unsuccessfully looking for new masters. Women and children, sick in body and mind, thru semi-starvation, passing to and fro like specters in the night.

One miner died here the other day and on investigation not a crust was found in the house. Thousands of miners hitting the back doors for a hand-out, with pitiful tales of harrowing conditions in all the mining camps.

The old North Mine here is permanently shut down, throwing out of employment 600 men. The New North, Buckner, and the East Mine are working two days a week. The Sessor men have been idle for a year. Starvation is rampant there. A committee was at the Christopher Local No. 2376, from Sessor, the other night explaining the horrible conditions there. And out of the two days a week that the East Mine is working the men assessed themselves approximately $525 to buy a little food for their starving brothers.

On every hand grumbling is heard, and concern is pictured on the faces of others besides the coal miners. They are beginning to realize that there is only one cure for the disease of an outgrown economic system, and that is, to displace it with a new system, i e., social ownership and workers' control of all that is collectively produced and used.

In the United States today we have "democracy" with a capital "D." Starvation is the order of the day. Wall Street is in the saddle. And "Cal" still rides his wooden steed in silence.

Hardwood Finishers of Philadelphia Are Still Going Strong

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Mar. 2.—Demands are being made on all members of the Cabinet Manufacturers' Association of Philadelphia and vicinity, for an increase in wages from 80 to 90 cents per hour for shop work, with $1.25 an hour for outside work, by the Hardwood Finishers' Local Union 426, affiliated with the Painters' District Council No. 21.

Demands will be presented to the bosses on the first of March to take effect the first day of May, this year. Several of the shops to receive the demands are union shops, others have no agreement.

The hardwood finishers of this vicinity have had pretty hard going since 1920, when they were locked out by the employers, but 1923 found them still on the job battling, with the spirit of organization unbroken—much to the disappointment of the bosses.

The first of May, if the increase is not granted and agreements signed, will find the same bunch on the picket line, where they will stay untill all questions are settled correctly and to their satisfaction.

It is generally understood that the painters here will make demands for $1.25 an hour on the first of April. They are strongly organized and will be able to put up a good fight.

Union Bricklayer Says His Officials Are All Traitors

By A Union Brick-Layer.

PHILADELPHIA.—In an article on anti-laborites published in the DAILY WORKER of Feb. 18, I noticed the name of Thomas R. Preece of the Bricklayers' Union and thought the following note might be of interest to your readers.

From my many years of experience within the Bricklayers' Union (and I am still a member), I can say that not alone Preece, but all of the officials of this organization are labor fakers and traitors and not labor leaders. They have continued to sell the organization to the masters for a few tokens, until now, the building trades are badly demoralized, and in no shape to successfully combat an "open shop" drive.

As a particular instance, in January 1924, I was in Philadelphia at a time when the bricklayers were fighting against an "open shop" movement. This struggle had just gotten a good start when in comes Vice-President Mr. Thornton (he had not been sent by either the International or the local union), and tells the local union that they are responsible for the existing conditions in that city.

He said that he had consulted with Adkins & Co., scab contractors at that time, and they told him that they were satisfied with their non-union bricklayers. And he then proceeded to tell the members of the union what they (Mr. Adkins & Co.) had brought him to Philadelphia for. And he a vice-president of the union.

If you can beat that, you have got to go some!

Dictatorship of $ Aided By Professor Raphael's Bluffology

By S. SMULEVITZ.

CHICAGO.—At 7:00 o'clock in the morning the street cars are crowded with workers, half-sleepy. Many of the workers get up very early in the morning for fear of being late to work which would result in their being fired.

Tho a majority of the early morning street car riders are on their way to the shops to produce the riches of the world for their bosses with but a pittance for themselves, yet there is another group making up a good part of these early morning crowds. These are the unemployed job-hunters, and their numbers are increasing daily in our country of plenty and prosperity.

On this paticular morning, I happened to be a job-hunter myself. The prospects of landing a job seemed to be good when my eyes beheld an advertisement by the Phillipsborn's Mail Order House in the Tribune, so I applied. After filling out an application blank, which asks about three dozen foolish questions, I was told to "come back and see in several days," which is a polite way of saying "nothing doing."

As I was leaving, a worker, in broken English, begged me to fill out his application blank for him. "Joe" was this Italian worker's name. He seemed to be intelligent and well educated in his own language. To my amazement he told me to put down "$20" in answer to their question, "Salary Desired." He laughed when I told him that $20 a week for his labor was not enuf.

Here is the lesson as to the condition of the workers in this capitalist America. Joe, 30 years old, with a wife and two children to support, did not dare ask more than $20 a week for the sale of his labor. The worker in America is being kept in fear and subjection. He regards his terrible conditions as a matter of course never to be changed. But they will be!

Another Italian worker also warned my brother, who was likewise hunting for a job, not to put down more than $22 to the question "Salary Desired" when filling out his application blank.

Such is the condition of the worker in America, ruled by capitalism, tho they say it is a "democratic" country. Russia calls herself a "dictatorship" of the proletariat. Altho America looks with horror upon the word "dictatorship," yet what about the dictatorship of the mighty $ that rules supreme in this country?

And then the funny part comes in wher the socialists speak in defense of capitalism and attack the only workers' and peasants' government. And Abramovich, professor of bluffology, has the nerve to make his bluffological lectures before workers who know he has betrayed the cause of true socialism.

1,100 More Miners Thrown Out of Work By Lewis' Betrayal

By LOUIS JOICH.

ZIEGLER, Ill.—The following notice was posted at Mine No. 2 of the Bell and Zoller Coal and Mining company, which has a capacity of 15,000 tons a day:

"To Our Employes at Ziegler Mine No. 2.

"Due to our inability to profitably compete with coals from the non-union fields, this mine will shut down for an indefinite period on Thursday, Feb. 26, 1925. Notice is hereby given to loaders to load out their coal and remove their tools if they so desire on or before the above date. All employes are requested to remove their clothes from the wash-house on or before this same date. We will be responsible for neither tools nor clothes.

"Bell & Zoller Coal and Mining Company,

"Ziegler, February 24th, 1925."

Thru this order, which is issued by the real rulers of this "democratic" country of ours, over 1,100 industrial slaves lose even their present miserable and inadequate right to earn a living.

Where will these poor and exploited miners, with their families go now. It seems that brothers (?) John L. Lewis and Frank Farrington are not in a hurry to answer this question.

Plan Organization Drive of Building Trades in Minneapolis

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Painters' Union No. 186 had a very well attended special meeting for the purpose of devising the plan to organize the unorganized in the bulding industry.

Dan W. Stevens presented a plan asking for delegates from every building trades union in Minneapolis to start an organization campaign beginning the first of April and continuing thruout the summer season.

A committee of five was elected to make the preparatory arrangements for calling of a conference of delegates and also arranging two mass meetings that will be held in the assembly room of the court house during the next month.

This meeting to be used to arouse the workers of Minneapolis to the necessity of joining their respective craft unions and also to make them attend the union meetings.

Philadelphia A. C. W. Discovers Just How Union is Being Run

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—Just an informational note to let the A. C. W of A. militants who read the T. U. E. L. page know how our official bureaucrats carry out their will over the wishes of the membership in this town.

We have just been thru a local election in the A. C. W. of A. where three Jewish, one Lithuanian, and one Italian business agent were to be elected. There were four Jewish candidates. But casting a majority of votes for a left-wing candidate is not sufficient to elect any more in our organization. Our left-wing representative elected by the votes of the members, was declared not elected on the flimsy excuse that each craft should be represented by one business agent.

That this is a political move to counteract the growing left-wing control is further emphasized in the elections held in Local 140 for executive board and for joint board delegation. The left wing carried the election by a vote of 89 to 52.

The presiding officer at that meeting was the manager of the joint board. He supervised and declared the election legal. However, at the following meeting of the joint board the credentials of Local 140 were rejected on the stupid excuse that on the night of the election there was trouble at the meeting. The trouble consisted of 25 right-wingers leaving the hall when they saw they were going to be badly defeated.

A committee of the joint board has been elected to investigate the matter. The whole trouble is that the left-wing is growing in strength and the reactionaries are ready to do almost anything to stop their onward march. But it cannot be done.

"Learn How to Write By Writing," Says Worker Who Does It

The following letter expresses what we wish to say much more forcibly than we could say it ourselves:

"Dear Comrade: Received your letter acknowledging the story I wrote to the DAILY WORKER, pertaining to conditions here. You request me to write stories again from here.

"I will be glad to write at different times, and will so improve my writing and the story every time.

"I am glad to learn that you are intending to organize a new corps of writers in every town where there is a branch of the party or a T. U. E. L. group, to write stories and reports on the conditions in their territories.

"When the workers learn to write, they will accomplish it by writing often, then there will be lots of stories and reports. These reporters will improve every time, by reading their stories corrected, and by a little assistance from the party.

"I myself have had only five years of public schooling and that all in a foreign language. I am handicapped in writing details, yet by writing often, I could give a fair report. I consider all of us workers to be in the same mud, and for that very reason it is necessary that we improve our expression, so the reporting of the news will help every one of us.—Yours for Bolshevization."

This is the splendid spirit which is being shown by many of the worker-correspondents we are organizing all over the country. This should be the spirit of all of them. Give us notes on the happenings of importance in your locality, including definite dates, names, etc., and whether it is put down in good English or not does not matter. We can attend to that part of it here.

Each one might make of it for himself a correspondence school on reporting, by keeping a copy of the reports he sends in and then checking up with the articles as they appear in the paper, as the comrade has so ably put it in the above letter.

Workers in the shop and on the job—send us the news!

CALL STEEL WORKERS TO ACTION ON PROGRESSIVE PROGRAM FOR APRIL CONVENTION AT PITTSBURGH

NILES, Ohio.—The reactionary officialdom presiding over the destines of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers are frantic in their haste to present their annual plausible alibi to the coming national convention in Pittsburgh, Pa., the first Monday in April. An awakening rank and file demands that the officialdom omit the flowers and cease to function as a mutual admiration extolling their virtues as total abstainers from the use of tobacco and offering this as recommendation for continuance in office

Labor fakers disguised as 'patron saints' have long been the curse of the American labor movement and the steel workers who have been compelled to suffer wage reductions and a demoralization of their union by the actions of their mis-leaders have reached the extreme end of their endurance.

April Convention a Showdown.

The coming national convention will demand a show down on the part of M. F. Tighe and company, and it behooves all members of this union to get on the job and remain on the job and to insist that the officialdom dispense with their cathedral chimes and prepare to organize the entire steel and iron industry.

End the Censorship.

The present theological editor of the Journal, weekly publication of the union, maintains a czar-like censorship over its columns and sees to it that not one word concerning the rank and file rebellion reaches the lodges. Letters of great importance to the members have been returned to the lodge correspondents with a warning from the reverend editor that publication of same constitutes libel. Anything that shows up the steel barons and their "friends of labor" is considered "unfit to publish," and of no concern to the rank and file steel workers.

This ghastly spectacle of organized resistance to rank and file demands, has dragged this once militant organization of steel workers down into the pits of despair, where it exists merely because the steel barons so desire. The past year shows a great slump in membership, a greater slump in prestige and a record of wage reductions.

Officials Lay Down on Job.

No organized resistance has been put forth by the officiadom, and whatever demands have been made by the steel barons for further reduction of wages has been readily consented to by the officialdom. The union lacks a clean cut militant leadership and the membership must not be deceived by the dust the officialdom is throwing into their eyes that all the ills of the A. A. of I. S. & T. W. are suffering from is caused by the "REDS."

The A. A. of I. S. & T. W. has been in a state of decay for years, ever since its officialdom, who are still in power, knifed the steel strike and aided the steel barons in defeating for the time being all organization of their mills. The present officialdom sponsored a second recent attempt to organize the steel workers which resulted in a ghastly failure.

The steel workers refused to be stung by the same bee twice, yet the officialdom will flaunt this failure to organize the steel workers as evidence that the steel workers "refuse to accept organization."

Organized Rank and File Must Act.

Whenever the rank and file of the A. A. of I. S. & T. W. can show that the demand for organization comes from them, whenever they can show that M. F. Tighe and company have nothing to do with the campaign, whenever the A. A. of I. S. & T. W. can show that they will accept as brothers engaged in a common struggle all the unorganized, these unorganized steel workers will rally to their banners by the thousands.

The coming national convention of the A. A. of I. S. & T. W. will be of historical importance and the delegates elected by the lodges must be workers, able and prepared to present not only the viewpoint of their own members but the unorganized steel workers as well.

They must not be deluded by cries of "red," coming from M. F. Tighe and company, but must remember that the progressive movement is a rank and file rebellion against their reactionary leaderships.

No Passing of Buck.

They must further remember that the recent alleged attempt to organize the steel workers, in which their officialdom took part, was a stinging rebuke to their present officialdom and the convention should not allow the officialdom to pass the buck on to the membership.

If the convention fails to prepare or issue a demand for the immediate organization of the steel workers, then insofar as the A. A. of I. S. & T. W. is concerned, the finish can be said with flowers.

Prepare for Action.

The convention has within its hands the welfare of thousands of steel and iron workers. They can take heed of the crying need for a militant organization campaign based upon rank and file demands, or they can allow their future to be controlled and directed by reactionary officials who have no more desire to organize the steel workers than they had to back up the great steel strike.

The convention must select organizers loyal to the rank and file, and not distributors of propaganda against the rank and file concocted by the officaldom. It must deal with the deplorable financial condition and it MUST call for a general organization campaign of the steel and iron workers with the officialdom on the bleachers.

All Attention to Convention.

A. A. of I. S. & T. W. lodges should devote their time from now on to the convention and they must hold their reactionary officialdom strictly to account for their lack of leadership.

FRENCH BUDGET FOR ARMY FOUGHT BY COMMUNISTS

Socialists Worse Than Conservatives, Claim

PARIS, March 2.—The chamber of deputies was enlivened yesterday with the attack of the Communists on the government's estimates for the needs of the army. Deputy Jean Renaud led the onslaught.

Renaud demanded to know why the government, supposed to be a socialist one pretending pacificism toward other nations and its own oppressed classes, should ask credits for more men, material and horses than the conservatives required before the war.

The government is asking funds for 607,000 men, 32,000 officers, 72,000 noncommissioned officers and 60,000 horses. Renaud pointed out that these figures represented 100,000 men, 4,000 officers, 2,000 non-commissioned officers and 45,000 horses more than the army of the conservatives between 1905 and 1913. The country faced but one possible enemy—Germany— he declared in denouncing a militaristic policy. He wanted to know if the government intended to use these troops against striking workers.

After the debate the Communists were outvoted and the amendment to reduce the number of troops to 500,000 lost. Unexpected aid to the government came from Paul Boncour, socialist and French delegate to the league of nations. He said that to reduce the existing army would "constitute danger of death to the country."

EMPLOYERS ROB FOREIGN LABOR IN AUSTRALIA

SYDNEY, Australia, March 2.—Large numbers of Italian, Greek, Bulgarian and Jugo-Slav immigrants are being exploited at ridiculously low wages in Australia. In northern Queensland, Italians have been brot in by syndicates of sugar cane growers, and work for wages as low as 15 shillings (approximately $3.75) per week, and board.

Unscrupulous employers induce immigrants from Mediterranean countries to sign agreements to work at the union wage, but after transporting them to country jobs, pay them much less. The ranks of the unemployed are being swelled.

U. S. Makes Usual Protest

PEKING, March 2.—The United States has sent a strong protest to China for the recent infringement of American sovereignty when the American river steamer Chichuen was seized by Chinese authorities in the upper Yangtze recently, it was learned at the American legation here today. The captain and passengers aboard the Chichuen were arrested and were refused permission to leave the ship for several days, according to the protest.

SOVIET SCHOOL TO BE KNOWN AS 'HOUSE OF WORKERS' AFTER MARCH 7

Next Saturday, March 7, the Soviet School will "change hands." It will be known after that date as the House of the Workers. This change was arranged at a conference of delegates from the Technical Aid Society, the Russian branch of the Workers Party and the Russian Cooperative Society that owns two cooperative restaurants. It was too heavy a burden for the Society for Technical Aid to Soviet Russia to keep up the building of the Soviet school. It has been practically a house of the workers where many different labor organizations met. Everybody made use of the building but only the Technical Aid Society carried the burden. A few weeks ago a conference of labor organizations was called and a proposition was made to them to take over the building on a co-operative basis. The conference agreed to the plan and the matter was turned over to the organizations. The new name was adopted at the conference. The three above mentioned organizations decided in the affirmative. The others are still discussing the matter. The official opening of the House of the Workers will take place Saturday, March 7, at 8 P. M. with a Russian vetcherinka at 1902 West Division St.

Impudent Bosses Stir Ire of "Dark Room" Slaves

NEW YORK, March 2.—"PHOTOGRAPHER—Young man for dark room work only; must be experienced in developing plates; $15 weekly. Aldene 1628 Broadway, 50th."

The photographic workers read it again. Once more. Rubbed their noses, turned the film, made another scratch on the plate retouching the picture of millionaire debutantes, got mad, called a mass meeting of the Photographic Workers' Union of America—to look at this advertisement again, now photographed and handed around to the assembled artists who puckered up their lips and got ready to say something that would not look well on the screen or anywhere else.

Get Together in Big Meeting.

At the Stuyvesant Casino, the boys from the dark rooms of the industry that is not in the limelight of the press and the public assembled to make one great stride forward toward a more complete organization.

"It's about time that we do something," said Louis A. Baum, secretary of the union, who acted as chairman of the meeting, and read another juicy ad that made its way under the skin of the fellows that were already somewhat touched up.

"WANTED—Photographer, all around man, must be neat, alert, accustomed to wearing a high collar, creased trousers and does not object to having his shoes shined occasionally. Salary to start, $10 a week."

Mere Boys Do Work.

"Mere boys have to work in dark and damp places," said Baum, "where sanitary conditions are unthinkable, where smell and fumes drive you insane, with no air and not a chance to escape without contracting disease and getting started rapidly on the way to an early grave."

"There is only one thing for you men and boys to do," said J. O. Bentall, one of the speakers. "All workers who expect to protect themselves must do so together. One man demands do not get far. The demand of a strong union gets anything it calls for. There are 5,000 of you here in New York. When 5,000 of you are organized the bosses will squeal and not you."

Sadie Amter told the audience that "the great factor in the present civilization is organization. In Russia all the workers are in the union and they do the bossing themselves. There they own the government as well as the jobs."

Worker Makes First Speech.

The first speech in his life was made by Irvine Overfield, a member of the union. "The bosses are organized," said Overfield, "and we might as well make up our minds that they have not organized to be able to do more good to us. They have already the blacklist and can tell who is helping to organize the union of the workers."

Brother Lakin told how the boss keeps track of every minute of the time spent in developing or retouching or printing, and showed how impossible it is to do the work expected. The task is like that in a prison.

Many signed application cards to unite with the union and plans for getting all the workers in the photographic industry interested are laid, the whole membership of about 130 being active.

N.D. NONPARTISAN LEAGUERS IN ONE OF THEIR STUNTS

Save Own Hide in Plan for New Betrayals

BISMARCK, N. D., March 2.—Pandemonium reigned supreme in the lower house of the North Dakota legislature when H. B. 279 came up for final passage, this bill being at the foot of the calendar, having only thirty minutes in which to pass and to be taken to the senate. This was the fiftieth and the last day and hour when all bills passed had to go to the senate.

It seems as if the non-partisan league politicians slipped one over on the independents by introducing this bill at such a late hour, mainly for the purpose of putting the I. V. A. of the lower house on record, knowing that the bill would not have the ghost of a show to pass the senate.

Fight Miller's Bill.

If their motives were any other than political fence building for themselves, "the league" leaders had plenty of opportunity to support bills of greater importance, such as the banking measures introduced by Comrade Miller and Representative Herbert Roberts of Mercer county, in which instance many leaguers voted with the I. V. A. to kill these bills which would have saved the farmers' deposits and given them a lower rate of interest, while H. B. 279 only acts as a referee between the depositers and the bankers by providing for local receivers after the banks have been closed.

On final roll call the independents, quite naturally, did not wish to go on record as opposing the bill and therefore resorted to dilatory motions and general filibustering, hoping to delay vote on same until the hour hand of the legislative clock pointed at two. The leaguers seeing their game was about to be frustrated, proceeded to take the roll call and amid shouts coming from the I. V. A. side of the house: "Mr. Speaker, Mr. Speaker," many independents explaining their votes with the object of killing time.

The speaker shouts back: "Write your explanation and bring it to the desk; we will print it in the record," and at the same time calling to the sergeant-at-arms to seat certain I. V. A. lawyer-members which was kept up until the roll call was completed. Some of the legislators moved the inkstands nearer themselves so that they might be within closer reach.

The bill passed the house and the non-partisans in the senate, preventing the senate from adjourning, received the bill which was killed in jig time.

Thus the non-partisan politicians think they saved the day for themselves to come back again and further betray the people.

Barton Grabs the Job.

DES MOINES, March 2.—James F. Barton, of Fort Dodge, Ia., state adjutant of the American legion, announced here today he has accepted the post of national adjutant of the legion, tendered him by National Commander Drain. Barton said he would take up his new work on April 1. He succeeds Russel G. Creviston.

BUILDERS AT WORK

Johnny Reds to "Daily Workerize" Parents

THE little rebels in the Junior Section of the Young Workers League have on more than one occasion shown they can do things of real value to the movement. But the little Juniors of West Allis, Wisconsin, sprung a new one that promises well to make the older Reds look up in wonder.

These little rebels desiring to do their share in the DAILY WORKER sub campaign now going on in Milwaukee and vicinity, decided to act in their own town of West Allis by beginning at home! Their first drive is now going on to "Daily Workerize the Parents 100 per cent."

Can you imagine how sheepishly the older "hardened Reds" will look when a little rebel catches them up on the fact that they have overlooked one of the tasks of a party member by not being a subscriber to the DAILY WORKER?

Many of the Juniors are of parents who do not belong to our party. We know of many instances where a Junior has been instrumental in bringing in his or her parents. And if the West Allis campaign is a success here's a field for possible new members for our party.

Here is a fine example for the Juniors to follow—and to this particular group of Little Johnny Reds in West Allis we give credit for one of the finest little campaigns we have ever heard of.

ANNA LOUISE STRONG, AMERICAN JOURNALIST, IS HEAD OF CHILDREN'S COLONY MOVEMENT IN SOVIET RUSSIA

NEW YORK, March 2.—A new children's colony in Russia has been started by sympathizers in this country, another will be begun in a few days and two or three more will have their inception in probably less than a month. Our correspondent, Anna Louise Strong, who has just returned from Russia, will return to the Soviet Republic in May to begin the new John Reed colony in Novgorod Gubernia, started by subscriptions of lovers of Russia and her children, in a group in New York. Nearly two thousand dollars have been pledged to give to Miss Strong to begin work there immediately upon her arival.

Tells of Her Work.

A dinner was given to Miss Strong by these sympathizers in New York Friday, at which she told of her work in begin given lands and buildings and other help by the Soviet authorities and of the colony now being self-supporting after a year of splendid, enthusiastic labor by about 150 Russian children—the future helpers in the government and development of Russia.

Five thousand dollars will be needed to give the new John Reed Colony its start and it is considered certain that the sixty to seventy women and men in the new New York group will find that amount inside of the year in which it is positively expected the new colony will live on its own work.

The Soviet government has given Miss Strong about 900 acres of land and a monastery and buildings in Novgorod Gubernia to start the new colony. She was asked by the government to take up the work in the first John Reed Colony in Saratov, which is now flourishing and has now been requested to keep going in this field.

Idea Takes Here.

From talks in Boston by Miss Strong another group is talking of standing sponsor for a colony for which the Soviets will give land and buildings. As Russia and her children have many other sympathizers who have announced their desire to help this class of aid for Russia, Chicago, Philadelphia, Albany and some other cities and western states may get together or be brot together in some way to help form one or more colonies.

There are many splendid buildings, including former winter and summer homes of grand dukes, monks and other czarist parasites, standing idle in Russia, some of which are already in need of repair and all such structures can be used for the children if money could be obtained in this country to start such colonies of children in them. The land around all these buildings is fertile and the wonderful dream of children living in those palaces, formerly occupied by the nobility, could be realized on very small amounts of capital.

Our Readers' Views

From a Job Hunter.

To the DAILY WORKER.—I have a friend, a subscriber to the DAILY WORKER, who has talked to me about the "class struggle," as she calls it, and I think she is right, because I am one of the working girls, who is struggling to make an honest living. I have been employed in a factory. Our wages have been cut. Many of us have been laid off, I among them. I have walked the street for days, yes weeks, but have failed to obtain work. My shoes have worn out. My body is tired out, I am getting discouraged, I hardly know what to do. Something should be done to change the conditions in our country.

The rich have plenty while the poor workers hardly exist. I read ads in the daily papers, "Help Wanted," and tho I arrive at 7:30 a. m., the man in the office tells me they don't need help. Some time I get so angry that I "ball" them out, ask them what they have their old ad in for. I have begun to think that these are fake ads just to make many believe one could get work if one wanted it or just to see how many are out of work so they can cut wages again.

I want work. I want to make an honest living. As I have tramped the street I have met many men, women and girls all looking for work. I am 19 years old and never before have I seen conditions as they are now.

I am not a Communist or a radical, but I have read some copies of the DAILY WORKER. I see that it is strictly a workers paper; that it takes up all the fight of the working class, so long live the DAILY WORKER.

Yours for better conditions,
Elsie Prieve.

U. S. Soldier Had 1,500 Francs

PARIS, March 2.—The murder of Harvey Geary, United States army sergeant at Beuvoir on July 16, 1919, was today believed to have been solved as the result of a confession made by Louis Lefaure, according to a dispatch to the Journal from Orleans today. Lefaure, who was being grilled by the police for the murder of Pierre Trimouille, a Frenchman, acknowledged, the dispatch said, that he killed the American soldier after robbing him of 1,500 francs.

NEW YORK IS HUB OF TEXTILE INDUSTRY IN U. S.

not even buy there a comprehensive directory of the mill towns. (I bot the last little pocket textile directory to be had in Providence.) Every question is answered, "Oh, you might get that in New York."

Where Butler Is Czar.

In New Bedford and Fall River—you can get much gossip of the czar-like rule of "Old Man Butler" (Coolidge's angel) and his tight little clique of local cotton-mill squires.

It seems as tho there in the two old mill cities of southern Massachusetts is the only remaining stronghold of the old order. You can hear much talk of how the "new men" of the wider world a few months ago were scolding the "old men" of New Bedford and Fall River for refusing to co-ordinate their wage-cutting and labor-baiting and speeding-up with the general campaign of that nature which is now on.

You can hear how the "old men" managed with their political and banking facilities to freeze out any new arrivals who try to start up any unwelcome businesses there.

And you can hear tow Old Man Butler, local king of them all, is quarreling with the Coolidge cabinet about this policy of international finance capital which "invests in foreign industries, building them up to compete with our own." (More of this later; it seems strange to hear of Butler, who led Coolidge to the White House, now quarreling with Coolidge's mission of perfecting the American finance-capital oligarchy over the world.)

You hear talk of all that, but you get no general information of what is going on in the big labor-deflation drive which now embraces with a single plan the entire industry of weaving and spinning wool and cotton. "You can get that in New York."

Company Union Movement.

Yes, you can get that in New York. The real center of control of everything pertaining to the textile industry is in New York—the center of everything except the phase of textile labor organization, and that has no center anywhere. That is, unless you take the point of view of capital. If you take that point of view, you can find a textile "labor movement" which does indeed center in New York, and in one street of New York—Wall Street. Look at the hideous nightmare, the clamorous, raucus, insistent movement, gaining ground and confidence and boldness every day, which flaunts the slogan: "Let the Mill Agents, Superintendents and Overseers be Your Labor Leaders!" This is a company-union movement of such unmitigated, swaggering nerve, that you almost refuse to believe your ears and eyes when you run across it. It is one of the biggest and most deadly of events that ever occurred in the struggle between labor and capital in this country. You might strain the language enuf to call it a fascist movement in a pacifist stage. The pacifist phase of it is surely only a passing phase, and finds that form only because there has not been enuf labor resistance to make it show its fangs. At present this movement is pulling the glad-hand Sunday-school stuff, with "inspirational," "co-operation" and "welfare" talk to the workers from bosses who hope to get the whole industry of woolen and cotton manufacture tied up in an unbreakable system of scabbery before any counter-movement can establish itself on a big enuf scale to count.

This "superindendents' labor movement" is completely centralized in Wall Street, New York.

And the counter-movement of real labor has no center anywhere except so far as the Workers (Communist) Party, with the Trade Union Educational League and the Young Workers' League may succeed in giving it a national head. Up to the present, the labor resistance to the monstrous scab movement is scattered and fragmentary, expressing itself in a few spontaneous, isolated local strikes and in a lot of confused grumbling except in some New England towns where the proposal of the Workers Party has caused a half-dozen united front rank and file committees to be formed. What has been done in this way is good, but it is only a drop in the bucket. The drive of the mill owners from the Wall Street center has now been on for three months in the most intensified form, and for about three months more preceding that, in a less open form. There is no disguising the fact that the bosses have succeeded in isolating all of the sporadic strikes that have occurred so far, and most of them have been compromised or beaten or hastily surrendered to by the bosses to prevent spreading. There are very few hundreds of workers on strike today. The employers' agents are watching these like a hawk, and would probably surrender to them at least temporarily if the chance of their widening out became impressive; for the wage-cutting plan is on an elastic, tactical basis. But everything depends upon widening the labor resistance. And by widening out, I mean widening to a tremendous scale, giving a national center to the labor resistance, as against the national center of the present big scab movement. To look at this problem as one which can be handled, as such problems were handled in the past, as for instance, as one of Pawtucket Valley, or Blackstone Valley, or the Lawrence district, or the Fall River district—or as a "New England" problem of these districts together, would result in disaster. To pursue such a policy would be to overlook the fact that the mill owners' plan of campaign reaches in a single front from Maine to Florida It would be to overlook the fact that the textile manufacturers (with the possible exception of one or two small "old-men" groups) are so thoroly unified in this fight that they can and do play the Southern mills against the Northern mills.

There is some dispute as to whether the textile industry has already completed the transition into finance-capital, monopoly control. In industry generally we know that this stage was reached about twenty-five years ago. Many persons claim that the textile industry in America is a partial exception. New England cotton mill owners' propaganda plays strong on the note that they are in competition with the Southern mills. But indications are strong that this "competition" is between the right-hand and the left hand of the same financial interests. (I shall take this up in a later article and try to show the amazing development of mill-combinations that reach literally from Texas to Maine.)

Have Monopoly of Credit.

Certainly there exists, and has existed at least since the world war, some sort of a banking-capital arrangement for monopoly of credit in the textile field. As to the silk industry, the existence of a bank credit monopoly was charged last week by the Gerseta corporation (which is a mere little "La-Follette-size" corporation of $1,000,000 capitalization) and its associates, in a $28,000,000 damage suit in New York against the Silk Association of America. As to cotton and woolen manufacture, it is known that about a year or more ago there were negotiations between the manufacturers' associations and the department of justice on the question of price-fixing arrangements and the anti-trust law—a question of so-called interchange of price "information." But today a writer in the biggest organ of the cotton manufacturers' boasts in the words: "Where, indeed, are the anti-trust laws? They have gone with the roses of yesteryear."

But more certainly still, there is complete and unqualified unity of all the textile interests as far as this anti-labor drive is concerned. The mere fact that a few months ago the "old men" of New Bedford and Fall River were publicly scolded in the textile bosses' press for not quickly enuf cutting their wages, indicates that there was probably no other exception to the unity, and the subsequent wage-cut in that district indicates that the "old men" group fell into line.

The anti-labor drive for a 25 to 30 per cent cut in wages and doubled production per worker, for the elimination of one-half of the workers from their jobs and the installation of "the mill superintendent as your labor leader," is unified and centered and its center is the financial district of New York.

And this "superintendent labor movement" has a force behind it which is astounding. It has its "culture." It has developed its "intelligentsia" specialists in propaganda. It has its literature, big and bold and rollicking and cynically frank, thriving on the untold millions that have been wrung, and are being wrung, and will be wrung from the slaves of the textile mills in a thousand towns from Maine to Florida.

New York Hailed As "Rome."

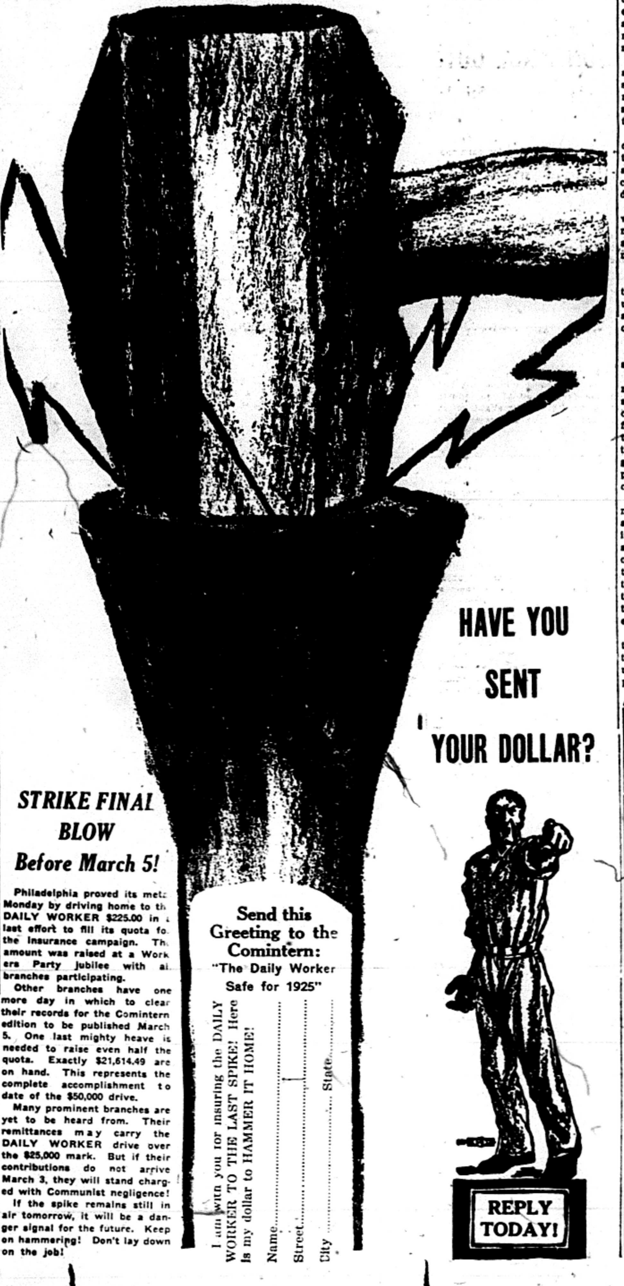
"You can get that in New York." I went to New York and got it stronger than I dreamed was possible. In the offices and on the streets and in the restaurants even the small-fry clerks of brokers' offices know what this textile wage-cut and speed-up drive means. They speak now of New York as "Rome," the center of a new "Roman Empire" drawing tribute from all the world.

There in New York, brokers and head-clerks are passing from hand to hand, and enthusing and marvelling over, a copy of the most authoritative of all the organs of big finance in the textile field. It is the issue of the textile financial paper, Commerce and Finance, the last issue of the year 1924, and the article is one written by Edwin Dakin as a forecast of the future of American world imperialism. Its appearance in this, the chief of all the organs of the textile branch of American finance capital, in the midst of the huge "labor-deflating" drive, is significant. It is an almost poetic expression of the hopes and dreams of this man-and-child-devouring monster whose claws are felt in the heart of the weaver who reads on the wall of a cotton mill in a faraway New England town, that "in order to increase earnings of all concerned," his wages will be cut 10 per cent and he must run 72 looms in place of 36.

But it is too long for one story. I will take up in tomorrow's DAILY WORKER the story of this remarkable expression of the imperialist world scab herders' dream.

WALLOP SPIKE TODAY!

DRIVE ENDS TOMORROW!



REPLY TODAY!

STRIKE FINAL BLOW Before March 5!

Philadelphia proved its mettle Monday by driving home to the DAILY WORKER $225.00 in a last effort to fill its quota for the insurance campaign. The amount was raised at a Workers Party jubilee with all branches participating.

Other branches have one more day in which to clear their records for the Comintern edition to be published March 5. One last mighty heave is needed to raise even half the quota. Exactly $21,614.49 are on hand. This represents the complete accomplishment to date of the $50,000 drive.

Many prominent branches are yet to be heard from. Their remittances may carry the DAILY WORKER drive over the $25,000 mark. But if their contributions do not arrive March 3, they will stand charged with Communist negligence!

If the spike remains still in air tomorrow, it will be a danger signal for the future. Keep on hammering! Don't lay down on the job!

Send this Greeting to the Comintern:

ments of their government in all phases of life under the leadership of the Communists.

Victory Over Obstacles

The report recites the victories of the Russian workers in overcoming the terrible and even heartbreaking obstacles laid upon their effort to restore industry by the blockade and armed intervention of capitalist nations, which laid waste nearly the whole country. Further, the report takes up the lying versions circulated by the Second International especially concerning Soviet Georgia.

"Lies About Georgia."

"In Tiflis," says the report, "the members of the delegation addressed a mass meeting of railway workers, and saw from a special stand a remarkable demonstration in the thorofare. This demonstration conveyed to them the impression that the workers of Tiflis were not living in that state of oppression and subjection which certain reports would appear to indicate. The demonstration appeared to reflect a strong, united approval of the workers in the present system of government in Georgia."

"Experiences in Georgia did not bear out the general impression created by reports appearing in the capitalist press and other newspapers that the population of Georgia was being held in a state of suppression by the Russian Red Army."

Parasites Have Hard Lot.

One section of the report deals with social and religious conditions Any person between the ages of 17 and 55, having no physical or mental defects, who is not classed as a worker, has absolutely no political status at all. He has no vote and receives no state benefits. He must pay the maximum tariff everywhere.

His education and medical attendance must be obtained from private sources. He will have to pay the maximum house rent and be liable at any time to receive a month's notice to make room for a worker.

He must pay high prices for a meal outside his home and his theater ticket will cost him ten times that of a worker. He will have no recognized club. Recreation and sport will be difficult and expensive.

The lot of some of these people, who cannot or will not fit in with the new system, often is very lamentable, and at present they doubtless number many thousands.

In another place the report says: "Strong propaganda is carried on in the press, schools, colleges and trade union clubs against religion generally, and especially as practiced by the old orthodox church."

Education Given Every Aid.

In regard to education, the report says:

"Education is obligatory, and in most cases free, but where the state subsidy is not sufficient to cover the cost, the local Soviet may charge fees fixed on a sliding scale, according to the income of the parents, provided they are workers. In the curriculum great attention is paid to languages, particularly French, and in some cases English.

"Under the heading of elementary natural science and anatomy, children are given very detailed instructions in the principles of personal hygiene, sex relationship and the construction of the body. History is confined to the social and political aspects of nations, and stories of kings and dynasties are superseded by descriptions of the lives and creeds of social reformers.

"Great care is devoted to instruction in art, rendered easy by collections of works of art bought together under the nationalization of private property."

The Rattlesnake Press Squirms.

To this comprehensive and reasoned document, the capitalist press of London brings the vilest attacks. The Times says, "The whole document abounds in childish irrelevancies, but adds absolutely nothing to the knowledge of Russia which the outside world possesses." The Chronicle says, "It is a naive document, and where it is not naive it is misleading." The Mail says, that the delegates swallowed what was told them and adds, "They are not above acting as agents for Bolshevik propaganda in return for their trip. It is sheer impertinence for the delegates to cite the wild and muddled experiments of the Soviet as the way of wisdom." The Post says, "Purcell and his friends will bitterly repent some day—that they ever lent the authority of their names to this travesty of truth."

On the other hand, the working class newspapers are greeting the report with studious but friendly acceptance. The fact that the unions of Britain are reaching a closer bond with the Russian unions, it is remarked, is the reason for the outburst of hysterical lying and misinterpretation on the part of capitalist editors.

Government Claims Rights.

WASHINGTON, March 2—The government's right to preferential railroad rates in the case of railroads that have been aided by grants of government land was upheld by the supreme court of the United States today in two cases, involving the Louisville and Nashville, and Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroads. The roads had sued to recover excess freight charges on government business.

Some Bang in this Bank.

IONIA, Mich., March 2.—One man was seriously injured, scores were panic stricken and windows in surrounding stores were shattered by an explosion in the national bank today. Police intimated the explosion was caused by a bomb.

Working Class Women! Join the Struggle of the Working Class!

Statement by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party of America.

The capitalist exploiters make no distinction between men workers and women workers except to exploit the latter more brutally and outrageously. Our enemies, the capitalists, are making splendid use in their own interests of the weaknesses and prejudices of those working class women who still continue to stay away from the struggles of their class against capitalist exploitation. Now, on this International Women's Day, set aside by the Communist International as a day of special effort to organize the working women for the proletarian class struggle, the Workers (Communist) Party of America calls upon every woman of the working class to join the struggle of the workers for the destruction of capitalism thru the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government.

Women of the working class, your fate and the fate of your families is bound up inseparably with the fate of the working class as a whole. The victories of the workers in their struggles against capitalism are your victories. The defeats of the working class are your defeats. You are part and parcel of the world army of the proletariat, oppressed by capitalism and struggling for liberation.

If you are employed in industry, you are directly affected by every manifestation of capitalist misrule. If you are occupied at home, you feel the bitter misery of capitalism just the same. You are a worker, whether in the shop or at home, and you have the same interests as the rest of the working class.

Do not listen to the sweet talk of capitalist ladies about your special interests as women against men. You have no such interests opposed to the interests of men. Your only enemy is capitalism, which is ruling the lives of every one that is near and dear to you. Your only grievance is the existing order of capitalist society, against which you must fight shoulder to shoulder with the men workers under the leadership of a revolutionary political working class party.

Women of the working class, on this International Women's Day, the Workers (Communist) Party of America calls upon you to consider your situation and your duties.

Do you belong to a union? If you are employed in industry, it is your duty to join the union. If you are already a member of a union, you must, in your own interests, join the militant elements in your union, the left wing for common struggle against the reactionary labor bureaucracy and to revolutionize the trade unions.

If you are occupied at home as a housewife, it is your duty to organize into special unions of working class housewives to bring relief and comfort to those workers who are engaged directly in struggles against the capitalists.

Whether in industry or at home, you must actively participate in the political struggles of the working class. You must join and be an active member of the Workers (Communist) Party of America, the party that stands for the abolition of capitalism thru the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government.

At this moment, the Workers (Communist) Party is carrying on an energetic struggle against child labor exploitation. This is a matter of vital concern to every working class woman. You must therefore join the ranks of our movement for a common struggle against the common enemy.

Hail International Women's Day!

Hail the glorious achievements of the working class women in Soviet Russia!

Down with capitalism, imperialism and war!

Down with child labor exploitation!

Hail the Workers (Communist) Party of America!

Hail the Communist International!

Workers (Communist) Party of America.
Central Executive Committee.

What Governments Are For

The railway unions of this country may eventually, if not now, learn what governments are for. The present instance, of the decision today rendered by the supreme court of the capitalist dictatorship, ought to aid materially in the education of the rank and file.

It is an axiom among revolutionary workers, that the government is the executive committee of the ruling class, but this seems to have been entirely overlooked by the bureaucrats of the American Federation of Labor who, of course, do not share the Communist viewpoint on anything. The union officials, their hearts bursting with trust in the "democracy" of American capitalist government, even took out an injunction against the Pennsylvania railroad "forbidding" it from forming company "unions."

The Pennsylvania railroad, naturally wishing for a "fair and impartial" trial, appealed to the supreme court of capitalism, and as long as the unions accept the idea of trying to win by playing capitalism's own game, according to capitalism's own rules, the railroad quite properly expects the unions to abide by the verdict.

The verdict was, of course, that the Pennsylvania railroad can have all the company "unions" it wants, and even the best lawyers that Bert Jewell or "Bill" Green can hire, can do nothing about it any more.

This is the legal verdict. This is the net result of having reactionary labor fakers head the unions. This is what governments are for. This is why capitalism is solicitous about keeping the government, with its "infallible" supreme court, before the eyes of the workers as something sacred. The labor fakers loyally aid in this humbuggery.

The lesson is that only when the workers themselves run the government can they expect to abolish the abuses they suffer from employers. It happens, moreover, that the only way the workers can get hold of the government is by overthrowing the existing capitalist one, and by fighting the thing out on the program laid down by the Workers (Communist) Party.

"Next Thing to a Coal Miner"

Everett Sanders, according to the personal organ of John L. Lewis, the United Mine Workers' Journal, has put the miners on the map by becoming secretary to President Coolidge.

"Congressman Everett Sanders, of Terre Haute, Indiana," says the Journal, "is next thing to a coal miner." He comes from a family of miners but—he is a "successful lawyer."

In a laudatory vein, the editor tells how this ersatz coal miner became a member of congress just in time "to vote for the declaration of war against the central powers of Europe."

This ought to bring a loud outburst of applause from the miners who were conscripted while this one-half of one per cent "coal miner" drew $7,500 per year in Washington.

It seems that the gentlemen in question in addition to almost being a coal miner, had a hairbreadth escape from being vice-president, as the Miners' Journal also states that "he came near being nominated" at the republican convention.

It is easy to read between the lines that the coal miners did not even come near getting anything by reason of the support given Coolidge by their officials unless the appointment of a "near" coal miner as secretary to the president can be considered something substantial. No doubt it is—for the officials.

Anyway, it is well to know that the United Mine Workers officialdom is so shamelessly corrupt that it dares to praise the lawyer secretary of a strikebreaker president in the official organ of the union.

The Mysterious Malady

Benito Mussolini, the Italian fascist brigand, is seriously ill. What the nature of the disease from which he is suffering is the public does not know. Without doubt it is dangerous.

The clamps have been screwed tighter than ever on the press and nobody but his physicians and a few lieutenants are allowed to go near the sick cutthroat's bedside.

Many rumors are floating about regarding the cause of his indisposition. At first it was officially stated that he was suffering from influenza. The opposition papers say that he had a paralytic stroke. Others say he is suffering from ulcers of the stomach. Again there is a report that he was shot by the Italian crown prince, who felt humiliated because the throne was eclipsed more during the Mussolini regime than when the socialists dominated Italian political life. The latest rumor is that Benito's pet lion scratched him, resulting in blood poisoning. Another guess, of American origin, is that Mussolini is crazy.

The blackshirt dictator's illness coincides with the illness of the fascist dictatorship in Italy, which is nearing its downfall. Mussolini's death is looked forward to with pleasant anticipation by the Italian working class and by the workers in every part of the world. The only detraction from the satisfaction of reading of his demise would be the regret that this black assassin did not die on the gallows with a representative of the Italian working class springing the drop.

Exit Ebert

The passing of the traitor Ebert, first president of the imperial German republic, has unloosed a flood of eulogies from the capitalist and yellow socialist press all over the world. This is as it should be.

Ebert, the ex-saddlemaker, and prominent leader of the German social-democracy, was as valuable a servant of capitalist imperialism as ever betrayed a cause. So rotten was this politically putrified renegade that the local union to which he belonged, expelled him for his crimes against the working class.

When the great revolutionist Lenin died the heads of the capitalist states did not indulge in the customary diplomatic condolences. Even Ramsay MacDonald, socialist head of the British government failed to officially notice the passing of the greatest master of revolution in the history of the working class movement. Lenin was the implacable enemy of the capitalist system. Ebert was its loyal, if somewhat stupid supporter.

Bourgeois etiquette makes a virtue of speaking well of the dead. This did not apply to Lenin's case. Neither will it apply to Ebert's death so far as the Communists are concerned. In life we branded him as a traitor and in death we simply say: "One more Judas out of the way."

Capitalism's only regret at the grave of Ebert of Germany, is that there are not more like him. Ditto Branting.

The Drive For World Trade Union Unity

By TOM BELL.

II. Bolshevik View of Trade Union Unity—Conditions for Unity—Amsterdam's "Fundamental" Objections to Unity.

IS unity of the trade union movement possible? The two trade union internationals, the Red International of Labor Unions and the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions are separated by a deep gulf of principle and practice. On the one hand, the Amsterdamers have proven themselves to be agents of capitalism working within the labor movement, defenders of capitalism who stand for unity with the capitalist class. On the other hand, the R. I. L. U. stands for uncompromising warfare against capitalism. Amsterdam has unity with the capitalists to preserve capitalism, by sabotaging every struggle of the working class against capitalism, while the R. I. L. U. works to destroy capitalism.

IN face of these fundamental differences, why is it that the R. I. L. U. issues the slogan of trade union unity? The objective of the Communists is to win the masses from the reformists for revolutionary struggle against capitalism and the unity of the trade unions will create a broader field in which the Communists will work for winning the masses to the revolutionary banner. The menace of the Dawes plan, fascism, imperialist war and the capitalist offensive on the workers' standard of living can only be combatted by a united front of al' workers. For these reasons the R. I. L. U. has issued the slogan and taken practical steps towards effecting world trade union unity.

Bolshevism Against Splits in Trade Unions.

THE struggle for unity in the trade union movement flows logically from the Bolshevik attitude towards the trade unions during the entire history of the Bolshevik Party. The Bolsheviks fought to preserve trade union unity not only when they were in the majority but also when they were in the minority in the trade unions. Prior to the November revolution, when the mensheviks were in the majority in the trade unions, the Bolsheviks combatted all splitting tendencies, considering it one of their major tasks, if the proletarian revolution was to be successful, to win the majority of the organized workers to the support of their policy. When the Bolsheviks won a majority in the trade unions, they likewise fought against all splits.

INTERNATIONALLY, the Communist International has fought consistently against those misguided Communists who have from time to time raised the slogan of "Split the trade unions." The kernel of Lenin's teachings on Communist work in the trade unions lies precisely in the necessity of preserving unity, fighting all secessionism and dual unionism, and working within the trade unions to win the majority for the revolutionary struggle. Unity of the trade unions is a Bolshevik method of winning the masses.

THE passionate earnestness with which Lenin combatted all splitting of the trade unions in his pamphlet "Left Wing Communism—An Infantile Sickness," shows the importance given to trade union unity by Lenin. Further, his statement that those Communists who leave the trade unions give aid to the reformist bureaucrats by so doing, adds additional emphasis to Lenin's view on the necessity of trade union unity. Lozovsky, in his pamphlet, "The Role of the Trade Unions in the Russian Revolution," states that the revolution is impossible outside of or against the will of the trade unions.

SINCE its organization the R. I. L. U. has raised the question of trade union unity on an international scale and in various countries has fought the Amsterdamers and their disruption of the trade union movement. An example of this occurred in 1921 when the R. I. L. U. offered as the price of unity of the French trade union movement the liquidation of the revolutionary fractions in the trade unions. This the Amsterdamers rejected, with the result that the trade unions of France were split in two. It is clear, therefore, that to the Communists trade union unity is not only necessary to preserve the standard of living and conditions of work of the working class, but is also a prerequisite for the winning of the masses for the world revolution.

Conditions for Unity.

BUT, it will be objected, must not the Communists impose conditions upon Amsterdam in order to prevent Amsterdam swallowing the Communist trade unions in the event of Amsterdam having a majority if unity is effected? It will be said that the R. I. L. U. should insist that the unified trade union international must fight against the Dawes plan, against the capitalist offensive and against imperialist war.

TO put up these conditions is tantamount to rendering unity impossible, because the Amsterdamers will utterly refuse to break their alliance with capitalism. Therefore the R. I. L. U. makes only one demand: The convening of a congress representative of all trade union workers, whether belonging to Amsterdam, the R. I. L. U., or to neither, in order to found a united trade union international. The R. I. L. U. wants unity of the working class irrespective of whether Amsterdam has the majority and will lead the new trade union international or not, knowing that unity of the working class will lay at the basis for a struggle against capitalism and create a broader field in which to carry on the ideological struggle to win the workers for Communism.

Amsterdams' Objections.

ON the contrary, the Amsterdamers impose conditions because they are opposed to unity of the working class and want unity with the capitalist class. For this reason the issuance of the slogan of world trade union unity by the R. I. L. U. precipitated a campaign of villification against the unity proposals. The most virulent campaign was led by the German trade union bureaucrats, and the leaders of the German social-democratic party, against the R. I. L. U. unity proposals. In the Berlin Vorwarts, the reformists expressed their real opposition to world trade union unity when they demanded: Will this world congress demanded by the R. I. L. U. be formed by proportional representation? Will the new trade union international allow national autonomy for the trade unions? Will the new trade union international be independent of all political parties? Will the new international be used only to better working conditions or for world revolution? And, as a last refuge, they sought to defend their alliance with the capitalists by saying that to break with the capitalists will mean that no more wage agreements could be made with the bosses, and that all co-operation with the labor bureau of the league of nations would be broken.

Lozovsky Replies.

TO this the R. I. L. U. replied, thru Lozovsky in his speech at the Sixth All-Russian Trade Union Congress, that the R. I. L. U. proposed that the labor organizations be represented at the unity congress in proportion to their numbers and the R. I. L. U. would combat any attempt of the Amsterdamers to limit the representation to trade union bureaucrats appointed by the officialdoms. What the R. I. L. U. desired was the election of delegates representing the workers in the shops and factories who really desire trade union unity. On the question of national autonomy, he pointed out that under the guise of national autonomy the Amsterdamers had committed the blackest crimes against the working class, since national autonomy had been utilized to break strikes in every country thru international scabbing. Thus British and French coal was used in 1922 against the coal miners of the United States on strike, and, vise versa, United States coal had been used against the miners of Great Britain and France to break their own strikes. The new international would really be a co-ordinating center to bring international unity into the struggles of the workers against the capitalists.

WITH an innocent air, these Amsterdamers pretend that "their" trade unions are independent of all political parties, but in those countries in which they are not the backbone of the social-democratic and labor parties and act as the handmaidens of capitalism, they are altogether dependent on the bourgeois parties, as in the United States. But what the Communists are advocating is international trade union unity and have already declared that even tho they are in the minority at the world congress, they will remain in the international, obey its discipline, and lay their program before the workers and let the working class decide whose program and tactics are right—the R. I. L. U. and the method of the class struggle, or Amsterdam and co-operation with the capitalists at the expense of the workers.

Amsterdam Wants Unity With Bosses.

THE opposition of the Amsterdamers to the trade unions mobilizing the working class for the abolition of the wage system is expressed in their demand that the trade unions shall be used only to better working conditions and not for the overthrow of capitalism, but under the leadership of the Amsterdammers the trade unions have done neither one nor the other. Not only have these leaders sabotaged the struggles of the workers to preserve their standard of living and working conditions, but they have also prevented the seizure of power by the working class, as, for instance, in Central Europe in the years 1918-19 and in Italy in 1920.

THAT the Amsterdam leaders stoop to the futile argument that to break with the capitalists will mean that no wage agreements can be made with the bosses shows that they are desperately fighting against world trade union unity in order to preserve their unity with the capitalists. They conveniently overlook the vast difference between wage agreement forced on the bosses by the struggles of the workers and the voluntary entry of Amsterdam leaders into capitalist governments to stifle working class revolt, and sabotage of even the most elementary struggles of the working class. They desperately fight against unity since they know that world trade union unity will lay the basis for a fight against capitalism which they will be forced to oppose to defend capitalism, and thus expose themselves to the mass of the organized workers. To preserve their social standing, the alliance with the capitalist class is absolutely necessary for these leaders, and they will betray every working class action to preserve it.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN TO BE CENTER OF ANOTHER TREMENDOUS COMMUNIST GATHERING MARCH 15

NEW YORK, March 2.—Fifty-four years ago, the workers of Paris engaged in a bloody struggle to get rid of the rule of the "upper classes." They drove out the bourgeoisie and established their power. But they didn't hold it long. Their council, which was formed of representatives of the workers in the shops and factories, forgot one "little point"—but the point that meant death to the Commune. They forgot that the bourgeoisie still existed, and that their power was not broken thruout France. They forgot that the bourgeoisie still was armed—and easily could arm others.

Then there was a second "little" point. They forgot that Paris was only the capital of France—but was not the whole of France. The millions of French peasantry was not yet touched by the revolution and it would be a simple thing for the peasants to starve out the revolution. They forgot that the peasantry would be a fertile field for recruiting the counter-revolutionary army of the bourgeoisie.

Failure to consider these two "little" points aided greatly in breaking the Paris Commune. It was the very consideration of these two "little," but most vital points that made the Russian revolution a success. "Disarmament of the bourgeoisie," which means an aggressive policy thru the agency of a Red army, and coalition of the workers and peasants in the establishment of Soviets—these are vital factors in the proletarian revolution.

Do you want to see the Paris Commune enacted—with masses participating? Do you want to see how the workers of Paris greeted the Commune, how the revolutionary council vacillated, and how finally the Commune was broken and the leaders and masses of workers were shot by the counter-revolutionary bourgeoisie?

Then March 15 is the day, and Madison Square Garden is the place. Be there at 2 o'clock with the 14,999 other workers of New York City, who will crowd the Garden to witness the wonderful spectacle, the pageant "The Paris Commune," which has been arranged for the Communist press and will be directed by Dr. Arkatev with the assistance of Sadie Amter. One thousand comrades will participate in the pageant. Then the evening will be spent in dancing. Do you want to meet the comrades there? Then get your ticket early.

HARLEM, N. Y.—A new splendid program has been drawn up for the Open Forum of the Harlem section Workers Party, Local New York starting with Sunday evening, March 9 and continuing every Sunday evening to May 3. For next Sunday evening Israel Amter will lead the discussion on the subject: "Is Revolution Possible in the United States?" Both the topic and the speaker are expected to draw a big crowd.

The rest of the program for the season is as follows: March 22, Working Class Education, led by Oliver Carlson; March 29, Can there be Prosperity for the American Workers?, led by Harry M. Wicks; April 5, Religion as an Instrument of Capitalism, led by H. Bourgin; April 12, The Family—Past, Present and Future, led by Rose Pastor Stokes; April 19, The Capitalist, Labor, and Communist Press, Ludwig Lore; May 2, Cultural and Literary Evening, and a talk on Proletcult by Eli Jacobson. There will be no forum on Sunday March 15 on account of the big Paris Commune celebration at the Madison Spuare Garden.

Will Tell of Travel in Darkest Regions of Iowa Wilderness

OMAHA, Neb., March 2.—J. E. Snyder and David Coutts, fresh from their organization and propaganda campaign thru Iowa, will lecture at the local headquarters of the Workers Party, 206 Crounse Block, Wednesday evening at 8 p. m. No admission will be charged.

Comrades Coutts and Snyder will tell of their experiences among the "species Americanus" as found along the main streets of Iowa. They will tell first hand of their ideological struggles with S. P.'s, S. L. P., K. K. K., bible students, one hundred percenters, LaFolletteites, Gompersites, and all other "ites' and "ists" abounding out among these wilds which have been penetrated and charted for the first time by bona fide representatives of a Communist Party,

While "tired radicals" and individualists stew in their own juice the Communists are going right ahead and laying the foundations for a militant mass party of the American working class. The tour of Comrades Coutts and Snyder in Iowa is just the beginning of our activities among the workers in that state, which gave over 4,000 votes for the Workers Party presidential candidates without a campaign.

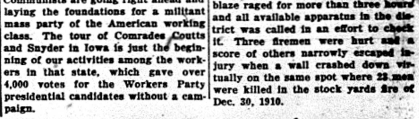
BEAUTY INVADES STEEL TOWN TONIGHT! GARY TO SEE RUSSIAN FILM

GARY, Ind., March 2.—The workers of the steel mills of Gary, Ind., will have a chance to see the first great Russian feature film made in co-operation with the Red army, when "The Beauty and the Bolshevik" picture is shown at the Eagle Theater, this Tuesday, March 3.

In order that workers on both night and day shifts can see the film it will run continuously from noon until midnight.

Hunt in Ruins of Beef Cutting Plant for Clue to Big Fire

The ruins of the three-story beef cutting plant of Armour and company in the Union stock yards here were being searched yesterday for a clue to the cause of the $300,000 fire which threatened the entire stock yards. The blaze raged for more than three hours and all available apparatus in the district was called in an effort to check it. Three firemen were hurt and a score of others narrowly escaped injury when a wall crashed down virtually on the same spot where 23 men were killed in the stock yards fire of Dec. 30, 1910.



Why We Should Join the Junior Groups

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 2.—One Sunday during our Young Workers' meeting, we were debating about America being a free country. We did not agree with what is being taught in school to us, because the workers are slaves to the rich. They work hard, but receive small wages. The poor children are not teacher's pets because they are poor, and wear poor clothes. The rich children have better clothes so teachers are on their side. The fathers of the rich children pay higher taxes for their children's education. Altho our fathers and mothers work hard with sweat on their brow to give us a good education, the money they earn is not enough.

Let us all join the Junior League so we will sometimes be ruling this country, or at least giving a start to the mothers and fathers and children after us.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

ONE of the most unlucky prophets working at the business of anticipating the actions of labor fakers, is Laurence Todd, Washington correspondent for the Federated Press. When William Green took over Sam Gompers' mantle, Todd predicted that the anti-Soviet Gompersian policy would be dropped. But not so that you can notice it. Green is now writing the anti-Bolshevist stuff that Gompers used to deposit in the literary garbage can known as the American Federationist. Todd was a bit disappointed because his prediction lost its way, but hope springs eternal in certain human breasts—hope that the crooked will go straight provided the crooked sit in the seats of the mighty and have power.

PRESIDENT GREEN is now up to his ears in conciliation jobs, according to the F. P. man. He brought Warren S. Stone and John L. Lewis together, one the chairman of a scab coal company, also a labor leader, and the other an unofficial lackey of the coal operators in the miners' union. One conference marked down to Green's credit! It might be well to remind the naive Tood that Green may have schemes which will be best served by conciliating Stone, even at the risk of offending the pride of Mr. Lewis. And it should not be forgotten that Stone is only a little less popular in the miners' union than Lewis. He is only one of many nonunion operators. Lewis is on friendly terms with most of the others.

ANOTHER conference concerned itself with the textile industry. This much touted move was the usual stunt of the labor fakers when in a quandary. Thousands of workers are receiving wage cuts. The only remedy of the fakers is to hold a conference, dig up a lot of figures and show the hard-boiled employers that even tho they may be able to get away with it, such methods are not becoming a christian nation. And the hard-boiled textile barons are expected to fall on the hairy chests of the proletariat and [illegible] themselves into weeping tears [illegible] Like the devil!

PRESIDENT GREEN was for many years an official of a union that had to battle for every nickel it ever forced out of the coal barons. The United Mine Workers of America did not win its reputation as the shock force of the American army of labor, by delving into statistics or appealing to the better nature of the employers. They won their fights by planting their collective fist on the enemy snout until he threw up his hands. But those days are gone forever if the labor fakers can help it. In this respect Green is a typical labor leader, and entirely worthy of his deceased master Sam Gompers.

WHILE the labor fakers are rolling up figures, the mill barons are rolling up fortunes, squeezed out of the blood and sweat of their mill slaves. The labor fakers and their hired liberal research workers and report writers will be living comfortably in hotels while the mill workers, their wives and children will not be able to enjoy even the doubtful luxury of an evening at the movies. "If President Green keeps going as he has begun, he will have done a big job in reconcilia-

TEXTILE KINGS HAVE 'CULTURE' ALL THEIR OWN

Talk of Enslavement of World to U. S. Gold

By ROBERT MINOR.

NEW YORK, March 3.—Even the gilded monarchs of the textile industry "cannot live by bread alone."

The kings of finance must have their "culture," their ideology, their faith, their belief in themselves, their justification of the thing they are doing in transforming the whole life of the whole New England section into a social system more nearly resembling the chattel slavery of the southern states before the Civil War.

Seek to Enslave World.

Wall Street is singing its idealistic "Song of Songs" about the wage cuts and speeding up processes now being introduced in the cotton and woolen mills.

I mentioned in yesterday's DAILY WORKER a certain lyrically written article which appeared at the end of the year in the leading textile manufacturers' organ, "Commerce and Finance.

The article, I said, is being handed about and talked about and its paragraphs quoted by heart among the textile oligarchy.

This article, written by Edwin Dakin, speaks baldly of the enslavement of the world by the capitalists of the United States. He uses the word "slavery." He uses the word "serfs" to describe the European toiling masses in their relation to American capital and compares Wall Street hegemony over the world as a new Roman empire. And withal it is a wild pean of victory and rejoicing.

Likens U. S. to Rome.

"Once upon a time," he writes, "there was a nation that enslaved the world. That nation was Rome. It conquered the world thru war.

"All of the known East, and all the discovered West, poured its golden tribute yearly into the Roman capi-

Farmers Children Undernourished As Well As City Kids

NEW YORK, March 3.—Country-bred children are as under-nourished as city-bred children, it was revealed in a report given to the closing session of the convention of the co-operative extension division of the United States department of agriculture.

"Many farmers sell practically all the milk produced on their farms," said the report. "Their children gettinb none. Farmers must very often pay more attention to the modern scientific methods of feeding their blooded stock than they pay to the diet of their own children."

WORKING WOMEN OF NEW YORK TO CELEBRATE WORLD WOMEN'S DAY AT BIG MEETING FRIDAY, MARCH 6

NEW YORK, March 3.—A mass meeting in the Labor Temple, East 84th street near Third avenue on Friday, March 6 at 8 P. M., will mark the New York celebration of International Women's Day. The speakers will be Juliet Stuart Poyntz, Rose Pastor Stokes, M. J. Olgin, Fanny Warshafsky and Anna Thompson of the Young Workers League.

The Communist International has set aside Sunday, March 8 as International Women's Day. The working women of the world on that day will celebrate as a sign of their common struggle for the rule of the world's working class and the conquering of the capitalist system of exploitation which enslaves women, little children and men in the wheels of industry.

The workers in America are celebrating International Women's Day under the leadership of the Workers (Communist) Party. Big meetings have been arranged in Boston, Philadelphia, and other large cities.

BANKERS WATCH STRIKEBREAKER CAL SWORN IN

Coolidge Pardon Upheld by Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3.—"Cal" Coolidge, the strikbreaker president, will start tomorrow his term as the elected executive of the United States with an official family of labor haters and strikebreakers. Coolidge has tightened the lines against the working class.

Coolidge made ready for his inauguration by hearing the supreme court uphold his pardon of a notorious bootlegger, Philip Grossman, who was sentenced to a year in jail and a fine of $1,000, for violating an injunction restraining him from selling liquor.

Untouched by Workers' Plight.

Cal doesn't mind seeing Sacco and Vanzetti die on the gallows for the "crime" of fighting for a better wage for the workers of Massachusetts, but his kind heart melts at seeing a bootlegger in trouble.

Grossman did not have to serve a day in jail, Coolidge commuting the sentence to the payment of a fine and then issuing a full pardon.

The big change in the Coolidge cabinet is the elimination of Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes, who was forced to resign because of his policy against Soviet Russia.

The big business men who control Coolidge insisted that some sort of trade treaty be made with Soviet Russia, and with official recognition of the Soviet government by America in the offing, Hughes was forced to go.

Hughes made himself ineligible when he issued statements slandering the Soviet government and declaring that recognition would not be made

RICH NEGROES BETRAY WORKERS OF THEIR RACE

Fisk University Trustees Oppose Students

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 3.—Officials of the National Urban League, the Negro organization which is used by large employers to hire Negro laborers at lower wages than are paid white workers, has lined up against the students of Fisk University.

L. Hollingsworth Wood one of the leading officials of the league who has betrayed the workers of his own race, in a speech here told the students that President Fayette McKenzie was right in calling in the police to beat up the students after they refused to obey McKenzie's rule. The students charged McKenzie with selling out the interests of the students to the white business interests of the South.

Wood, who is vice president of the board of trustees of Fisk University, declared that the trustees will oppose the students and support McKenzie.

All but a few of the students have gone home, refusing to stay at the university under McKenzie on the ground that he catered to white business associations and neglected the students and the workers of his own race. Those who remain say they will depart as soon as they secure the necessary funds.

FLAT CAR SETS FIRE TO RAILROAD DEPOT; TWO WORKERS ESCAPE

DANVILLE, Ill., March 3.—A flat car in an east-bound freight train on the Wabash railway left the tracks at a sharp curve in front of the passanger station at Attica, Ind., today and plunged into the station. Stoves set the station on fire and it with five cars of coal burned.

Edward Rutledge, telegraph operator and Roy Zentmire, who were in the station at the time escaped with slight injuries.

MAY CO. BEGINS BIG WAGE SLASH IN LOS ANGELES

Cut Affects 2,000 Men and Women Workers

By WILLIAM MINTE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOS ANGELES, Calif., March 3.—The department store of the May company has inaugurated a general cut in wages. It reduced the weekly earnings of all its men employes to a uniform scale of $23 per week, and those of its women employes to $16 a week AND NO PAY FOR OVERTIME. This flat reduction affects all of the 2,000 employes of the company and amounts to many of them of a cut between $10 and $12 a week.

This department store, located at Broadway and 8th St., and known as the Hamburger department store was taken over by the May company just recently. The equalization of all the pay envelopes was one of the very first "improvements" made by its present owners. Instead of leveling up the wages of its underpaid workers to meet the increased cost of living, the manager, Schlesinger, thought it more profitable to level them down to the starvation minimum of $23 and $16 a week.

Rouses Organization Sentiment

The result was great agitation and a willingness to organize and to fight. The workers were waiting anxiously for the meeting which was called to organize and protect themselves.

Anticipating trouble the manager got busy and discharged every one suspected of being in sympathy with the union—discharged and blacklisted them. He also inaugurated a campaign of falsehood and misrepresentation to persuade the credelous believers that the company is taking proper care of the matter and that everything will be adjusted to the best interests of all concerned. By this tactics he succeeded to block temporarly all plans for the meeting.

Store Expects to Prosper

This department store is being patronized by the workers and the poorer section of the population who are spending their money to get its "bargains." The greedy company expects to prosper by cutting the amount of food, shelter and clothing of its underpaid workers.

The patronizers of this company will have to do their duty. Mutual aid and united action are the only means to achieve real and lasting results. They will teach the company a very instructive lesson in unmistakable terms.

SUN YAT SEN, ILL IN PEKING, HEARS OF VICTORY OVER GEN. MING

PEKING, March 3.—Sun Yat Sen, national revolutionary leader of South China, who is sick here, was cheered today by news of the reported victory of his Kwantung army over General Chen Chiung Ming, near the city of Waichow, in the Yantzse valley. Waichow is expected to fall before Dr. Son's troops forcing Gen. Chen to fall back on Swatow.

STANDARD OIL MAKES BIG BUY FROM SOVIETS

Discovers Hughes Is "A Liar"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, March 3.—The assertion by Secretary of State Hughes, made when recognition of Soviet Russia was being urged, that "Soviet Russia is an economic vacuum," will hardly be credited by anyone hereafter—except the reactionary bureaucrats of the American Federation of Labor.

This, in view of the contract signed here yesterday between the Anglo-American Oil company—which is the European end of the Standard Oil company—and the Soviet government.

By this contract the Anglo-American company purchases 150,000 tons of kerosene and 20,000 of gasoline and secures an option on 500,000 tons with delivery in 1926-1927. The oil will come from the Baku and Grosny fields, both of which are now worked by the Soviets.

Other Nations in Line

This deal marks the entry of America into the struggle for Russian oil, which has been going on since April 5, 1923, when the Shell Oil company made a first purchase from the Soviets of 200,000 tons. Shortly after a German company bought 65,000 tons of gasoline and 60,000 of lubricating oil and the French government bought 75,000 tons of fuel for the navy, while French industry bought 165,000 tons of gasoline and 70,000 tons of lubricating.

Next in line was the Italian government and industry, buying 120,000 tons of fuel and 65,000 tons of gasoline. Ten months ago the British Mexican Eagle company, through Lord Inverforth, signed an agreement for the delivery of 200,000 tons of fuel and the British Fuel and Oil company bought 35,000 tons of lubricating oil.

Production Grows Daily

The entry of America into the field now completes the ring of big oil using nations, all competing for Russian oil, which it is stated is being produced in increasing quantities daily.

NEGRO BURNED ALIVE BY CRAZY MOB ON EVIDENCE OF CHILD

ROCKY FORD, Ga., March 3.—An unidentifitd Negro worker was burned at the stake here by a frenzied mob, because a 14-year-old white girl charged that the Negro attacked her. The Negro was carried into a field, and soaked with gasoline. Brush was then piled about him and he was burned after being cruelly tortured.

Y. W. L. CALLING CONFERENCE FOR MINING YOUTH

Meeting Is Set for Pittsburgh, March 8

A conference of all young miners in the western Pennsylvania and West Virginia territory will be held in Pittsburgh Sunday, March 8, 1925 at the Labor Lyceum 35 Miller St. at 6 P. M.

The Young Workers League, which is calling this conference extends an invitation to all young miners in these territories to attend this conference in order to discuss the conditions of the young workers in the mines and to lead the fight among the young workers in order to better these con-

COMMUNISTS MAY RUN CLARA ZETKIN FOR PRESIDENT OF GERMANY

BERLIN, March 3.—Germany will choose a successor to President Ebert on March 29, the reichstag decided today. The presidential elections were scheduled for May, but the Weimar constitution provides that the reichstag enact legislation to choose a new president, in the event of the incumbent's death.

The Communists, it is rumored, will break all world traditions by running a woman, Clara Zetkin, for president of the nation. Despite her advanced age she is in good health and is known the world around as one of the most capable Communists in the international movement.

COAL OPERATORS KEEPING WAR PLANS ON MINERS' UNION SECRET

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 3.—No intimation will be given until late today as whether or not, the Pittsburgh coal producers' association will be represented at the meeting of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and western Pennsylvania operators at Cleveland on March 6 to determine ways and mans fo adjusting the Jacksonville miners' wage scale, it was said at noon by B. H. Canon, president of the association.

The monthly meeting of the association will be held this afternoon and the attitude of western Pennsylvania operators toward the proposed meeting will be made public after the meeting, John A. Donaldson, chairman of the association's scale committee said.

VICTIMS OF SOCIALIST STOOL PIGEONS HELD FOR FEDERAL INVESTIGATION AT PITTSBURGH

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 2.—(By Mail)—Charged with inciting to riot, six militant workers were arraigned before the magistrate at the Pittsburgh, Center avenue station Monday morning. All had been arrested the evening before while participating in a mass demonstration of workers who were denied admission to the Abramovich meeting at the Labor Lyceum. The magistrate ordered the six, including one girl, held for federal investigation.

A squad of uniformed police and plain clothes dicks were assigned to help the yellow socialists keep away from the hall in which Abramovich hurled his slanders against Soviet Russia, all such workers who may be suspected of having sympathies with this first working class republic.

Half the Meeting Was Outside.

The Daily Forward agent, Weissburg, took charge of the entrance and pointed out all those who could not be admitted; the cops were on hand to chase them away until their numbers, constantly swelling, reached about three hundred demonstrating in front of the hall and telling the Forward gang what they thought of their hero, Abramovich.

While some of the more aggressive ones were distributing literature giving further information about this international scab, the cops and dicks, still under the direction of the Forward agent, attacked the demonstrators. Several were beaten with clubs over their heads. One was struck to the ground with two heavy cops on top of him, the demonstrators shouted, "Is this your democracy?" The street became jammed when finally the patrol wagon hauled the six to the police station.

True to their usual sensational style of inciting against the Communist workers, the capitalist papers appeared in the early morning hours with such headlines and stories as would furnish a plausible alibi for

We'll Bet This Bill Is "Unconstitutional."

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3.—Thousands of employes of the Bethlehem Steel company would be given back pay awards made by the war labor board, under terms of a bill passed by the senate this afternoon. The claims, totalling $1,900,000 grew out of war time employment and would be paid thru the United States court of claims.

BRUTALITY OF CAPITALIST LAW SHOWN IN THIRD DEGREE METHODS USED TO GET FAKE CONFESSION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OMAHA, Neb., March 3.—The alleged confession of "Arthur Lopez," featured as a sensation by the plute press thruout the country, was in reality forced by third-degree methods from the Indian soldier, Arthur Frazier, if the charges made in a signed statement by James Garvie, influential Indian of Niobrara, Nebraska, are true.

The highlights fo this case, and the charges made by Garvie, are as follows:

(1) Arthur Frazier, Indian ex-soldier, believed dead and buried, is found wandering in Oklahoma, gassed, shell-shocked and suffering from paralysis.

JENSEN FAILS TO AWE LOCAL CARPENTERS

Elect New Committee to Probe Expulsions

After listening to Harry Jensen, president of the carpenters' district council, rave for over an hour against the Communists and particularly against the five "expelled" members of the union, Chicago Local 181, Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, decided to gag the flow of hokum from the mental vacuum of Jensen, by deciding to take steps looking towards a settlement of the problem

The local is practically one hundred per cent behind the five militants and Jensen was forced to agree to the proposal to elect five members to investigate the matter of the expulsion.

It was another one of those meetings which have become the fashion since the local officials under the direction of Jensen and "Czar" Hutcheson expelled five members illegally from the organization for daring to sign their names to a resolution condemning the Landis award scab contract that Jensen entered into with the contractors.

Usual Procedure.

On last Monday evening the carpenters gathered as usual. The conductor took up the password as usual and the chairman asked the five illegally expelled members to leave as usual. And as usual they politely declined to comply with the order. The chairman then announced that there would be no meeting. Thereupon "Jim" Jensen, the financial secretary and the chairman took their heels.

The carpenters stayed in the hall. Shortly afterwards Harry Jensen arrived, strutted up like a game cock to the platform and fumbled in his pocket for "documents." Noticing that most of the lights were out, he went behind the scenes and tried to throw more illumination on the scene, but instead plunged the hall in complete darkness. Fearing that he was going to stage a burglary, the members shouted for light and with some assistance, light was produced.

Read a Telegram.

Then Jensen read what he declared was a telegram from Lakeland, Fla., where the "Carpenter" Hutcheson is basking in the sun during these biting cold days. The telegram was to the effect that unless Local 181 saw the error of its ways, it would lose

POSTAL CLERKS' UNION THANKS DAILY WORKER

Appreciates Support for Pay Raise

The DAILY WORKER has received a letter from the Chicago Post Office Clerks' Union No. 1, expressing the union's appreciation of the support given the campaign for a better wage for the postal employes of the United States government.

The letter declares:

March 2, 1925.

Editor,
DAILY WORKER,
Chicago, Illinois.

Dear Sir:

The hearts of 350,000 postal employes and their families have been made to rejoice thru the consummation of justice long delayed. We wish to express our sincere gratitude to you and the general public for their magnificent support and your ardent devotion to our cause during the long and strenuous wage campaign for a decent standard of living.

Yours truly,
Chicago Post Office Clerks' Union,
Local No. 1, N. F. P. O. C.
Legislative Committee: — Peter H. Seegoord, Earl W. Wiley, David W. Johnson.

ANOTHER ACTIVE SOCIALIST JOINS WORKERS PARTY

United Front with the Liberals Condemned

Another official of the socialist party of America, Comrade E. Hugo Oehler, of Kansas City, disgusted with reformist antics of that aggregation of renegades and adventurers, decided to drop his red card in that party—the only thing red connected with that demoralized outfit. In a letter to the socialist party, copy of which was sent to The DAILY WORKER, the comrade in question Comrade Oehler explained his reasons for taking this action.

That the brilliant strategy of Morris Hillquit, the "Moses" of the socialist party has succeeded in leaving the party not alone without principles but also without membership is indicated by the number of active members who are leaving the ranks of the socialist party and lining up with the Communists.

Comrade Oehler was secretary of the Kansas City local of the socialist party and of the Jackson county central committee. After explaining his reasons for quitting the S. P., he states: "After thinking things over, I have at last decided to join the Workers (Communist) Party, considering it the only party that has the tactics that will overthrow capitalism."

Traction Ordinance Planned on Bankers Advice Dever Admits

Mayor Dever, in signing the traction ordinance which gives the bankers control of the Chicago surface and elevated lines for a long period of years, revealed that he has written the ordinance solely upon the advice of those bankers.

"The leading bankers of Chicago have assured us that the program can be financed on the foundations laid in the ordinance," Dever said. "They constitute the best authority obtainable on that subject. I refer to Melvin A. Taylor, president of the First National bank, John Mitchell, head of the Illinois Merchants bank, and A. W. Harris, chief of the Harris Trust and Savings bank. The word of any one of them commands the faith of any citizen."

Devers ordinance vests complete control of the traction lines in a board of control of nine men, three of whom are direct representatives of these bankers.

Farmers Oppose Coolidge's Hand Picked Committee

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3.—Because farmers' co-operative marketing organizations protested to congress against the schemes recommended by his farm commission, President Coolidge is angry. He blames this interference, in part, for the defeat of the farm legislation which his own hand-picked commission prepared at the last moment for the approval of the house and senate. He puts part of the blame, also, on the middlemen, who, he thinks, have used farmers as a false front for their own opposition to any change in present arrangements.

The farmers' co-operatives reply that the white house remedies were big business proposals that would have left them worse off than at present, and were a pretext for refusal to consider genuine help.

Bankers Watch "Cal" Sworn In

unless the Communists recognized "private property rights," and changed their Communist principles. Now that Coolidge's Wall Street backers are forced to bow to Russia, Coolidge is about to enforce a new policy.

Hoover Stole Fisheries.

The forced resignation of Hughes, however, does not mean that Coolidge and his gang have changed their opinions of Communism. Herbert Hoover, who was caught using his government's position to turn Alaskan salmon fisheries over to capitalists, and grafting on the government in numerous ways, remains as the strong man of the cabinet despite his record as a red baiter who circulated and manufactured lieing documents about Soviet Russia.

Coolidge's new private secretary, former Representative Sanders, came to the notice of Coolidge and his capitalist owners when Sanders aided in breaking the railway shopmen's strike, and worked against legislation aimed to abolish the tool of the railroad magnates—the railroad labor board.

Weeks in Shoals Scandal.

The new Secretary of Agriculture Jardin has a record of opposition to farmers' co-operatives, unless they are controlled by bankers. He is well-known as a labor hater.

Secretary of War Weeks has his finger in the new Muscle Shoals scandal. Weeks backed the Underwood bill turning Muscle Shoals over to private interests, and induced the senate and house conference to so amend the bill as to give electrical interests in New York a freer hand to exploit the $150,000,000 government project. Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, who took exception to Coolidge's "Nigger baiting" attitude toward southern Negroes, may be forced to resign for that reason, but Wilbur has tried to make good to the financiers, by advocating a bigger navy with which better to protect their property. Coolidge has approved Harding's policy of declaring that the Negroes must not expect social equality.

Owned by Standard Oil.

Harlan F. Stone, the former Columbia university law dean, who came into prominence as a lawyer for the J. P. Morgan and J. D. Rockefeller mining and oil interests has been elevated to the United States supreme court.

Stone is there expected to see to it that all legislation which improves the conditions of the workers, or gives women and children toiling in industry a chance for a better existence is declared unconstitutional.

Charles Warren, who has been appointed by Coolidge to replace Stone as attorney general, is a prominent member of the sugar trust, and will not push "anti-trust" legislation.

It's a Millionaire's Cabinet.

Another millionaire capitalist who will remain in the cabinet is Secretary of the Treasury Andrew J. Mellon, who has endeared himself to the hearts of the financiers by lowering the income tax on large incomes. Mellon has been frequently embarrassed by his connection with the Teapot Dome oil scandal and his name has often been mentioned in liquor frauds.

The people who came to Washington to witness Coolidge's inauguration, are mostly bankers and employers who feel that since Coolidge is protecting their interests they have a personal interest in the government.

Charles G. Dawes, the well-known banker, who will be sworn in as vice-president, has as his guests a crowd of bankers, manufacturers and plutocrats. Dawes, who was comptroller under President McKinley, has formally "resigned" his banking connections, but retained his stock in the banks and industries in which he is interested.

Big Welcome to Dawes.

Dawes, who lends his name to the plan of the J. P. Morgan company, which has already enslaved the German workers and put a collar of gold around the necks of the workers of France, Belgium and to some extent, England, was met at the train by a committee of bankers. This committee was called the "citizens' inaugural committee" and included Edward Clifford, former assistant secretary of the treasury, and James B. Reynolds, the millionaire banker of Washington.

Among the Dawes' party are William G. Edens, vice-president of the Central Trust company of Chicago, bosom friend of Dawes; Joseph F. Otis, manufacturer, and George A. Paddock of the American legion. These rich friends of Dawes are boosting him as the next republican candidate for president.

RED BAITERS BUSY IN PITTSBURGH

the charge of "inciting to riot."

Six Victims of White Guardism.

The six arrested whose names are Margaret Yeager, stenographer; John Truhar, bricklayer; Elia Kapec, steel worker; Peter Skrtc, tailor; Bleddyn Thomas, steel worker, and I. H. Bay, clerk, were held under $1,000 cash bail each. The Workers Party members immediately got busy. Small squads were sent in different directions to collect the necessary funds and at about 1 a. m., the fast work was completed, bail was put up and the six let out.

Before the magistrate, the sergeant in charge of the arrests testified that he had sufficient evidence to feel assured that these six workers were "suspicious persons" and had attempted to incite the crowd to riot. One of them had resisted arrest, said the sergeant while he submitted a stack of leaflets and pamphlets as further evidence.

A Welsh Miner "Poked Me In the Jaw."

And "your honor," butted in a slick dressed stool pigeon, while pointing to Bleddyn Thomas, a young husky former Welsh miner, now a steel worker, "While I helped the officers, this man asked me what I was going to do with defendants. I said I was going to take them to the station. 'No you ain't,' he said and took a poke at me hitting me right square in the jaw."

Among the seditious literature confiscated the magistrate discovered a poem calling upon the workers to unite beneath the red flag and telling them that the world is theirs if they take it. This he considered very dangerous and ordered the defendants turned over to the federal authorities for investigation. Another bail for $1,000 was fixed and put up as quickly as before.

"Bolshevism Wouldn't Let in Rain."

Inside in the Labor Lyceum hall the "heroic" Abramovich was holding forth, wailing about the conditions of the mensheviks in Soviet Russia who had been been denied their freedom (to carry on counter revolutionary activities), asking the audience about 400 to 500 times, "Do you think that is right?" The applause showed what the audience thought when someone shouted, "Yes, it serves you right." He sprung a new one on the Pittsburgh meeting when he stated that the Bolsheviki were just as much to blame for the draught in 1921 which caused the horrible famine, as nature was.

In conclusion, he bemoaned the conditions of the Jewish people in Soviet Russia, most of whom were not workers but middle class and thus had no possibility of existence under the Soviet regime. He evidently forgot that there was still an opportunity available for all of them to take up useful labor.

Rafael's Past Confronts Him.

After his speech when questions were permitted, one worker got up and addressing Abramovich directly, said: "Where am I at now, at a capitalist meeting or a workmen's gathering? I remember distinctly how 18 years ago when I listened to your advice in Russia, you told us to beware of the middle class elements as they had nothing in common with the workers, but would always ultimately support the bosses."

Altho no "foreigners" were supposed to be admitted to the meeting which was conducted wholly in Jewish, one Jewish merchant from Braddock, brought a dozen gentile gangsters in addition to the squad of cops and dicks placed inside the hall to help "keep order."

Olgin and Minor Speak Sunday

A mass protest demonstration against the lies of the international scab, Abramovich, is being called at the same hall on Sunday, March 8, at 8 p. m., under auspices of the Workers Party, with Robert Minor and Mosaye J. Olgin as the main speakers. The workers who were denied admission for holding revolutionary sympathies and clubbed in the streets last Sunday will be sure to turn out next Sunday, bringing many others along for an imposing demonstration.

Banks Takes On Coal Mine

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., March 3.—Reorganization of the Vandalia Coal company, one of the largest and oldest firms of its kind in Indiana, was completed today, with the Union Trust company of Pittsburgh, Pa., taking control.

J. Bruce Orr of Pittsburgh was elected president of the reorganized firm succeeding Alfred Ogle of Indianapolis.

Fear New Quake.

Warning that some part of the United States will be shaken by earthquakes again within 24 was given yesterday, by D. F. Higgins, research fellow in the department of geology, university of Chicago.

Four Communists Arrested.

PRAGUE, Czecho-Slovakia, March 3.—Four Communist delegates to a conference of the Czecho-Slovakian party were arrested here, a news dispatch declares. Albert Treint, of the French Communist Party, and three other delegates from foreign countries were charged with violating passport regulations. Comrade Treint was jailed for eight days, according to the dispatch.

Government Tries to Cover Its Losses Thru Fake Liberty Bond Sales

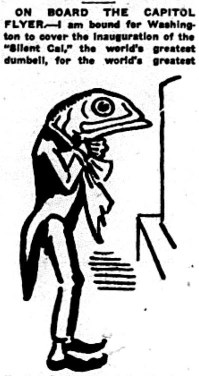
WASHINGTON, March 3.—A vigorous denial that the government has lost any appreciable sum by the cashing of liberty and other bonds, fraudulently issued in duplicate, was made at the treasury department today.

The treasury's denial was in flat contradiction to the sensational charges contained in the official report of a congressional investigating committee, which late yesterday declared there had been widespread duplication of government bonds, and falsification of records in the treasury to concael the peculations.

While the congressional report did not estimate the sum supposed to have been lost by the government, committee members said it might range from $5,000,000 to $40,000,000.

POOR FISH WILL COVER "CAL'S" SHOW FOR DAILY WORKER

ON BOARD THE CAPITOL FLYER.—I am bound for Washington to cover the inauguration of the "Silent Cal," the world's greatest dumbell, for the world's greatest English Communist daily. As I am in the midst of a tough looking bunch, I am unable to leave my typewriter long enough to see who is in the next seat, so this story will lack length, breadth and thickness.



But tomorrow I will be in the swim and by the time "Cal" has said his 21 words, my fine will be tapping out as snappy a tale as ever flowed out of a Remington. So, friends hold your horses.

Can't Disarm Germany.

PARIS, France, March 3—The meeting of the allies' council of ambassadors, which examined the report of the entente military control commission to Germany, decided that it will be impossible to forcibly compel the German army to disarm, as "neither France nor England are prepared to do so."

The report stated that Germany was supposed to disarm four years ago, but has not yet complied with her agreement.

Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador, attended the ambassadors' council.

Kurds Revolt Against Turks.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 3 —War in Asia Minor flared up on three fronts when the Kurdish rebels against the Turks, who are backed by French imperialism, sent out troops on three fronts.

Ambassador Lord Crewe has protested to Premier Herriot against the French aid given the Turks in attempting to crush the rebellion. The Turks, on the other hand, charge England with stirring up the revolt against the Turkish government.

Much Student Unrest In Chile.

SANTIAGO, Chile, March 3.—Many delegates to the women's conference held recently in Lima, denounced the educational system in South America, declaring that most of the teachers are nuns who have had little education.

The conservative parties here are supporting the control of the church over educational affairs. There is strong unrest among the students, who want to free the educational system from the clutches of the church.

New Election In Germany

BERLIN, Germany, March 3.—The new German presidential elections, made necessary by the death of president Ebert, will be held March 29th. The German president is elected by the direct vote of all German citizens more than 20 years of age. Ex-Chancellor Marx is anxious to run for the office, as is chancellor Luther.

If a majority of the votes are not cast for one candidate, a new election must be held in two weeks, when the candidate receiving the hightst number of votes is elected.

Say Soviets Seek Ancient Books

MOSCOW, Russia, March 3.—The Soviet government is to undertake excavating work under the towers of the Kremlin in an effort to discover the whereabouts of the hidden library of Ivan the Terrible, which is said to include 800 volumes bound in gold, a news dispatch states. The library of old manuscripts is considered priceless to historians.

No Rule Is Good But the Cooperative Effort of the World's Producing Class

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, capitalism worries about its own. Branting, in Sweden, and Ebert, in Germany, have gone, and Mussolini is sick in Italy. "Strong men," material for fascisti dictators, are not so plentiful as the profit class would wish. Hence the real cause of anguish.

• • • •

"Wild rumors," so-called, from Italy come like spear thrusts to the tender hide of the Hearst press, for instance. Arthur Brisbane utters the official wail as follows:

> "Another rumor says the Italian crown prince shot Mussolini in a quarrel That's nonsense, undoubtedly, and it would be base ingratitude. But for Mussolini and his revolution on the side of conservatism, Italy might have had a revolution sweeping the king from the throne."

So Mussolini must be conserved by all means. Brisbane hopes that he only has the "flu" and that he will soon recover.

• • • •

It is the brother fascist of Mussolini, Chancellor Luther, of Germany, who will speak at the grave of the dead "socialist" president, Friedrich Ebert. It is as if "Hell an' Maria" Dawes delivered the funeral oration over the remains of Morris Hillquit or Victor Berger. The front against Communism extends far.

Even as Arthur Brisbane worries about Mussolini, so he throws a few flowers on Ebert's bier:

> "Thanks to Ebert," says Brisbane, "to the highly intelligent and scientifically trained German specialists, and the millions of German workers, educated for 40 years in the social-democratic party, the Germans have the power of self-government.
> "Their administration has stood firm, ever since the war, under most horribly trying conditions That is the greatest possible tribute to the self-governing power of the Germans. And Ebert will be honored in history as the loyal servant of German democracy."

• • • •

Brisbane gets near to the truth with his final thought. All the rest is bunk. Ebert will be honored as a loyal servant of "German democracy," camouflage for "German capitalism." But when capitalism has been swept away in Germany, his memory will be ditched like so much rubbish Students in a college of Soviet Russia, the other day, sent several tons of books back to the paper mills to be made into new, white paper, so that something worth while could be written thereon.

Ebert will be remembered by the workers in the days to come as an obstacle in the path of the German Bolshevik Revolution. He was the figurehead of the fascist dictatorship that murdered Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, with thousands of other German workers, and sent tens of thousands to prison in order that German capitalism might live a little longer.

Ebert and his fellow social-democrats exerted most of their strength thru the trade unions and the social-democratic party built up in the period of "peace" before the world war started. But Communist influence over the trade unions is growing daily, and the membership of the social-democratic party quits it in masses, accepting the leadership of the German Communist Party.

An era of bloodshed—the shedding of the blood of the workers—has maintained capitalist rule in Germany since the fall of the kaiser, just as Mussolini maintains his rule in Italy. It is the capitalist rule that receives its orders from the Wall Street dictatorship of Morgan and Dawes.

This allied dictatorship of the mark and the dollar will fall before the rising German working class—feared by the capitalists of Germany and the United States alike—for the dictatorship of the workers in Germany will help strengthen Soviet Russia, and give new enthusiasm for the workers' struggle in every capitalist land, including the United States.

• • • •

The puppet Brisbane, newly arrived in the American millionaire class, tries to soothe America's workers and poor farmers with the idea that Ebert rule was good. America's exploited workers will gradually come to know better. They will learn that no rule is good but the co-operative effort of all producers in a Communist society.

Young Workers League Calling Conference for Mining Youth

ditions.

This conference will discuss the special demands of the Young Workers League for the young miners, as well as the problem of getting the young miners active in the left wing fight within the U. M. W. A.

The special Y. W. L. demands that the conference will discuss are:

1.—No contract shall be drawn up by the union containing discriminating clauses against the young miners such as "boys' wages" clauses, etc.

2.—No entrance fee for all young workers under 21 years of age.

3.—The enforcement of the objective of the union which calls for the abolition of employment for all children under 16.

4.—Young miners under 21 to pay 50 per cent of the regular dues.

5.—Establishment of a special section in the publication of the union devoted to the interests of the young miners to which the youth can contribute without censorship.

6.—Abolition of all employment of the youth in dangerous occupations in and around the mines.

7.—Immediate establishment of a day and night school under the supervision of the miners themselves.

8.—The 6-hour day, 5-day week for all young miners.

All young miners from both the organized and unorganized coal fields are invited to attend this conference.

LAME DUCK SENATOR TO BE SWORN IN AS SECRETARY OF STATE

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Frank B. Kellogg, former United States ambassador to Great Britain will be sworn in as secretary of state at 9:30 Thursday in the office of Secretary Hughes, it was announced today.

The oath will be administered by Assistant Justice Pierce Butler of the supreme court, who was appointed from Minnesota, Kellogg's home state.

Universal Manhood Vote Bill Passes the House in Japan

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOKYO, March 3.— The Japanese universal manhood suffrage bill passed the house of representatives amid an unprecedented uproar, during which fists flew. The bill will have to be passed by the house of peers before becoming a law. Much opposition is expected there.

The suffrage bill gives all male citizens over twenty-five years of age the vote, regardless of the amount of property they own. At the present time only males above twenty-five who have lived in the same district for six months and who have been paying more than three yen in direct national tax for more than a year are allowed to vote. Only about three million property owners vote in Japan under the present electoral laws.

BUSINESSMEN DIRECT NAVY IN NEW WAR MOVES

Confer with Weeks in Washington

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 3.—One hundred and ten vessels of the United States navy are off the coast here entering upon war manuevers intended to impress Mexico, the south American countries, and Japan with the power wielded by America in the Pacific.

Meanwhile the nation's biggest businessmen, and representatives of the railroad magnates met in Washington with war department officials, in a conference which it was announced "will co-ordinate wartime endeavors of business, transportation and the government."

The capitalists who control the government plan to extend the fleet manuevers to Hawaii and Australia, in the preparation to plunge the workers and poor farmers of this country into another slaughter as to the merits of which they are to have no voice.

Coolidge Crowd Opens Fight on Brookhart in Iowa

WASHINGTON, March 3. — The state central republican committee of Iowa today filed a contest against Senator Smith W. Brookhart, republican of Iowa, charging him with "fraud and perjury" in the conduct of his campaign.

The charges were delivered to the secretary of the senate by B. B. Burnquist, chairman of the committee.

The contest—the third filed against the senator since the November campaign—caused Brookhart to issue a direct challenge to his political foes to meet him before the voters of Iowa.

"This gang opposed my nomination and fought my election," said Brookhart.

The perjury charge was based on an allegation that Brookhart filed an affidavit prior to his primary campaign stating that he was "a member of the republican party." This statement, the central committee averred, "was false and untrue."

The committee based its charge of fraud on an allegation that Brookhart "fraudulently" received republican votes while posing as a republican candidate.

Exploiter of Copper Miners to Be Buried

NEW YORK, March 3.—Funeral services for William A. Clark, multi-millionaire copper king who some years ago bought his way to a seat in the United States senate, will be held here Thursday. Clark's New York home was a palace which formed one of the landmarks of millionaire's row on Fifth Ave. The woodwork was turned out in Clark's Ravenswood plant on Long Island, where he paid starvation wages.

The stone of the building was turned out by the wage slaves whom Clark employed in his quarries in Maine. The bronze was hammered out in Clark's foundries, where laborer's sweat their lives away for a meager wage.

Talk About Rock Dust After Mine Blast in Indiana

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., March 3.—Compulsory rock-dusting in Indiana "dry" mines where there is danger of coal dust accumulations exploding, will be added to state mine safety regulations, A. C. Dally, chief mine inspector, announced today at the close of the mine safety conference.

Rock dusting, Dally explained, is a process for balancing the coal dust in a mine with a non-combustible dust, thus precluding explosions.

Legislature Approves Strikebreaker.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 3—Telegrams of congratulation were sent by the state legislature to Calvin Coolidge, Vice-president Charles Dawes, and Senator Charles Deneen congratulating them on their elections. The legislature took advantage of the inauguration as an opportunity to adjourn for a day.

But Big Tax Dodgers Go.

WASHINGTON, March 3—The senate today passed a house bill establishing strict penalties for world war veterans who fraudulently misrepresent bonus applications. A house provision for extending vocational training was eliminated.

Wisconsin Republicans Meet.

OSHKOSH, Wis., March 3.— Nine hundred Coolidge republicans, representing many sections of Wisconsin, met here and after endorsing President Coolidge, declared their intention of opposing the LaFollette republicans at the 1926 convention, which will nominate state and congressional republican candidates.

SECTION OF THE TRADE UNION EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE

HOW LEWIS HELPS MINE OPERATORS WRECK THE UNION

Three Year Agreement Was Betrayal

By A Coal Miner.

O'FALLON, Ill.—The effect of the Jacksonville agreement is unemployment and starvation in O'Fallon. Local Union 705, U. M. W. of A. has paid out $860.00 for relief to 41 unemployed starving families who belong to our local union. The mines they worked at closed down 11 months ago, and no other jobs could be secured—and two months ago the store keepers stopped their credit, which left them in a critical condition.

There are, however, two mines working here, and the men at these two mines voted to share the work with the other 248 idle men; but the company refused to let them do this. So we took up the division of work on April 15 for the carbon men. This case went to the executive board, but up to this time we have not had a decision on the case.

Executive Board In No Hurry.

On Oct. 2, the Taylor men voted unanimously to give the St. Ellen men a share of the work, and this case also went to the board. The board met in November but did not take up the case. They met again in December, and again failed to take up the matter. They met again in January, and referred the case to an independent arbitration commission.

Section 12, of our agreement, reads: "After a mine has been idle, except thru strikes, for a period of 30 days, the miners employed at mines in the same locality may, at their option, share work with those thrown idle, either by doubling up in working places or some other manner mutually agreeable; except, there will be no change in men in working places oftener than every six days of operation."

After Ten Months—This!

On Feb. 12, the following decision was handed down:

"Springfield, Ill., Feb. 12, 1925—Case No. U. Operators' Association, Fifth 9 Dist., and the U. M. W. of A. in a matter in dispute between the miners of Perry Coal company, Taylor mine, O'Fallon, Ill., and the company, wherein the miners are demanding that they be allowed to share their work with the men from the St. Ellen mine, which was referred to the independent members of the arbitration commission for settlement.

"After listening to the arguments presented by both sides, and reviewing the evidence in this case and in a careful examination of Clause 12 of the state agreement, we are of the unanimous opinion that unless the men agree to double up in the working places, work cannot be shared except by some other plan mutually agreeable to employer and employe at this mine; and we so decide."

"Independent Arbitration Commission."

This decision means that instead of working two men in one place as at present, we are compelled to work four men in one place. The men working in this mine have not enuf air to sustain life for two men, having to leave their places one and two days a week on account of bad air.

The failure to get a decision from the executive board, and the unemployment and starvation condition in O'Fallon, is the outcome of the three year agreement entered into at Jacksonville, Fla., which was intended to destroy the U. M. W. of A. as an organization. The operators will have to give John L. Lewis, Frank Farrington, and their boot-licking machine the credit for doing the job well. The operators alone didn't have the guts

Abolish Capitalism—And Lewis.

As coal miners we realize that the unemployment, suffering, and misery are the outcome of capitalism and can only be abolished with the abolition of the system that produces it. The workers will eventually learn that the present system of society is the deadly germ of their disease . . . Capitalism includes all other crimes . . . It degrades labor and corrupts leisure . . . It ties a balloon to the shoulders of the rich child . . . It ties a ball and chain to the feet of the poor child and tells them they have an equal opportunity.

A rich man's child goes to college, while a poor man's child goes to work in the mines, the factories, and the sweat-shops. They produce the wealth that keeps the rich child in college. The rich child gets the education to keep the poor child a slave. When the poor child grows up to manhood or womanhood and becomes a Communist, they put him in jail for advocating "An equal opportunity for all who work."

CARPENTERS OF MINNEAPOLIS NEED EDUCATION

File Detroit Protest on Expulsions

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 4.—The blind followers of Czar Hutcheson were out in force at the meeting of the Carpenters' Local No. 7 here. Two weeks ago a resolution was read from Lodge No. 2140 in Detroit protesting against the methods of persecution being followed by the national president.

At that time a motion was made to write a letter to Hutcheson asking him for information relative to the charges. At the meeting last night his reply was before the body. Three pages of flimsy excuses in which bombastic charges of dualism and so forth were made against the T. U. E. L.

Motion to File Carries.

Comrade Roseland, Johnson, and other left wingers took the floor in an attempt to show up the policy being followed against the progressive elements, but their efforts were without avail. The reactionaries led by Nels Nelson, Geo. Yaeger, J. R. Bjorklund and "Whiskey Red" Anderson, performed in a high class manner for the reactionaries and were able to swing the majority vote on the motion to file the communication.

A letter from Painters' Union No. 186 calling upon all building trades locals to elect a committee to attend a conference to consider ways and means of immediately launching an organization campaign was read. Bjorklund, a reactionary business agent, feared that uniting with other building trades unions may upset his plans of doing business with the carpenter bosses.

Don't Want Any Organization Drive.

He advocated a policy of isolation for the carpenters and attempted to justify his position by citing the fact that the Building Trades Council had not functioned in the past.

Comrade Roseland led the fight in favor of support for the movement and pointed out that the only way an effective organization campaign could be launched and any success made in defeating the citizens' alliance would have to be had thru united action of all building trades unions.

The reactionaries again mobilised their entire strength and succeeded in defeating the motion to co-operate with the painters. The meeting was then closed after a talk by the city assessor in which he explained the question of taxes to the carpenters. Some time ago the local went on record to carry on educational activities and the highest form of education that the committee in charge has so far been able to bring forth in talks such as was made here.

Berkeley Brothers Have Shindig With Hutcheson's Agents

BERKELEY, Cal.—Carpenters' locals Nos. 1667 and 2167 voted unanimously to amalgamate and have received a new charter. The conservatives imagine that they have won a victory in getting the smaller radical local to agree to the amalgamation. Local 2167 voted 64 for Hutcheson and four for Rosen while No. 1667 voted 16 for Rosen, 15 for Brown and none for Hutcheson. The reactionaries are jubilant and so are we. There is an education in store for the right wing of this newly formed local.

Organizer Grey, a Hutcheson lickspittle has fired the first gun in the Hutcheson expulsion campaign. He made a bitter attack against the unemployment council that has been formed here on the united front basis.

Gurney, business agent and local representative of Hutcheson, suddenly discovers the Progressive Building Trades Worker at the meeting of No. 1667 for the first time and talks about expelling the wobblies and Communists who brought it into the hall. He expressed surprise at seeing it, altho it has been distributed at the meeting for over one year.

Brother V. V. Dart answered Grey in a masterly manner pointing out that the Progressive Building Trades Worker stood for amalgamation, independent working class political action and exposed the corruption of the bureaucracy. He said that Gurney knew that he, Dart, brought the papers to the local.

He pointed out that the Progressive Building Trades Worker fought dual unionism. He warned Grey, the organizer, not to attempt any arbitrary expulsions, that as an organizer he should be preaching amalgamation and class solidarity instead of trying to cause disruption. The meeting was the best we have had for some time. Many brothers had their eyes opened.

Jobless Army Grows in Omaha Despite Businessmen's Bluff

OMAHA, Neb., March 3.—Altho the employment situation in this city is growing worse, rather than better, the chamber of commerce continues to broadcast such "publicity" as:

"Omaha is a great place in which to live."

"Omaha—Where the West is Best."

"Omaha—The City of Home Owners," etc., etc.

The obvious stupidity of such publicity, at a time when hundreds are walking the streets in search of work and business concerns are going to the wall one after the other, has caused no little quarreling among the "leading citizens" of the chamber of commerce and business men's association.

Altho this wrangle was kept secret for some time, it broke into the open recently when the athletic club, as a part of its campaign for funds (the athletic club is run for the well-to-do) placed posters about the city proclaiming "No More Receiverships for Omaha." This aroused the ire of the hundred percenters to such a degree that the posters were immediately taken down and placards of a less damning character replaced them.

Some of these gentlemen seem to realize that jobless workers do not make good customers, be they ever so willing as wage slaves.

The crux of the situation lies in the fact that the general economic depression, with its resulting centralization of capital and production, is driving the workers from the farms and small towns into the larger centers. In Omaha there is undoubtedly as much work going on as there is normally at this time of the year, yet there are droves of jobless about the gates at factories and packing houses such as have not been seen for many years.

Just how seriously this condition will react upon the labor movement, only time will tell. It is certain, however, that these workers from the small towns are not flocking into the unions, and many of them are tradesmen of the various crafts.

Miners in Ohio Are Just Beginning To Get Fighting Mad

YORKVILLE, Ohio.—I am writing this short note to give you an idea of the situation in the Bellaire Sub-District of the U. M. W. of A.

The progressive candidates in the last election made a splendid showing in spite of the election frauds, the machine lost the auditors and credentials committees, which also act as tellers at the convention, and it is common knowledge that Hoge, the progressive candidate for president of the Sub District, was counted out.

As an example of corupt election tactics, we have proof of one local, which has only six members, voting 188 for the machine. The Sub-District convention is being held March 9, at Yorkville, Ohio, and the progressives will be very strongly represented there.

The machine is alarmed at the advance made by the progressives, nationally and locally, and has issued a circular letter denouncing the circular issued by the progressives during the election in Sub-District 5 of Dist 6.

The progressives are determined to carry this convention and put it on record for militant class struggle and against the class collaboration policy of the Lewis administration.

Cleveland Cooks and Waiters Fight Open Shop Campaign of the Bosses

CLEVELAND, Ohio—The strike of the Cooks and Waiters against Webers Restaurant, on Superior Ave., opposite the Post Office, is now entering its seventh week, the with the strikers standing firm and fully confident of winning. The place is constantly picketed and the pickets report that the business of the place has fallen off fully 50 per cent, in spite of a reduction in prices.

It is reported that the bulletin of the American plan association is doing its best to assist the boss, calling upon the members of the association and their friends to support Weber with their patronage and assist him to win this conflict, which the strikers believe would be the signal for a concerted open shop drive by other eating-houses.

The employer's case is weakened by his action in breaking his promise to the government mediator to postpone the threatened lock-out for thirty days. He put it into effect after only a one-day wait, breaking the agreement he had with the joint board of the union.

Bank Employees Unemployed.

GERMANY, March 3. — At present there are approximately 300,000 unemployed bank employes, who during 1923, were employed in banking vocations

TRADE UNIONS OF CHINA FORM BIG FEDERATION

SHANGHAI, China, March 2—After long preliminary work, which was very difficult owing to the lack of co-operation between the various unions, a National Federation of Trade Unions has been founded in China. The new federation comprises 76 organizations, with a total membership of nearly 200,000.

The speeches at the opening ceremonies show that the federation has a working class basis, its chief tasks being declared to the fight against capitalism, against the militarists of Northern China, and against the foreign imperialistic powers.

The meeting declared strongly in favor of Sun Yat Sen, who is very pupular in labor circles, and a champion of the above program. It may be assumed that the defeat of Wu-Pei-Fu in Northern China will make its influence felt in Southern China. When the fight between the military dynasties is over, the class conflict will begin.

Scores of Locals Are Condemning Hutcheson's Rule

CHICAGO.—Hutcheson's expulsion policy is not running as smoothly as he thought it would. Los Angeles, Chicago, Detroit and Philadelphia are the centers he has concentrated upon and he has run into a snag in all of them. For the first time, his arbitrary expulsion of political enemies and the revoking of charters of locals and district councils who opposed his czaristic rule is being met by the resentment of the rank and file and a well-defined ideologically organized left wing.

The following is a list of the locals that have endorsed the resolution sent out by Local 2140 of Detroit, condemning the expulsion policy and demanding the reinstatement of the expelled. The following list is only a few of the local unions who have undoubtedly endorsed this resolution, as they represent only those who voluntarily sent in the information for publication for the T. U. E. L. page:

United Front To Fight Unemployment Riles Native Sons

SAN FRANCISCO.—We have a very well functioning unemployment council in Alameda county, it is a united front affair, the Workers (Communist) Party, I. W. W. and 15 local trade unions. We are holding mass meetings, registering the unemployed Committees appear before the city and county officials demanding the starting of public works and the hiring of the unemployed at union wages.

The reaction to this publicity of the workers' poverty is an attack by the business element. Our dearly beloved petty bougeoisie are demanding a charter amendment which will provide that only local firms and native sons be given the contracts and be employed on public works. Of course those who are not natives are supposed to feel kindly about it and go back to their "own" state. Starving there will be easier as they will be among friends.

Atlantic Mill Weavers Strike at Speed Up

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—A hundred and fifteen weavers are on strike from the Atlantic Mills, worsted goods makers, against the management's attempt to make them operate three instead of two looms each. The United Textile Workers' Union leads the

EASTERN DISTRICT

Miners of District 5 Determined to Clean Out Election Crooks

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The election in the miners' organization in Dist. 5, Pennsylvania, according to the tellers, was Fagin 11,641, Guiler, 4,120. There were 30 locals thrown out. The votes in these locals were, Guiler, 1,070, Fagin 675. These tellers, creatures of the Lewis machine, hold their position because of their ability to count votes for the Lewis candidates where none exists.

I have received a report on the vote from 53 locals, which shows more than a three to one majority for Guiler, and the miners here are determined to investigate the whole election fraud. There is no doubt in our minds but that Guiler was elected and that the fact that candidates were not allowed to have watchers at the time the ballots were counted by the tellers, resulted in the throwing out of many of Guiler's votes and the padding of the election of Fagin, as well as the voting of locals (blue sky) that are non-existant.

Little Strikes Here and There While All New England Suffers

NEW YORK—Among the small textile strikes going on against wage cuts are those of the weavers in the Norad Mills, at Braytonville, Mass., the loom-fixers at the American Woolen plant at Fulton, N. Y.; the Greenhalg Mills and Pawtucket Hosiery company, near Pawtucket, R. I.; the Dwight Manufacturing company plant at Chicopee, near Springfield, Mass., and two mills at Utica, New York.

Solidarity of labor is shown in the Utica strike by a $1.00 assessment levied on each member by the local Street Carmen's Union for the Textile workers; at the Dwight company strike by the partial working together of the United Textile Workers with the American Federation of Textile Operatives.

Victory for the strikers of the Forestdale Manufacturing company at Forestdale, R. I. brot the rescinding of the ten per cent wage cut.

30,000 Workers Near Starvation; Little Unions Divide Workers

FALL RIVER, Mass.—There are more than thirty thousand cotton goods workers in Fall River and nearly all of them are working under open shop conditions. A general wage cut of ten per cent came two months ago and several hundred workers are on strike under the banners of the United Textile Workers (A. F. of L.) and the American Federation of Textile Operatives, (Independent). These quarrelling little unions only divide the workers and prevent a united front against the bosses.

The need of outside labor aid is all the greater because of the poverty of the Fall River workers. Two-thirds of them were unemployed thruout 1924 and those working full time did not average more than $20 a week.

McMahon's Usual "Conference" Has Its Usual Result

WILLIAMANTIC, Conn., March 3.—The conference held here between Thomas E. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers of America, and a committee representing operatives of the local mills of the American Thread company, with Don F. Curtis, agent of the mills, was without result.

The company refused the operatives' demand that a cut of 10 per cent in wages announced February 12, be restored. The textile workers at a meeting here about two weeks ago voted to strike if the wage cut was not restored.

American Legion Aims Blow At The Streetcar Union

BOSTON, Mass., March 3.—The American Legion has once more proven to be the enemy of the working class by introducing a bill in the Massachusetts legislature aimed to require the Boston Elevated Railway company to give preference of employment to vettrans and citizens.

The fact that there are many non-citizens in the ranks of the Carmen's Union, and as a duty to protect the foreign-born worker from such vicious discrimination, the organized labor movement of this city is vigorously opposing this bill before the committee on labor and industry, which is now holding its hearing on many bills that are aimed at the labor movement.

United Front Being Forced on Officials by Textile Strikers

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Unity between the two labor organizations conducting strikes at the Dwight Manufacturing company plant at Chicopee may be achieved.

The American Federation of Textile Operatives announces that it hopes to see the formation of a general strike committee for the entire plant, to coordinate the strikes which the weavers' and loom fixers' locals of his union and the carders and spinners of the United Textile Workers are conducting.

Rivalry between these two main divisions of the textile unionists, the United Textile Workers (A. F. of L.) and the American Federation of Textile Operatives, independent, has admittedly limited solidarity.

Strikers of both organizations, however, have been standing firm and the company's second attempt to reopen failed to bring any of the workers participating in the walkout back to the mill.

Gets Sore Because No Warning of Wage Demand Is Given Boss

NEWARK, N. J., March 3.—"All trades contemplating making a demand for an increased wage scale must comply strictly with the council regulation requiring a three months' written notice to that effect" was the warning recently sent out by the president of the Building Trades Council of Newark, N. J. This announcement followed a report that the asbestos workers had signed an agreement for $10.50 a day for journeymen and $8 for helpers.

1,200 Pantsmakers Strike For Increase

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—Twelve hundred pantsmakers are striking for wage increases of twenty per cent under the banner of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union.

Report Shows Low Pay Makes School Janitors Careless

NEW YORK, March 2.—New York public schools "are dirty because they are not properly cleaned. Help is insufficient because of low renumeration due to the uncontrolled contract system." Thus reports the Teachers' Union auxiliary and recommends a plan for correcting these abuses to the board of education.

Children's and teachers' toilets are reported unclean and foul-smelling even to the extent of spreading an odor thru halls and class rooms in some cases. Plumbing is frequently old-fashioned and in no case is quickly enough repaired. Windows are seldom cleaned despite well-made rules. Corners of rooms, stairs, banisters, desks, etc., show dust accumulations. But since most of the schools are cleaned by helpers employed under a contract system in which the custodian of each school employs his assistants for as little as he can in order to have the most possible for himself out of the lump allotment given him for the work, the investigators conclude that little more can be expected. Even mentally deficient workers are reported from certain schools because no others can be gotten for the meager wage.

Men janitors average $82.85 per month for nearly 12 hours work per day. Women workers get $61.66 average per month for an average 9 to 10 hours per day. Custodians oppose unionization of workers under them although they have a sort of employers' association for themselves.

Two Workers Die, Four Injured in Oklahoma Oil Blast

TULSA, Okla., March 3.—Two men were killed and four seriously injured when a high pressure still at the refinery of the Barnsdall Refining company at Bansdall, fifty miles north of here, blew up. Three men were reported missing. A train of tank cars being loaded with gasoline caught fire and the men burned were on the loading track which was destroyed.

BOSSES TRY TO KILL 8-HOUR DAY FOR THE WOMEN

Illinois Manufacturers Urge 9-Hour Day

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 3.—The woman's eight-hour bill, regulating the time of employment for women who labor, faced an old and formidable foe today as machinery was set in motion to completely choke it by supporting a nine-hour bill.

According to members of the legislature, the Illinois manufacturers' association is leading the fight against the eight-hour bill and has decided to repeat the tactics by which it was chloroformed two years ago.

Go Before Committee.

Officials of the Women's Trade Union League are planning to go before the joint session of the house and senate committees on industrial affairs with a demand that the original eight-hour bill be passed as drafted.

Returning legislators today were greeted with a bill giving the people the right to levy an additional tax for the payment of firemen's salaries.

The bill is applicable to all cities and villages with the single exception of Chicago. It provides that on a petition signed by one-eighth of the legal voters, the question of levying an additional tax not exceeding one mill, shall be submitted to a general or special election, and if a majority of those voting on the question favor it this special tax shall be levied until the authority by which it was levied is revoked by a similar vote.

The question cannot be voted on oftener than once in 18 months, and the measure in no wise curtails the right of the city council or board of trustees, to use any funds levied by general taxation for firemen's salaries.

Urge Health Bill.

Public health interests lined up today behind a bill providing for a full time county health officer with half his salary paid by the state.

The bill would make the action optional. The duties of such an official would be to enforce the state health laws, local ordinances pertaining to health and sanitation, and rules and regulations of the state health department which department is given general supervision of his work.

COMMUNISTS IN ST. LOUIS ENTER CITY ELECTION

John Braun Unanimous Party Choice for Mayor

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 3.—At an enthusiastic general membership meeting two weeks ago, the St. Louis local of the Workers (Communist) Party decided to enter the local municipal election with a Workers Party candidate for mayor.

John Braun received the unanimous endorsement of the local. Comrade Braun is a member of Typographical Union, Local No. 8. He has been a member of organized labor for many years and knows the American labor movement from A to Z. He also has a long record of service in the revolutionary movement of America.

The platform upon which the local campaign will be waged is being drawn up and will be sent to the DAILY WORKER for publication as soon as it is ready.

The following members were selected for the campaign committee: Comrades Lessner, Goldberg, Foggel, Mink, Cramer, Johnson, Chenoff, Jurkovich, Braun; Harry Stoltz, campaign manager; McMillin, secretary of the campaign committee; John Mihilic, subdistrict organizer, co-operating with the committee.

Petitions that will enable the Workers (Communist Party) to get on the local ballot, are now coming in.

The next general membership meeting of local St. Louis will be held Monday, March 9, at the local party headquarters, 2412 N. 14th street. Final campaign arrangements will be made at this meeting. All members of the party and Y. W. L. are expected to attend.

All together, comrades, to put St. Louis on the map for Communism. Watch the DAILY WORKER for further announcements.

Party Social Becomes Labor Defense Meet

CLEVELAND, Ohio, March 1:—A real Communist spirit prevailed at the home of Comrade M. Bayer of this city on Sunday, February 1.

A number of comrades and close sympathizers assembled there for a pleasant and social afternoon and evening. When the gaiety was at its height, someone bubst out with a mention of the Michigan defense. Immediately a comrade took the floor, called for silence, and launched into a stirring appeal for the defense of our comrades who are now facing long prison terms as a result of the Michigan red raids of 1922.

The net result of the appeal was $7.00 in cold cash for the Labor Defense Council which has since been turned in to the treasurer.

Here is a lesson to all comrades who are in earnest about their work toward defending our comrades. This shows that most every gathering, no matter how large or small it may be, can be utilized for our work.

WORKMEN'S CIRCLE AT ROCHESTER, NEW YORK, WITHDRAWS INVITATION TO ABRAMOVICH TO SPEAK THERE

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 3.—Raphael Abramovich, the menshevik emissary of the Second (socialist) and Amsterdam Trade Union Internationals will not for the present at least, have the pleasure of visiting the flower city.

Workman's Circle, No. 27, had arranged a meeting for him, but due, no, doubt, to the stormy winds encountered by Raphael Abramovich in New York and Philadelphia, it has been deemed advisable for the "distinguished" visitor to defer his coming to Rochester until another and more favorable time. At their most recent meeting the Circle voted to postpone the "welcome" to Abramovich indefinately, and the hand bills that had been paid for by prosperous merchants and petty contractors were turned over to a junk dealer. In the meantime the only disappointed ones seem to be the left wing workers who had prepared a warm reception for Abramovich.

tal. All except the citizens of one walled capital were slaves to the Roman aegis. They were, for the most part, happy slaves, under well ordered and equally established governments. Most of them did not know that they were paying tribute. They prospered under Roman rule. There were years on years of peace. There were thousands on thousands of paved roads established to circle the world and bring each village commerce. The conquered slaves of Gaul and Africa and Britain were hardly conscious that these same roads carried from them, each individually, a tax that freed the Roman citizen from labor, and enabled him to live in luxury that knew no toil.

"The Roman empire fell, largely because luxury was followed by the usual decadence and emasculation of strength that a surfeit of luxury brings. For more than a thousand years afterward the western world lived comparatively free, each man in it paying taxes only for his own benefit—only to the government that gave him law and order. And then, suddenly, all Europe enslaved itself once more.

"This time it was conquered, not only by war, but thru a need for gold. Every government in Europe mortgaged the labor of its citizens for scores of years in order to obtain gold in exchange. It sold the labor of children yet unborn. And one nation, which had the gold to lend, conquered the world just as surely as the Roman citizens conquered it. It secured hundreds of millions of willing slaves who must yield up, each one every year, a certain tribute.

"That nation is, of course, the United States."

No Question of Ethics.

Mr. Dakin hastens a few lines later to exclaim:

"Do not imagine that there is any question of right or wrong in this discussion. Such a question belongs in a study of ethics, and concerns neither the historian nor the economist."

And then he goes on to explain the contemplated future path of American finance-capital in seizing possession of all the industries of all the nations of Europe with one exception. It is a lyrical version of the Dawes' plan, stripped of the little Hell and Maria's caution and showing, at the towering pinacle of the oligarchy it seeks to build, not an aggregation of several "victorious" nations, but the single corpulent figure of American finance capital.

But Dakin's dream-lyric depends for its logic upon his claim that thru the vast Wall Street plan attached to the name of Dawes, European capitalist production can be restored, with only the difference that the "bonded slaves" of all Europe (except Russia) will pass under the rule of American finance-capital. And another thing: He thinks with something like "the fair happiness and peaceful prosperity of the Roman conquered."

Reveals Plans of Bosses.

And still another thing. We are interested in this avid reader of "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" only to the extent that his voice from the textile section of Wall Street tells something of the bosses' plans in regard to labor. Any claim to scientific forecast by this man is voided by his naive assumption that the coming second world war is not going to occur and that capitalism can reconcile its contradictions, to say nothing of his childish belief that there is no limit to capitalism's market for its surplus. But his "science" of ancient Roman analogy shows thru its crevices the Wall Street outlook on the labor question. It is the outlook which seeks to accomplish in America the corruption of labor with the super profits of imperialism. In 1920, in a preface to an edition of his book "Imperialism," Lenin described the process:

"It is easy to perceive that from such a large additional profit (for it is received in addition to the profit which the capitalists extract from the workers of 'their own' countries), labor leaders and the upper strata of the workers' aristocracy can be bribed. So the capitalists of the 'progressive' countries bribe them by a thousand different means, direct and indirect, open and secret."

Now to return from Comrade Lenin to Mr. Dakin. Mr. Dakin's capitalist-imperialist heaven in which he says "Our invested captial will bring us, individually, more tribue than the armies of Ceaser and Crassus and Pompey could ever have brought to the seven hills," is to have many delectable means for bribing an upper stratum of labor aristocracy. He does not make a distinction between a small section of corrupted labor aristocracy and the "properly proletarian lower stratum," as the more honest versions of the plan have done. He ignores both the general fact that the real proletariat of America would sink into worse misery and the specific fact that at this moment his gang is engaged in lowering the average wage in the textile industry to about $16 a week. Ignoring the fact that the real proletarian masses would also be "bonded slaves," Mr. Dakin says:

"Nothing, indeed, seems more certain than that the next few years will bring to this country the anomaly of high wages, together with relatively low commodity prices in general and high interest rates. The result, of course, will be an extraordinary prosperity among the working masses—the labor classes in general. Sharp division between capital and labor will disappear." And then he goes on to list all the devices for corruption of labor that capitalism has in its bag. Except that he makes no allowance for the Gomperism of the present—apparently even that kind of unionism is to be dispensed with in favor of outright company-unions.

Lauds "Company Unions."

On company unions Mr. Dakin banks high. Altho he does not use the slogan, "Let the superintendent be your labor leader," it is evident that that is what he has in mind when he recites the company union plan.

Even more he seems to rely upon the "labor bank" as a means of corrupting the labor ranks, tho how they can continue to exist without the Gompers kind of unions he does not say.

But with keenest delight this Wall Street boy pounces upon the incident of Warren Stone's scab coal mine:

"At least one labor union owns and manages some coal mines of its own—a management fraught with much present sorrow, but also much healthy capitalistic education. Today, in New York, organized labor is planning to use its combined capitalistic resources to erect large apartment houses for the workers and eliminate the slums. Capital, in various methods of modern management and programs for profit sharing, is joining hands with labor; labor, as it amasses the resources of individual members, is entering the realm of capital."

The capitalist writer then goes into delirous delight over what he thinks will be a condition where every citizen will have a share or two of stock (which he calls private management, but public ownership of industry), and "everyone will have money in the bank," and "we shall be established, once for all, as a nation of conservative Bourbons."

World, Except Russia, in Serfdom.

And he closes with the words:

"As the world slips into 1925, we have all become—everyone of us—the owners of hundreds of millions of able-bodied serfs. We have a mortgage on the lives both of the living and the unborn in practically every nation of Europe except Russia. We shall have, if not gold pouring in, then its equivalent in merchandise. Each one of us can hope to have more to spend. Each one should have more to buy. The luxuries of today should become so universal as to be necessities. New luxuries will have to be invented to take up the slack of our increased resources. With such wealth we can hope to do one of two things. We can waste it, individually, in vain and effete living, as every great empire has finally wasted its resources in the past; or else, utilizing the modern invention called capitalism, we can mass it in ways that will enable us to remake the whole human environment—to remold the entire world nearer to the heart's desire.

"With money—and the labor of bonded slaves."

This is the journalistic marvel that Wall Street magnates are handing about to each other and discussing with awed admiration over their noonday steaks. It expresses the dream of the Babbit soul in cotton and woolen manufacture, now a cog in the wheel of finance-capital and out for conquest of the world.

Meantime, the slow strangling process goes on in the New England mill towns, where the workers, "in order to increase earnings for all concerned," must take a cut of 10 per cent (on the road to a cut of 25 per cent), give up the eight-hour day, double their production, half of them get fired and the other half sink into "the labor of bonded slaves."

That's the joker of it all. "Idealism" doesn't mean all that it says.

its charter. This threat did not frighten the members, so Jensen got kind of mad. Members who smiled at his frantic gestures had the same effect on him as a bandana handkerchief has on a crazy bull. He shook his fist threateningly at them, only to increase the supply of grins.

Jensen rambled along, denounced the Communists and attacked Foster and Ruthenberg. He charged the Communists with attempting to break up the unions. Several members called the speaker a liar and demanded proof of his charges. The only proof he coul dadvance was that the Communists wanted industrial unionism.

No Stranger to Crime.

Jensen's attacks on Foster and Ruthenberg for getting into the toils of the government brought forth interesting comment from the members. They pointed out that Harry is no stranger to police cells, but he was never arrested or convicted for political offenses. His relations with the courts were for entirely different reasons.

After Jensen raved for one hour Nels Kjar, one of the expelled members had something to say. He showed that he and his comrades did not have a fair trial and that Jensen lied when he stated that Kjar and the other expelled members were fighting against the union. "We admit to fighting against the labor fakers" said Kjar.

Jensen was finally forced to get down off his high horse. If he was have a fair trial he would see that they got one, he said. Somebody proposed that the local take some action to satisfy the curious and suggested that a committee of five be elected to investigate the matter. Not that they have any way of convincing Jensen.

Lied When He Joined.

The committee was finally elected and Jensen agreed to sit in with this five and also with the five expelled. The meeting was scheduled to take place Tuesday night. As we go to press there was no report of the outcome.

Members of Local 181 point out that Jensen entered the union under false pretense. He was over 22 years of age when he joined, yet he represented himself as an apprentice, tho over the age limit for apprentices, according to the constitution. For this violation of union rules Jensen is liable to expulsion from the organization. "Jim" Jensen who is now one of Jensen's staunch defenders is authority for this statement.

tion by the time the convention gathers in Atlantic City next October," says Todd. Yes, if he can succeed in insuring the dignity of the labor fakers' pockets as well as their pride.

THE textile workers and garment workers are robbed of half the wealth they produce, according to Todd. Apparently this was the conclusion of the conference. This is a rather low estimate of the extent of the robbery, particularly since a government commission, presided over by Frank P. Walsh and "Fatty" Taft, in 1912 proved that out of every dollar's worth of wealth produced in the United States, only seventeen cents goes into the pockets of the workers. However, that is a mere detail. What concerns us most is the means proposed by the labor leaders, whereby a more equal distribution of the wealth produced can be attained.

THEY admit the employers rob the workers quite legally. The employers see to that by owning the government, and all the agencies of government. To quote Mr. Todd: "But Green and Morrison saw in the conference a chance to discredit this legalistic ethics. They hoped to make the country see that great scale production needs a control, based on a higher valuation of the human dignity of the worker. If robbery of hundreds of thousands of semi-starved textile workers could be made a scandal, instead of 'successful business,' the world would be moved along. So the primary steps are taken, patiently, against a Butler-Coolidge background."

SO this is the "progressive" Green in action. The reactionary leaders are at least showing commendable industry in their efforts to dodge any kind of struggle with the bosses. Every artifice is resorted to in order to keep the workers hoping for some betterment of their conditions without having to fight for it. The leaders have grown corpulent and most of them can only rise out of their office chairs with difficulty. Those of them who can still bend the knee prefer to shoot craps than organize the unorganized when they are not salaming before the employers. The Gompers policy will be carried out loyally by William Green, who has not yet proven that he has added anything to the fine art of treason since he took over Gompers' job.

EXPECT 15,000 WORKERS IN MADISON SQUARE GARDEN TO WITNESS PARIS COMMUNE PAGEANT

NEW YORK, March 3.—Fifteen thousand people at Madison Square Garden on March 15. This is the goal the Workers Party and the Young Workers League has set for itself. The comrades in the different federations are busily engaged in selling the tickets because they all realize that the more tickets they sell the greater is the profit for their language paper.

The Paris Commune pageant, a one-act play depicting the trial and tribulations experienced by the Paris Communards, will be one of the main features of the day. The arena of Madison Square Garden is being prepared to look like a public square in Paris during the Commune. Barricades, red militia, street fighting against the bourgeoisie of Versailles, all these as well as the meetings of the Commune will be re-enacted in its true historic form. The workers of Paris marching to fight and die for the first Communist uprising will be pictured on this day. The last days of the Commune and the first days in Moscow where the workers profited from the mistakes of the comrades in Paris will be shown in graphic form.

Besides this, there will be many other features. The Freiheit Singing Society four hundred strong, will be heard in a special program of revolutionary music. The Ukrainian chorus of 60 voices and a Ukrainian troupe of dancers will render several novel numbers. The Hungarian dancers, too, will be seen for the first time. Finnish, Jugo-Slav and Czecho-Slovak gymnastic exhibition is also on the program. In the evening there will be a grand ball with a well-known (union) orchestra furnishing jazz.

LOCAL OFFICE OF WORKERS PARTY MOVES INTO LARGER QUARTERS

Local Chicago of the Workers Party is moving into its new headquarters at 21 South Lincoln St., corner of Madison. The new quarters will also be occupied by District No. 8, of the Workers Party and by the Young Workers League.

Owing to congestion in the old location at 166 West Washington St., the party found itself hampered because of its constantly increasing activities. The new quarters are in a modest brick building which is conveniently located and easily accessible from any part of the city.

Attention, Class in Elementary Marxian Economics Tonight!

Class meets Wednesday, March 4th, 2618 Hirsh Blvd. 8 P. M., Max Lerner, instructor. Assignment, Chapters 11, 12, 13 of People's Marx.

Questions on Chapters 11, 12, 13

1. How does the impetus of economic progress in capitalist society lead to the decrease in the rate of profit? Describe the process.

2. Does the decrease in the rate of profit exclude the possibility that there may be an absolute increase of the number of workers and an absolute increase of surplus value appropriated?

3. In what fashion does the capitalist try to check the falling rate of profit? What are the limits to this?

4. Explain the process whereby capital becomes "capitalized surplus value" instead of what it appears to be. Show how Marx's analysis of and the process whereby the worker advances his labor power to the capitalist and receives payment therefore after he has expended his labor completely reverses the generally held viewpoint and throws an entirely new light on the entire process.

4. Explain the process whereby capital reproduces the same conditions for its continuance. Explain relationships springing therefrom.

5. Explain the general process of capitalist accumulation. What is the historic justification and value of the capitalist?

6. Explain the process of concentration and centralization of capital and the process leading thereto.

7. Outline the law of population peculiar to the capitalist mode of production.

8. Explain the theory of the growing impoverishment of the masses.

Slovak Workers Aid Spike Drive

How the Slovak Workers' Socialist Federation is joining in the united front with the Workers Party is shown in the best possible way by their contribution of $50.00 to the W. P. funds Wednesday. The amount is to be equally divided between the DAILY WORKER insurance fund and the International Workers' Aid.

This fifty dollars is half the sum total raised by the Slovak group at a dance last week, the other half being divided with two other organizations.

Anna Louise Strong Speaks in Detroit Thursday, March 5

DETROIT, Mich., March 3.—Anna Louise Strong, "Anise," noted Federated Press Russian correspondent, who has only recently returned from Russia where she had been for three years, will speak in Detroit Thursday evening, March 5, in the House of the Masses, 2646 St. Aubin.

"Anise" is a name familiar to all readers of labor journalism. She was on the staff of the Seattle Union Record for a number of years and her feature articles appeared regularly in the labor press.

"Anise" went to Russia to do what she could to alleviate the suffering of the famine and epidemics. She herself was stricken with typhus. Her special articles and correspondence made many a breach in the wall of lies that the lickspittle press endeavored to build around Russia. And for this service the workers of the entire world owe much to "Anise."

Her lecture tour at this time is most opportune. When world events are forcing a change in the past policy of the government of the United States regarding recognition of Soviet Russia, when the yellow reactionaries are revamping old slanders against the Soviet government, the workers of Detroit will be fortunate indeed to get the truth from one who has had extremely favorable opportunities for intimate observation. Her House of the Masses speech Thursday, March 5, will attract an audience who sincerely look for knowledge of Russian conditions under the Soviet. Admission is 25 cents.

KLAN ORGANIZES IN CANADA TO FIGHT WORKERS

Refused Charter, Then Changes Its Name

TORONTO, Canada, March 3—The ku klux klan has definitely organized in Canada. The klan of the United States applied to the provincial secretary of Ontario for a charter but it was refused.

The Wall Street interests which were glad to see the klan flourish in the United States, however, were persistent, and will apply for a chater as a separate Canadian organization, under the name of the ku klux klan of kanada. There is little doubt here that the "kanadian klan" will receive a charter, as some of the most prominent politicians, lawyers, real estate sharks and business men are behind the organization.

The two capitalist Toronto papers, the Telegram and Star, consistent with their policy of fighting workers' organizations, are aiding in the importation of the klan from the United States. They print pictures of klan costumes and klan gatherings, and see to it that the klan receives wide publicity.

A. F. of L. Sleeps and Wobblies Split While Lumber Barons Attack

PORTLAND, Ore.—Like a bolt from the sky, the mill owners of Washington and Oregon have given out the information that until further notice a forty hour week will be in operation. Going hand in hand with this information, the four L.s announce that their organization will accept ten hours, in cases of emergencies, without extra pay for overtime.

While the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen join forces to smash all vestige of the once powerful I. W. W. Industrial Union 120, has split wide open with two headquarters in the city of Portland. If the A. F. of L. sleeps like a cat full of canaries, while the masters devour their children in the form of profits, the I. W. W. fights like a blind snake, striking at any sound or noise, fearing that a Communist is about to "capture" what is left of a once powerful labor union, after Communist baiter have nearly destroyed it.

Police Try to Stop Communist Meeting in sland of Java

AMSTERDAM, Holland, March 3.—Dutch newspapers report that at Madicen, on the island of Java, Dutch East Indies, a recent conflict between the government police and Communists occurred, when the police undertook to arrest a speaker at a public meeting. One of the persons attending the meeting was killed and 26 were wounded, and seven police agents were wounded.

SOVIET-JAPANESE TREATY MEANS MUCH TO BOTH COUNTRIES, SAYS KARAKHAN, RED ENVOY TO CHINA

Berlin, March 3.—In an article published in the Communist daily, the Rote Fahne, Ambassador Karakhan, Soviet envoy to China, tells of the significance of the recent treaty he negotiated between Soviet Russia and Japan.

According to Karakhan the Russo-Japanese treaty signifies a great strengthening of Russia's position on the Pacific, especially because of the restoration of Russian privileges on the Eastern Chinese railway. He adds:

"The treaty has even greater significance for Japan than for Russia. The threat of Japanese isolation is ended by the presence of a power friendly to Japan on the Asiatic continent. What the Russo-Japanese treaty means to the Japanese is proved by the indescribable joy sweeping over Japan when the treaty became known there.

England and America no Longer Boss.

"Russia is planning economic co-operation of vast scope with Japan which will allow us to develop our productivity and supply Japan with Russian raw material, so she will not fall into complete dependence upon America and England.

"Reports from America show that Americans realize the disadvantages resulting from lack of relations with Russia. These reports also voice American fears that Russo-American negotiations may be as long and difficult as our negotiations with Japan. As a matter of fact, however, Russia is not separated from America by so many obstacles as was the case in the Russo-Japanese negotiations.

Russia's Government Cannot be Bluffed.

"If America will begin to understand that Russia's internal social structure is the Russian's own affair, wherewith America must become reconciled, then there will be no further obstacles on the road toward a Russo-American understanding."

Karakhan adds that Russia granted Japan no special privileges regarding concession on the island of Sakhalin such as Japan demanded at the outset of the negotiations, but compelled Japan to conform in general to the regulations adopted by Soviet Russia in granting concession to foreigners.

Bessarabia Only Land not Won Back.

Another significant point about the Russo-Japanese treaty, according to Karakhan, is that, in restoring Sakhalin to Russia, the treaty restores to the latter the last piece of territory torn from her except Bessarabia. Regarding the letter Karakhan says:

"When it is borne in mind that Japan was compelled to restore Sakhalin to Russia it is probable that Rumania also will understand the difficulty of her position since she is brave only when she has foreign support."

Injunction Against Standard Oil.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 3. — Attorney General George Napier has obtained an injunction from the Fulton superior court, preventing all oil products companies operating in this state from raising prices until after a hearing March 7. The defendants are the Standard Oil company, and a few subsidiary and independent companies.

URGES FREEDOM OF PHILIPPINES

MANILLA, P. I., March 3.—Secret organization and insurrection against "the yoke of tyranny placed on the Philippine Islands by the United States government," was advised here by Theodore G. Kalaw, executive secretary of the independence commission of the legislature, in a speech before a group of university undergraduates.

"Official dignitaries of the American government may render decisions according to their convenience, but such decisions will always be of a political character, and you know what constitutes crimes of a political character committed by subject peopels. They are crimes as long as the subject peoples remain under the yoke of foreign domination. They become heroic deeds when the yoke is cast off"

Coolidge Regime Spends Millions On One Airship

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3.—The huge amounts of money spent by the Coolidge administration on preparation for war have been revealed in the aircraft investigation conducted by a congressional committee. The airship Shenandoah cost $2,950,000. The Lakehurst station to house the ship cost another three million dollars, and the expense of maintaining it for the fiscal year ending last July 1 was $1,200,000, not including the cost of the helium, which costs $1,000,000 more per year, the committee found.

The United States spends millions of dollars on one airship, and billions all told on war preparations.

Bosses Threaten to Take Child Labor Amendment to Courts

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3.—Opponents of the proposed federal child labor amendment here declare they they will fight stubbornly to keep the amendment from being ratified by three-fourths of the states. They declare that even it ratified, the child labor amendment will be taken to the courts, where it will "remain a long time."

The child labor amendment has been opposed by the bankers, the manufacturers and commerce associations.

VILE CONDITION OF CHILDREN ON TOBACCO FARMS

Union Agent Tells of Slavery and Filth

By H. SIDNEY BLOOMFIELD

BOSTON, Mass., March 3.—Aside from the economic exploitation, the employment of children on the tobacco plantations in the Connecticut Valley district has brot about "disgraceful, immoral conditions;" it was charged at the hearing before the legislative committee on labor and industry on the bill to prohibit the employment of children under 14 years of age on tobacco plantations.

The labor laws of the state have exempted agriculture from the child labor laws, so that children even as young as 9 and 10 years are employed in the tobacco fields. Small boys and girls are thrown together without regard to the elementary codes of decency.

There is no provision for the welfare of these child slaves who are toiling under the most miserable and even sexually vulgar conditions.

Charles Hodson, legislative agent of the Massachusetts state branch of the A. F. of L. said conditions in the industry were so bad from a moral viewpoint that they could not be discussed in an open meeting before the legislative committee.

Baltimore School Board Has Ignored Negro Education

BALTIMORE, March 3.—The school board and the superintendent of public schools are totally neglecting the education of the Negro children of Baltimore, it is charged here.

Twenty-four weeks ago, Frances M. Russell resigned as supervisor of colored schools in Baltimore. Altho the Negroes of this city have urged Superintendent of Schools Henry S. West to fill this position, he has made no move to do so in the 24 months since Russell's resignation.

The Negroes charge that West is mal-administering the Negro schools.

BUILDERS AT WORK

YOU CAN GET SAMPLE COPIES!

Make Your Membership Drive Now.

MANY individual comrades, even DAILY WORKER agents and branches have often given up intended membership and DAILY WORKER campaign drives for lack of funds. But we want to bring to your attention a method that will allow you to go ahead.

We will gladly send individuals or branches a bundle of the DAILY WORKER (as large as you need) to distribute free of charge to your shop-mates, neighbors or members of your union.

Many live BUILDERS of our party have already availed themselves of this opportunity with splendid results. House to house sub and membership campaigns and shop drives with sample copies of the DAILY WORKER and the Workers Monthly have produced splendidly. We want you to try it.

Send us a letter today outlining your proposed drive, how you are going to go about it and about how many copies you ought to have of both DAILY WORKER and the Workers Monthly. There may be suggestions that we can offer and we will gladly send any additional supplies to make the work easier.

Today there is the T. U. E. L. section of the DAILY WORKER to make the officials organ of our party particularly effective in shop drives and in your union.

Make the drive for membership with the DAILY WORKER—and we'll send you the sample copies.

Letters From Our Readers

Works in Freight House.

To the DAILY WORKER: Lately I have been working in the Illinois Central freight house on South Water St., Chicago. The truckers get 48 cents an hour, the stevedores (those who load the cars and see that everything is packed right for shipment) get 50 cents an hour, the callers (those who unload the cars, piece by piece onto the hand trucks and call out the case number and destination of each piece while so doing) get 52 cents, and the checkers (those who check the work up on the bills, act as a clerk for each gang and give the car number where that piece of freight is to be left) get 69 cents an hour.

The one-time flourishing union of freight handlers seems to be nearly dead here; those who have been members at one time and have dropped out, say, "Why pay dues, we get nothing in return?" We are not working there today because it is a holiday, and the men seem to have solidarity enough to want time and one-half for holidays, which the company refuses to grant, so no work is done.

Our wage this weeks as truckers will amount to $19 in place of $23. Of course, with such wages the men don't feel obliged to be particularly careful of the freight and the way they handle it reminds me of a certain foreman I once knew, who, when anyone complained to him of a boneheaded move by a laborer used to say, "Yes, I guess you're right, there is no sense in doing it that way, but do you know I don't believe 40 cents pays for a helluva lot of brains." Most of us do as little as possible, altho we have to keep moving of course, and such a clock-watching attitude makes me sure of the tremendous change in efficiency that a Communist system will be able to inaugurate even in its early stages. Naturally enough if we knew that the railroad and industry generally belonged to and was being operated altogether in the interests of the workers themselves, new life would be injected into every one of us. We would feel that we had an interest in getting things done quickly and right. SPEED THE DAY.

A Freight Trucker.

From a Farmer.

To the DAILY WORKER: I am sending you $3.50 for a six months' subscription to the DAILY WORKER. I would like to give more but I am unable under this robbing system. Out here there is only one more Communist in addition to myself. The old party members around here will not read the DAILY WORKER.

The people here are all poor people but they do not know what is the matter with them, and close their ears to the truth. The money class is closing in on them and taking their farms and every shed off their property away from them, and putting them out in the road penniless. Still they cannot understand the class struggle.

Will Write Again.

The bankers own about one-half the land now and if things do not change they will soon own the rest of it. I have been sick, and when I get well I will write and tell you what the world has done for us from 1825 to 1925. I am sixty-four years old and I have worked for the working class for twenty-two years. I will fight this system as long as I live.

VERAIN MEMBERS GIVE LIE TO THE YELLOW FORWARD

Say They Gave Nothing to the Socialists

Members of the Krinker Untershtutzing Verain branded the socialist Jewish Forward as a liar, and denied a story that appeared in the front page of the Forward on Feb. 26. They declare that the Forward was not telling the truth when it stated that a collection of $24.00 was taken for socialists now held in jails in Soviet Russia for opposing the workers' government.

The Forward took issue with the report in the DAILY WORKER, which told how friends of the menshevik, Raphael Abramovich, were denied money by the Verain when they attacked Soviet Russia and appealed for funds to support the mensheviks in Russia.

"The Verain had decided not to take any money from the treasury for certain reasons," the Forward report said. The yellow socialist sheet, however, failed to say that these reasons were that the Verain refused to support the enemies of Soviet Russia.

"A collection of $24.00 was taken," the Forward adds. This statement, members of the Verain declare, is a direct lie. No collection for the Abramovich crowd was taken at the meeting. Members of the Verain who have directly given the lie to the traitor to the working class, the Jewish Forward, include, S. Sonovich, R. A. Bronshtein, H. Tikotsky, M. Tikotsky, A. Tikotsky, H. S. Hymen, S. Sanlor, and S. Greenberg. They have signed a statement exposing the treachery of the Forward, and telling the true facts of the meeting, as they were reported in the DAILY WORKER.

They declare that no collection was taken at the meeting, and the Verain refused to aid the "political prisoners" in Soviet Russia who are plotting against the workers and peasants there and who are opposed to the workers Soviet state.

They declare that even after the meeting of the Verain was over, no collection was taken for the yellow socialist committee.

The Forward has further exposed its perfidy by defending the enemies of Soviet Russia, even when it was compelled to descend to the use of filthy lies.

Quick Confirmation

The news of the purchase of 200,000 tons of oil from the Soviet government and the taking of an option on 500,000 tons more for delivery in 1926 by the Standard Oil company, which we carry today in another column, is striking confirmation of the correctness of the statements made in the manifesto on the recognition of Russia issued by the central executive committee of the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

The manifesto analyzed the forces making for a change in policy of the American government following the resignation of Hughes and stated that the world rivalry between Great Britain and America for oil supplies was a major factor in reversing the anti-recognition policy of the American government.

It is evident that the Standard Oil interests are not waiting for formal recognition; the American capitalist press and the diplomats will haggle over the terms of the coming treaty, but Standard Oil wants to have on hand a plentiful supply of oil which in the event of war it can sell to the American navy at a neat profit.

There is an increasing tensity in international politics. The militarists and diplomats of Great Britain and America are speaking more openly of the competition for oil, trade and territory. The big capitalist groups of both nations are whipping into the line the middle and lower middle class, that dreads the horrors and fears the expense of war, for an increase of naval and air equipment.

The natural resources of Soviet Russia could not be stolen to strengthen this or that capitalist nation. All tried their best—individually and collectively. They pooled their interests in a war on Russia and left the division of the loot to a later date. All were hurled back by the Red Army of the workers' and peasants' government.

Now they must deal with Russia. The capitalist nations become more and more involved in their international rivalries while Soviet Russia, watchfully but peacefully, goes on building up her industries and consolidating her influence in the Far East—the most vulnerable spot in the armor of world capitalism.

The hostility of world capitalism to Soviet Russia has not abated. It is only that capitalism is less able at present to make war. The workers of America, while the negotiations are in progress, must not cease in any way their readiness to defend the first workers' and peasants' government against all the plots and offensives of American and world capitalism.

Dawes Comes Into His Own

Brigadier-General Dawes, vice-president-elect, not Calvin Coolidge, president of the United States, is occupying the center of the stage in Washington. Coolidge has been shoved into the background in the inaugural ceremonies and the social and political gatherings that preceded them.

Superficial observers will attribute this to the picturesqueness of the Dawes make-up and utterances, to his winning personality, to his pipe in reserve, to any one of a hundred things except the real one—the fact that Dawes, the vice-president, is the active agent of the House of Morgan and Coolidge just an individual that was picked to head the republican ticket because circumstances had made him hard to fire outright.

Dawes personifies the brutal character of finance-imperialism. He is a swashbuckling militarist. It is his name that is on the plan by which the workers of Germany and the rest of Europe are to be enslaved—if it works. He is the petted darling of Wall Street and a product of the semi-pioneer school of the industrial middle west with its traditions of violence as a method of keeping the working class in its place.

Dawes is the real head of the administration and will continue to overshadow Coolidge. His boom for the presidency in 1928 was begun on Lincoln's birthday and the capitalist press will now try to make him a second Roosevelt.

Coolidge is a colorless character. Dawes is a type that imperialism feels it pays to advertise. Probably as brainless as Coolidge, he is a vociferous reactionary and that is what imperialism wants.

It is quite appropriate that as the loans of the House of Morgan abroad increase and the navy and air fleet clamor for huge additional sums, that a general, even tho a swivel-chair general, should be the real head of the national government.

One hundred pennies in the year 1913 was just one dollar. Today the same number of pennies will buy 61.3 per cent of what it would purchase in 1913. The banks advise you to deposit your savings with them. Thrifty Germnas who were in the habit of putting their spare cash in the bank, were surprised to receive notes from their bankers during the downward flight of the mark, that their deposits had disappeared thru currency inflation.

The Troubles of Royalty

The British royal family have nothing to do and the Queen of Belgium, being in the same fix, went and had her hair bobbed. This may be good news for owners of beauty parlors on the Gold Coast, but it raised the dickens in the Belgian royal household. The king felt peeved because of the reduction in Mrs. Queen and at the thought that New York bankers might not be so enthusiastic about the next Belgian loan if the Belgian royal house showed signs of deserting its dignity, which is about the only visible means of support that royalty can boast of nowadays.

In Britain the situation is not quite so serious. It is true the royal family has nothing to do and might get along for another decade without looking the pointed finger of scorn in the eye, but for the indiscretion of David Kirkwood of the Clyde who protested against expending large sums of money on the prince of Wales for junketing trips abroad, tho David (not David P. but David K.) offered to have lunch with him in a Glasgow restaurant. The prince politely refused the invitation.

The lambasting given to the prince and the institution of royalty caused the London Daily Herald to suggest very politely, indeed, that it might be well for the empire if His Royal Highness were given some government position that would take him out of the unemployed class. It sets a bad example to the unemployed "don't yer know."

The Herald warns royalty in a friendly way that it should keep up with progress in outward forms at least. It is not exactly pleasing to British pacifist eyes to read of rhinoceroses falling before royal rifles and of the prince establishing a record as a terpsichorean artist. Of course, apologizes the labor organ, royalty cannot be held entirely responsible for this state of affairs. See what bad directors it has. Obviously, had the MacDonald government remained in power a little longer, the prince might be put thru paces so that he would become as popular with the masses as the king of Spain at a watering resort.

The Daily Herald is in a most "unhappy position." It is torn between the desire to join Ramsay McDonald in defending the royal family against the attacks of the Clyde sansculottes. At the same time it does not wish to injure its circulation by taking issue with the left wing of the parliamentary labor party. Nevertheless it warns those who would like to see the monarchy go to pot against entertaining high hopes from the discussion in the house of commons. The concluding paragraph of the Herald's editorial comment will serve to throw some light on the official mind of British socialism:

> "On our part, we ought, as a People, to make an effort also—an effort to find some job for the Heir to the Throne, some regular occupation which would make him part of the machinery of government. Bagehot pointed out long ago the disadvantages against which sovereigns and their heirs have to struggle. The passages in which he did so ought to be learned by heart by all Royal children. Then they would understand what is meant by the protest against lavish spending on Royal tours and they would do their best to remove the grounds for criticism of their lives."

If royalty insists on advertising its superfluity, the socialists cannot be held responsible for the consequences. That is quite evident.

Every day get a "sub" for the DAILY WORKER and a member for the Workers Party.

The Rio de Janeiro Disaster

It is fortunate that the cause of the murderous blast in Rio de Janeiro is well established. Otherwise we would be in the midst of another international "red hunt" like that which followed the explosion of a wagon load of DuPont's powder in Wall Street which the capitalist press promptly branded as a "bomb plot" of the ubiquitous Communists.

Dozens of working men were arrested and given the third degree. An Italian worker, Salsedo, either was driven insane by torture and jumped from a fourteenth story window or was thrown to his death by secret service agents. It is for their efforts to free him that Sacco and Vanzetti are facing the electric chair.

Perhaps the Brazilian capitalist press will make use of the explosion yet, thru some of the devious ways known to the tribe of journalistic courtesans the world over, to initiate a drive on the revolutionary elements in response to the mandate of the American imperialists' representatives who are training the Brazilian army.

The DAILY WORKER sends its fraternal sympathy to the families of the killed and workers whose mangled bodies are tokens of the brutal callousness with which capitalism sends workers to their deaths rather than take safety precautions that cost a little money.

Grinding Children a Reality

A campaign for the prevention of accidents to children in industry will be inaugurated today by the American museum of safety. Last year 1,953 children were seriously injured while at work in the factories of New York state and approximately six times that number received minor injuries.—New York news item.

Read the above carefully and see if it squares with the contention of the press agents of the child robbers that children in industry are better off than at school. It is true that in most schools their minds are crippled while industry cripples only their bodies, but "1,953 CHILDREN injured in industry" has a gruesome sound that gives us the creeps.

It is quite evident that it does not affect the bosses that way. They listen to the crunching of children's bones very complacently while the dividends pour in.

Abramovich—Servant of the Capitalists

To the Workers of America!

DOWN with Abramovich, the traitor to the working class! There was a time when Abramovich was a socialist and a fighter for the cause of the working class. Abramovich still calls himself a socialist, but he is now an enemy of the working class. Abramovich is a traitor. Every honest working man must meet him with the contempt due to a traitor.

Abramovich Betrayed the Russian Revolution.

In the summer of 1917, Abramovich was an active member of the Petrograd Soviet of Workmen's Deputies. In October of the same year the workers seized power, drove away Kerensky, arrested his ministers, vanquished and dispersed his defenders, and declared all power to be in the hands of the Soviets of Workmen's Peasants' and Soldiers' Deputies. When the All-Russian Soviet Congress convened October 25 (November 7, according to the new calendar) Abramovich was one of the delegates. But Abramovich did not go hand in hand with the Soviets, he did not join the working class. Abramovich did not wish all power to be vested in the working class. Abramovich wished the bourgeoisie to have power in Russia. Abramovich opposed the great workers' revolution, the greatest in the history of mankind. Abramovich saw in it not a revolution, but a calamity bound to lead to anarchy and pogroms. Abramovich quit the Soviet Congress the very first day it convened. Abramovich betrayed the revolution, betrayed the working class, betrayed the greatest victory of the working masses.

Abramovich Fought Against the First Workers' and Peasants' Republic.

When Soviet Russia was surrounded by enemies on every side, when the allies menaced from without and English, American, and Japanese soldiers were stationed on Russian soil; when from North and South, from East and West, the republic was being invaded by the Koltchacks, the Denikins, the Krasnovs, the Petluras, the Yudevitchs, the Wrangels, and inside the Soviet territory all kinds of conspirators were making attempts on the lives of the Soviet leaders; when the blockade was holding the country in its iron grip and civil war was destroying the railroads and the factories and creating terrible famine—at that time of the greatest distress Abramovich was sneaking to the Russian workers, making propaganda among the hungry and weary men and women, telling them that the Soviet government did not take care of them, that the new order was a wrong one and that they had to put forth demands and fight against the proletarian government. Abramovich and the other mensheviki posed as friends of the workers, in reality they were their enemies because they weakened the hands of the workers and attempted to break their unity when they were struggling against the white generals and the landlords. Abramovich and his party comrades conducted treasonable activities against the republic of workers and peasants.

Abramovich Aided the Capitalists in Their Struggle Against the Workers' Power.

A time came when even the backward workers realized the true nature of the Abramovichs. The menshevist party loses every connection with the masses. The workers brand the mensheviki with the brand of contempt. Abramovich goes abroad, and here he becomes one of the chief agents in the struggle against the Soviet Republis. He helps the capitalists, he does service to the capitalists. The capitalists hate Russia—and Abramovich supplies them with material for their propaganda. The capitalists assert that Soviet Russia is a menace to mankind—and Abramovich backs up this assertion from a so-called socialist standpoint. The former Russian landlords, the Russian capitalists, the counter-revolutionary intelligentsia, the liberals and the monarchists united in the foreign countries for the struggle against Soviet Russia—and Abramovich is a welcome guest at their celebrations. The most vicious propaganda against the Soviet Republic is connected with the name of Abramovich. Abramovich has never ceased to do counter-revolutionary work.

Abramovich, a Yellow Enemy of The World Proletariat.

Abramovich is a member of the Second International which is instrumental in keeping the working class enslaved. The Second International embraces the Schiedemann who betrayed the working class, the Noskes who saluhgtered striking revolutionary workers and put thousands of them into jail, the Renaudels who made peace with the French bourgeoisie and with its policy of plunder, the MacDonalds who under the cloak of a labor government conducted the most shameless imperialist policy in India, Egypt and other colonies, the Estonian socialists who gave a vote of confidence to the bourgeois government of Esthonia for shooting down thousands of workers and throwing hundreds of Communist fighters into jail, and all other socialists who betrayed socialism. Abramovich is partner to the Second International which has substituted peace with capitalism for the class struggle. It is the task of Abramovich to muddle the heads of the workers so they may not rise against capitalism. Abramovich attempts to persuade them that thru peaceful understanding with the capitalists can the workers attain everything. Abramovich acts like an agent of the bourgeoisie.

Abramovich Is Against the International Unity of the Working Class.

All the workers of Soviet Russia are united in powerful revolutionary unions affiliated to the Red International of Labor Unions (Profintern.) With the Red International are also affiliated revolutionary unions and sections of unions the world over. The Red International is now engaged in a campaign to unite all unions affiliated to it with the unions affiliated to the backward Amsterdam International in order to form a world organization of all labor unions. It is the conception of the Red International that the united international power of capital must be confronted by a united international power of labor. Abramovich fights against such unification of the proletarian forces. It is the wish of Abramovich that the proletarian forces should be split. Abramovich is afraid that the Russian unions would influence the unions of Europe and imbue them with a greater will to fight. Abramovich is against the unions of Europe and America gaining more will to fight. Abramovich fears and hates the revolutionary working class movement.

Abramovich, a Representative of the Russian Bourgeoisie.

Abramovich calls himself socialist. A true socialist can be only a representative of workers, whereas Abramovich does not represent any workers. The workers of Russia are represented by the Russian Communist Party. Abramovich and his kin are discredited among the Russian workers. Who is it, then, that they defend? On whose behalf do they fight? They fight on behalf of the shop keepers who are disfranchised in Soviet Russia. They fight on behalf of the small bosses who have no say in the affairs of the Soviets and who cannot tolerate the domination of the workers. They fight on behalf of the bourgeois intellectuals who hate the workers. On behalf of all these elements who play a role of considerable importance in the capitalist countries but are hardly tolerated in Soviet Russia, on behalf of these elements whom the workers will sooner or later entirely dispose of in Russia Abramovich raises the cry of democracy, equality, justice, freedom. Abramovich wishes democracy for the bourgeoisie, equality for the small bosses, justice to the speculators, freedom for the counter-revolutionaries. Abramovich hides his counter-revolutionary blackness under a pink socialist cloak.

Abramovich Represents World Imperialism Here.

Abramovich came to America with the avowed purpose of making propaganda against Soviet Russia which is the greatest enemy of world imperialism. Abramovich conducts a vicious campaign against the Communist International which is the greatest bulwark against world imperialism. Abramovich speaks in the name of the Second International which is the greatest support of world imperialism. Abramovich is a close friend and ally of the Schiedemann socialists who gave their consent to the Dawes plan which is a practical fulfillment of the Versailles "peace" and which aims at squeezing the life blood out of the German workers in order to fill the pockets of the French, English, American and other capitalists. The Dawes plan perpetuates in Europe the system of plunder, militarism, hate, nationalist conflicts. The Second International is in favor of the Dawes plan. Abramovich is in favor of the Dawes plan. Abramovich represents the ugliest kind of imperialism.

Abramovich Came to America to Fight Against Recognition of Soviet Russia.

It is not by accident that the present moment was chosen for Abramovich's mission. Russia becomes ever stronger. Russia has been recognized by nearly all European nations. America is the only country which has not recognized Soviet Russia. Even America, however, begins to change her view on the Soviet Republic, particularly in consequence of the increased volume of trade between Russia and the United States. On the other hand there was accumulated in America a large number of black and white Russian immigrants who are afraid of losing their standing should this country recognize Russia. It is to fight against this possible recognition of Russia that the anti-Soviet propaganda has been increased of late. In this campaign of lies and slander Abramovich plays the first fiddle, Gordin—Novomirsky, the spy and provocateur, seconds him with a flood of stupid tales, the old demented "grandmother" Breshkovskaya vomits from the other side her idiotic fabrications, and the hideous chorus is sweet to the ears of a portion of the American bourgeoisie. This kind of activity can only strengthen the bourgeoisie and weaken the working class.

Abramovich, Aid to the Yellow Labor Fakers In the U. S.

Abramovich is the guest of honor of the Jewish Daily Forward which has become the mouthpiece of petty bosses, shop keepers, synagogue-reactionaries, scabs, union bureaucrats and all sorts of elements who betrayed their socialist past. Abramovich speaks under the auspices of the Jewish socialist Verband which is lackey and a lickspittle of the Forward and which has no influence whatever among the working masses. Abramovich hobnobs with the union bureaucrats who fool the workers, who interfere with the class struggle of the workers against the bosses, who have at heart not the interests of the workers but the interests of their own union jobs and who expel the revolutionary workers from the unions. Abramovich hobnobs with the leading gang of the Workmen's Circle which has corrupted the proletarian character of the organization, which has handed over the power in a large portion of the Workmen's Circle into the hands of petty bosses, contractors, religious obscurantists which strives to deaden the proletarian soul of the organization and which robs the dissatisfied members of their rights in the organization relegating them to the position of "members at large." Abramovich hobnobs with the worst elements of the official labor movement who have long forsaken their proletarian ideals, who have become fat, cynical and self-satisfied, and who despise revolutionary struggle, revolutionary strivings, revolutionary proletarian ideals. By his speeches and by his campaign Abramovich lends prestige to this disgraceful coterie. Abramovich has embraced the self-same repellent creatures whom in former years he shunned and despised. Abramovich does harm not only to the workers of Russia and Europe, but to the American labor movement as well. Abramovich's official organ is The Wecker, known among Jewish workers as the "sewer pipe of the Forward."

Abramovich Is the Laughing Stock of the Class Conscious American Workers.

The more enlightened workers of this country have recognized the nature of this capitalist agent. The conscious elements among the workers have given Abramovich the full measure of contempt he deserves. Wherever they come to his meetings, they greet him with "Traitor!" "Liar!" "Counter-Revolutionary!" "Man-Servant of Capitalism!" so that it becomes impossible for him to speak. Wherever they do not appear, his meeting halls are empty. In New York, in the New Star Casino and the Hunt's Point Palace halls the workers protested against him, shouting, making short speeches and singing the International, so that the agent of capitalism was put to shame. In the same city, when the workers refused to come to Cooper Union, the hall was glaringly empty. In Philadelphia his meeting turned into a fervent demonstration in favor of Soviet Russia, Communism and the Communist International. In Boston where the revolutionary workers gathered at a separate meeting, Abramovich was compelled to make his speech before a couple of hundred shop keepers, businessmen, union bureaucrats and policemen. The workers have learned to know Abramovich. They slapped his face so loudly that the sound of it will be heard as far as Europe.

Abramovich Under Protection of Police and Spies.

The representative of the yellows can speak only when surounded by policemen, guarded by spies, supported by strong arm thugs and watched over by detectives. The servant of the bourgeoisie calmly watched the police of Philadelphia arrest at his meeting several dozen Communists, he gave his sanction to beating up Communists and shedding their blood wherever they dare express disagreement.

It is for all these reasons that the workers of America can have only this to say to Abramovich and his friends:

Down with the servant of capitalism!

Down with the agent of the yellow international!

Down with the lackey of the Forward gang!

Down with all traitors to the working class!

Long live the proletarian class struggle!

Long live the social revolution!

Long live Soviet Russia, the first republic of workmen and peasants!

Long live the Soviet government of the United States!

Show Brutality of Capitalist Law

The "officially dead" Arthur Frazier has been buried meantime in Nebraska.

(2) Frazier is taken in by his people, recognized by all who know him as the real Arthur Frazier.

(3) Government officials try to prove Frazier an imposter, alleging that he is a Mexican, Lopez, who was never in the war and entitled to no insurance or compensation.

Insanity Charge Is Fake

(4) Relatives of Frazier learn that he is being kept in a padded cell by government officers, to make it appear that he is insane.

(5) Although keeping Frazier in a padded cell at Minneapolis, the officials turn him loose, perhaps to die, the minute they have his signed "confession," in which he states that he is the Mexican "Lopez" who posed as Frazier in order to have a home with the Indian family.

(6) That at the moment of writing the letter containing these charges, Frazier's brother is racing with the government officers who are on their way to Fort Lookout, South Dakota, where the parents of Frazier are working among the Lower Brule Indians.

Mystery In Motives

Just what may lie behind this desperate effort to prevent the recognition of Frazier's birthright is not known. Certain it is that the government officials have paid extreme "attention" to this case, while other ex-fighters for "their country" have been forced to fight for months thru a maze of red-tape to gain any recognition of authorities.

Arthur Garvie, who makes the charges outlined above, is influential among the Indians of his tribe and has often represented them in appeals to the government in land matters. His letter to the Omaha World Herald in part is as follows:

Writer Friend of Family

"What is all this about? What is the object in persecuting this Indian soldier who has served his country? Why doesn't the country he fought for want to recognize him and treat him as he ought to be treated?

"The writer is a personal friend of the Frazier family and is intimately acquainted with the whole family and knew Arthur Frazier ever since a child. Arthur Frazier was born withing five miles of Niobrara. While he was a small boy his father moved to the Rosebud reservation near what is now known as the Ponca Sub-station as a missionary. There Arthur lived until he became of age.

"When the American people found out that Floyd Collins was trapped in a Kentucky cave prayers went up from all over the country, and even the government officials made haste to relieve his distress.

"Here is a pure American boy who went across the ocean to war. He is shell-shocked, gassed, paralyzed in one-half of his body, incapacitated for work, helpless, and on top of that has consumption.

"After he came across the ocean he wandered about for four years, not knowing even his own name and the place he went from.

Real Trouble Starts

"Then the real trouble for Arthur started when the government tried to prove Arthur an impostor. He was recognized by all of his own relations and he remembered everything that had transpired amongst his own people and relations. The government officers said that this Arthur Frazier is an impostor, that his name is Arthur Lopez, a Mexican; that he never went to war at all.

"They got him to sign some papers of which he did not know the contents.

"The government kept Arthur Frazier in a padded cell as an insane man at Minneapolis, but the minute they got his confession, as they call it, they turned Arthur loose, and as soon as he was out he went straight to the phone and called up Dr. Frazier and told him over the phone what had transpired. The minute Dr. Frazier got on the other end of the phone Arthur recognized his voice; a funny thing for an insane person to call up on the phone and recognize his own relation's voice and give him orders to send word to his own father. Arthur's people are poor and cannot get the legal help that is needed immediately. Maybe by the time this news reaches the public Arthur may be no more; he might be spirited away as an insane person or imprisoned for an impostor.

"We, the pepole of Arthur Frazier, are praying for immediate help from some good people of means or some charitable organization to free this worthy young man, Arthur Frazier.

"JAMES GARVIE,
"Member of the Sioux Tribe."

Alexander Howat, the man who organized the miners into what was one of the most militant sections of the United Mine Workers of America was expelled by Lewis.

Practically all the south western coal territory is now working open shop. Most of the mines in Oklahoma are non-union. The Pittsburgh operators signed the Jacksonville pact one month after it was made at the Florida watering place. Evidently contracts are not considered binding on the operators.

The break with the United Mine Workers of America is the first concerted move on the part of the operators in this region to return to a non-union basis. They are now in the same boat with the Kentucky and West Virginia coal barons.

Conference Postponed.

CLEVELAND, March 4.—The coal operators' conference scheduled to meet here next Friday has been postponed until March 17. The conference was called on the initiative of the Ohio operators for the purpose of seeking a modification of the Jacksonville agreement. The western Pennsylvania operators have signified their intention of attending but the coal barons of Indiana and Illinois have not yet reached a decision as to their attitude.

Bosses Have United Front.

It is believed here that the main reason for the postponement of the conference is the necessity for further understandings with the Illinois and Indiana coal barons so that a united front can be presented against the miners' union.

Some operators favor the shutting down of all mines having an agreement with the union and offering to open them under the 1917 wage scale. The coal barons now are of the opinion that they have enough scab coal mines in operation to enable them to supply the market, until they have starved the miners into submission. It was the second robbery Williamovsky had suffered in a year. In December bandits carried away 7,000. He carried no insurance.

Today, the bandits herded Williamovsky and four others into a rear room of the store, bound them, and carried out the robbery in leisure.

AUSTRIA TURNS TO GERMANY IN SEVERE CRISIS

Bosses Would Sell Workers Out

PARIS, France, March 4.—Austria is facing a desperate economic crisis, Baron Eichoff, Austrian minister to Paris who has resigned his post, said here today.

Eichoff stated, in effect, that the Austrian capitalists were willing to sell out the workers of the country to the highest bidder, in order to start their factories going, and bring in profits. "Whatever country gives us capital and directive ability will have Austria, I am convinced," Eichoff declared.

"Austria is facing a desperate economic crisis of dimensions far beyond the idea the world has so far formed," Eichoff said. "We have seven million population, and 200,000 workers are unemployed, a larger percentage than England."

"Our factories cannot work and produce, and we cannot export. If Austria does not recover from this terrible economic crisis now facing her, she will be forced into the arms of those who are willing to help."

Eichoff resigned because Austria is about to form an alliance with Germany, it was intimated. The Austrian workers are increasing the demand for a Soviet form of government.

FARRINGTON'S DECISION HITS THE UNEMPLOYED

Local 448 Appeals to International

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 4.—Local Union 448, known as the "Klondike Local Union," has taken the initiative in protesting against the decision handed down by Farrington and his district executive board, which include the renegade radical Gus Fritz, branding the organization of unemployed councils among the workless miners are "dual organizations."

The following resolution was passed by Local 448 and forwarded to President John L. Lewis of the international union for consideration:

Springfield, Ill., March 3, 1925.
Mr. John L. Lewis, President,
United Mine Workers of America,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

Dear Sir and Brother:—

I was instructed by Local Union No. 448, U. M. W. of A., located in Springfield, Illinois, to inform you that Local Union No. 448, United Mine Workers of America, takes an appeal from the ruling handed down by the executive board of District No. 12, in a meeting held by that body sometime during the week ending February 21, 1925. The ruling in question was printed in letter form on February 28, 1925, and sent to the local unions by Secretary Walter Nesbit and reads as follows:

"The district executive board adopted a motion instructing the district secretary-treasurer to notify the authors of the resolution that a state convention of miners cannot modify the joint contract any more than can a state convention of coal operators modify it. It was also decided that the formation of any organization of unemployed would be considered as a dual organization and the advocates of same must abandon their attempts to form such organizations within the United Mine Workers of America. This is the action of the district executive board and I am hereby notifying all members accordingly."

We are of the opinion that a state convention of mine workers could not modify the agreement, but do believe that a state convention could demand and insist that the operators live up to an agreement already made, and to condemn their officers in any laxity if that has not been done. We further contend that it is not within the power of a district union, to rule what movements are "dual" or not, that we maintain is a function of the international union. Kindly give our appeal your most earnest consideration.

I am, very truly yours,
Wm. McAuley,
Rec.-Secy.; L. U. 448, U. M. W. of A.,

Living Up to Agreement.

The circular against which Farrington made the decision did not declare that a state convention could modify the agreement with the operators but it insisted on the operators living up to the terms of that agreement as per section 12, of the Joint Contract, which reads as follows:

Division of Work.

"After a mine has been idle except thru strike, for a period of thirty days, the miners employed at mines in the same locality may at their option share work with those thrown idle, either by doubling up in work-

THE POOR FISH KEEPS COOL AT CAL'S INAUGURAL

Noted Reporter Says Dawes Is President

By THE POOR FISH
(Special to The Daily Worker)

TEAPOT DOME, March 4.—As I had the honor to predict the nomination of Coolidge and Dawes by Wall Street, while other more or less known reporters had picked various other team mates for "Cal," so also have I the honor to announce that General Dawes and not Calvin Coolidge became president of the United States today. If this be treason make the most of it.

The Moonstone Dress

First let me give you a line on Mrs. Coolidge's dress. It was made of "joseena" which is a new name specially invented for the occasion. The designer has a lot of originality. He got his ingredients together and produced a color known as "moonstone." The first part of the word is what counts, he said, since moonshine is now the favorite American drink. There is also something romantic about the moon, which harmonizes with dresses which ladies wear when they are gazing at the moon or otherwise happily engaged. It is going to be a business administration. The fact that Frank Stearns, one of Coolidge's owners is in the department store business and sells ladies dresses, should not be overlooked. The man is entitled to something for his trouble.

The Happy Fat Man

One of the happiest men at the inaugural was William H. Taft. "Bill" came into the White House at the head of a blizzard. He went out at the tip of a boot. But even an ex-president can smile on a pension of ten thousand dollars a year, besides other emoluments.

There are lots of people here but apparently they did not come here to hear or to think, but to drink. Nobody listened to Cal's speech but the microphone. It was about peace and religion. He was after signing a bill appropriating millions of dollars for new battleships, and thot he needed relaxation. The pacifists will forget all about the battleships and praise the speech. General Dawes was the object of much interest. The crowd followed him, leaving Cal accompanied only by his wife and his dog.

CHINESE WORKERS, SOLDIERS AND FARMERS COMMEMORATE FIRST ANNIVERSARY OF LENIN'S DEATH

(By Rosta News)

CANTON, China, Jan. 24.—(By Mail)—The first anniversary of Lenin's death, Jan. 21, was solemnly observed by all of revolutionary and proletarian Canton.

Meetings in farmers' college, the military schools and among workers began on the evening of the 20th. A huge meeting was held on the 21st in the big hall of the university, in the presence of several thousand people, including all the students and numerous representatives of military schools, labor organizations, the villages and others.

All the assembly unanimously honored the Soviet leader's memory by standing up to the impressive strains of the International and Chinese revolutionary songs. The gist of all the speeches delivered by the representatives of public and labor organizations was that Lenin was the leader of all oppressed peoples, that "under Lenin's banner we shall achieve emancipation from the yoke of imperialism and bring China out on the path of genuine freedom," that "by joining efforts, the western proletariat and the oppressed people of the East will attain victory."

Besides the numerous speakers representing peasant and labor organizations, there spoke the vice-president and nearly all the members of the central committee of the Kuomingtang party; the civil governor, Mr. Hu Han-ming, Generals Hsu Chung-chih, and Liu Chang-huan.

Hall Decorated with Banners.

The hall was richly decorated with banners, portraits and slogans such as: "Long Live the Third (Communist) International—the Leader of the Proletariat and the Oppressed Masses of all Countries!" "Oppressed Nations of the World, Unite Under the Banner of Leninism!" "Only Through Leninism Can the Problem of China Be Solved;" "Long Live the National Conference;" "Long Live Live the Kuomingtang—the Leader of the Chinese National Revolution!"

The meeting lasted for about four hours and was immediately followed by a concert and was permeated by an atmosphere of genuine and unabated enthusiasm.

Attorney for Wood Charged with Theft of $75,000 in Manila

MANILA, P. I., March 4.—Sidney Schwartzkopt, who was Osborne Wood's attorney when the son of general Leonard Wood, dictator of the Philippines, was making a fortune in stock gambling, has been arrested here charged with embezzlement.

Schwartzkopf is charged with stealing $75,000 from the Fulton Iron Workers, American manufacturers of sugar machinery here, for which he was attorney.

Schwartzkopt came into Wood's favor when he displayed a capacity for imbiding enormous quantities of booze at Wood's gay Manila parties.

LOCALS IN PROTEST AT EXPULSIONS

Seattle Machinists Oppose C. L. U. Rule

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SEATTLE, Wash., March 4.—Millmens' Union No. 338 of United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners last night passed resolutions against expulsion of Communists from Central Local Union and against expulsion of Reynolds in Detroit, also endorsed the Michigan defense and donated five dollars to defense fund.

Machinist Hope Lodge No. 79 passed the following resolution:

"There has arisen in the Central Labor Council a great deal of antagonism and misunderstanding between certain groups which are supposed to represent the affiliated unions as delegates to that body to carry out the mandates and principles of the organizations which have sent them as their representatives.

Aiding Class Enemies

"Labor has arrived at a crisis wherein a certain clique dominates the functions of the council, who are consciously or unconsciously playing into the hands of our enemies, the chamber of commerce and the open shop advocates of the American plan. Also they are assisting its Wall Street government to destroy the militancy of the members of the labor movement. We see in this move of certain reactionary labor leaders an actual betrayal of the very principles for which we and many of our members have dedicated our lives and liberty.

"At the present time the Central Labor Council has gone on record for expelling any delegate belonging to the Workers (Communist) Party, or any organization whose tenets are against the present government.

Denied Rights of Affiliated Body

"In that case the delegates of Hope Lodge No. 79 are denied the right as an affiliated union to the Central Labor Council to voice and express the

INDIANA COAL OPERATORS TO ATTEND OPEN SHOP CONFERENCE

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., March 4.—The scale committee of the Indiana bituminous coal operators' association will attend a meeting of the operators' scale committees of the central competitive field, to be held in Cleveland on March 17. The object of the conference is to take steps looking towards the revision of the Jacksonville agreement with the United Mine Workers of America.

The decision of the Indiana operators to join the Ohio and Western Pennsylvania operators has added significance in view of the fact that Phil H. Penna, secretary of the Indiana association, is looked upon as the leader of the operators in the central competitive fields, and is one of the most bitter foes of the miners' union.

hed possession of the class consci-
s workers in America. The AILY WORKER has been pushed rward to greater and greater circulation and influence. The Workers Monthly has taken its place as the complement to "OUR DAILY" and now has widened its influence and increased its circulation far beyond the sphere reached by any other Workers Party monthly. A program for the publication in book and pamphlet form of the Communist literature has been completed and already new publications are appearing. The Little Red Library, filling a deep and long felt want in our movement has been established and the first two volumes are now on the press and will be available for distribution within a few days.

A year ago we had made a start and now the propaganda equipment of our party has grown to comparatively tremendous proportions.

Guaranteeing the continued existence of our growing and centralized press, is our printing plant and our building. Here at 1113 West Washington Blvd. is a veritable fortress of Communism.

How has it been possible to build this stronghold within the short span of a year? Much has contributed to our advance. But one thing more than anything else set us on the high road to rapid progress.

On March 15, 1924 the first annual subscription campaign of the DAILY WORKER was started. It lasted three months and during that time the circulation of the DAILY WORKER was almost doubled. On June 15, 1924 the DAILY WORKER was no longer an experiment; it was an established power in the American labor movement. The basis for the future growth of our paper was laid. Moreover the machinery was established which is to build not only the DAILY WORKER, but also the Workers Monthly and the Communist literature, the entire Communist press in America.

Of course the job is not finished, hardly begun in fact. But last year the start was made.

We have just concluded a campaign "to Insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925." It has been a good campaign, but unfortunately it didn't fulfill its task. The DAILY WORKER has been given a boost but its existence for 1925 has not been definitely assured.

Now we are approaching the beginning of a campaign which must complete what the insurance policy campaign left undone and which must in addition take the DAILY WORKER a step further forward.

The second annual DAILY WORKER Subscription campaign is to begin on March 15, 1925. We are much mightier and a much bigger paper than we were a year ago. It will take greater efforts than were put forth a year ago to double the circulation of the DAILY WORKER during the next three months. Perhaps so much cannot be expected. But what is expected and what must be accomplished is the strengthening of the DAILY WORKER as it was strengthened in last year's campaign. The second annual DAILY WORKER Subscription Campaign must be made to push the DAILY WORKER the next step forward.

Last year in three months the DAILY WORKER was transformed from an experiment into a powerful journal. This year the DAILY WORKER travels far along the road to a mass circulation, a mass influence and the builder of a mass Communist Party.

Farrington's Decision Hits Jobless

ing places or some other manner mutually agreeable."

When the miners of O'Fallon, sought to take advantage of this clause in the contract and approached the management, they were presented with a written contract which specified who should be employed, the length of such employment and that no division of work would take place under any conditions if the operators thought it would interfere with their profits. The managers also insisted that the miners should hire extra help and that changes should take place only two weeks instead of every six day, as specified in the contract. This was in total violation of the Joint Contract which leaves the manner in which the division of work shall take place entirely at the discretion of the miners.

No Satisfaction.

When the miners appealed to their officers and were given no satisfaction they circularized the other locals not to modify the existing agreement but to force the operators to live up to it, Farrington and company having allowed them to violate it at will.

Farrington viewed the call for a special convention with alarm. Only 5 per cent of the membership is required to sign a petition for a special convention and with 50 per cent of the Illinois miners out of work, the district board fearing to face the delegates from the pits ruled the unemployment movement as dual. Farrington also feared the drain on the treasury, which is not any too strong just now. He wants enough money to pay the salaries of himself and his numerous henchmen.

Rich Live in Luxury While Workers Get Ancient Fire Traps

A new apartment building of small suites will be erected on the Gold Coast adjoining the Casino club, it has been announced by Samuel Cole, head of a syndicate which is to erect the building. The apartment, consisting of 120 three and four room apartments, will not benefit the workers who are crowded into small and badly repaired apartments.

While the mass of Chicago's workers are living in old, and dirty firetraps, the wealthy inmates of this apartment house will have "the last word" in modern conveniences. Each apartment is to have one or two bedrooms and a "dinette" according to the architects, and will be equipped with luxurious conveniences and appointments.

YOUNG WORKERS TO GIVE BANQUET THIS SUNDAY P. M.

Food, Snappy Talks, Sweet Music, on Menu

The enthusiastic welcome which greeted the coming out of the Weekly Young Worker will be very much in evidence this coming Sunday, March 8th at an affair and banquet for the benefit of the Weekly Young Worker.

A splendid program consisting of a banquet, good music and dance has been prepared by the Y. W. L. and some speakers of notable reputation will address the audience.

Tom J. O'Flaherty, the writer of the "As We See It" column, has volunteered to preside at the banquet as well as to deliver a short talk. Barney Mass, fresh from a short trip and as full of life and enthusiasm as ever will tell you how the Weekly was received in the other cities. John Harvey will speak on the tasks of the Chicago membership in connection with the issuance of the Weekly.

There will be plenty of good food at a very small charge and since the affair starts at 3 p. m., there will be plenty of time to enjoy the splendid music of the Young Workers League Orchestra as well as to dance.

Everybody is invited and urged to come, admission is only 25 cents. Remember, Sunday, March 8th, from 3 P. M. on,—at 722 Blue Island Ave.

Come along! Have a good time and help the Weekly Young Worker!

War Maneuvers Take Heavy Toll in Hawai

HONOLULU, H. I., March 4.—Eight enlisted men of the United States army were seriously burned, three propably fatally, as the result of an explosion at Schofield barracks, near here.

The men were loading shells in preparation for the army-navy maneuvers aimed to impress the south American countries and Japan with the power of the United States forces. Some powder exploded, burning all of them.

Capitalists Active in Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, March 4.—Silas Strawn, the Chicago lawyer who has on several occasions held jobs with the United States government, has arrived here. Strawn is representing receivers of Wilson and company, who have large holdings in Argentina.

CARLSON OPENS CLASS AT NEW HEADQUARTERS OF WORKERS' SCHOOL

NEW YORK, March 4.—All classes at the Workers' School have resumed sessions at the new headquarters, 108 East 14th St. Olliver Carlson will continue his class in the "Fundamentals of Communism," on Friday March 6th, at the new headquarters of the school.

Comrades may still register, and should do so immediately. The course is intended for trade unionists primarily, and its importance as a basis for effective action in the class struggle cannot be overemphasized. The class meets every Friday from 8 to 10 P. M.

Seattle Local Unions Protest Expulsion of the Communists fundamentals governing the constitution of the I. A. of M. which is based on the class struggle, founded upon co-operation, political and economic lines with a view of restoring the commonwealth of government to the people by the people and using the natural resources and means of production and distribution for the benefit of all the people.

The I. A. M. Constitution Ignored

"The constitution of the I. A. of M. gives the right to any delegate whom it may elect to represent it full liberty to have any political beliefs so long as he conforms to the laws and constitution of the organization which sends him as a delegate, and is in no way to be misconstrued or denied its expression by any other affiliated body of organized labor unless the delegates representing the affiliated union use methods and utterances which are likely to disrupt the unification of labor and so play into the hands of organized capital.

Case Must Rest With Local

"In that case it would be the duty of the Central Labor Council to prefer charges against the delegate or delegates and present them to his local union for action, and if found guilty of disruption, withdraw him as a delegate.

Will Carry Case to Other Locals

"Now, therefore, be it resolved, by Hope Lodge Local 79, I. A. of M. that we do hereby notify the Central Labor Council that all delegates sent by Hope Lodge are pledged to carry out the principles of that organization, which is founded on the class struggle. Its weapons are both political and economic, with a view to restoring the commonwealth to the people, by the people and for the people.

"If no satisfactory reply is received to this communication we shall take it up with the other local unions in the labor movement of Seattle."

Kansas Bosses Join in Ditching Jacksonville Pact

owners are ready to follow the example of the Kansas operators.

Good Strategy.

The trategy of the coal operators was excellent. They should be duly grateful to John L. Lewis, however, for his splendid co-operation. The latter raised a lot of dust by fighting Warren S. Stone and his two scab mines while thousands of scab pits thruout the country were sapping the foundations of the miners' union. When the number of men outside the union, that Lewis refused to organize, was sufficiently large and when his anti-radical crusade had sufficiently weakened the union, the operators decided the time to strike had arrived. Ever since the Jacksonville pact was signed the operators have been violating their own written signatures. But in every instance where the miners decided to strike, to make the operators live up to the contract, Lewis and his henchmen took the side of the operators against them.

Thirty-five thousand members of the union in Illinois are now entirely out of work while the remainmg 40,000 only work three days a week. There are 20,000 miners unemployed in Indiana and the steel trust, which owns most of the mines, is generously offering them work in its plants at a wage below even the 1917 mine wage scale. But the non-union pits are not idle and John L. Lewis still continues to make war on the Communists.

OUR GREETING TO THE COMINTERN ON ITS SIXTH ANNIVERSARY

"These Workers Party branches and these DAILY WORKER readers are marching with you in orderly ranks toward the world revolution. They form the BUILDERS ARMY of the American Communist press. Emerged from the primitive stage of mere guerilla warfare against capitalism, they are now on the highway toward complete organization.

"But our forward march has just begun. As yet, we have not even succeeded in conquering the first capitalist enemy, the poison-gas of debt. Our campaign to Insure the DAILY WORKER is only half-done. At least $25,000 must yet be raised to guarantee the paper's security for 1925. So we cannot greet you with the message, 'The DAILY WORKER safe for 1925' . . . . not yet.

"We greet you, not as veterans, not as successful survivors,—but as ground-breakers,—as the struggling vanguard of the American working class. Today, at the beginning of the sixth year since the founding of the Communist International, we send you word of OUR BEGINNING. And we tell you, besides, that we are going to FINISH THE FIGHT! Our weapons are forged, our soldiers are mobilized,—the march has begun.

"In these columns, our regiments of militants come together, united in the common cause of carrying forward the DAILY WORKER against the bourgeoisie. From you, we accept the word of command, 'ONWARD.' From ourselves, we demand the power to resist disruption and defeat,—the strength to keep on marching until the DAILY WORKER'S red banner is raised over every yellow-press fort!"

Insurance Policy

THIS CERTIFIES THAT AMERICAN COMMUNISTS have subscribed to the policy of never losing hold of the tools with which they build—of standing firmly on the steady ground of day-by-day effort even as they keep their eyes raised to the revolutionary goal—of making use of campaign hammers and subscription bricks as well as of proclamation and propaganda in the great work of forming a united front with the American working class.

This policy is a guarantee of the further continuance of the DAILY WORKER made possible by the exertions of its most aggressive supporters. In order that its period of security be extended, all Workers Party members, all DAILY WORKER readers and sympathizers must rally around the nucleus of builders.

To this first militant minority, this Insurance Policy is gratefully dedicated.

Spikes are stubborn things.

First and last, they are always with us. They arren't like stars, for instance. They don't shine on us gloriously for a while and then disappear,—to come back again only occasionally. No, spikes don't shine,—and they don't disappear. They are with us to stay, and to be put in their place. They protrude themselves always in our track, representing the every-day obstacles that must be overcome before the road is smooth for progress.

In the insurance campaign, we imagined for a while that we were driving the "last" spike. It was a happy idea,—that idea of a "last spike; but, unfortunately, it was an idea that didn't "work." The "last spike" was not driven home. It was too much to expect that three weeks efforts could accomplish more than the preceeding three months. Altogether, less than half the needed $50,000 has been forthcoming.

Spikes are stubborn things. But they hold down the rails over which the DAILY WORKER train must ride. The surest, safest, least dislodgeable spikes for a Communist newspaper are subscriptions. In fact, whether subscriptions be spikes or bricks,—or even just scraps of paper,—they are the only means of insuring the DAILY WORKER permanently! With almost $25,000.00 as a concrete example of what can be done when we hammer away at a job, the rest of the work should not be hard. Officially, the new subscription drive starts March 15. Communistically, tho, it starts today!

Down with one spike! Up with another brick!
"WE'VE GOT IT. WE'LL KEEP IT—AND BUILD."

WHITE MURDERER IS PROTECTED BY SOUTHERN CITY

Ignore Jury Verdict Against Slayer

PALM BEACH, March 4.—After the conviction and sentence of a white ex-policeman to twenty years in jail for murdering a colored boy, the city council of Palm Beach has gone to the unheard of length of appropriating $1,000 of city funds for the purpose of assuring the ex-policeman an appeal and a new trial.

The young colored man, Henry Speed, Jr., was shot some months ago by Fred Frantz, the former white policeman, and died of his wound within 48 hours. The father of the colored boy left no stone unturned to bring the murderer to justice and it is said the various trials cost not less than $2,000. A correspondent in Florida of the N. A. A. C. P. writes:

Evidence Warranted the Verdict.

"The evidence submitted to the consideration of the jury must have been so convincing and damaging that they brot in a verdict of guilty against the white murderer of a Negro.

"The judge imposed a sentence of twenty years imprisonment. But inasmuch as it seems to be an unwritten law in the South, but one as unalterable as that of the Medes and Persians, that no white person should suffer the penalty of any crime or injustice wreaked on Negro, no surprise was created when the city commission voted one thousand dollars for a new trial."

Anything to Oppress the Negro.

The Palm Beach Times further reports that the contingency fund of the city having a shortage, the $1,000 appropriation is to be taken from the police department budget, altho Frantz is no longer a member of the police force. The Palm Beach Times states that the city council voted: "To secure the appropriation from any fund available."

Senate Takes Slap at the World Court

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The world court issue was flatly repudiated by the senate today when it voted to "table" a motion to consider a resolution providing for American adherence to the international tribune.

The issue was raised by Senator King, democrat, of Utah, who offered a motion that the senate consider the adherence resolution in executive session. Senator Moses, republican, of New Hampshire, irreconcilable leader, immediately moved to "table" King's motion and the senate overwhelmingly voted to do so. No record vote was taken.

WHITE SEGREGATIONISTS OF THE NATIONAL CAPITAL WAR AGAINST NEGROES IN PRESS AND COURTS

WASHINGTON, March 4.—White property owners of Washington, D. C. whose private segregation agreements are to be brought before the supreme court this April by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, are attempting to organize the entire national capital, so that colored people will be unable to buy or occupy property in any but the districts assigned to them.

A Segregation Daily Paper

The segregation advocates are publishing their own daily newspaper, called "The North Capitol Citizen," which gives daily reports of the extension of the segregation movement. One of its recent issues which has come to the offices of the N. A. A. C. P., reports that for the first time in the history of the District of Columbia, all the 38 white property owners in a square, had placed on record in the office of the recorder of deeds an indenture prohibiting the sale of any of the property to any Negro or colored person for the next 21 years.

The same issue of the North Capitol Citizen reports that organization of the segregation forces by blocks on a city-wide basis is proceeding and the news is headed by such lines as the following: "Randolph Place Doing Great Work," "S Street Continues to Get Results," "Adams Street Not to Be Outdone," "Other Streets Also Busy."

One Trial Begins Soon.

Cases involving the sale of property to colored people are being vigorously pushed by the white property owners, and it is reported that Justice Hoehling has fixed March 10, as the date for commencing the trial of a case involving the sale of land at 69 Seaton Place, N. W., where fraud has been charged.

A prominent attorney says of this drive: "This movement in Washington has all the earmarks of a crusade. Here we have a fanatical segregation organization which has for its purpose the pledging of white people of the whole city of Washington, block by block and street by street to enter into agreement not to sell property to Negroes.

A Menace to the Whole Country.

"This movement is a menace which apparently the colored people of the country have not yet fully realized, nor are they fully aroused to its dangers. If this movement succeeds in Washington, it will be put in motion in cities all over the country. The N. A. A. C. P. as is stated above, is fighting this matter thru the U. S. supreme court. Members and friends of the association should bear in mind that we are not contesting the right of white property owners to agree not to sell their property to Negroes, but are contesting their right to invoke the powers of the state and the government to enforce such an agreement upon any signer who wishes to break it and to sell his property to whomsoever he chooses. This is the crux of the case we now have in the supreme court. We appeal to colored people in their own interest to help us in this fight."

Find Gold in Siberia.

COPENHAGEN, March 4.—Reports have been received here that a rich deposit of gold has been discovered in Siberia on the shores of one of the branches of the River Lena.

The deposits extend over an area of several hundred square kilometers, where gold is found in abundance, in a sand layer a few feet below the earth's surface, the report said.

SACCO-VANZETTI MEET IS SUCCESS AT PITTSBURGH

Workers Turn Out in Big Steel Center

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 4.—Hundreds of workers gathered here last Sunday at the Labor Lyceum to demonstrate their protest against the conviction and ordered execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The hall at several intervals resounded with mass protest as Arturo Giovannetti forcefully described the manner in which these militant workers had been framed by the most reactionary of all capitalists, those who control the state of Massachusetts.

Recalls Mooney Case.

At other instances the gathering would voice its enthusiastic approval when the speaker eloquently described how the intervention of the workers and peasants of Russia thru their Soviet government had stayed the execution of Tom Mooney and how, in the final analysis, only such complete international working class solidarity could save those militant fighters languishing in prison and do away with capitalist persecution forever.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted by the mass meeting:

Resolution is Adopted.

Whereas, Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted of murder in the first degree by a biased jury on instructions from a prejudiced judge and on testimony that has since been proven false, and

Whereas, Notwithstanding the demand from millions of workers the world over, including the American Federation of Labor, that a new trial be granted these victims of class persecution a retrial was refused by the trial judge and the case has been appealed to the supreme court of Massachusetts, and

Whereas, Sacco and Vanzetti are in danger of their lives unless saved by pressure from the ranks of the working class, therefore be it

Resolved, That the workers of Pittsburgh assembled in mass meeting Sunday, March 1, at the Labor Lyceum, demand a new trial for these innocent victims of class prejudice and class hatred, and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent to the governor of Massachusetts, to the president of the United States and to the press.

MacNamara Calls for Unity.

MacNamara of the Pittsburgh Labor Defense and Free Speech Council, under whose auspices the mass meeting was held, in his opening statement urged the workers to close up their ranks and unite to defend themselves against all these encroachments of capitalism. Fred Merrick speaking for the Workers Party, pointed to the importance of the organized nucleus of militant workers, the revolutionary political party of the working class as a leader in the struggle against capitalism.

A collection was taken to help the Sacco-Vanzetti defense, amounting to $132.35.

BUILDERS AT WORK

Three Great Communist Dailies and The Daily Worker.

IN this special Comintern Edition, we remind our DAILY WORKERS BUILDERS of what other Communist BUILDERS have done and are doing in the great Communist Parties of Europe.

PRAVDA, official organ of the Communist Party of Russia, has just reached a circulation over the half million mark mark—an achievement that has been heralded far and wide as a mark of tht progress of the great Communist Party of Russia that has made the Russian Revolution possible.

HUMANITE, the world known organ of the Communist Party of France has a circulation well over two hundred thousand and is now conducting an intensive drive to double that figure.

ROTE FAHNE, official organ of the German Communist Party, with a circulation running into hundreds of thousands has only the other day held a conference attended by over seventy of its reporters and correspondents who had contributed in such large measure to the success of the paper.

ALL these three great dailies have grown with and contributed to the growth of the three great parties whose effective weapons they are. All three have used similar methods to build as they have done.

ONE particular feature of their BUILDING methods has yet to be developed in this country. This sure feature is Workers Correspondence—PLUS DISTRIBUTION. Three great Communist papers have grown to a size that instills fear in their enemies and you can "Build the DAILY WORKER" to become another. You can build it by sending in letters and news about conditions in your shop; how you work and how you live—and send in an order for a bundle to distribute at the shop you write of. To sell such copies is a simple task. But if you can't do this—you can give them away. Give your shop-mates a picture of their own lives that will be reflected daily in a working class newspaper the DAILY WORKER.

THIS is only one way, but an important, big way. Write your letter today. About your shop, wages, conditions; your bosses and your union and we will send you a bundle to sell if you can and distribute free of charge if you must.

DAILY WORKER BUILDERS can build another great Communist paper—and when they do, there will be another stronghold of Communism in this country in a great Workers (Communist) Party.

EX-NOBLES ARE PUT TO WORK BY SOVIET RUSSIA

Must Give Up Land to Workers' State

MOSCOW, Soviet Russia, March 4.—All property has been placed entirely in the hands of the working class as the result of an order given by the council of the people's commissars that the few remaining nobles and landlords must vacate their lands by January 1, 1926.

The notice provides that the large property holders expelled are entitled to receive small allotments of land in different colonization areas. The former nobles are to receive the same treatment as the peasants and must do the same work and are to be given limited assistance by the emigration department.

The taking over of the remaining land in the hands of the nobles does not include those who served in the Red army or who gave aid to the Russian revolution or the Soviet government.

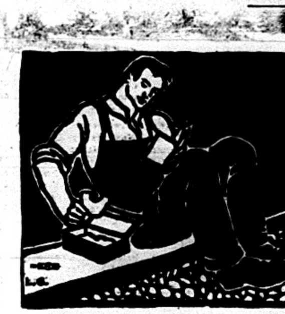
The Little Red Library



This is the mark on the cover of every book of The Little Red Library.

ONE of the first steps of the DAILY WORKER PUBLISHING CO. since becoming the central distributing agency for the Communist press in this country is the publication of THE LITTLE RED LIBRARY—an innovation in working class publications.

This little library will consist of uniform volumes, pocket size, including reprints of revolutionary classics and new works of the best writers in the American and International movement.

It will cover all phases of social and industrial problems, history, philosophy, fiction, poetry and art.

READY NOW!

No. 1—TRADE UNIONS IN AMERICA, by Wm. Z. Foster, Jas. P. Cannon and Earl R. Browder, is a brief statement of the trade union movement in America and the history of the development of the Left Wing, with an explanation of the structure and program of the Trade Union Educational League.

No. 2—CLASS STRUGGLE vs. CLASS COLLABORATION, by Earl R. Browder, is a study of labor banks, the "B. & O. Plan," insurance schemes, and workers' education. This little book throws the spot-light on the methods used by the labor bureaucracy to divert the working class from militant struggle against capitalism.

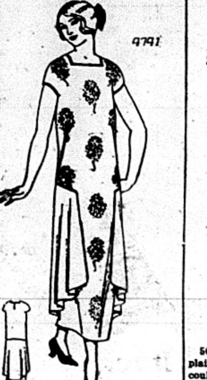
OUR DAILY PATTERNS

VERY ATTRACTIVE.



4741. This is a good style for combining two colors or two materials. One could use crepe satin, and have the tunic of the reversible side, and the dress of the satin or vis versa. Figured and plain yoile together is also attractive.

The pattern is cut in six sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires 3¼ yards of one material 54 inches wide. If made as illustrated, it will require 1⅝ yard of 40-inch material for the tunic, and 3⅜ yards for the dress. The width at the foot is 1½ yard.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in silver or stamps.

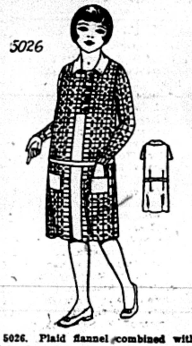
A PLEASING MODEL FOR A SCHOOL DRESS.



5026. Plaid flannel combined with plain flannel is here shown. One could use jersey cloth or wash materials. The sleeve may be in wrist length, or short as in the small view.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. To make the dress as illustrated for a 10 year size, with long sleeves will require 2½ yards of plaid or checked material and ⅜ yard of plain material 36 inches wide. If made with short sleeves 2¼ yards of the plaid material will be required.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in silver or stamps.

PHILADELPHIA ACTIVE IN DRIVE TO PROTECT CLASS WAR VICTIMS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 4.—Philadelphia has rolled up its sleeves for defense work. The defense conference meets every Thursday evening 8 P. M. sharp at 521 York Ave. At every meeting more branches of the Workers Party and Young Workers League are added to the already large list of representatives. Those branches, which have not selected their delegates as yet, are urged to do that without delay.

List in Circulation

The national defense lists are in circulation for some time and early returns are expected. But the main task of the conference at present moment is the Defence Bazaar, to be held April 3 and 3, at New Traymore Hall, Franklin and Columbia Ave. The lists for donations of articles for the bazaar are out and if any comrade had no chance to get some and start to work on them, come to the Defence office, 521 York Ave. and get them.

Quite a number of articles have been contributed already but we need many more. Our woman comrades are expected to come out strong with art needle work, which always constitute the heart of every bazaar to a certain extent. Comrades who are able to make up something of their own work are urged to get busy at once.

Branches to Have Booths.

The tickets for the latest Defense affair are out already and the largest part of them are in the hands of the conference delegates and, we hope, in hands of many comrades by thir time. If any comrade has not received yet, get them for yourself from headquarters. Each comrade of the party and Young Workers League is expected to sell a book of 25 tickets at least. This is the minimum set by the conference. Of course, many comrades will work for the maximum Therefore let everyone get busy and have it done, because none of us will get away from it. The sooner it is done, the better. All the stubs must be carefully preserved and returned to the office with remittance without delay.

Branches, which are willing and will collect enuf articles to conduct heir own booth are encouraged to do so.

THE INTERNATIONAL THAT STRIKES TERROR INTO THE CAPITALISTS

The Communist International strikes terror into the hearts of the imperialists. The revolutionary tactics of the Communist International have established its historical significance—its role of undisputed leadership of the exploited working and farming masses of every country struggling against capitalist oppression and for the organization of the Communist Society.

MUSSOLINI, ILL, SECRETLY QUITS PREMIER JOB

Turns Over Reins As Evidence Piles Up

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, March 4.—Concurrent with the disclosure of further evidence of the complicity of Mussolini, fascist premier, in the assassination of the deputy Matteotti, it is known, though severely censored and not mentioned officially that Mussolini is seriously and chronically ill and has handed over the premiership to Luigi Federzoni.

Unpleasant For Capitalist Press

The news will be broken carefully, and the explanation made that Federzoni will only temporarly assume premiership. This, because the collapse of fascism is expected with Mussolini's retirement. This is very unpleasant news for the capitalist press, both here and abroad.

Federzoni is one of the figures of the nationalist party, now combined with the fascist party, and he is minister of the interior under Mussolini.

The Rossi Letter

The new disclosures of Mussolini's connection with the Matteotti murder and other fascist crimes is given in a letter of Cesare Rossi, whom Mussolini allowed to be made the goat when hard pressed by the critics of his terrorist policy. Rossi is now in jail, charged with the kidnapping and murder of Matteotti, and his letter shows that he appealed to Mussolini as to an accomplice who occupied a place of power, to secure his release. The letter, in part, says:

"From a number of facts I gather the impression that you have elected me the scapegoat for the misfortune which has befallen fascism—a scapegoat not only from a political but moral and penal viewpoint. Your indifference, your silence, after Sig. De Bono, chief of police, set a trap for me, fills me with indignation. If during the next few days you fail to furnish me with proof of your friendship, not so much for my person but for my past record in my position as your collaborator and executor of your frequently illegal orders, I shall put into effect what I told you this morning.

"I refer to the attack and clubbing of Deputy Misuri, to the attack on Sig. Amendola, to the trip to Paris of Dumini on money furnished by Under Secretary Finzi, to the recent demonstrations against the opposition, to the attack on Cesare Forni, to the attack on former Premier Nitti, which degenerated into the looting of Sig. Nitti's house.

"I deem it superfluous to warn you that if the revolting cynicism you displayed recently, complicated by fears which seized you just at a time you should dominate the situation which you created, should counsel you to order fresh physical suppression during the time I will be in jail in case of my arrest, you will equally be a doomed man and you will be destroyed, and with you will fall the regime, because I have already placed my long, detailed statements in the hands of friends.

"It is for the sake of the tremendous interests of Italy that we two should remain friends. It is up to you to arrange it. You remain in the government while I, by fleeing already have sacrificed myself for your safety.

(Signed) "Cesare Rossi."

School Teachers and Children Are Buncoed in New Board Move

The board of education went into session for the purpose of deciding on greater economy in handling school funds. After "sweating" a whole day trying to find a way to squeeze more out of each dollar by way of greater "efficiency," it evolved with the following recommendations:

Greater use of the present equipment at its command. It will increase each elementary school classroom by three. This brings the size of the classrooms up to an average of 48 per class. Discounting the classes for the sub-normal which contain about 15 to 20 to each class, we can see that the classrooms are much larger than 48 in number already. Each one of these classes is to be increased by three since the present rating is at an average of 45 per classroom. The size for any one teacher to handle properly should not exceed 25. The recommendation also calls for increasing the classrooms in high schools from 35 to 40.

In true sweat shop fashion the board follows up its proposal with a promise of more wages to the teachers for the extra work.

Julius F. Smietanka, chairman of the finance committee, gives the whole story away in a statement he makes to the press. He says: "It will be the policy of the board to try to avoid the periodic clamors of the teachers for just treatment."

Translated into board of education tactics, it means that the board will continue to follow its policy of avoiding any clash with the big property holders who are dodging their taxes and thus limiting school funds.

Change in Saltzman Tour in District 6

Comrade Max Salzman's tour has brought many good results. Two miners' conferences are to be held and their work outlined for the development of the national coal mining campaign of the Young Workers' League. One conference will be held in Pittsburgh and the other in Ohio some time in April. The one in Pittsburgh will be held on March 7. Much enthusiasm has been created since Comrade Salzman has entered this territory. His work has met the expectations of all the comrades. Many letters commending his work has been received by the national office.

The following are the dates in Ohio:

The New International

By MAX BEDACHT.

MARCH has ever been a dangerous month in the annals of rulers and ruling classes. The greatest revolutionary events of the past century took place in the month of March. In the year 1848, the beginning of the month of March was greeted by the victorious proletariat of Paris which had just called a halt to the career of Louis Philippe. In Berlin and Vienna, during March 1848 was heard thru the noise of revolts for national unity the first rumblings of a new revolutionary power, the working class.

Paris Commune Alarms Rulers.

IN March 1871 the victory of the Paris Commune thundered its lessons into the ears of the workers of the world and alarmed international capitalism to the dangers threatening from a revolutionary proletariat.

It was the month of March again when in our present century, in the midst of the destructive roar of the cannons of the world war in 1917 the first flashes of the Russian revolution surprised the world and prepared it for the momentous event of the victory of the Russian proletariat in November of that year.

Third International Formed.

AND it was in the month of March 1919 when delegates from revolutionary proletarian groups of many countries met in Moscow to form the Third (Communist) International. March 1919 is the date of birth of the grave digger of international capitalism.

Only gradually did our capitalist society drive home to its victims, to the suffering and exploited masses, that their problem was an international one; that their foe was an international institution, and that only an international struggle and international solidarity of all the exploited could bring relief and victory.

Urge for International Solidarity.

UPON this knowledge there were built attempts of international organizations of the proletariat, which crystallized in September 1864 in London, into the first International Workingmen's Association. The First International gave a body to the spectre of Communism that was haunting Europe. It supplied the nucleus around which the revolutionary struggle of the international proletariat could be grouped, and by means of which the international proletariat groups engaged in conflict.

First International Dies.

THE First International died. It died mostly because of the immaturity of the proletarian movement itself. It is significant that the immediate cause of the death of the First International was a concept that grew on Russian soil. The economic backwardness of Russia, the domination in Russia of the petty individualistic psychology of the peasantry originated and supported the concepts that supplied the Bakuninist wing of the First International with its strength.

Russia Becomes Leader.

BUT the same Russia that virtually supplied in Bakunin the undertaker of the First supplied in Lenin the father of the Third International. The economic backwardness of Russia postponed the bourgeois revolution in that country to a time when the proletarian forces of a new, a Communist tomorrow had grown so strong that they could relieve capitalism of its function and could put the task of development of the economic forces of the land into the hands of a ruling proletarian class. Thus its economic backwardness became the immediate cause of Russia's political advance. Thus the step child of revolutionary advance became the leader of revolution.

Second International Dies Ignobly.

THE First International was followed by the Second. Born in 1889 in Paris, that body died an ignoble death in 1914. While the First International was mainly one of propaganda and education, the Second International specialized in organization. Its size was its pride. All signs of disagreements and principle differences were covered up with a cloak of organizational unity and thus became the causes of internal disintegration. A colossus it stood, waiting for the storm destined to blow it down. Its source of strength, careful avoidance of decisive settlement of internal differences, had become its source of greatest weakness. Avoiding a clear outline of revolutionary strategy and tactics it was bound not to apply any revolutionary tactics in the time of crisis. Unwilling to settle the question as to what to do, and how to fight war it was destined to do nothing at all—when war really came—and worse than that—to do everything in favor of the war.

Socialists Fought for Capitalists.

FOR August 1914 a world congress of the Second International was to convene in Vienna. In the face of the situation created by events in Sarajevo this congress was sure to use much of its time discussing the question of war. In 1907 at its regular congress in Stuttgart and in 1912 at its special anti-war congress in Basel generalizing resolutions were adopted against war. "Imperialist war must be answered by proletarian revolution."

THE congress hall in Vienna in Aug. 1914 was sure to resound in protestations against imperialist war and in pledges to fight against it. But events moved fast. The delegates from the different countries did not meet in a congress hall to talk against war, but on battlefields fighting for and in the war.

The parties of the Second International suddenly differentiated between imperialist war and this war, and the "great," the "magnificent" Second International broke into pieces and divided into its national subdivisions each one supporting its native bourgeoisie in the war.

Socialists Forget Revolution.

THE exceptions to this rule were very few and far between.

For sixty-six years the proletarian revolutionists had taught: "The workers have no fatherland. They cannot be robbed of what they do not possess." Yet in 1914 "socialists" supported the fraud of "war for defense."

Marxism had become a synonym for the thought that the first attempt of capitalism to lead society back into barbarism thru a period of gigantic imperialist wars would be the signal for the proletariat revolt against capitalism. Now the first great imperialist war had come and the "socialists" answered it, not with the slogan of revolution but with the slogan of "Burgfrieden," civil peace.

Lenin Breasts the Current.

FOR decades friend and foe looked upon the International as an instrument of the proletariat in the international class struggle. Now, when this struggle had reached its climax the foremost theoretician of this Second International excused the collapse of this instrument with the thesis, that the Second International is first and foremost an instrument of peace and therefore failed in the crisis of war.

BUT in the midst of the chaos of the the treacherous Second International the banner of a revolutionary International was raised again "The Second International is dead, vanquished by opportunism.... The Third International is given the task to organize the forces of the proletariat for the attack against the capitalist governments, for civil war against the bourgeoisie of all countries for political power, for the victory of socialism." Thus wrote Lenin on November 1, 1914. He, with his staff of old guard Bolsheviks undertook to swim against the current of social patriotism and social pacifism alike. Around him and his group there gathered the individuals and groups of upright revolutionists, for whom Marxism was more than phrases and for whom revolution was a living and immediate problem

IN September 1915 there assembled in Zimmerwald, a little town in Switzerland, some proletarian revolutionists from many countries. To organize the revolutionary forces was the task. The gathering was also patronized by menshevist and social pacifist groups. These groups were stronger at Zimmerwald than the revolutionary left. The right did not want a new International. Its internationalism was not one of struggle against capitalism, but one of weakness, of pacifism and of petty bourgeois character.

The Third International was not born at Zimmerwald. But the Zimmerwald left was the nucleus of the new International of proletarian struggle, and well could Zinoviev, today the president of the Third (Communist) International, write after the Zimmerwald conference: "The Second International is dead, infected by opportunism; Long live the Third International, freed of opportunism."

Socialists Betray Workers.

IN May 1916 a new conference was held in Kienthal. Again the left revolutionary wing was outvoted and in place of plans for action the international proletarian movement was once more given only manifestoes. The right wing at Zimmerwald and Kienthal had by no means lost its affinity to the dead Second International. Many ties still connected it with the social traitors; first of all its fear of revolution, its contempt and hatred for the proletariat.

Menshevism Fails.

TEN months after Kienthal the beginning of the Russian revolution acted as a cleansing storm. In the fire of history itself menshevism was tested. It failed the test miserably. The Russian section of international menshevism and of the Zimmerwald right betrayed the revolution and made itself the bannerbearer of bourgeois power in Russia.

In any other country that act of treachery might have been successful because with the established leadership of the proletariat turning against the workers the latter are practically at the mercy of the enemy till a new leadership develops and wins the confidence of the toiling masses.

Lenin Took Leadership.

BUT in Russia the treachery of menshevism failed in its purpose. Lenin with his clear revolutionary insight had long learned to know the anti-proletarian character of menshevism. He was never deceived by phrases. Behind every phrase he looked for the substance. And so he had fought Russian menshevism in years past. He had prepared the Russian proletariat for just such an emergency as the betrayal by the mensheviks after the March revolution. Lenin had built a revolutionary party the Bolsheviks; he had led the Russian workers thru his party in the past. He had won their loyal confidence. And when the revolution seemed to be at the mercy of treacherous menshevism Lenin and his Bolshevist party stepped in, took over the leadership of the revolutionary workers of Russia, defeated the Russian bourgeoisie and their lackeys the mensheviks and secured final victory for the revolution.

Russia Becomes Workers' Center.

WITH this momentous event the center of gravity of the revolutionary proletarian movement of the world was moved to Russia. There the resolutions of Stuttgart and Basel were put into action. Imperialist war was answered—and ended—by proletarian revolution. Here international capitalism met its first decisive defeat. The principles of the new international were baptized in the fire of revolution. The tide of the Burgfrieden was stemmed and the flood of a proletarian offensive against capitalism was inaugurated.

Call for New International.

IT was natural that on the achievements of the Bolshevik Party of Russia, the new, the Third International should be built.

After the first hard months of struggle had been weathered by the Communist Party of Russia the call was issued for an international congress for the formation of a new revolutionary proletarian international.

The victory of the Russian proletariat was the signal for the end of the imperialist war. International capitalism found that a new and formidable foe had risen and that its own quarrel would aid in strengthening this enemy. The revolutionary battles of the Russian proletariat proved that the imperialist war was the great convulsion of mortally sick capitalism and that a concerted revolutionary advance of the proletariat at that moment was the only hope for the exploited.

Capitalism Shaken.

THE Russian example created a wave of revolutionary enthusiasm among the workers the world over. Capitalism was shaken to its very foundations. It ended the war in order to concentrate on an international battle against revolution and against the leader of revolution, Soviet Russia.

The great handicap for the workers in the various countries at this moment was the lack of leadership. There were revolutionary leaders, to be sure. But their enthusiasm and spirit of self-sacrifice could not make up for the lack of organization. What was needed was a party that could penetrate the proletarian masses in motion against capitalism, that could supply a clear aim for the struggle, that could give leadership and initiative.

Third International the Guide.

IT was the lack of such a party that led to the defeat of the German proletariat in 1918 and to the defeat of the Italian workers a little later.

The new international, to be formed at a congress in Moscow, March, 1919 was to supply that need. The master of revolutionary strategy, the great leader of the Russian proletariat, Lenin, was to guide the building of this new structure.

Workers Achieve Unity.

THUS the Third Communist International was formed in March 1919 in Moscow. It gathered up the groups and parties revolutionary advance guards of workers in the different countries and welded them into a new revolutionary party. The next great crisis of international capitalism would not find the proletariat leaderless. It would meet with a solid phalanx of revolutionary parties which had established their right of leadership over the toiling masses in hard and tireless work and struggle for and with the working class.

MEANTIME, the new, the Third Communist International would again raise the great slogan of the first Communist manifesto: "You have nothing to lose but your chains; but you have the world to gain!" Workers of the world unite!

FOR ACTION!

A worker must have a thorough understanding of every step in fighting the battles of his class. Toward this grasp of the principles he fights for—towards a knowledge of the Labor Movement these books will contribute in large measure:

THE PEOPLE'S MARX—by Julian Borchardt
An abridged popular edition of Marx's three volumes of "Capital". Composed of 285 pages of choice and important extractions presented in a sequence that will assist the beginner in the study of Marxism. (Paper) .75

THE WORLD TRADE UNION MOVEMENT—by A. Losovsky
A history of the treason of the social-democrats and labor bureaucrats before, during and after the war, the struggle against class collaboration and the rise of the revolutionary labor movement culminating in the establishment of the Red Trade Union International (Paper) .50

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY AND THE STATE—by Frederick Engels
A scholary investigation into the origins of the basic social institutions. The real function of the state, the manner in which the idea of property came into being, the peculiar development of marriage corresponding to primitive economic systems, and women's place in society, are questions of great social import that Engels studies in masterly, simple manner. (Cloth) .60

THE ANCIENT LOWLY (Two Volumes)—by C. Osborne Ward
Ward recounts the history of the working class from earliest known times to the reign of Constantine. Accounts of ancient trade-unionism; histories of early slave revolts; the workers of antiquity and their close connection with the early church, are some of the phases of this complete record of the conditions and achievements of the proletariat in the dawn of civilization.
2 Vols. Price, each (Cloth) $2.50

CALL FOR FIRST WORLD CONGRESS OF COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL ISSUED

(From the Call for the First World Congress of the Communist Intrenational.)

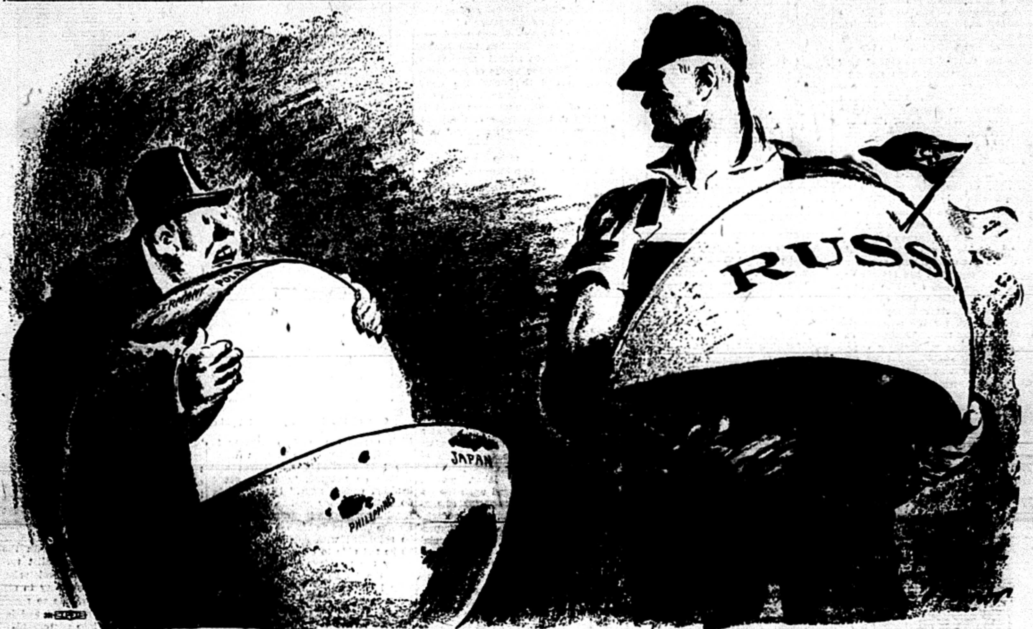
THE undersigned parties or organizations are of the opinion that the first congress of the new Revolutionary International must be convened without fail. In the period of war and revolution it has not only become evident that the old socialist and social-democratic parties, and with them the Second (socialist) International, are bankrupt and that the intermediate elements of the old social-democracy (the so-called "center") are totally unfit for revolutionary actions, but the idea of a truly revolutionary International assumed concrete form. The rapid progress of world revolution, with its new problems, the danger threatening this revolution from the capitalist states, which organize themselves against the revolution under the hypocritical device "people's union," the attempts of the parties of the social traitors to come to an understanding, and having "amnestied" each other, to help their governments and bourgeoisies to deceive once more the working class, and finally, the accumulated revolutionary experience and internationalization of the trend of revolution induce us to take upon ourselves the initiative of placing upon the agenda the question of the convocation of an international congress of revolutionary proletarian parties.

Russian Workers and Peasants Take One-Sixth of the Earth



IT was in spirit and under the guidance of Vladimir Ilytch Lenin, the founder of the Communist International, that the Russian workers and peasants seized power on November 7, 1917, taking one-sixth of the world's land surface away from capitalist rule, and inaugurating the Proletarian Dictatorship that is bridging the transition period leading to Communism. Russia is building for the Communist society.

MANKIND IS THROWING OFF SLAVERY IN ITS LAST SURVIVING FORM

By VLADIMIR ILYTCH LENIN

THE Third (Communist) International has garnered the fruit of the labors of the Second (socialist) International, casting off the refuse of its opportunist, social-chauvinistic, bourgeois and lower middle class tendencies, and has set out to achieve the dictatorship of the proletariat.

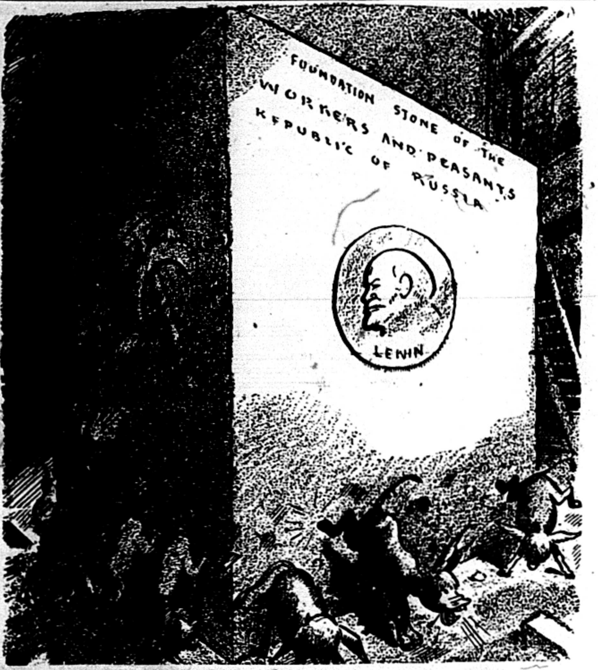
The international union of parties directing the most revolutionary movement in the world, namely, the movement of the proletariat to throw off the yoke of capitalism, has the inestimable advantage of resting upon a basis of unprecedented solidity; on a number of Soviet Republics who are in a position to bring about on an international scale, the dictatorship of the proletariat and victory over capitalism.

The importance of the Third (Communist) International in the world's history is, that it was the first to put into life the greatest of all Marx's principles, the principle summarising the process of the development of socialism and the labor movement, and expressed in the words, the dictatorship of the proletariat.

These words have now been translated into all the languages of modern Europe, nay, into every language under the sun. A new era in the world's history has begun. Mankind is throwing off slavery in its last surviving form: the slavery of wage earners under capitalism.

Mankind is throwing off its yoke, and it is, for the first time in its existence, achieving real freedom.

Soviet Rule---A Pillar of Power



FOUNDATION STONE OF THE WORKERS AND PEASANTS REPUBLIC OF RUSSIA
LENIN

THE Bolshevik triumph in Soviet Russia established the Soviet power that daily grows in strength. The guiding hand in Soviet Russia today is the Russian Communist Party, the Russian section of the Communist International.

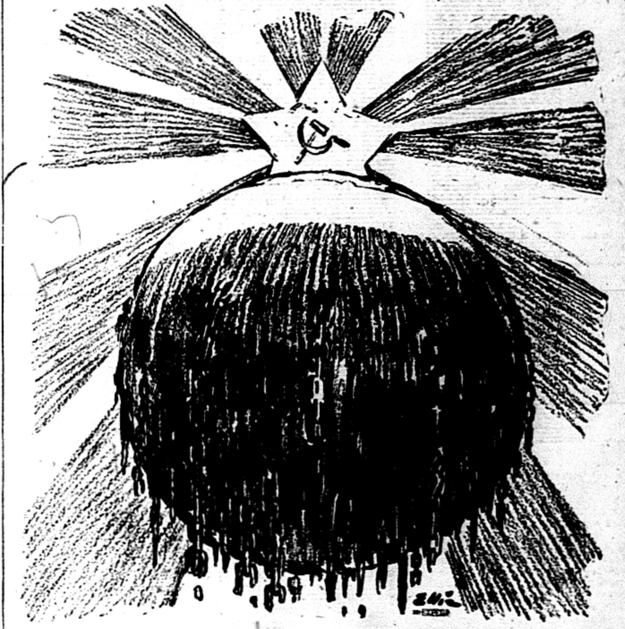
FIRST SHOTS OF WORLD WAR ALSO HERALDS OF THIRD INTERNATIONAL

By GREGORY ZINOVIEV
President, Communist International

IT is known as early as 1914, when the first shots were fired in the fields of the imperialist war, the central committee of our (Russian Bolshevik) Party, inspired by Lenin, advanced the watchword of creating a Third International. The five years from 1914-1919 may properly be called the embryonic period of the Communist International. These five years saw the first groups of Communist adherents gathering together. During the Zimmerwald conference, a Zimmerwald left was formed, which was the first organized nucleus of the future Communist International. Finally, there broke out the great proletarian revolution in our country. When in May, 1918, the Bolshevik Party in Russia, having already possession of the state power, decided to change its name to the Russian Communist Party, and a few months later when the German Spartacists also changed their name to the Communist Party of Germany, it became evident to every revolutionary that the Third (Communist) International had been born.

Communist Parties have been born in the majority of countries. This is the greatest event in recent political history. The preamble of the Comintern's history is nearing its end. We are about to witness the real history of the Communist proletarian struggle for the overthrow of capitalism and the setting up of an Internatinoal Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. The great work is waiting for its doers, for all of us. To work then in the spirit of Lenin's precepts.

"A World to Gain"



THE light of the New Day—COMMUNISM—shines resplendant over all the Union of Soviet Republics. The growing power of the Communist International is loosening the capitalist chains on the limbs of the oppressed masses everywhere. Under the banners of the Communist International the workers of the world will win their final emancipation. That is the challenge of World Communism to World Capitalism. That is the challenge of the Communist International that it will make good with the World Proletarian Victory!

International Communist Woman's Day, March 8th

THE capitalist exploiters make no distinction between men workers and women workers except to exploit the latter more brutally and outrageously. Our enemies, the capitalists, are making splendid use in their own interests of the weaknesses and prejudices of those working class women who still continue to stay away from the struggles of their class against capitalist exploitation. Now, on this International Women's Day, set aside by the Communist International as a day of special effort to organize the working women for the proletarian class struggle, the Workers (Communist) Party of America calls upon every woman of the working class to join the struggle of the workers for the destruction of capitalism thru the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government.

TO STAGE WORLD WOMEN'S DAY ON SUNDAY, MAR. 8

Huge Meeting Planned for New York City

The workingclass women of the world—those who toil in industry for less wages than are paid men for the same work, and those who toil in the homes to raise a family on the meagre wage supplied their men folk—are called upon by the Communist International to join with the struggle of all workers for the overthrow of capitalism.

The Communist International has set aside March 8, as International Working Women's Day.

The central executive committee of the Workers (Communist) Party has issued a statement on Women's Day, calling for "a special effort to organize the working women for the proletarian class struggle."

"The Workers (Communist) Party," says the statement, "Calls upon every woman of the working class to join the struggle of the workers for the destruction of capitalism thru the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government. If you are employed in industry, you are directly affected by every manifestation of capitalist misrule. If you are occupied at home you feel the bitter misery of capitalism just the same. You are a worker, whether in the shop or at home, and you have the same interests as the rest of the working class."

Meetings are being held thruout the country by the Workers Party at which an appeal is to be made to working women to join with the rest of the working class to organize the unorganized working women into the trade unions, to fight against child labor exploitation, to fight against capitalist wars which slaughter workers of other countries, and to fight at all times under the banner of the Workers Party to win the control by the working class of the industries and the government.

In New York, where thousands of women and children toil in the sweat shops and homes at starvation wages, and live in dirty, overcrowded homes, the Workers Party is holding a mass meeting on March 6, at 8 p. m. to celebrate Women's Day. The meeting will be held in the Labor Temple, East 84th St., near Third Ave. The speakers will include Juliet Stuart Poyntz, M. J. Olgin, Rose Pastor Stokes, Fanny Warshafsky, and Anna Thompson of the Young Workers' League. Meetings will be held in many other cities.

Women of the working class will be demonstrating, meeting and marching thruout the entire world on International Women's Day. In Soviet Russia, thruout the length and breadth of the land the workers and peasants will celebrate Women's Day, which will be officially observed by the Soviet government.

Woman---Comrade or Slave?

By H. M. WICKS.

ALL class societies based upon private property have degraded women to an inferior position to that of men. Thruout the history of civilization—thru chattel slavery, fudalism and capitalism—ownership of private property descended from generation to generation by male lineage. In this scheme woman was simply a necessary appendage wherewith the race was perpetuated. In the earliest period of man's domination over woman a new religion arose that ideologically justified the forcible economic suppression of woman. Conceived in a patriarchial society, that religion still functions to this day and is presumed to be the basis of all ethics and morality.

ACCORDING to this superstition the first human being upon the earth was one man, but the omnipotent ruler of the universe, for some reason known only to himself, decided to create a woman to keep him company and to beget children for him. All the human inhabitants of the earth are descended from this one pair. Woman, being a secondary consideration of the almighty, has always had an inferior position, equal to that of horses, cattle, sheep and other domesticated animals that were placed upon the earth for the specific purpose of serving man. Ideologists call this arrangement a "divinely constituted union of souls" and treat anyone who dares question the divine origin of the institution of marriage as an enemy of society.

WHILE forced by the obvious changes in social forms to admit that humanity does not remain stationary, each ruling class insists that the fundamental principles upon which its power and prestige rests are eternal. "As it is today, so it was in the past and so it ever shall be." This stupid formula, so consoling to the ruling class, has, by science and history been relegated to the category of myths, for history can be traced far beyond the time Moses is alleged to have received enlightenment on the religion of the patriarchy from the dizzy crest of Mt. Sinai and proves that either Moses was a poor interpreter or his instructor was a liar.

Rather than repeat the myths of the early period of class rule we will refer to a far better authority, the American ethnologist, Mr. Lewis H. Morgan, of whom Frederick Emgels said: "His repeated discovery that the original maternal 'gens' was a preliminary stage of the maternal 'gens' of civilized nations has the same significance for primeval history that Darwin's theory of evolution had for biology and Marx's theory of surplus value for political economy."

MORGAN'S great achievement was to divide the development of society into seven ethnical periods and prove, by evidence from every age and every clime, that changes in the relation of men and women—the family—are determined by changes in the sphere of production; proving that all peoples in a given stage of development have similar institutions.

For more than a hundred thousand years the greater part of the human race lived in a state of primitive Communism, where there were neither masters nor slaves; where all shared alike in the products of the group. In this period descent was traced in the female line. Group marriage prevailed—all the women of one group being the mutual wives of all the men in an opposite group. These groups comprised all the people descended from one female ancestress and were called "genses." The children of a man did not belong to his gens, but to that of his mate, but the children of his sisters belonged to his gens.

IN the early period of savagery and far into barbarism the activity of men and women was essentially the same, but with the constant development of the crude instruments of labor there resulted a division of tasks, a diversity of occupations. The men engaged in fishing and hunting, while the women took care of the community houses. The domestication of animals, agriculture, the manufacture of iron tools and implements, in the middle and upper status of barbarism became the special province of man; thus man became the master and owner of special economic forces.

But even tho the men did own herds and implements and later agricultural lands, they could not transfer these to their offspring, because of the old gentile laws that demanded that property remain within the gens; hence the children of a man's sisters became the heirs of his property.

The First Class Struggle.

A STRONG desire to change the conditions that caused man's own children to be disinherited began to manifest itself. This gave rise to a terrific struggle between the matriarchy and the rising patriarchy that adorns the pages of the great epic poems of Greece. The Orestes is clearly a dramatization of this struggle. The beautiful Homeric Hymn to Demeter (the corn goddess and mother of Persephone) written about sever centuries before the Christian era is a sublimation of a phase of this conflict, intermingled with glorification of the Eleusinian mysteries. During this struggle Zeus, himself, foremost of the Olympian gods was, like motals, subject to the control of the two goddesses, Moirae and Parcae, in whose power rested the destiny of mankind. In the Hesiodic Theognia, that magnificent attempt to place the gods in their chronological order, despite its incoherence and confusion "arising seemingly from diversity of authorship as well as diversity of age," (History of Greece, Grote) the Marxist can clearly percieve this titanic struggle. The bestial malignancy that pervades the works of Euripedes Aeschylus and Sophocles—the great tragic poets—appears as ferocious outbursts of insanity unless viewed in the light of the struggle of the patriarchy to consolidate its power over the matriarchy.

THIS conflict, altho manifesting itself as a sex struggle, was, as Marx observed, the first class struggle in human society, and it culminated in the victory of the patriarchy, descent by female lineage gave way to descent by male lineage and the paternal right of inheritance of property. Granted this victory, strict monogamy was next introduced, but for women only.

Property thenceforth became the dominant factor of family life, and, as Morgan says, "sufficiently powerful to touch the organic structure of society." (Ancient Society, page 399.)

So monogamy, instead of being inspired from above, is seen to be the result of the sordid and mercenary desire of man to transmit property to his offspring.

THIS change in social structure has far-reaching effects. Society at a low stage of development is, as we have seen, under the domination of sexual ties. With the development of the productivity of labor, private property, which is based upon the exploitation of the labor-power of others, comes into existence; the division of society into classes, the impossibility of reconciling the old social system with the new productive forces becomes apparent and the old society, based upon sexual ties, gives way to a new form of organization created for the specific purpose of perpetuating class rule—the state. This latter form, instead of being based upon family groups, is organized upon a territorial basis.

With the establishment of the state, which heralds the fall of the matriarchy, the class struggle no longer assumes the form of a sex struggle for the reason that both the slave class and the ruling class comprise both men and women.

Degradation of Woman.

THE condition of women in ancient Greece is the classic example of woman's position in the monogamous family and is concisely stated by the orator, Demosthenes, who says: "We marry women to have legitimate children and to have faithful guardians of our homes, we maintain concubines for our daily service and comfort and courtesans for the enjoyment of love." Every one of the foremost men of Greece had his concubines and courtesans, just as the leading lights of the smug, church-going, cathedral building bourgeoisie of today have their retinue of kept women.

Prostitution develops for the first time under monogamy. The dependent condition of woman makes necessary the selling of her charms as a trade.

Adultery also appears, as many women, revolting at the neglect of their husbands, seek solace in the arms of a lover, so that despite the institution of the monogamic form of marriage by man to guarantee the legitimacy of his offspring "the certainty of parentage rests as of old on moral conviction at best and in order to solve the unreconciliable contradiction, the code of Napoleon decreed in its article 312: 'The child conceived during marriage has for its father—the husband.' This is the last result of three thousand years of monogamy." (Engels' Origin of the Family, page 82.)

IF the moralists of today consider the sex organization of the savages and barbegians immoral what would be the "heathen's" judgment of this society?

Under the old gentile organization marriage between individuals of different generations is prohibited. In our society it is a common thing to see a rich old roue of sixty have for a wife a young girl of twenty. Such a union is solemnized and sanctified by all the pomps of church and state, and should one intimate that any given girl who enters such a union is a prostitute he would get a term in prison for slander. Yet I will insist that such a one is a prostitute and refuse to believe otherwise until I know of a rich young girl of twenty marrying a sixty-year-old pauper.

The average girl in this society looks forward to marriage as her life's occupation and endeavors to make the best possible bargain. When she gets married her relatives and friends do not ask "Did she get a healthy, decent man?" but "Did she do well?" If her husband is able to furnish her with a luxurious home and income she will be envied, even tho he be saturated with syphillis; while if he be not able to offer the utmost security the marriage will be deplored even tho he be physically and mentally healthy.

IT is the business of most women in this society to sell themselves for a comfortable living; to sell oneself constitutes prostitution so, in the last analysis, marriage today remains as it has been since the institution of monogamy, simply legalized prostitution.

In this society woman is not regarded as an end in herself, like man but solely as a means of ministering to his appetite. The ideal wife is the one who does everything her husband desires and nothing more. She is merely an appendage to another being, instead of existing as a separate being.

But few words are necessary to deal with the wide-spread domestic strife in capitalist society—hundreds of thousands of couples existing together in the closest intimacy who mutually detest each other, and women who, altho they do not love their husbands, meekly submit to their advances as part of their "wifely duty." As George Sand declares: "The love of hogs is less vile and debasing than the love of such creatures."

Woman's Rebellion.

WOMAN, if she dares face the facts of her condition, must either loathe herself, or rebel.

Many women, even of the ruling class, do rebel, but as the education of the female sex among this class is mainly directed upon the development of their sentiments, thru music, literature, art, poetry and other studies that tend to increase nervousness, they are, for the most part, incapable of comprehending the fundamental cause of their degradation and when they organize at all it is in strictly sex organizations and societies where they discuss the horrors of a "man-made world." In their stupidity they even form political organizations upon a sex basis, like the woman's party thru which they impotently strive for some vague "equality."

THERE was historical justification for a sex struggle during the transition from the matriarchy to the patriarchy, when classes existed upon that basis, but there isn't any justification for it now. Classes exist independently of sex lines; individuals of both sexes belong to all classes. This fact is plain to everyone who observes the vicious opposition of bourgeois women's political organizations to the demands of the working women, such as the program of the woman's party which would deprive working women of protective legislation on the hypocritical pretext that men and women should be absolutely equal before the law.

THE women of the working class have not been subjected to the vitiating influences of bourgeois "higher institutions of learning," consequently many of them can be reached with the proletarian message of the class struggle. Modern industry throws thousands upon thousands of women into the ranks of wage workers where an ever increasing number come to realize the necessity of struggling side by side with the male workers against capitalist tyranny. In the home the proletarian wife learns that it is her duty to aid her husband in his struggle to maintain a decent living standard and instead of organizing into sex organizations the advanced women of the working class create movements that will aid in prosecuting the class struggle. In these struggles they come to realize the necessity of fighting side by side with the men of their own class for the purpose of accomplishing not only their emancipation from sex slavery, but the emancipation of the human race from all forms of servitude.

SO, while the feminist enthusiasts of the bourgeoisie struggle for "equality," the class conscious woman of the proletariat will persistently wage the class struggle toward a new organization of society—a society that will remove absolutely every barrier that makes one human being dependent upon any single individual.

In this struggle woman takes her former place, occupied in the early history of the race, as companion and comrade of man. The triumph of the class struggle of today will bring the human race to a higher stage of Communism based upon the productive forces of today. That achieved, people will enter into any agreement they desire and will be able to terminate it at the will of either party. The mercenary sordidness that now prevails will no longer exist. With the shattering of the class fetters that enthrall humanity our lives can be so regulated that every individual will be able to attain the highest possible intellectual and moral development.

BUT, you may ask, what will be the outcome of such a change and will the monogamian family survive it? To that question I can think of no better answer than that given by Engels in his "Origin of the Family:" "What we may anticipate about the adjustment of sexual relations after the impending downfall of capitalist production is mostly of a negative nature and mainly confined to elements that will disappear. But what will be added? That will be decided after a new generation has come to maturity: a race of men who never in their lives had any occasion for buying with money or other economic means of power the surrender of a woman; a race of women who have never had any occasion for surrendering to a man for any other reason but love, or for refusing to surrender for fear of economic consequences. Once such people are in the world they will not give a moment's thot to what we today believe should be their course. They will follow their own practice and fashion their own public opinion about the individual practice of every person—only this and nothing more."

COMMUNIST WOMEN AT WORK.

Carrying the Message of Communism Into the Darkest Dungeon of the Working Class.

By KATE GITLOW.

IT was dreary and cold after a heavy snowstorm. The streets in the lower New York East-Side were dirty, the crossings were filled with pools of dirty water. One had to walk above their shoe tops in water in order to get across the street. Two Communist women hurried through the dark streets to a meeting which was to take place in one of the tenements of the poorest neighborhood. Many women were expected to attend this meeting. After searching in the dark streets and tenement hallways which are kept in terrible condition they found the meeting place. It was a typical workers' home with an overworked mother and several older and smaller children and young folks, with only a few women, but Communists never get lost or discouraged. They know it is hard work especially to awaken the working class women. They are always sure of their work, and are always determined to carry the light of Communism to the masses of the workers.

The meeting planned to be a women's meeting turned into a propaganda meeting for the young folks. They spoke about the school opportunities after school for the workers' young, about their jobs, about the union, about political parties, of course about our Workers Party, the Communist Party. The young and old listened to the Communist message with great eagerness.

It was getting late they reminded themselves for they were all workers and had to rise early the next morning and so they leave again crossing the filthy water pools and shivering with the cold, but the two Communists are happy. An evening not lost, good work done for Communism. So come on, comrades, let us pledge ourselves on this International Women's Day to carry the Red Star of Communism to the darkest dungeons, to turn them into light which will overthrow the capitalist dictatorship and establish the workers' dictatorship.

RUSSIA'S WOMEN TELL OF LENIN IN APRIL, 1917

Remember His Arrival in Petrograd

ROSOV, a working woman, related the story of Lenin's arrival in Petrograd in April, 1917.

"The entire working class of Petrograd poured out to welcome Lenin. The crowds teemed like an ant heap; knocked against each other and pressed forward; children were lifted high over the heads of the crowd; rousing hurrahs thundered. Behind the auto slowly forcing its way thru the multitude an old worker ran and thrust a red handkerchief into Lenin's hand: 'Take it, Comrade Lenin, I wore it around my neck, and a have nothing else. Keep it and stand by our cause.' Lenin put the handkerchiew into his pocket and to his last breath he thought of the words of the old worker and defended the cause of the proletariat."

The working women Kusnetsov described how a peasant woman greeted Lenin at a meeting held in 1918 by working women and peasant women.

"The Soviet government took the land from the estate owners and gave it to us. I have a son serving on the front who is defending the conquests of the revolution. As soon as the Soviet republic is attacked, I will be the first to go to the front to my son, gun in hand, in order to defend the workers' and peasants' government."

Lenin stretched out his hand to the peasant woman, who took it and said solemnly: "Comrade Lenin, not to me alone are you giving your hand; but to all the poor in the village."

The working woman Denikia wrote from the village of Gortsch to Nadyezhda Konstantinovna: "Comrade Lenin also noticed us women, we the forgotten ones, the women who are sorrowful even unto death. He gained us equal rights and showed us the way to build up our state, and we are courageously following this way. In this barren village we convene Soviets and fight for the rights and protection of the proletariat, and our struggle in this remote spot is hard indeed."

Kotov, a working woman, writes:

"I never saw Vladimir Ilyitch, but I know him and love him as only a mother can know and love her child The remembrance of our dearly beloved Lenin lives and will always live in my heart, will always fill my whole life, which thru Ilyitch became so bright, so free, and so full of joy. With the millions of proletarians I say: Ilyitch, you are our leader. You led us to a new life, and your memory will never die."

COOLIDGE PLEDGES PROFIT LOYALTY

1847—A Spectre:—1925—A World Army

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

RARELY a day passes that the capitalist press does not carry some reference to the doings of the Communist International. Usually, columns of space are devoted to the campaigns of the Comintern and to the alleged plots attributed to it by the imaginative hack writers of the disturbed bourgeoisie. Without any bragging it can be truthfully claimed that the Communist International is the most formidable revolutionary organization of the working class that ever challenged the world power of the capitalist class.

IT is only five years old, a mere infant historically speaking. Yet it has accomplished much during those five years. It is true that as yet its banner flies only over one sixth of the earth's surface. Communists believe that is some accomplishment, tho social democrats make little of it. American socialists used to thank their stars when they elected a socialist mayor in some little western city or when some capitalist politician, swaying with the popular breeze, advocated municipal ownership of coal yards or garbage collecting.

BRITISH socialists sung songs of joy when the king's capitalists graciously allowed them to hold office until the empire was out of the jungle. All the socialist parties on the continent of Europe with hardly any exception were willing to perform some menial task for the master class and were proud of it. The most stupid organ of American socialism, the Milwaukee Leader still holds up pauperised and mendicant Austria, hapless foundling of the international bankers, as a sample of what moderate socialism has accomplished. But tho Communists are reasonably satisfied with the success of the Communist movement, they realize that the hardest task is yet before them. The most obstinate citadels of international capitalism are yet to be taken.

IT was no easy job to build up the Communist International outside of Russia. There, thanks to the great Lenin and to the small but well disciplined and capable army of Marxists he had trained, both in word and act, thru many years of battle with all the powers of Czardom and against the Czar's allies in Europe, the Communist Party flourished, tho not without the inevtiable setbacks that a revolutionary party meets in the most placid time and particularly in the midst of the greatest revolution in all human history.

IN other countries the sections of the Communist International were organized around various groups that were suffering from all kinds of intellectual pipe dreams, but which were at that time captured by the achievement of the Russian revolution to such an extent that the theoretical difference which afterwards became impossible of reconciliation appeared of little consequence. But many of the left wing socialists who broke with the Second International did not find the Third a comfortable resting place either.

THE Communist International soon made it quite clear that its congresses were not mere pilgrimmages to the Holy Land, during which the faithful observe the spirit of the sacred law, but leaving the consecrated ground, resume their old sinful ways, confident that another visit, like a confession in the catholic church will clear them of all their sins. The Comintern meant business. So the odds

CAPITALISM forces the working-class to forge its own weapons—its weapons for the struggle against it.

THE Third (Communist) International is the most mighty weapon in the arsenal of the proletariat. Lenin, the greatest armorer since Marx, hammered and tempered it. Where the working class has learned to use it in the red battle-line that encircles the globe, it smashes great gaps in the strongest redoubts of capitalism.

THE Second International almost buried the world's workers in its ruins when it collapsed in 1914. The Russian revolution led by Lenin and the Bolsheviks rescued the working class from the debris but it was not until the formal organization of the Communist International on March 5, 1919, that the revolutionary working class began to understand the full extent of the treachery of the Kautskyian reformists—to see that their distortion and betrayal of Marxism had made their final treachery inevitable.

SAID Lenin in 1915: "The same Kautsky who in 1909 wrote a book on the approach of the era of revolutions and on the connection between War and Revolution, and who in 1912 signed the Basel manifesto on the duty of taking revolutionary advantage of any future war is now trying in all sorts of ways, to justify and to 'deck out' the Chauvinist variety of 'socialism,' and, like Plekhanoff, joins the bourgeoisie in pooh-poohing all idea of revolution and all steps for an immediate revolutionary struggle . . . But the working class cannot attain its world-revolutionary object without waging a ruthless war against such apostasy, such backboneless, such subserviency to opportunism, and such unparalelled vulgarization of Marxism. Kautsky is not an accident, but a social product of the contradictions inherent in the Second International, which combined lip-loyalty to Marxism with actual submission to opportunism." (From a pamphlet entitled, "Socialism and the War," by Lenin and Zinoviev, published in Geneva, 1915.)

THE Kautskyians had completely misunderstood or suppressed the real causes of the war. Their false theoretical position made their support of their respective national governments a labor of love. They outdid all the other petty bourgeois groups in their efforts for "victory." They had not understood even the plain fact that the world war was the result of rivalry for division of the world between the great powers or the role finance-capital.

IN 1916, Lenin had quoted Kautsky's definition of imperialism: "Imperialism is the product of a highly developed industrial capitalism. It embodies the endeavor of every industrialist capitalist nation to annex or to subject all the extensive AGRARIAN areas, irrespective of the nations by which they are peopled," characterized it as "even beneath bourgeois criticism," and gave his own, now familiar to every Communist student:

"Imperialism is capitalism in that stage of development in which monopolies and financial capital have attained a preponderating influence, the export of capital has acquired great importance, the international trusts have begun the partition of the world, and the biggest capitalist countries have completed the division of the entire terrestial world among themselves."

'CAL' PROMISES TO DEFEND RICH; MUM ON LABOR

Preaches "Sacredness" of Private Property

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 4.—President Coolidge defended the "sacredness of private property" in his inaugural address, delivered shortly after noon today.

In outlining the policies which he shall pursue in the next four years, Coolidge, in words that were only thinly veiled, assured the rich of the land that he will continue to guard their interests.

Praises the Constitution

Coolidge praised the constitution, because it gave people the right to own and exploit property, he expressed his thanks that the supreme court had been saved because it safeguards property, he spoke for lower taxes on large incomes, and promised that the domain of America will continue to be extended, at the same time that a strong navy safeguards the property owners at home.

"It is absurd to suppose that this country is envious of those who are already prosperous," Coolidge said in his defense of the rich exploiters. "It is not property, but the right to hold property both great and small, that our constitution guarantees. All owners of property are charged with a service. These rights and duties have been revealed, thru the conscience of society, to have a divine sanction."

Spills Texation Dope

"The method of raising revenue ought not to impede the transaction of business; it ought to encourage it. We cannot finance the country, we cannot improve social conditions, thru any system of injustice, even if we attempt to inflict it upon the rich. The wise and correct course to follow in taxation and all economic legislation is not to destroy those who have already secured success."

To the "silent strikebreaker" the constitution of the United States is a good one because it allows the capitalists to exploit the workers.

Looks to the Past

And thruout his inaugural speech, Coolidge looked constantly into the past for a justification of the system of exploitation. "Our most important problem," he said, "is not to secure new advantages, but to maintain those which we already possess." Coolidge was plainly here, as in his entire speech, talking to the ruling class of employers.

"Our country ought not to fail to maintain such a military force as comports with the dignity and security of a great people," Coolidge said, "It ought to be a balanced force, intensely modern, capable of defense by sea and land, beneath the surface and in the air. We have recently committed ourselves by covenants with the other great nations to a limitation of sea power. AS ONE RESULT OF THIS, OUR NAVY RANKS LARGER IN COMPARISON, THAN IT EVER DID BEFORE."

Stands Against Workers' Rule

Coolidge told how the capitalist system was built up, and pledged to do his utmost to prevent as long as possible, the ultimate triumph of the workers. "We have extended our do-

SAYS THAT RED ARMY OF SOVIET RUSSIA FORCES RECOGNITION BEFORE ARMS CONFERENCE CALL

By Federated Press Service

WASHINGTON, March 4.—President Coolidge is taking a renewed interest in the Russian question—so much so that one of the most conservative press correspondents in Washington has ventured to syndicate an article declaring that diplomatic relations between the United States and Russia will be resumed this year if the Soviet government modifies its external policy in certain particulars.

What these particulars are, is not set forth, but the assumption is logical that the Soviet Union will be asked to pledge itself to prevent hostile propaganda, of Russian origin, within the territory of the United States.

Red Army Cannot Be Ignored.

What has just occurred seems to be this: That a false interpretation placed on an answer to a question, at a recent press conference, made the president appear to declare the Hughes policy his own for the future. Coolidge is correcting that false impression, without making definite pledges. He has called in Sen. Borah for consultation in the past few days, and it is to be presumed that Borah took the opportunity to explain to Coolidge once more, in detail, the reasons why the administration should now face the Russian problem and begin to arrange for discussions with Moscow.

It is a safe guess that the false

For the Final Assault!

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

Chairman of the Workers (Communist) Party.

For many years the Second International had attempted to lead the international proletariat in the bettle against capitalism, but its betrayal of the workers in the world war, and in the revolutionary events ensuing, tore away its mask and shewed it to be not an enemy of the capitalist system, but its effective defender.

Then came the Communist International. The Communist International is now marshalling its forces for the final assault upon capitalism. Its advent marks the beginning of the end of the capitalist system. All revolutionary workers must and will support the Communist International.

TURK CABINET OUT AS REVOLT OF KURDS GAINS

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 4.—The Turkish cabinet has resigned following a defeat in parliament. Premier Fethy Bey will continue in office only until a new premier can be selected. It is thought probable that Ismet Pasha will return to power.

The revolt of the Kurds has gained headway, the tribes of Sheik Said having secured possession of much territory. Violent fighting is taking place in the town of Chemishgezek, west of Khozat, and around Palou.

PAN-AMERICAN ANTI-IMPERIALIST LEAGUE APPEALS TO CONFERENCE OF MARINE TRANSPORT WORKERS

The importance of the marine transport workers in the revolutionary movement is well known, and as capitalist imperialism is the outstanding foe of the world's toiling masses, the following communication sent by the Pan-American Anti-Imperialist League to the conference of the marine transport workers being held at New Orleans, marks an opening effort to unite these oppressed marine morkers for the revolutionary struggle.

The DAILY WORKER has engaged a special correspondent in New Orleans to report the conference, called recently on the initiative of the Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union of the I. W. W.: The letter of the Pan-American Anti-Imperialist League is as follows:

Fellow workers and Comrades:

Greetings!

It is with the sincere hope that something of permanent value for the transport workers of all countries may come out of your convention, that we address you this communication.

The struggle of the marine transport workers has been a bitter one. The hardships they have had to endure and the indignities they have been forced to suffer are known to all. Unremitting toil, miserable wages and abominable conditions of life and labor have been their lot from time immemorial. With the unprecedented trustification in the

A World Organization!

By C. E. RUTHENBERG

Executive Secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party.

It is a fitting thing that in celebrating the Sixth Anniversary of the Communist International, the workers here learn that the Communist International is not an organization of Russian, German, Italian or even European workers, but a world organization which is guiding the struggles of the revolutionary movement in the United States at it does elsewhere in the world.

The Communist International is the general staff, the leading organization of the struggle to free American workers from the exploitation and oppression of capitalism; that the workers of America may look to it for help and guidance as do the workers the world over.

Hail to the leadership of the Communist International!

SECTION OF THE TRADE UNION EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE

UNEMPLOYMENT COUNCILS DUAL, SAYS FARRINGTON

Expulsion Plus Hunger Face Union Miners

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 3.—An unemployment council is now a "dual union" in the eyes of Frank Farrington and his flunkey Walter Nesbit. Any organization that is designed to benefit the working class comes under the ban of these capitalist lackeys. It is significant that no such ukase has yet been delivered against the ku klux klan.

The wrath of the officialdom was aroused thru the action of the miners in southern Illinois in organizing unemploment councils and appealing for a special state convention to consider the question of modifying the state agreement relative to sharing work.

Bound Hand And Foot

In a circular letter to all local unions in District 12, Walter Nesbit, secretary-treasurer of the district organization advised the members of the union that even a special convention could not modify the agreement with the operators. The workers are tied hand and foot to their masters. They must take their medicine no matter how unpleasant it may be.

The letter concludes: "It was also decided that the formation of any organization of unemployed would be considered as a dual organization and the advocates of same must abandon their attempts to form such organizations within the United Mine Workers of America. This is the action of the district executive board and I am hereby notifying all members accordingly."

The resolution which elicited the above remarkable decision originated in O'Fallon and was sent out by Local Union No. 705. It is as follows:

O'Fallon, Ill., Jan. 7, 1925.

To All Local Unions of Dist. No. 12:

Whereas, Local Union 705, U. M. W. of A., of O'Fallon, Ill., has for the past months been trying to get work for the miners who were thrown idle by mines closed, according to the 13th section of our agreement, both by petition and also by taking up two divisions of work cases, and under said agreement no decision has been made by our officials up to the present date.

THEREFORE, Be It Resolved, That this Local Union, No. 705, U. M. W. of A., of O'Fallon, Ill., is in favor of organizing the unemployed miners in District No. 12, by electing a committee to go to each local union in this Sub-District and asking their co-operation in endeavoring to stop this unemployment, and to give all members of District No. 12 a chance to earn a living. Also to send all local unions in this district this appeal for action at once on behalf of the 100 per cent membership.

In explaining same will say that on April 15 the Taylor mine working under the jurisdiction of Local Union No. 705, voted unanimously for the division of work with the Carbon men and it went to the executive board and there has been no decision rendered on same. On Sept. 17 a resolution was sent to said board asking them to take action on placing the idle men in mines then working, with the Coal Operators in accordance with section No. 12 of the district agreement. After waiting 30 days the local union circularized the local unions asking for a state convention to take up the unemployment question on a division of work. But also failed to get results.

On Oct. 2 at Taylor mine the men voted unanimously to take in the St. Ellen men. The case went to the board which met two days in November but did not take up the case. They met again in December and failed again to take up the case.

We are now asking the rank and file to take action so as to relieve the distress of all the members unemployed and keep a 100 per cent organization in Illinois.

Very truly yours,
THOMAS GEMMEL, President.
CHRIST MEINKOTH, Secretary.

TAILORS' UNION HOLDS THE FORT IN PARKERSBURG

Scabs Hired, But Only to Be Fired

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., March 4.—The fifth week of the lockout of the Journeymen Tailors' Union by the National Woolen Mills of this city, finds the situation unchanged, the tailors holding out one hundred per cent strong for recognition of the union, before they will return to work.

The officials of the mills have offered to pay the union scale of wages if the men and women will return to work as individuals, but the union members seem to see thru this spider and fly trick and will not be gulled by such rosy promises.

Scabs Let Go.

After frantic advertising for help the mill was enabled to open a few weeks ago with about twenty-five scab workers, but it appears that they proved unsatisfactory and were let out after the first week. The management then tried to have the work handled by out of town firms, but it is said the workers in factories where the work was sent, on hearing of the lockout here, refused to handle the work and once again the bosses are trying to get workers for the factory, but without apparent success, only a few responding to the advertisements for help.

The Journeymen Tailors' Union is receiving the moral and financial support of the railway and other unions here, and as the National Woolen Mills cater to the trade of the working class, who all seem to be on the side of the locked-out union, it is easy to foresee, with the spring trade opening, the mill owners cannot hold out much longer.

The Woman Worker in the Class Struggle

By HARRISON GEORGE.

IT is well that all who claim the honor of being Communist should not foget, and it would be better if they would engrave upon their consciousness, the observation of Lenin, "The proletarian revolution can be victorious only if millions upon millions of the toiling women participate in the struggle."

Particularly is this factor of highest importance in the developed machine industry of the United States. Here, the relation of woman to production is steadily increasing in importance. While statistics concerning woman's part as a wage earner are very unreliable and incomplete with some exceptions; firstly, owing to the vague method of census computation and, secondly, the obvious desire of the capitalist government to cover up the increasing exploitation of women wage workers, still the amazing fact stands forth that there are shown to be 8,549,511 women gainfully employed in the United States, representing 21.2 per cent of the employed population.

No Revolution Without Women Workers.

The proletarian revolution, it is clear, will never succeed if this great army of women and girl workers are ignored. Hence, the extreme importance of carrying on a continuous and intensive work to bring this force which may be used against the workers' struggle, into the battle on the side of its class liberator, the Workers (Communist) Party.

The problem of the woman worker, while like the youth worker, the Negro worker, and the immigrant worker, in that is has its own peculiar aspects which cause it to demand special treatment, is, none the less, essentially a part of the class struggle waged between capitalist exploiters as a class and the exploited working classes.

It is well to remember, in the presence of various movements which aim to liberate woman as a sex, that it is precisely and only in the land where the proletariat has, by armed revolution, conquered state power, that woman has attained the full dignity of an equal in the social scheme, from top to bottom, in politics, industry, diplomacy, warfare, athletics, literature and all forms of culture. Only in Soviet Russia is woman made entirely independent of man economically, and, therefore, only in Soviet Russia has woman become man's equal and, after ages of shameful subjection, his comrade in the fullest sense of the word.

Six Million Wage Workers Are Women.

That the problem of the liberation of women must be involved in the larger problem of the liberation of the working class is seen from the fact that no less than 70 per cent of the 8,500,000 women reported gainfully employed by the 1920 census, are women who work for wages. This army of women wage earners is 6,047,922, and these represent, moreover, a large percent of the lowest paid section of the working class. The supervisory and professional salaried class, are only 710,000, while the women who are employers or are self-employed, such as milliners, tailoresses, etc., constitute 1,790,000.

The duty, therefore, of the leading organ of proletarian emancipation, the Communist movement, is to strive to destroy the illusion, consciously or unconsciously fostered by bourgeois feminist groups, that the liberation of woman can be accomplished inside the framework of the capitalist system and without its overthrowal. For this reason, the efforts of the Communist movement must be based upon the winning into active participation in the class struggle of these millions of working women in the factories and shops.

Communism Must Give Them Expression.

To destroy their illusions of any remedy within capitalism, the Communist Party must become the outstanding means of expression for these women workers, these millions slaving in the factories, the schools, the hospitals, telephone, postal and clerical and administrative services; and as this great section of the proletariat develops its spokesmen and leaders of struggle, must yield them such full recognition as their merit deserves. We must not forget the remark of a leader of the Communist International, that the problem of woman's participation in the struggle as an equal, is to convince men of its necessity, and to abolish the heritage of capitalism of the myth of woman's inherent disability.

This necessity of transforming the millions of working women from patient slaves of capitalism to fighters, class conscious, courageous and devoted, for proletarian revolution, should become more and more obvious as capitalist economy itself brings woman into the sphere of its direct exploitation beside male wage workers.

Only One-Fifteenth Organized.

War and post war industry has thrown millions of female workers into the army of industry, and only the utter blindness or indifference of the reactionary leadership of the American unions can account for the fact that, while in 1920, one-fifth of the American working class had become members of unions, only one-fifteenth of the working women had been organized in the basic organs of class struggle—the trade unions.

Moreover, this slim percentage of organization is bulked largely in a few industries, such as clothing, leather and shoe, and the transportation industry; and with the tragic losses of all unions since 1920, much of this was lost, barring perhaps the single exception of the retained membership of women unionists in the clothing industry.

Unionize All Women Workers!

It is the clear duty of Communists and militant unionists, in those industries where woman is engaged as a co-worker, to demand admittance on equal footing of these women as fellow workers in the union, where such admission is now denied, and where no disability to membership exists, to press the matter of unionization of all women workers as a first requirement for militant struggle against the employers.

It is notable that the highest percentage of unionized women to the number employed in the particular craft, is in the professions such as actors, musicians and teachers, particularly the actresses, while whole armies of factory operatives, domestic servants and the terribly exploited hospital nurses, whose sympathy for human suffering is exploited by supposed philanthropic institutions, are wholly without the fundamental protection of all workers, a union.

No One Cares But the Communists.

The bringing of organization to these millions of workers must be the work of the Communists. No other social group has either the vision or the will for the task. And with the steady and patient effort to enlighten and mibilize these women toilers for the historic task of their class, must go the effort to initiate and increase through their activity, the enlistment of the sympathy and support of the petty bourgeois women to be found in tenant unions, and the women and girls of the poor farming population, in to whose wretched lives the militant revolutionary women of the cities must bring by personal and organizational contact, the message of liberation of the Workers (Communist) Party, the friend and emancipator of all oppressed.

Women of America, the task is before you, and you, yourselves must strike the blow to free yourselves from the shackles of wage slavery!

The International of Working Women.

You are not alone. Already in the Orient, the veiled women of Islam have thrown aside at the call of Communism, the stifling traditions of centuries, the Chinese girl treads with unbound feet and clear courageous eyes the road to the new mecca—Moscow, the women of the Ganges, living under prescriptions which were ancient when the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock, turn their faces toward Moscow as toward a shrine.

In Europe, the tramp of women and men workers sounds together upon the streets, heralding approaching revolution, and here, too, the day must come and come soon, when the women of America will be called upon to tear to shreds every restriction laid upon them by capitalism, and to raise and bear bravely onward the red banner of proletarian revolution! Hail to the day!

Will More Language Branches Step Up and Do the Same?

In spite of language difficulties and lack of labor organization, two Finnish branches of the Workers Party show their willingness to boost along the work of the T. U. E. L. in their respective localities.

EUREKA, Cal., Feb. 27.—While we cannot hold a benefit entertainment for the Trade Union Educational League in February, we will be able to do so in the near future. The membership here will give their wholehearted support to such an affair, notwithstanding the fact that only one or two of the Finnish branch here speak English, and the English branch of the party has just been organized. But you will hear from us further regarding the organization of a branch of the league.

CONNEAUT, Ohio, March 2.—We are only a small branch of Finnish comrades here, and the locality is small. Therefore, while it is difficult to organize a branch of the league here just at this time, yet we will hold an entertainment or dance and turn over the proceeds to you to help carry on the work in other larger centers where branches of the league have been or are being organized.

Sauce for Goose Members, Sauce for Gander Hutcheson

MARTINS FERRY, Ohio.— Local Union 1567 of the U. B. of C. & J. of A., of Martins Ferry, passed the resolution sent out by Local Union No. 2140 of Detroit condemning the expulsion policy of Hutcheson. These brothers feel that as they are required to live up to the letter as well as the spirit of the constitution of the organization, the officials of the union should be required to do likewise.

No Upholsterers' Union in New Orleans, Says One from Chicago

NEW ORLEANS.—It has remained for a member of Upholsterers' Union, No. 24, Chicago, to discover that his industry is not organized in New Orleans, despite the fact that there are many members of that trade employed in the various shops here. Jack Senjell of that local, after vainly seeking work at his trade with a union card in his pocket, reported the fact to the central trades and labor body. No effort as yet has been made to organize the craft.

SIXTY GERMAN WORKERS KILLED IN BLAST WHILE MAKING EXPLOSIVES

RHEINSDORF ANHALT, Germany, March 4.—Sixty workers were killed today and many injured in an explosion which wrecked a factory where explosives were manufactured.

Pennsylvania Local of Carpenters Acts

ARDMORE, Pa., March 4.— Local 465, Carpenters' Union, of this city at their last regular meeting endorsed the Detroit resolution protesting against the expulsion of Reynolds and others, and demanding their reinstatement. Is it possible to let us know thru the T. U. E. L. page of the DAILY WORKER how many local unions have gone on record against Hutcheson's expulsion policy?

BEGIN A. C. W. EXPULSIONS IN CHICAGO

Sam Dragonsky Victim in Local 39

The campaign of expulsions of the left wing from the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, begun by the Hillman administration to prevent interference with his policy of class collaboration with the bosses, has reached Chicago and had its first victim, Sam Dragonsky, sacrificed to official treachery at the meeting of Local 39, Tuesday night.

After a conspiracy to keep Sam Dragonsky out of work for nineteen months, a forewarning of viler things to come was given him even before the charges were preferred when the union employment office informed Dragonsky that it had instructions" not to give him any work.

The Reign of Terror Begins.

When the members of Local 39 gathered at the meeting, they found that all the officials possible to gather up, together with the gangster crowd were on hand to carry out the Hillman-Levin policy, by tricks if possible, by violence if necessary. Business agents, who control the jobs and thus have power of discrimination, were plentifully present from other locals.

The farcical nature of the proceeding became evident when Dragonsky was refused the right, supposedly "guaranteed," of having the charges against him presented in writing. This was the beginning. The charges were not given any attention even after they were made, and their sole content was that Dragonsky was alleged to be a "painter's contracter"—which he easily disproved.

His Highness, Levin, is Offended.

But none of the "prosecution"—all officials—had anything to say about the charges. They were not spoken of at all. Instead every official who spoke, dealt solely with the peculiar offense of "disloyalty to Sam Levin" and lese majeste to the excellencies of the official family. It appeared to be a case of an absolute despot, surrounded by sycophantic courtiers, beheading a vile commoner for daring to snicker at a royal personage.

All officials who spoke, spoke for expulsion. All members who spoke, spoke without exception for acquittal, and pointed out that the union officials expelled Dragonsky because he was a Communist. They objected that a union must include workers of all opinions, and pointed out that the officials' policy of class collaboration was periling the union and the expulsions were being carried out to prevent rebellion against such policy from the rank and file.

Half of Local Afraid to Vote.

However, with the terrorizing machine present, over half the members were afraid to vote, and with these abstensions, the motion to expel carried by 99 to 221.

An amusing comparison is seen in the treatment of the charges preferred by the local in the joint board against Business Agent Weinstein, alias Chalatnik, who two weeks ago broke up the meeting of the local.

The joint board refused the charges, saying that "when Weinstein broke up the meeting, he was acting as a rank and file member," and that it was the local which should handle the charges. But when charges were bruited in the local, it was objected that Weinstein "when he broke up the meeting, was acting as business agent," consequently, he should be tried by the joint board. This chameleon protection does not serve any left winger, however.

On to Rank and File Victory!

The membership of the Amalgamated express the opinion that the fight has only begun, and that protest on a national scale with demands for the reinstatement of members expelled by such official perfidy, shall ring thruoutout the union until the Hillman policy is beaten.

The Passing of Mussolini

Mussolini has quit under fire.

Italy shakes again as new revelations linking him with cowardly murder and hired terror of the basest kind are made public.

When the murder of Matteotti threatened to unseat the paranoic upon whom world capitalism has showered praises, we said that his power was on the decline and that within a year he would be either one of the host of refugees from the vengeance of the masses or dead at the hands of his own followers. We have no reason to revise this statement now.

Mussolini has passed out from the world arena, and the social forces that brought him into the limelight continue to pound at the gates of Italian capitalism.

Under his rule the national economy went from bad to worse—a sure sign for any Marxist that fascism would fail. The inevitable accompaniment of the breakdown of production and exchange was mass discontent which Mussolini put down with a heavy hand. The hand was trembling all the time, but Mussolini's admirers, intoxicated by the sight of what was announced as a great middle-class victory, failed to see the utter impossibility of stability in a country ruled by a small group to whose interests those of the great majority of the population were opposed. Mussolini could not repair the damages of the war; he could not rebuild industry and commerce, he could not bring the clashing social forces into rhythmic motion any more than any other ruler can whose first allegiance is to capitalism.

Italian fascism may live yet a while, but it is a faded flower whose bloodstained petals are drooping to decay. Fascism put the emphasis on personal leadership and the little Bonaparte is ill with "influenza." One of the symptoms of influenza is cold feet.

The Italian Communist Party has weathered the terror of fascism in splendid fashion. Under the guidance of the Communist International it closed its ranks and went straight to the Italian working class. It is a mass party today and the greatest political force in Italy. It has been steeled by the struggle and now, following the abdication of Mussolini, will challenge Italian capitalism for power. Its influence is best shown by the fact that all during the destruction of labor headquarters, the raiding and suppression of printing plants, the mass murders and tortures, the imprisonment of thousands of members of labor unions and of the Communist Party, it has remained the sole organized resistance to fascism.

This because like all Communist parties, it has no interests separate and apart from those of the working class and peasantry.

Philippine "Fanaticism" and Freedom

These "outbreaks of religious fanatics," as the imperialist press terms them, are becoming more frequent in the Philippines. A dispatch from Manila tells of the killing of seven Colorums and the wounding of three of the constabulary in a fight which was still in progress as the dispatch was sent.

About the only truth in such news is that the natives who fall before the rifles and machine guns of the American forces are members of some religious sect. It would be just as accurate, however, to say that the Moroccan war is a religious uprising because the Riffs are Mohammedans when the plain truth is that they are resisting the invasion of their country by a Spanish army.

The Filipinos are a conquered people. Their lands are in the hands of American exploiters—lumber and sugar capitalists. In many of the more primitive districts there is no doubt that religion and the desire for freedom are closely intermingled. That the district where the present fighting is in progress has not hitherto witnessed any clashes between the natives and the guardians of American capitalist interests is significant. It means that even in sections where the conquest has been accepted till now the natives are growing tired of the yoke.

These conflicts in the Philippines are part of the movement thruout the Far East against western imperialism altho with but little organic connection with it. They are uprisings of peasants and laborers against brutal labor conditions and open robbery.

In other words, they are a part of the struggles of the oppressed the world over no matter how much they may be disguised by national and religious coloring. They must be understood as such and supported by the working class of the United States whose rulers war in the same way on the workers here at home.

Unemployed Relief and the Open Shop

Unemployment councils, organizations of jobless members of the union, formed to formulate and make demands upon the state for relief have been declared "dual organizations" by the Farrington executive board of District 12, Illinois.

Come of the miners in the southern Illinois coal fields have not had work for a year and a half, many have not had a job for a year and thousands are working from one to three days per week.

Alone of the sub-district conventions held last October it was reported that one-half of the members of the local unions were unemployed.

The district and international officers of the union have done nothing except to boost the hard roads plans of Governor Small and look the other way when the coal operators violated the working conditions of the Jacksonville agreement.

The explanation of this action of the district executive is found in the acceptance by the Lewis-Farrington administration of the plan of the coal operators to deflate the industry.

At Jacksonville it was agreed that the coal operators would eliminate small and high-cost coal mines and Lewis was to eliminate some 150,000 unemployed members of the union. The coal industry was to be brought back to a pre-war basis by starving out the miners.

The operators, assured of the co-operation of the Lewis machine in weakening the union, have now prepared an open shop drive in Ohio and western Pennsylvania. In Illinois the executive board carries out its agreement with the coal barons and to prevent any sort of relief of unemployment, brands unemployed councils as "dual organizations."

The circle is complete—from Jacksonville, Indianapolis to Springfield. It is the mandate of the bureaucrats of the United Mine Workers of America that while operators break the written provisions of the Jacksonville agreement with immunity the miners must live up to its unwritten provisions and starve themselves to death. They are not allowed to form even unemployed councils to force relief.

This is treachery of the blackest kind. It is aiding the open shop enemy right at the moment when he is about to begin fire with his heaviest artillery.

The militant miners in District 12, organized around the program of the Workers (Communist) Party and the Trade Union Educational League, have in this question of the right of the miners to organize for relief of unemployment, an issue with which they can go to the membership and expose the direct connection between the "dual organization" decision, the officials, the Jacksonville agreement and the open shop drive.

Two Internationals—Two Leaders

Ebert is dead. The political crisis is more serious than ever. German economy is chaotic. The allied governments kill time on the matter of German disarmament and reparations. Even the Dawes plan is up in the air.

The social-democrat Ebert, Germany's first president in more than six years that he held office, leaves that country on the verge of collapse. He carried out the socialist policy of dependence upon capitalism for the reconstruction of industry and exchange, he, with his colleagues, sold the German working class to German and allied exploiters; they murdered Liebknecht and Luxemburg, slaughtered hundreds of German workers and imprisoned thousands—all that capitalism might live and Germany become again a great imperialist nation. They were for parliamentary democracy and they decked out the shrivelled old hag with the black, red and gold of the flag of the republic.

But the German masses slipped farther and farther down the entrance to the pit of hunger and death.

Lenin died. The Russian workers and peasants paused to mourn, but never ceased their work of building a Communist society. The Communist Party is stronger today than ever before. Russia goes forward to new victories on the economic and political field at home and abroad.

Lenin organized the Communist International to to fight capitalism the world over and his handiwork is the most precious possession of the working class. He headed the first dictatorship of the workers and peasants, he warred on capitalism and under the leadership of the Russian Communist Party capitalism was crushed in Russia.

The whole world bows to the might of the Russian workers' and peasants' government. The allied imperialists were met with bayonets and hurled back from the border of the workers' domain.

Ebert of the Second International—Lenin of the Third.

Their lives and their legacies speak louder than any words can of the treacherous, middle-class and cowardly character of the one, the revolutionary, working class and courageous character of the other.

The world's workers have already made their choice.

Austria is on the market and can be had by any country that will furnish capital and executive ability, says Ambassador Eichoff. This is progress. Capitalism formerly put only sections of the working class up for sale. Now it forces whole nations to peddle themselves.

The capitalist press remarks that the inauguration of Coolidge will mean no change in policy. Quite right. Only a workers' and farmers' government means a change in policy—from capitalist rule to workers' rule.

A thinking worker may get a headache, but he also gets wise to the boss and the bosses' government.

THE reformists had succeeded in obscuring the teachings of Marx relative to the historical necessity of the dictatorship of the proletariat, they had become converts to bourgeois democracy, to "evolutionary" processes, they ridiculed the revolutionary struggle and laid all emphasis on "peaceful" procedure in a world where the ruling class was murdering workers by the million.

SAID Kautsky: "Hence the term, the dictatorship of the proletariat, referring as it does to the dictatorship not of one individual but of a class ipso facto excludes the possibility that Marx in this connection uses the word 'dictatorship' in its literal sense. In fact, he speaks in this connection NOT OF A FORM OF GOVERNMENT, but of a STATE OF THINGS which must necessarily supervene whenever and wherever the proletariat has conquered political power. That Marx did not have in view a form of government is proved by the fact that he was of the opinion that in England and America the transition can take place peacefully, and therefore, in a democratic way."

IT was this glossing over of the role of the state that proved the real counter-revolutionary character of the Second International and its apologists. Such virulent poison had a devastating effect on the revolutionary movement and the working class outside of Russia were still very ill when the Third (Communist) International was organized in 1919.

Desperate diseases demand desperate remedies and it was necessary to determine what groups in each country were ready to break with the past, accept the leadership of the Communist International and under its banner begin anew the struggle for the overthrow of world capitalism.

THE famous 21 points were intended to and did draw a clear line between the revolutionary and reformist groups. Out of those revolutionary working class organizations that accepted them, amid the howls of the reformists, the Third International was built.

It was formed when the revolutionary tide was at flood. World capitalism was shaken to its foundations. Even in the United States the capitalist class became hysterical. In Germany and Italy, Hungary and Finland, the workers openly fought for power.

The revolutionary tide ebbed and once more the Second Internationalists, whose support of their capitalist governments in the revolutionary years had enabled the rulers to crush the working class, dared to claim that capitalism had stabilized itself, had weathered the storm of the post-war years and was on the high road towards reconstruction and prosperity.

THE Third Congress of the Communist International again answered the social traitors in its thesis adopted July 4, 1921:

> ". . . There is no ground whatsoever to speak of any restoration of lasting balance today either in the sphere of production, commerce or credit with reference to Europe or even with reference to the world as a whole. The economic decline of Europe is still going on and the decay of the foundation of European industry will manifest itself in the near future. . . Thus we see that tho Europe has been thrown back a number of decades as to its material resources, the intensification of the social contradictions has not only NOT retrograded or been suspended but has, on the contrary, assumed a particular acuteness.
> "This cardinal fact is, of itself sufficient to dispel any illusion of the possibility of a lasting and peaceful development under a democratic form of government. The social differentiation proceeding along the line of economic decline predetermines the most intense convulsive and cruel nature of the class struggle."

THIS fact of the interrupted, but nevertheless continuous downward trend of world capitalism is the most obvious of all the phenomena of its career. In spite of the demonstrable truth of this statement of the Third Congress, the second internationalists are striving with might and main to revive capitalism; in so doing they have become the most bitter enemies of Soviet Russia, of the revolution and of the working class even in its daily struggles for more bread.

They deny not only the possibility of revolution, but the revolution itself that is taking place before their eyes.

CLEARLY the Communist International points out the reason why the working class can and must wage a revolutionary struggle:

> "The instability of the conditions of life reflecting nationally and internationally the general instability of economic conditions is today the most revolutionary factor of social development."

Capitalism in this first quarter of the year 1925, four years after the Third Congress, shows in a thousand ways the unassailable truth of its theses. They need no revision in this respect.

It is true that, in point of time the world revolution has not developed as rapidly as some had hoped. But the gigantic importance of the Communist International and its sections is more and more appreciated. In 1919 and 1920 the Communist parties of Western Europe and America were little more than active propaganda committees. Today they are mighty factors in advancing the world revolution—a fact testified to by the press of all the imperialist nations and their vassals when it is forced to devote a third of its space to threats, warnings and war against the Communist International together with reports of its activities.

THE fury of the capitalist governments, their diplomats and press, their militarists and their reformist batmen, is the best proof that the Third Congress made no false estimation of the trend of the struggle when it said:

> But it is an undoubted mark of our time that the curve of the capitalist evolution proceeds, thru temporary rises, constantly downwards, while the curve of revolution proceeds thru some vacillations constantly upwards.

Look at the world situation today! The Dawes' plan, supported by the Second International, is a desperate defensive measure of world capitalism. It has brought all of Western Europe under the hegemony of American finance-capital. With the exception of Great Britain every national economy depends for even temporary stability upon the mercy of the house of Morgan.

IN Germany the working masses have lost the last semblance of the reforms that made the German workers before the war the best fed and most docile working class in Europe. Germany, in spite of all the outright betrayals of the social democrats, their support of every government no matter how reactionary, is in a chronic crisis.

Italy and the Balkans are volcanoes.

The government of France is habitually a beggar on the doorstep of the international bankers.

Great Britain has 2,000,000 jobless workers and her colonies are held to the empire by chains which are loosened every now and then-and which the British working class shows more and more reluctance to repair.

China moves slowly but steadily, and with increasing speed, towards complete independence of western imperialism and alliance with revolutionary Russia.

Japan's workers and peasants have become part of the world labor movement for the first time. 3,000,000 unemployed indicate a condition of industrial chaos that makes for revolution.

THE threat of war is constantly before the workers. Each capitalist nation arms and watches its neighbors. Inside the circle of British-American imperialist rivalry a dozen minor conflicts send up their hell-broth steam.

On this matter too has the Communist International spoken with penetrating clarity:

> "In spite of the fact that the late war has furnished terrible evidence that wars are unprofitable—a fact lying at the bottom of bourgeois and socialist pacifism—the process of political economic, ideological and technical preparation for a new war, is going on at full speed all thru the capitalist world. Humanitarian anti-revolutionary pacifism has become an auxiliary force of militarism.
> "The social-democrats of every variety and the Amsterdam International of Trade Unions, who are trying to make the workers of the world believe that they ought to adapt themselves to the economic and political conditions resulting from the war, are rendering the imperialist bourgeoisie most valuable services in the matter of preparing a new slaughter which threatens to completely annihiliate civilization."

SCARCELY any of the spokesmen of the social-democracy have had the temerity to announce openly their belief in the inevitabilty of continued capitalist rule. They war on the revolution by methods much harder to combat in a world where the Communist press is feeble compared to the capitalist press which is only too glad to give of its space to the counter-revolutionists. They lie to the workers about Soviet Russia, about the Russian Communist Party, about the dictatorship of the workers and peasants and about the sections of the Communist International.

THEY dare not say that they have given up all hope of social change but they deliberately discourage the workers from waging war on capitalism in any of its parts and they constantly accuse the Communist International of sacrificing the interests and lives of the workers in useless combats.

The most recent development of this attempt to cow the workers, to make them afraid of struggle, is a world-wide attack on Comrade Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International. He is denounced in all the capitalist and reformist press, which speaks sympathetically of Trotsky in the same breath, as a vicious fool at the best and as a cunning and deliberately murderous blackguard at the worst. What is the meaning of this new offensive?

DOES it mean that the capitalists and their reformist allies believe that the revolution can be forced or that the Communist International so believes and acts? Not at all. Every word of the theses and resolutions of the Congresses of the Communist International has been read and studied by the best intellects of capitalism. The counter-revolutionists of the Second International know very well that the Third Congress said:

> "The distinction between the Communist International and the social-democrats of all colors does not consist in the fact that we are trying to force the revolution and set a definite date for it while they are opposed to any utopian and immature uprisings. No, the distinction lies in the fact that social-democrats hinder the actual development of the revolution by rendering all posible assistance in the way of restoring the equilibrium of the bourgeois state while the Communists, on the other hand, are trying to take advantage of all means and methods for the purpose of overthrowing and destroying the capitalist government and establishing the dictatorship of the proletariat."

THE new propaganda offensive of capitalism, its interested and disingenuous favoring of the Trotsky position as against that of the Russian Communist Party, Zinoviev and the Communist International, is explained by the fact that the counter-revolution has entered a new phase. It first made war on Soviet Russia, directly and indirectly. It hoped for the conquest of the Russian workers' and peasants' government and that this victory for world capitalism and its reformist supporters would deal a death blow to the Communist International.

This hope has gone glimmering before the bayonets of the Red Army and the hatred of the working class of the world for war against Russia. Recognition has been forced from every great capitalist nation with the exception of the United States. Here too recognition will soon be an accomplished fact.

WORLD capitalism has had to change its tactics. It can no longer fool the working class with the discredited lies about Soviet Russia manufactured to order. The Soviet government and its growing power, especially in the Far East, the treasure house that each imperialist nation longs to loot, is just about the most unshakable reality in the world today.

It is the Communist International itself, its sections in every country, that are now the main targets of attack. Capitalism has recognized and now acts upon something, all Communists have known since the International was organized:

> That the revolutionary battlefront is not alone along the borders of Soviet Russia, but in every country. That as long as the Third International lives and capitalism lasts the issue is clear cut and the fighting front clearly defined—the revolutionary working class under the leadership of the Communist International against world capitalism and all its vassals and retainers be they "socialists" or the far less dangerous elements who think that capitalism was, is, and always will be.

WORLD capitalism will try—and fail—to drive a wedge into the Communist International. It will fail to do that which would please it still better—to bring the Communist International under the leadership of petty bourgeois elements like those that ruined the Second International and that now appear as the camp-followers of capitalism, trailing its armies and slaying the wounded workers it leaves on the battlefields.

Capitalism has not only been forced to recoginze Soviet Russia, but it has been forced to acknowledge before the world's working class that it fears the Communist International and the Communist International alone—it is forced to tell the workers of all countries that it fought Soviet Russia because it was the home of the world revolution, that the Communist International as the natural leader of the working class revolution is the target against which the full force of the attack must be concentrated.

THIS change in the method of capitalism from covert to open warfare on the Communist International, a warfare disguised no longer by ridicule of the possibility of world revolution, a change which has made it necessary for capitalism to openly attempt to exert its influence inside the Communist International just as enemy nations try to aid the rise to power of friendly parties in the government of rivals, marks a new and important phase in the development of the world revolution.

WHEN the American capitalist press champions Trotsky against Zinoviev we have in this an announcement of its new strategy and a confession of its knowledge of a force inside of capitalism which it feels will rend it to bits unless it can be brought under bourgeois domination.

From a collection of revolutionary committees in 1919 to which world capitalism paid attention only because of the Russian revolution, the Communist International under the guidance of Lenin, until his death and since then of his teachings, has grown until it is no longer a ghost at the feast that caused capitalism to glance uneasily over its shoulder. The ghost of 1847 is now flesh and blood, it is not just "a spectre that haunts Europe, the spectre of Communism," but a living, sturdy army of millions of Communist workers, with powerful units in every country, reaching out and taking a resistless power that is built of the hands and brains of myriads of oppressed toilers of all races—white, yellow and black.

AT what speed will the revolution travel now that capitalism admits that the struggle is joined?

We hope it will be at lightning speed, but we know the merciless manner in which capitalism will try to crush it. We know that as capitalism becomes increasingly unstable and imperialist war threatens the working class the tempo of the revolution will be accelerated. We do not know what day or year the geometrical progression of the revolution will find it victor but this we do know:

That it is not necessary to change a word or line in the declaration of the Third Congress held four years ago:

> "Whether the revolutionary movement in the near future is going to proceed at a rapid or protracted rate, the Communist Party must, in either case, be the PARTY OF ACTION. This party stands at the head of the struggling masses. It must firmly and clearly formulate its slogans and must expose and sweep aside all equivocal slogans of the social-democrats, which always tend towards compromise. Whatever the turns in the course of the struggle, the Communists should always strive to fortify the contested positions, to get the masses used to active maneuvering, to equip them with new methods calculated to lead to an open conflict with the enemy forces. Taking advantage, of every breathing space offered in order to appreciate the experience of the preceding phase of the struggle, the Communist Party should strive to deepen and widen the class conflicts, to combine them nationally and internationally by unity of goal and practical activity, and in this way, at the head of the proletariat, shatter all resistance to its dictatorship and the social revolution."

THESE statements have stood the test of four terrible years. World capitalism has not.

Be the development of the world revolution fast or slow, the path of the Communist Parties has been clearly blazed and their tasks defined.

The path may be longer and rougher in America than elsewhere, but the tasks and the goal are the same.

THE Workers (Communist) Party on the sixth anniversary of the Communist International can say that it understands and carries out its revolutionary mission to the best of its ability. It bears the heavy burden of organizing and leading the most backward working class in the capitalist world for the conquest of power in the strongest capitalist nation. It accepts this responsibility and believes that with Leninism as its watchword and the Communist International as its leader it can and will plant the crimson banner of a government of workers and farmers—a dictatorship of the working class—on the shattered battlements of American capitalism—from whose ruins will rise the new Communist society where "he who does not work, neither shall he eat," shall drive the idlers either to labor or disgrace.

...ERSITY ... CONN ...-25

AS WE

By T. J. O'FL

CHARLES GATES DAWES, vice-president of the United States and by grace of that office presiding officer of the senate, is in for an exciting career in that capacity unless all signs flicker out. As was to be expected from one who holds the trammels of bourgeois red tape in ill-concealed contempt he threw the dignified senators into consternation with a speech such as the "general" might deliver before the Minute Men of the Constitution. He denounced the senate rules that enable a few senators to filibuster and hold up important business. He spoke in such a vigorous manner that the senators decided right off the reel that they would have to put Dawes in his place quickly.

DAWES is the white haired boy of the capitalists. He knows what they want. They want as little government interference as possible. They want as much efficiency in the conduct of the political institutions as they insist on their industrial and financial institutions. Yet, they cannot insist too strongly on what they would like—an open dictatorship instead of the veiled one which now operates. There are too many obstacles in the way. It is significant that while senators frowned, expressed their displeasure or laughed, five of the biggest men in the industrial and financial life of the United States visited Dawes and complimented him on his speech.

THE senate rules will change, tho it may take a little time. Big business is now in the saddle and it will make its iron hand felt. Dawes it its man. Coolidge is a useful little mannikin, who will pose as the official saint. Dawes will do the dirty work. The old-fashioned senators don't like this situation worth a cent any more than Giolitti and Nitti, liked the rise of Mussolini in Italy. But the real battle of the future in America will be between the two extremes, the extreme reactionaries who represent big capital and the extreme radicals, or the Communists who represent the interests of the working class and the new social order.

RAPHAEL ABRAMOVICH will have a hard time trying to explain the extraordinary demonstration organized by the workers and peasants of Georgia on the occasion of the visit of the representatives of the Soviet federal government to Tiflis the capital of the Georgian Soviet republic. The demonstration was in honor of the holding of a session of the federal

MACHINERY FOR IRISH RELIEF NOW IN MOTION

Support Coming from All Directions

The machinery for raising money for the famine stricken workers and peasants in the west of Ireland is now in motion and funds are reaching the national office of the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Relief Committee from all parts of the United States and from Canada.

Contribution lists and leaflets are now off the presses in the DAILY WORKER printing plant and readers are requested to order supplies at once.

Among the Irish organisations that have so far voted to help in the famine relief work are the Leitrim Workers' Educational Society of New York and the Irish Workers' Republican Club of Chicago. The former thru its secretary, James Gralton, sent $25.00 as the first donation and ordered a bundle of contribution lists. The members of this society come from one of the countries most severely hit by the famine.

Donation From Unemployed.

An unemployed worker from Pennsylvania sent in a donation tho he needs every nickel he can lay hands on. But this is the spirit that the American working class has always displayed when the call for aid from their brothers and sisters in other countries was sounded.

Several mass meetings are being arranged in many parts of the country. The San Francisco branch of the International Workers' Aid got on the job immediately and arranged an affair for March 29. Ella Reeve Bloor, veteran of the class struggle and the speaking platform, has been appointed organizer for Irish Famine Relief work in San Francisco and vicinity.

Mass Meetings Arranged.

Big demonstrations will be held in Chicago and Cleveland on March 29. Recent information from Ireland indi-

DISTRICT 8, WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY, ISSUES STATEMENT ON PENDING ANTI-INJUNCTION BILL

The Workers (Communist) Party of Illinois thru its district office has issued the following statement on the anti-injunction bill now before the state legislature. It calls attention to the necessity for the support of this bill by every worker and workers' organizations. The statement is accompanied by a resolution which will be introduced in all unions and other working class organizations by the members of the Workers (Communist) Party.

The statement is as follows:

TO ALL LABOR UNIONS AND WORKING CLASS ORGANIZATIONS IN THE STATE OF ILLINOIS.

Dear Sirs and Brothers:—

The Illinois state legislature has now before it the anti-injunction bill which passed the committee by a vote of 17 to 13 and now goes to the whole house for final action.

Although passed by the committee, it is freely predicted by supporters of the manufacturing interests in Illinois that the bill will be defeated, as it has been in the past. This is true, unless the forces of militant labor compel the passage of the anti-injunction bill.

What Injunction Means

Working men, organized and unorganized understand what the injunction means when employed against the workers on strike, on the picket line, etc.

We, laboring men, know that the injunction has only been a weapon of the boss to be used against the workers. When workers have been on strike and the boss has failed to make them come to terms, then the boss brings out this reserves—the capitalist courts, with their injunction either preventing the strike, attempting to limit the scope of the strike on the matter of picketing, and so on. Or, if the occasion demands, as the miners, building trades workers, stockyard laborers and others only too well know, the boss calls for further resources from his capitalist government and then out come the militia, soldiers, thugs and gunmen.

The anti-injunction bill presumably recognizes the right of the union to use to the fullest extent the powers of the organization against the manufacturing and capitalist interests.

UTICA STRIKERS STAND FIRMLY AGAINST CUT

Company Tries to Get Speed-Up Contract

(Special to The Daily Worker)

UTICA, N. Y., March 1.—(By Mail)—The strikers of the Utica Steam and Mohawk Valley mills held a meeting Saturday morning at the Labor Temple.

The strike committee reported that last Thursday, the mill officials called the committee to the office for a conference which lasted about two hours.

The mill company officials, J. A. Megrago and his three superintendents, told the committee that if the workers would work more machines, so that the mill owners "wouldn't lose money," then the company might settle.

The committee refused to confer alone. They said that they would not settle without the general committee would attend a conference. So the general committee was called and after a conference it held a meeting at the Labor Temple and wrote a letter to the mill officials.

This letter stated that the strikers would return to work if the company would revoke the order of the 10 per cent cut in wages, without other conditions, after which a joint conference could be held.

The company refused to revoke the cut, asking the strikers to return to work "under protest" and promising a conference on the cut after work was resumed. The committe refused to surrender.

This report was made in English, Italian and Polish and after many strikers had spoken against the proposal of the company, a vote was taken on the report. It was 100 per cent to continue the strike so long as the 10 per cent cut was not revoked.

RECOGNITION OF RUSSIA MAIN JOB OF KELLOGG

Senate Razzes Dawes for "Impoliteness"

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 5.—The most important international business left to Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg, by retiring Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes, was said by state department employes to be opening up of relations with Soviet Russia.

It is rumored that as soon as he can do it gracefully, President Coolidge will send a "commission of inquiry" to Soviet Russia to determine the basis for recognition of Russia by the United States and the negotiation of a trade treaty.

Hughes has left for a trip to Bermuda, where he hopes to forget his mistake in refusing to deal civilly with the Soviet government. Kellogg had a 45-minute conference with Pressident Coolidge, immediately after being sworn into office, but refused to disclose the subjects discussed. "We talked about a lot of things," Kellogg said.

"Progressives" Get Gate.

The committee on committees of the new congress will enforce Coolidge's policies by keeping the "progressive" republicans off of all committees in both the house and senate. Included in the house blacklist are the Wisconsin representatives and Representatives LaGuardia of New York, and Keller of Minnesota. The "progressives" are begging to be taken back into the fold as "good republicans."

The senate mildly criticized Dawes today for his "impoliteness" during his inauguration yesterday. Senator Reed of Missouri sarcastically moved in view of Dawes' unconventional antics that the irregular-swearing in of new senators be legalized. This motion was unanimously carried. Senator Ashurst of Arizona characterized Dawes' actions as "unseemly and untimely." Republican leaders forced an early adjournment to save Dawes from further "razzing."

To Approve Trust Lackey.

One of the first acts of the short session of the senate is expected to be the approval of Charles B. Warren, sugar trust lawyer, as the new attorney general.

The Lausanne treaty negotiated by Hughes with Turkey, which the previous senate refused to ratify, is expected to be quickly pushed thru by the new republican majority.

The nomination of Harry S. New of Indiana, as postmaster general was confirmed by the senate this afternoon.

Columbia Houses Some Ducks.

The close connection between Nicholas Murray Butler, head of Columbia university, the large corporations, and the Coolidge administration which was brought out by the appointment of Harlan Stone of the Columbia law school as attorney general, was further emphasized today.

Immediately after Kellogg took over the reigns of the state department, it was announced that Charles Cheney Hyde, solicitor of the state department, who went out of office with Hughes, was appointed professor of international law at Columbia university. At the same time Phil-

American Locomotive Company Pays Well —for Stockholders

NEW YORK, March 5.—Directors of American Locomotive Co., declared an extra dividend of $10 a share on the common stock and increased the rate of dividend on that stock from six to eight per cent today. The extra dividend is payable in four quarterly installments, of $2.50 each. The quarterly dividend rate on the common stocks was boosted from 1½ to 2 per cent.

MILWAUKEE TO SEE 'RUSSIA IN OVERALLS' SATURDAY, MARCH 7

Since some papers printed an inaccurate notice of the coming movie show in Milwaukee, this correction should be noted:

The show program includes two films, "The Beauty and the Bolshevik" and "Russia in Overalls." It takes place this Saturday, March 7, at Pabst Theater. Matinee at 2 p. m., evening show at 8 p. m. Tickets 35 and 50 cents. This will be the only showing in Milwaukee. The showing is under the auspices of the International Workers' Aid.

BRUTAL ATTACK ON CROWD AT EBERT FUNERAL

Successor May Require Two Elections

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, March 5.—So accustomed to brutal treatment of crowds of workers are the German police under the regime of Ebert, the socialist president, that even at his funeral ceremony they lost their heads and, mounted on horses, rode violently and deliberately into the dense crowds on the Potsdamerplatz, trampling down women and children while thousands shouted curses at them and women screamed with pain and terror.

It is estimated that about 200 people were trodden beneath the police horses' hoofs, scores of women and children had to be carried away unconscious by ambulances and friends, and in spite of the sharply cold weather, hundreds of persons fainted in the stampede to escape from the attack of the police.

Meanwhile preparations are being made by all parties for the election on March 29. As there are so many parties, and no one may get a majority over the others, that is, an absolute majority of the total vote cast, this election may be in the nature of a primary, and the highest ones may later have to run again to determine the final election.

JOBLESS DEMAND WORK OR PAY AT OAKLAND MEET

Organize Committee to Demand Action of City

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OAKLAND, Cal., March 5.—The unemployment situation in Oakland has grown so acute that unemployment committees have been formed. A meeting will be held tomorrow by the Alemeda County Unemployment Committee, of which R. L. Buck is chairman, where the unemployed will call upon the city council to furnish immediate work.

At a mass meeting of unemployed workers a few days ago, 500 jobless gathered at Castle Hall, despite a driving rain. The board of education, hearing of the meeting caused the announcement to be made from the platform that between $20,000 and $30,000 worth of work would be started immediately. The work is mostly for painters and laborers consisting of maintenance and repair work.

The meeting passed a resolution petitioning the legislature for unemployment insurance. J. A. Wood, representing the Hoisting and Portable Engineers and Ed Delaney of San Francisco were the speakers. They urged city and county department heads to take action similiar to that taken by the board of education. Copies of the resolution were sent to the California assemblymen and senators.

The Alameda County Unemployment Committee has issued a statement, which says in part, "Realizing the dire situation confronting the wage workers in Alameda county at the present time, we have called upon the board of supervisors and the Oakland City council urging them to take this matter up and to immediately open up work so that the citizens now living in the county who are unemployed, should be given at least three days work each week at $5.00 per day. So far no action has been taken by either the board of supervisors or the city council."

KIRKWOOD FIRED FROM COMMONS FOR HECKLING CHAMBERLAIN ABOUT THE NOW FAMOUS 'ZINOVIEV LETTER'

LONDON, March 5.—All the laborite members walked out of the house of commons today in protest against the suspension of laborite member Kirkwood. The tories cheered as the laborites marched from the chamber.

Kirkwood was suspended after a stormy scene for heckling Austen Chamberlain, secretary of foreign affairs, regarding the "Zinoviev letter" while Chamberlain was speaking on Britain's foreign policy.

N. E. C. OF Y. W. L. QUICK TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF DISTRICT 8 INTENSIVE TRAINING SCHOOL

By MAX LERNER

Following close upon the announcement that the Party Intensive Training School would commence March 16th, the Young Workers League national office has made arrangements whereby Young Workers League members in the Chicago district and in some of the districts close by, would be given an opportunity to attend this intensive training course.

Some ten of fifteen comrades of the Young Workers League are being chosen outside of those already selected by the Chicago district. There will be a number of comrades from the mining fields, Detroit district, the Cleveland district, etc. The arrangements that will most likely be made will be the same as in the case of those who have been selected by District No. 8 except that supplementary courses will be undertaken for the Young Workers League members attending, to equip them for special work in the League.

This decision of the Young Workers League marks another step forward in this work. The Young Workers League appreciates and realizes the necessity of this work for its membership as part of the general work of the Young Workers League and takes every opportunity in this direction. It might be added that the national office of the Young Workers League had had under consideration the question of a school of its own in Chicago for the purpose of doing the same work for Young Workers League members outside of Chicago as the Intensive Training School of District No. 8.

The decision, therefore, of District No. 8 came in time to save duplication of effort on this score. It might be added that the decision of the Y. W. L. national office in respect to taking advantage of the present Intensive Training School in Chicago is but a step in the program of educational work to be carried on by the Young Workers League.

It is planned by the Y. W. L. to start several more schools of this character in the future for comrades in the Minnesota district and in other

WORKERS MEET AT PITTSBURGH TO ANSWER SPY

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 5.—A rousing mass meeting will be addressed here by Robert Minor and M. J. Olgin, on Sunday evening, March 8, at 35 Miller Street.

The meeting has been called to reply to the lies of Raphael Abramovich, the "socialist" spy who attempted to incite a riot a few days ago at his meeting here. Abramovich was unable to proceed with his lies, the workers in the audience calling him "traitor," and "murderer of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxembourg."

Robert Minor, the well known Communist cartoonist, writer and lecturer has just completed an extended tour for the Labor Defense Council. Comrade Minor will be next of the Michigan defendants, who include most of the leaders of the Workers (Communist) Party, to go to trial.

At the Abramovich meeting here three hundred workers were denied admittance to the hall by the gangsters and police placed at the entrance by the socialist party of Pittsburgh, which conducted the meeting. Six workers were arrested, including one girl, after a mass demonstration for Soviet Russia in front of the hall which the police, at the request of the socialists, tried to break up.

I. W. W. MARINE WORKERS AT NEW ORLEANS END ISOLATION AND BAR ATTACKS ON POLITICAL ACTION

NEW ORLEANS, March 1 (By Mail).—The conference of marine transport workers of the western hemisphere, called by the Marine Transport Workers Industrial Union 510 of the I. W. W. convened here this afternoon at the M. T. W. hall on Iberville street with eleven delegates present, together with several visitors of the various organizations interested.

Hector McRae, member of the M. T. W. general organization committee for the Gulf of Mexico, called the meeting to order and Bob Hayes of the I. W. W. was elected permanent chairman. The committee on credentials reported and the following delegates were seated:

Four Latin American Unions Present.

Tomaso Deogracia, Transport Workers' Union of Argentine.

Simon Zambrano, Sailors' and Firemen's Union, Gulf of Mexico, from Vera Cruz.

Manuel Sanchez, M. T. W. 510, Tampico branch.

Lloyd Stroud, M. T. W. 510, Galveston, Texas, branch.

J. Molendyk, M. T. W. 510, Mobile, Ala., branch.

Bob Hayes, M. T. W. 510, New Orleans, La., branch.

W. Harney, M. T. W. 510, Port Arthur, Texas, branch.

W. Canfield, M. T. W. 510, Houston, Texas, branch.

Hector McRae, M. T. W. 510, Main office.

Francisco Benavides, Longshoremen's Union, Ecquador.

Manuel Alonso, Laborers' and Stevedors' Union, Cuba.

Two Peruvians Denied Seats.

Juan Beltram and Antonio Saurez, from the T. I. M. of Peru, were denied seats in the conference, as the credentials committee declared their credentials were irregular.

The following committees were elected: Ways and Means, Simon Zambrano, Lloyd Stroud and Molendyk. On Resolutions, W. Canfield, Francisco Benavides and W. Harney.

Applaud Mexican Consul.

The Mexican delegates were introduced by S. N. Del Toro, of the Mexican consul general's office, who in a speech wished the members of the conference success in their work. He was loudly applauded.

Chairman Hayes stated that the object of the meeting, quoting a communication from the New York headquarters of the marine union of the I. W. W. as follows:

"To the Delegates Assembled:

"We, the members of the general organization committee of the Marine Transport Workers Industrial Union 510 of the Industrial Workers of the World, greet you, and are pleased

COMMUNIST APPEARS BEFORE CONNECTICUT LEGISLATURE TO OPPOSE SLAVE LAW PASSAGE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HARTFORD, Conn., March 5.—In the senate chamber, at a hearing before the joint legislative committee on labor, William Simons, District Organizer of the Workers Party for the state of Connecticut, warned the manufacturers that their attempts to prevent strikes will be in vain.

House Bill 883 was under consideration, declaring illegal "unwarranted industrial warfare", granting those injured or threatened with injury all the appropriate civil remedies in law and equity. The bill does not go so far as the Kansas Law rendered harmless by the striknig miners. In Connecticut, the paradise of the open shop interests, the large brass, silver, and metal factories are practically without organization. There is no need as yet for the Kansas law.

Open Shoppers Sponsor Bill.

Ralph O. Wells, attorney for the Conn. Mfgers. Ass'n. and the Open Shop Conference came forward as the father of the illegitimate bill, stating that it did not change the law, but merely clarify it. There were no large strikes, he said, during the last years, but he added, smilingly, "in time of peace, prepare for war". The bill, he remarked, hypocritically, "would be of more benefit, perhaps, to the employes than to the employers."

Clause A would prevent strikes of police, firemen, and other city employees. He referred to the Boston police strike as a classic example of the danger of such strikes. If the employees were not treated justly, they could resign, he suggested, or elect a new board of aldermen.

On point B, he inquired, "How can

LONDON GARMENT WORKERS FIGHT FOR UNION WAGE

LONDON, March 5.—Employes in the wholesale clothing industry in London are agitating for higher wages, and the Tailors' and Garment Workers' Union threatens a strike unless the employers' associations ceases its drive on the garment workers and pays union wages.

Bernard Sullivan, organizer for the union in London, declared that in some firms employes have been dismissed because they insisted on receiving union wages. Demands for higher wages have been submitted to some of the employers. Mass meetings have been held by the London cutters, demanding the union scale of wages.

STEEL TRUST GOVERNMENT OF PENNSYLVANIA BARS WORKERS PARTY MEMBERSHIP MEETING

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SCRANTON, Pa., March 4.—Scranton Communists had another taste of the iron heel of the Pennsylvania coal and steel trust government when the police prevented the holding of a membership meeting of the Workers Party on Sunday evening, March 1. After two weeks of careful preparation, the Communist miners from the many outlying towns of the Scranton district came to their membership meeting only to find the hall closed by the order of the police department and were forced to stand out in the drizzling rain until the police for the second time refused to permit the meeting to take place.

In the meantime the numerous churches of Scranton were permitted to hold their meetings and services undisturbed. But the indomitable spirit

WOMEN WORKERS THRUOUT WORLD HEAR RED PLEA

Plan Women's Conference in Cleveland, Ohio

On the eve of International Women's Day comes the announcement that Clara Zetkin, Communist member of the German reichstag, is likely to be the Communist Party's candidate for president of Germany.

The Communist International has set aside March 8 as World Women's Day, when the working women thruout the world will be mobilized in the struggle against world capitalism.

The working women of Germany, Russia, and all Europe, Asia and America, on that day will be urged to enlist under the banner of Communism, as the only means of achieving emancipation from the oppression of the capitalist system, which exploits working women in the same manner as workingmen, but to a greater degree.

The special demands of the working women for a higher standard of living, for a shorter working day, for abolition of child labor and capitalist wars, for equal pay with men for the same work, for special maternity conditions, can be realised only with the rule of the workers in industry under the Communist leadership.

Demonstrations will be held in many cities of America to celebrate International Women's Day.

International Women's Day will be observed by the Local Cleveland, Workers (Communist) Party, by a conference in the local headquarters, 5927 Euclid Ave., at 2 p. m., on Sunday, March 8, of all the women and girls who belong to the party and the Young Workers' League.

Comrade Yetta Land will make a report on the subject "Working Class Women and the Communist Movement," and the local Women's Committee, of which Comrade Esther Schweitzer is chairman, will present a program for immediate work by the women in local Cleveland to carry out the special work of the women in the Communist movement.

All women and girls who belong to the party or the Young Workers' League are required to attend this meeting, and all wives or daughters of party members are invited, as well as the men who may wish to be informed on the very important questions to be discussed.

The New York Women's Day celebration will be held at the Labor Temple, 243 East 84th street, near 3rd Ave., tonight at 8 p. m. Juliet Stuart Poyntz, M. J. Olgin, Rose Pastor Stokes, Fanny Warshfsky and Anna Thompson are to speak.

Len Small's Gang Padded Payrolls

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 5.—Democrats charged in the Illinois house today that during the last Illinois election campaign the republican state officers padded the payrolls to aid them in their campaign work. Representative John Devine of Dixon, charged that at least 2,000 persons were on the state payroll temporarily during the last campaign, and that the state auditor has been "backward" in giving information on payrolls.

parliament in one of the many countries now joined together under the banner of the mighty workers' and peasants' government that covers one sixth of the earth's surface.

THE account of the demonstration is not taken from the Communist press. The news is taken from the New York Times which cannot be accused of partiality to Soviet Russia. Fully 200,000 workers dropped their tools and lined the streets for the welcome. A military parade of 30,000 red troops was reviewed by President Kalinin. Russian and Georgian units comprised the force. Premier Rykoff informed the newspaper reporters that the government had under consideration a general amnesty to all those who participated in the late Georgian uprising. He made it clear that not vengeance but self-preservation was the motto of the disciplinary forces of the Soviet government.

AFTER the session at Tiflis is over, the federal government officials will visit some of the neighbouring Soviet republics. What gets under the skins of some former socialists and crazy anarchists is that the impossible has happened. Russia has violated their choicest dreams. The workers and peasants hold power despite the fact that the new society did not pop out of the old shell as they predicted, when the capitalist industrial machine could no longer function under the wages system. They forget a few things, or perhaps they never learned them.

THEY overlooked the fact that capitalism in a world sense is ready for the undertaker tho in particular sections, that system never even made its debut. It so happened that the proletariat under the leadership of the Communists gave capitalism a blow where it was weakest, and are holding the fort and strengthening themselves while the working class in the rest of the world is catching up with the procession. The anarchists are angry because they find their pet anti-government-of-any-kind theory smashed. So they gnash their teeth in rage and in order to revenge themselves on the idol-smashing Bolsheviks, they join their choice between two evils; they prefer the capitalist government to the workers' government and make war on the workers.

PACIFISTS are mad because there is a Red army in Russia and because there are yet prisons in that country. There will be a Red army in Russia and prisons until capitalism is abolished in the rest of the world. abolished in the rest of the world. All governments are organs of suppression, the Soviet government as well as the capitalist governments. The difference is this, that the Soviet government is the organ of the producing classes, the great majority of the people while the capitalist government are organs of a small minority of parasites or non-producers.

KLUXERS FIGHT COAL MINERS IN KANSAS FIELDS

Senate Clashes With Supreme Court

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOPEKA, Kans., March 5.—By a vote of 23 to 14 the Kansas senate passed a bill which permits the klan to operate in Kansas without applying for a charter. Secretary of State Ryan and Attorney General Griffith are against the klan. The senate's action is in contradiction with the recent action of the Kansas supreme court which ruled that the klan must secure a charter before operating in Kansas.

The klan claims 339,224 members in the state altho newspapers in opposition to the klan declare this number is a tremendous exaggeration.

The klan in Kansas is operating on the same lines as in Williamson county, Illinois, calling for law enforcement and at the same time committing lawless acts.

The klan is paying particular attention to the Kansas miners, attempting to enter the miners' union, get the miners fighting among themselves on the issue of the klan and thus weaken the union.

The Mulberry Independent, which declares, "The Independent is for the klan and for the methodist church," is working among the miners of Crawford county, a mining section. The paper prints column after column of klan propaganda, interspersed with extracts from the pen of Oscar Ameringer, taken from the Illinois Miner, of which the former socialist is editor.

Steel Trust Rule in Pennsylvania Bars Communist Meeting

and determination of the Communists cannot be averted by a mere order of the chief of police. A comrade soon volunteered the use of his rooms for a meeting and after a long tramp thru the muddy streets of Scranton, the membership meeting came to order.

New Determination.

This incident, which is one of the many the miners in the anthracite fields must face each day, and especially the Communists, only added new determination and greater spirit to the efforts of these comrades who are struggling against the most adverse conditions of any section of the workers of America.

Comrades Manley and Baker spoke at the meeting and laid plans for an intensive organization campaign that has been started by the party in the anthracite region. After a short talk by Comrade Sharfenberg, the sub-district industrial organizer on the importance of participating in the industrial struggles of the miners, each branch elected a temporary industrial organiser and arrangements were made for further work that will permanently establish our party as a vital factor in the everyday struggles of the miners.

Without Interference.

At the next meeting of the city central committee, the question of starting a campaign for the freedom of assembly will be taken up to establish once and for all the right to meet without police interference.

Special DAILY WORKER subscription campaign has been started at the meeting and no speeches were required to convince the comrades of the vital need of establishing a large circulation of the DAILY WORKER as one of the most effective means of building the party and preventing the recurrence of the demonstration of the coal trust democracy experienced earlier in the evening. Five new subscriptions were secured at the meeting and each comrade armed himself with a strip of special subscription cards that will undoubtedly be filled within a few days.

The cold drizzling rain had no effect on the Workers Party members in Wilkes Barre and the surrounding mining towns last Sunday. A well-attended and enthusiastic membership meeting was held with Comrades R. Baker and Joseph Manley present to outline a plan of action for the future industrial work of the party. Branch industrial organisers were elected and regular meetings arranged by the subdistrict industrial organizer, Comrade Sharfenberg. The comrades in the anthracite region fully understand the role our party should play in the many struggles waged by the miners and are prepared to participate in them to the fullest extent. Arrangements were made for a special subscription drive for the DAILY WORKER in connection with an important campaign undertaken by the party industrial department. The city central secretary pointed out that a large circulation of the DAILY WORKER is of fundamental importance to the growth and influence of the party and is indispensable for the success of any campaign undertaken by the party. Six subscriptions were sold at the meeting and most of the comrades have pledged to secure new subscriptions.

Join the War on Injunctions

states plainly that it has no faith in the passage of any laws by capitalist legislatures, whether anti-injunction bills, eight-hour day for women in industry, etc. Yet it demands the passage of this bill if it can in any way serve the interests of the workers, and if it, at the same time, serves to point out to the workers that capitalism will uphold no law which in any way interferes with the profit-sucking process of the capitalists.

The Illinois Manufacturers Association, the Associated Employers of Illinois and similar capitalist organizations are laughing at the present puny efforts of labor to put over this anti-injunction bill. They fear nothing so long as the organized labor movement and the unorganized workers do not protest strongly, or indicate an ability to use stronger measures to enforce their will and to pass this law. That is another reason why the capitalist interest in Illinois are again trying to put over the state constabulary bill and are fighting the eight-hour day for women in industry.

Workers Must Fight

The working class and its organizations must fight for everything they get. This, you, fellow workers, recognize in the very fact that you organize labor unions to maintain your standard of living and to better your conditions. Yo uknow that you must struggle at all times with the boss. When the bosses' attempts against you fail, he calls upon his government. You must not yield—either to the boss or to his capitalist government. Whether or not anti-injunction laws are passed by the legislature, are incorporated on the capitalist law books, you must enforce: NO INJUNCTIONS AGAINST THE WORKERS! That means that you must give due warning to the ruling class in Illinois that you will brook no action infringing the organizations, the unions of the working class. That means, law or no law, mass violation of any injunction issued by the capitalist courts.

Labor's power is tremendous when asserted. The demonstration against the Landis scab agreement in Chicago some years ago when hundreds of thousands of workers paraded on the streets of Chicago against this infamous scab award, is a sign of the ability of labor to act politically against the ruling class.

An Elemental Struggle

The Workers (Communist) Party of Illinois declares that the struggle against the use of the injunction against labor is an elemental struggle of every working class organization, labor union co-operative or political party, for the very rights of existence.

Below is a copy of a resolution which has been sent to every labor union and every working class organization in the state of Illinois. It calls upon the labor movement to unite its forces to pass the anti-injunction bill. Take this resolution up in your union. Have it passed. Send it in to the state legislature and demand that the anti-injunction bill be passed.

Unite for struggle against capitalism! Down with injunctions! Strenghten your unions! Hail to the solidarity of the workers!

The Resolution.

WHEREAS, there is now before the Illinois state legislature a bill which would provide—(1) that no injunction shall be issued to interfere with the right of working people to organize in trade or labor unions or associations (2) that no injunction shall be issued to limit the constitutional provisions for free speech and free press; (3) that in all cases involving labor disputes, when an injunction is applied for, the particular property about to be irreparably damaged must be described in detail, no mere general statement being amissable; (4) that in disputes over working condition no injunction shall be issued to prevent working people from persuading others to join them;

WHEREAS, for 35 years or more the injunction has been an undisguised weapon in the hands of the employing class to break down the organized resistance of the workers, and labor militants who refused to obey the arbitrary dictates of the injunction judges have been jailed for "contempt of court," without any pretense of trial by jury;

WHEREAS, "anti-injunction" measures similar to the one summarized above have been introduced in Illinois legislatures off and on during the past 20 years and have been regularly defeated, thru the activities of the Associated Employers of Illinois, the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, etc., indicating that altho the judiciary committee of the state house of representatives has recommended the passage of the present bill, by a vote of 17 to 13, it will not be passed without the most energetic and determined support on the part of the labor movement;

WHEREAS, altho the workers have learned by bitter experience not to put their trust in laws or capitalist "justice," the defeat of the present bill will be a victory for the reactionaries and a decided blow at the labor movement.

BE IT RESOLVED, that this body hereby goes on record as favoring the immediate passage of the "anti-injunction" bill and pledges itself to throw the full weight of its influence behind it.

WHEREAS, mass violation by the union membership of injunctions has proved itself the only effective method of fighting these tyrannical measures,

BE IT RESOLVED, that we serve notice on the employers and their courts that in the event of the defeat of the bill now before the legislature at Springfield, or if the provisions of the bill are ignored after its passage, we pledge ourselves to continue the violation of injunctions and to organize the whole labor movement for resistance to them.

"Cautious Cal" Sneaks Across Pay Raise for Morgan's Office Boys

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, senators, members of the house of representatives, cabinet officers and other hangers-on of the capitalist state at Washington, D. C., look forward to a congressional holiday until next Dec. 4, AT INCREASED PAY. Evidently afraid to sneak the pay grab for high government officials across in open daylight, "Cautious Cal" signed the appropriation bill under cover of the excitement incidental to the inaugural festivities. Then he went to the capitol, at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue, and made his inaugural speech urging more "economy."

• • • •

It would be interesting to learn what the millhands in the textile industry of New England, victims of repeated wage cuts; the coal miners of the nation, facing another "open shop" offensive; in fact workers in every industry, counting a decreased wage on their pay days, and at all times facing a place ready for them in the growing army of unemployed, think of this salary steal put over by the "economy" hypocrite in the White House.

• • • •

Ten per cent wage cuts, and more, in the textile mills, where rules Butler, the multi-millionaire backer of Coolidge, are answered on the capitalist side with a thrirty-three and one-third per cent increase in salary, from $7,500 to $10,000 for senators and representatives. A neat bribe of $2,500 to "be good" during the new congressional term. The first victory won was the decision to have no meeting of congress until December. Capitalist parliamentarism goes on a nine-months' holiday, during which the big employers will run things to suit themselves. Great business will not even be bothered by having its affairs discussed by the debating club in Washington.

• • • •

The "open shop" war and the fight to wipe out the Jacksonville agreement, meager tho the wages are that it provides for the nation's coal miners, find an echo in the 25 per cent boost in salary handed to the members of Coolidge's cabinet, and to the vice-president, "Fascist" Dawes, and speaker of the house, "Nickie" Longworth. These salary increases mean more than a million dollars added annually to the tax bill. But that doesn't bother the capitalist lawmakers. Only when labor, as in the case of the postal workers, asks a few pennies more, does panic seize upon the congressional office boys of Wall Street.

• • • •

It was not expected that Coolidge would mention the plight of the workers in the textile mills of the New England states from whence he comes. He thinks of them as but necessary additions to the looms and spindles in Butler's mills.

"Hell an' Maria" Dawes, in his address to the senate, did not say a word about the new attack that the mine owners are planning to launch against the miners' union. He may, some time in the future, and if he does, what he says will be all on the side of the mine owners. Altho Dawes comes from a state where 100,000 coal miners are organized, he would completely wreck all organizations of labor, if he could. For the time being, Dawes makes a hullabaloo about some dust-covered senate rules, and the kept press raises a shout on its first pages, as if some vital issue is at stake.

A new administration has been enthroned for four more years in Washington. A bunch of bankers and manufacturers met in Washington on inauguration day, enjoyed themselves to the full, and pledged to meet again, around the same table, four years from now.

If the workers and poor farmers of the United States will rally in continually growing masses, during the next four years, under the standards and the leadership of the Workers (Communist) Party, then their meeting in 1929 will not be as enjoyable as it was this week. The Coolidge-Dawes regime speaks for capitalism. Let the workers and poor farmers learn to speak and fight for themselves, and hurry the day of Communism.

CHIEF OF IRISH FREE STATE IS SERIOUSLY ILL

Recently Busy Pushing Thru Hanging Bill

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DUBLIN, March 5.—President Cosgrave of the Irish Free State seems destined to be the next victim of the grim reaper who has lately been taking toll of some of the leading political figures in Europe.

Shortly after his return from his visit to France where he was recuperating from nervous strain brot on by a reaction from the stress of supervising scores of executions during the struggle with his republican opponents, Cosgrave had a relapse. He is not expected to recover.

The Bye-Elections.

In the meantime there is a lively by election campaign taking place in Ireland. The republicans are contesting vacancies created by the resignation of the so-called national group from the Dail. Father O'Flanagan, who recently returned to Ireland from an extended tour in the United States, was insulted in county Mayo by a parish priest who strode up to him and told O'Flanagan that he was a priest without a bishop. O'Flanagan has been sans bishop so long that he is almost as much relieved over getting rid of that carrion as your correspondent was when he first discarded hell from the list of his assets. Several fights occurred while the bishopless priest was speaking.

The Sedition Act.

By a vote of 38 against 21 the Dail passed the second reading of the treasonable and seditious offenses bill. Under the provisions of this bill any citizen who would refuse to spy on his neighbor or fail to give information in his possession revealing activities of opponents of the government is liable to its provisions. It is more drastic than any law passed during the darkest days of British rule in Ireland.

President Cosgrave, explaining the bill declared that its real purpose was to prevent "any evildoer no matter how idealistic from overthrowing the government." The bill is mainly directed against the republican party, but will no doubt be used later on against the labor movement when it recovers from the chaos in which it is at present engulfed and begins to seriously challenge the political power of the bourgeoisie.

Socialists Squack at Coolidge.

The Herriot "democratic" government of France is somewhat displeased with Coolidge's inaugural address, according to the Paris newspapers. "The striking thing," said the Paris Midi, "is the repeated phrase that nothing can be done in the world without the consent of America. American peace is a philanthropic conquest of the world by dollars. The European democracies have a somewhat different conception of how peace ought to be organised. They dream of arrangements eliminating as far as possible economic pressure and opposing the force of right to the force of gold."

"Yet it was these same adherents of "European democracy" who helped plunge Europe into the world war in 1914.

SECTION OF THE TRADE UNION EDUCATIONAL LEAGU

BUILDING TRADES OF PITTSBURGH HAVE MUCH GRIEF

But Two Greek Painters Do Fine Work

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Despite the iron control, politically and economically, maintained by the steel trust in this particular domain, the building trades of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania have succeeded in keeping up the average standard of wages and working conditions. Yet a large proportion of the workers occupied in the trades are entirely unorganised and the employers are losing no opportunity to undermine the power of the unions.

Trades schools are being conducted under the control of the employers' association in addition to the Carnegie Technical Institute. The building trades unions have attempted to obtain joint control with the bosses of these trades schools, but failed, showing conclusively that the object is the same here as elsewhere, namely to undermine and finally destroy the unions if possible.

Bill Kelly, one of the business agents of the Carpenters' Union, runs this organization to suit himself. About 12 years ago he was active in the movement to create a central Labor Temple in the city. Funds were collected from the unions and the committee in charge made sure that all locals were visited.

A tag day was held for the benefit of the Labor Temple and funds were collected from various concerns in the city, willing to give. It seemed difficult to find out just how much had been collected after the conclusion of the drive, but the sum of $60,000 was announced when the committee demanded and obtained 40 per cent of all the funds collected from the local unions as a remuneration for their labor.

Shortly after this settlement had been made a sum was turned over as payment on the building occupied by the unions. One fine morning when the committee arrived at its office it found the safe busted and the balance of the funds gone, and now the unions have been forced to leave the place.

Bill Kelly's prestige did not suffer at all from this little incident, so last year, when the carpenters demanded $11.00 per day, the bosses offered a compromise. Bill said he would never accept any compromise and demanded that the fight be carried on. To the surprise of the carpenters themselves they won the fight.

Bill, however, had his ambitions, and the bosses put no obstacles in the way. He made the run for executive board member of the Brotherhood from this district. But Hutcheson was afraid that his ambitions may go too far, and he put in his licks to have Bill Kelly defeated.

There are about 200 Greek painters in Pittsburgh who had always remained unorganized until lately. Then a couple of militants of their nationality had an opportunity to join the union. Immediately they set to work to put the principles they believed in into effect. Their local union was induced to agree to a reduction of the initiation fee for this occasion, and they lined up about fifty of these unorganized and had them join in a group with a definite promise that they were not going to stop until all the 200 became members of the union.

Indiana Senate Kills Workmen's Compensation Bill

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 5.—The Indiana senate killed the workmen's compensation bill during the present session of the legislature by indefinitely postponing the bill. The legislature is to adjourn Monday night.

NEW PAMPHLET, "WHAT'S WRONG IN THE CARPENTERS' UNION?" EXPOSES HUTCHESON'S CRIMES

The recent history of the corruption, the attempts at ruthless suppression of all opposition and the utter bankruptcy of the present administration of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners has now been made available for the rank and file membership, contained in the pamphlet "What's Wrong in the Carpenters' Union?", published by the Progressive Building Trades Worker. Evidence of this corruption is presented thru irrefutable facts, staggering to the most credulous mind.

Altho these facts are presented in most cases without any interpretation, the pamphlet, from cover to cover, is a piercing analysis and a stinging criticism of the methods pursued by these bureaucratic officials.

Not Only a Story of Corruption.

Yet it is only a story of corruption confined to negative criticism, but it is a story as well of the struggles of the rapidly developing left wing movement to infuse the organisation with more militant methods in pursuance of definite concrete objects of betterment of conditions of the working class.

Along with this startling exposure, is presented the left wing program; the glaring contrast itself brings out the utter impotency of the present administration in bold relief.

Undoubtedly many members of the Brotherhood have never heard of the strike-breaking activities of Wm. L. Hutcheson in New York, during the spring, 1916. The district council initiated a wage demand and abtained an increase for approximately 14,000 carpenters about 3,000 being compelled to go on strike.

Hutcheson arrived in the city and negotiate a so-called "agreement" with the employers' association which in reality, completely nullified the increase obtained by the district council.

When Hutcheson Broke a Strike.

When submitted to a referendum this so-called agreement was repudiated by 11,474 votes to 119. Yet Hutcheson persisted that his agreement be accepted, and when the membership refused to obey, he ordered the suspension of the district council and 65 local unions.

He further opened up headquarters, recruiting strike-breakers, in an effort to bring the New York membership to submission. At the subsequent general convention held at Fort Worth, Texas, delegates sent by these suspended local unions were kept out of the convention hall with the help of police.

The Scab Chicago Agreement.

Assuming full authority for the wage negotiations in Chicago, during the summer of 1924, Hutcheson signed an agreement which is point for point even to the minutest details of contemplated working conditions, the Landis award, in protest against which 141,000 trade unionists of Chicago demonstrated April 29, 1922.

Yet when militant members exposed this agreement, five were arbitrarily expelled as has already been mentioned in various articles in the DAILY WORKER. However, in this new pamphlet these issues are dealt with at length and in detail. Documents are reproduced fully substantiating every criticism made.

The povery of documentary trade union history in this country has become axiomatic. Statistics of wages and working conditions of the various trade unions are hardly available except thru the scant figures submitted at conventions. The official trade union journals are entirely immune to the currents within the movement.

The Official Journals Are Censored.

They are, as a rule, closed to the rank and file and never give anything but the dry-as-dust official version and conception of the movement, sprinkled with a few technical details but never reflecting the actual life of the organizations. The rank and file opposition to the arbitrary rulership maintained by the trade union administration machines find no expression in these journals.

The last elections of international officers in the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners marked a turning point in the history of this union. For the first time a left wing candidate for general president appeared with a definite and concrete left wing program offering practical, and at the same time, class solutions for the weaknesses of the organization.

The Expulsion of Loyal Union Members.

Hutcheson and his lick-spittles sensed the danger in a developing left wing movement within the union and they decided to exert every effort to eliminate the rebellious elements. Constitution and laws of the organization were set aside and expulsions followed.

The left wing program thus became the basis of the expulsions, altho including more than just the left wing. The expulsions have become a concerted attempt to squelch all opposition. Sixteen members were expelled in Los Angeles, five in Chicago, Wm. Reynolds in Detroit and W. F. Burgess in Philadelphia and more yet are slated to go.

Defying the Membership.

The story of these expulsions, describing each case in detail, is told in this new pamphlet. The falsification of the referendum vote on the old age home proposition and the cunning trickery employed by the administration in ruling out of order the repeal of this proposition endorsed by 230 locals in 46 different states, together with the methods employed in maintaining the administration machinery in power, are some of the additional points which make the pamphitt an interesting one.

"Waht's Wrong With the Carpenters' Union?" is a pamphlet, the first of its kind ever produced in this country submitting some recent trade union history treated from the point of view of the rank and file. Altho sparkling with documentary evidence it is a fascinating story, vividly told, one worth while reading for workers in general and building tradesmen in particular.

NEW YORK, March 5.—The trial of K. Jankaitis of Local 54, Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, who was arrested when the right wingers held their high-handed meeting suspending nine of the most active member for five years, resulted in the dismissal of the case. The house sheriff made a mess of the testimony when he was asked what the "right" and the "left" meant.

Jankaitis was charged with disturbing the meeting but it turned out that the police and the house sheriff were the actual offenders under instruction of the right wing element. The house sheriff denied that he had seen any blood after he had split open the scalp of Jankaitis, while the rest of the witnesses told of the crimson streams that flowed freely.

Mrs. Verkutiene who was badly kicked in the abdomen is still in a critical condition after two weeks of suffering. The mass meeting held to protest against the vicious methods of the reactionaries demanded restoration of the suspended members and the cleaning out of the friends of the bosses from the union.

Write us a letter—tell us how you work, what are your wages and shop conditions—and then order a bundle for distribution in your shop.

Unemployed of New Orleans Fill Streets

NEW ORLEANS.—Despite the fact that the country has entered into an era of unparalleled prosperity and labor is at a premium, according to the capitalist newspapers the report of Chas. H. Patterson, director of the charity bureau here shows that 515 persons were the receiptants of the bureau's charity last month, against 400 of November.

The streets are crowded from early morn till dusk with idle men and women seeking employment, and the so called open shops are running overtime, notwithstanding the fact that the employment bureaus of many of the labor unions show an alarming number of applicants. Fifty thousand dollars is the sum appropriated for this bureau for the year 1925. New Orleans has a population of four hundred and fifty thousand.

NEW YORK BAKERS IN UNITED FRONT AGAINST BOSSES

Fight for Organization and Conditions

NEW YORK, N. Y.—"Now more than ever, in face of the growing power of the bread trust, the Trade Union Educational League will agitate and demand a united front of the bakers' unions A. F. of L., and Amalgamated Food Workers; so that the unorganized shall be organized and a militant revolutionary industrial food workers' union shall be formed." Thus declared Joseph Manley, who presided at a mass meeting at Cooper Union called by the T. U. E. L. for all the bakers of New York and Brooklyn.

Unanimous Drive for Unity.

The principal speakers at this rank and file gathering were Ludwig Lore, editor of the Volkszeitung and A. Yuditck, labor editor of the Freheit. The meeting was an unusual one. Its purpose was to arouse sentiment for a united front campaign of the various bakers' unions. It was unusual to the extent that many of the audience of bakers joined in the discussion. All were unanimous in the desire for a united front.

However, there were some who openly announced their skepticism of the methods proposed. This was not true of Amalgamated Food Workers. They, judging by the expressions of many of their rank and file members and the statement of Secretary Burkhart, were wholeheartedly for the proposals contained in the resolution submitted by the T. U. E. L. and printed herewith.

Resolution and Amendment.

An amendment was added to the resolution which called for a temporary committee to help carry out the demands contained in the resolution. The resolution reads as follows:

Whereas, the trustification of the baking industry by giant capital is becoming an accomplished fact. This trustification, with its consequent introduction of automatic machinery and standardization of bakery products, is reducing the worker in the baking industry to a life of misery and oppression.

Whereas, the bakery bosses not yet absorbed by the trust are employing the same speed up methods of production as the trust itself. They, in many instances, want to abolish the eight hour day altogether or make its enforcement by the unions still more difficult. These small bakery bosses resort to any and all methods to crush the power of the workers' organizations.

Whereas, the interests of the workers in the baking industry can only be served by the unity of their organizations. And this unity must be accomplished. To lay the basis for this unity of the bakers and their organizations a united front must be formed; to fight the bread trust; to organize the unorganized and to enforce the eight hour day; therefore be, it

Resolved, that this meeting of bakery workers, members of the A. F. of L., and A. F. W., organizations, indorse as a first practical step towards this unity the following proposal:

1. We call upon the respective organizations to form a joint Bakers' United Front Organize the Unorganized Committee.
2. This committee shall carry on a campaign to organize all the non-union shops and unorganized bakers. It shall also make general propaganda for unity amongst the bakers.
3. This committee shall be composed of five delegates from each local union of the bakers' respective organizations in Greater New York and vicinity. This committee shall elect whatever officers and sub-committees it considers necessary to carry on the work.
4. This committee in the conduct of the campaign shall issue whatever slogans it considers necessary around which the fight must be waged. The following slogans are suggested:
   - (a) Fight The Bread Trust.
   - (b) Organize the Unorganized.
   - (c) Strict Enforcement of the Eight Hour Day.
   - (d) Uniform Working Conditions for all Bakers. (to be determined on the basis of the best now in existence)

Union Officials Shot in Feud with Rival Organization

The president and business agent of the Retail Grocery Clerks' Union were shot by gunmen in front of the Graumann grocery store, Lake street and Menard avenue, in what is said to be a feud between the grocery clerks' and grocery wagon drivers' unions.

A. P. Forrest, president, and Frank O'Brock were shot after they had posted pickets in front of the store in an effort to make O. E. Bruncke, one of the clerks, join the clerks' union.

Neither man was seriously injured.

Wobbly Hall in Los, Like A. F. of L. Hall As It Shies at Reds

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—The Rowan faction of the I. W. W. split, termed the "emergencies" by the administration on account of their adherence to what is known as Rowan's "Emergency Program" calling for a split in the I. W. W., are officially in control of the local branches.

This is noticeable in the fact that the only reading matter around the hall is capitalist newspapers, a boycott being placed on the administration lications, "Industrial Solidarity" and the monthly "Industrial Pioneer." The intellectual atmosphere is thus quite homelike for any worker who has frequented the union halls of the most reactionary craft unions of the A. F. of L.

Altho the Labor Defense Council has been very successful in organizing a number of these more conservative unions in a united front for the benefit of the class war prisoners held at San Quentin and Folsom, nearly all of whom are I. W. W. criminal syndicalist law prisoners, and for a time obtained the co-operation of the local I. W. W., which sent delegates to the common council, the I. W. W. has recently withdrawn its delegates, apparently in fear of Communist contagion from the left wing trade unionists present, but wholly in disregard of the cause at issue—the release of all class war prisoners.

KANSAS CITY, MO, BUILDING UNIONS FIGHT WAGE CUT

Don't Fall for "Fair" Arbitration

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—The building contractors' association of Kansas City have started a wage slashing campaign. They are demanding a wage cut by arbitration. They are so anxious for arbitration that everyone feels that the cut demanded has already been agreed upon. A joint arbitration board and so-called impartial arbiter, generally means that the workers get it in the neck.

However, it has another significance and that is when the employer is so anxious for arbitration it shows that he is not so sure of his strength, and is a little bit afraid that in a strike he might get the worst of it.

Altho the building trades are badly demoralized, with the carpenters and bricklayers outside of the Building Trades Council, the rank and file is expressing itself as against arbitration and against wage cuts. On the day set for the arbitration, only the representatives of the iron workers put in appearance, the result being that the arbiter withdrew and the question of wages will be settled by a strike. Following is the present scale of wages and the cut demanded by the building association.

Trade	Present Wage per hour	Asked per hour
Cement Finishers	$1.25	$1.12½
Hod Carriers	.90	.80
Laborers	.75	.72½
Lathers	1.25	1.12½
Painters	1.25	1.12½
Hoisting Engrs	1.12½	No cut
Plasters	1.50	1.37½
Iron Workers	1.25	1.12½
Roofers	.85	No cut
Sht. Mtl. Wrkrs.	1.12½	No cut
Struc. Iron Wrkrs.	1.25	1.12½

MINERS' LOCAL RAISES FUNDS FOR PRISONERS

KINCAID, Ill., March 5.—Local Union No. 1807, of the U. M. W. of A., is standing solidly behind the Sacco-Vanzetti Committee, as well as for all other class war prisoners. In spite of the policy among the miners, which is well known the country over, our membership felt the necessity of doing more than merely passing a resolution protesting against the electrocution of our fellow workers.

At the last meeting of the local, which was very well attended, the membership decided to assess themselves 50 cents each. This amounts to $440.00. A protest meeting will also be held and we feel sure it will be a successful affair. Please give space to this in the T. U. E. L. page of the DAILY WORKER as it may be an incentive for others to do likewise.

MARINE WORKER OF I.W.W. URGES R.I.L.U. PLAN

One of An Increasing Number, He Says

CLEVELAND, Ohio.—Being a delegate and member of the Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union 510, of the I. W. W. for two years, having been jailed and deported from Havana, Cuba, during a longshoremen's strike, because I distributed I. W. W. literature in Spanish calling for the unity of all toiling bond slaves of Cuba, I beg leave to state my view of the I. W. W. affiliating with the Red International of Labor Unions.

Knowing that there are an increasing number of wobblies reading ("on the side"), I am sure that the more they read the DAILY WORKER, the more they are convinced that we, as workers, must carry out the program of Marx, put into effect and given the acid test by Lenin.

The I. W. W. theory of revolution, as distinct from the structure of industrial unionism, which is accepted by all revolutionists and upon which the I. W. W. nor anyone else has a patent, is that solely by organising such unions to get control of production, thus capitalism will be overthrown. Simple, isn't it?

We do not seem to know the purpose and role—and there surely must be a purpose and role—of the strike-breaking army and revolution-crushing navy, nor the whole function of the vast machine of state power which, surely, is a real force.

What benefit will it be to the struggle if a group of revolutionary workers should get control of the means of production, when the masses not directly engaged are ignorant of the aims and purposes and act as a crushing weight against the struggle, furnishing scabs and soldiers. These masses must be educated in the simplest way on issues which teach them to regard the capitalist state as an enemy and the revolutionists as friends, and they must be united on the broadest scale possible to fight on that basis.

Since 1905 the I. W. W. has been calling for industrial union solidarity against bourgeois rule. But we have neither affiliated nor entered a united front with the R. I. L. U., a purpose which commands the attention of every true fellow worker. This should be taken up by we revolutionary members within the I. W. W.

A branch secretary told me that if the I. W. W. affiliated with the Red International of Labor Unions, the miracle of squaring the circle would be performed. If that is so, then such a miracle is going to happen, for the revolutionary labor unions of the world simply must be united, and it is in this respect that the R. I. L. U. is taking the leading part.

We must not be forever glued to a constitution written twenty years back, the immediate tasks which confront the I. W. W. today should be met without sectarian blindness instead of continuing to play the role of a stubborn child.

The recent and continuing crisis, which has nearly wrecked the I. W. W., when there was no particular pressure from the outside, convinces many a wobbly that the I. W. W. could not lead the workers, because its leadership cannot be united itself.

Capitalism knows no boundaries when it comes to putting down discontented seamen. Neither do their ships, for vessels of one nation are welcome to another. Capitalists know the need of a united front, thus their power.

We of the I. W. W. should and can show the power of the working class by affiliating, or at least working in close harmony with the revolutionary unions of the R. I. L. U.—and thus demonstrate our power.

Fellow workers, at your next meeting, those of you who are not afraid to let the other members know you can think, and see for yourself, demand that they acquaint themselves with the program and policy of t R. I. L. U. and act accordingly. Po out to them that it is a subject wh is playing the role of a life saver co ing to the rescue of the wrecked a fading I. W. W.

The value of a united front of ma ine transport workers is inestimab Still nothing along that line wil accomplished at the New Orleans co ference. The broadminded Red Inte national is alone bold enough to cle the road to unity of all marine tra port workers. For this it must congratulated and reckoned with.

So, fellow workers, rally to bu the I. W. W. by affiliation to the R International of Labor Unions.

Fred Hager, T. 4-1146.

Green Tries Raising Objections; Council Bluffs Takes No

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, March —William Green, president of the A erican Federation of Labor, see very angry at the Central Labor ion of this city for allowing the Oma militants, David Coutts and Tom M thews, to speak before it on the ch labor question. At least he stated in a letter, alleging that these bro ers were "trators to organized lab and should not be "allowed to take the time of a central body to carry their disruptive work."

Brother Green will be inform that Coutts and Matthews are me bers of bona fide trade unions good standing, that their work been entirely constructive so far the Council Bluffs Central Labor ion is concerned, and that's that!

SILK UNION IS ORGANIZING IN PENNSYLVANI

Paterson Bosses Nee Another Spanking

PATERSON, N. J.—The Associat Silk Workers' Union, which conduc the strike of 8,000 broadsilk weave last fall, has opened offices at All town, Pa., an important silk ce and is planning organization ca paigns in other Pennsylvania cit it was announced at union headqu ters. Increased demand for silk ors their plans.

Move Union With Jobs.

The national organization spri out of the local movement. The ion saw the necessity of expansion cause many Paterson manufactur have transferred their enterprises Pennsylvania where they seek cheap costs.

While the union is attempting consolidate its strike gains the man facturers are losing what little ganization they had. The Broads Manufacturers' association, author much anti-union newspaper propag da during the walkout, no longer any ascertainable office; and the C operative Silk company, a selling ganisation of the smaller manuf turers has practically disbanded. no other branch of the textile ind try is there such little unity am the employers as in the silk divisi

Agreement Being Broken.

In Paterson there is a different fe ing towards the union in the gene public than before the strike. It regarded as a going concern. Anoth test of its strength is probable in t near future, however, for some of t manufacturers are breaking strike s tlement agreements and forgetti about the two-loom system for wh the workers struck.

PARIS COMMUNE PAGEANT TO BE GREATEST EVER

New York Workers to See Mass Action

NEW YORK, March 5.—For the first time in the history of the revolutionary movement, a fitting memorial has been arranged for the Paris Commune. Madison Square, which housed both Lenin Memorial meetings, and which gave the capitalists something to shiver over, will be the scene of the big Paris Commune celebration, on March 15.

The Paris Commune was essentially a product of the youthful revolutionists of Paris. Liebknecht has very well declared that "he who has the youth has the army." And in revolutionary Paris, the youth was with the revolution. The youth, organized in the national guard supplied the delegates to the Paris Commune. The youth supplied the army in the fight against the monarchists from Versailles. The youth were the motivating force in the Paris Commune.

The special feature of the celebration will be the Paris Commune Pageant, a spectacle in which 15,000 comrades will participate. Additional features will be the big workers' choruses and orchestras, involving hundreds of comrades.

The Workers Party and Young Workers' League, which have arranged this affair for the building up of the Communist press, call upon all workers to celebrate the Paris Commune in a practical manner by building up a workers press that will carry on the work of the Communards.

The Young Workers especially should come to the celebration on March 15. A good deal of the proceeds will be devoted to the Young Worker, the organ of the militant young workers, and the revolutionary youth must remember the traditions of the youth of the Paris Commune and be the foremost in the celebration.

Steel Trust Slaves Fail to Buy All Stock Offered Them

NEW YORK, March 5.—The employes of the United States Steel corporation failed to subscribe for the full amount of stock offered them, it was announced at the steel corporation's office here. The employes are offered 100,000 shares of common stock each year, but this year bought only 32,948 shares. 39,470 employes bought the stock. This is the first time in several years that the employes have refused to buy the company's stock.

cates that the famine situation is growing in seriousness and that the Free State government is suppressing the news. The west of Ireland was always the chief stronghold of opposition to British rule and is today the backbone of the opposition to the Free State government. Those hardy peasants fought the landlords for generations and are now bittely opposed to the hangmen who are outdoing British tyranny in its palmiest days, just as the bandit governments of Finland, Latvia, Esthonia, and Poland have outdone the czar in crucifying the workers and peasants of those countries.

Readers of The DAILY WORKER willing to assist in raising money for the famine victims should communicate with T. J. O'Flaherty, secretary of the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee, 19 South Lincoln Street, Chicago, Ill.

WICKS SPEAKS SUNDAY ON 'GERMANY OF TODAY' AT NEW YORK OPEN FORUM

NEW YORK, March 5.—H. M. Wicks will speak on "Germany of Today," at the Brownsville open forum of the Workers (Communist) Party, 1701, Pitkin avenue, Brooklyn, on Sunday, March 8, at 8 p. m.

The death of Ebert has brought Germany again into the limelight of European and international politics, and it is important for the workers to understand the present situation.

Comrade Wicks is an able and well informed speaker, and you will find the lecture highly interesting and instructive.

Workers Party Meets Abramovich Attack in Omaha, Nebraska

OMAHA, Nebr., March 5. — Local Omaha of the Workers Party is becoming very active in its educational work among the Jewish workers of this city.

Meyer Holtman, secretary of the Jewish section of the party, will speak at the Labor Lyceum, Thursday evening, March 12. The newly organized club of Jewish working class women is sponsoring this meeting, which is a guarantee of its success.

In an effort to counteract the effect of the work carried on by the Workers Party, the "right wing socialists" propose to have the counter-revolutionary traitor, Abramovich, for a "lecture" in Omaha. If they carry out their present plans, they will have all the Jewish business men of the city present to show Abramovich how "different" they are in Omaha.

While in Omaha, Holtman will tell the Jewish people here the truth about this Abramovich, both at the mass meeting and also at a banquet which is being arranged in his honor.

GALA MOVIE SHOW IN MILWAUKEE

The showing of "The Beauty and the Bolshevik," at the Pabst Theatre next Saturday, March 7, will be a proud and happy occasion for the workers of Milwaukee. The theatre is one of the finest in the city and the committee in charge has been studying the best presentation methods of the leading theatres and is translating them into working class terms. In the place of the stiffly-starched mannikin ushers by which cunning showmen try to give their patrons the illusion of superiority, there will be friendly young workers to guide the audience to their seats. Of course, there will be costumes—but they wil be on the order of Red Army uniforms.

The able and energetic committee in charge has left nothing undone to assure a crowd. Thousands of invitations have been mailed to sympathizers and to the school teachers who have on past occasions shown their great interest in educational pictures of Russia. Placards are being displayed on the street cars and hundreds of posters are being put up. The measure of success is usually in direct proportion to the hard work put into the arrangements. On this basis the Milwaukee show should be very successful indeed.

Bentleyville, Pa., May 1.

I. W. W. MARINE WORKERS AT NEW ORLEANS MEETING

Agree to Bar Attacks on Political Action

to have you sit in conference with the membership of our organization to devise ways and means of co-operation and unity of action among the several unions of the western hemisphere, attending this conference, thru their delegation and hope that we may be able to work out some definite plan of unified action amongst us to the end of industrial solidarity amongst the seamen of the western hemisphere and the rest of the world.

Isolation of Past a Failure.

"The fundamental cause of our failures in the past has been the lack of unity amongst us, and instead of co-operation we have been acting, each, on our own initiative in matters of strikes, boycotts, and other acts in furtherance of working class education and advancement to a better social condition in life.

"In the past our actions and efforts have failed completely or were only partly successful due to this policy of isolation, and so we meet today in an effort to come to some understanding with you and your membership on this fundamental policy of co-operation which is the only hope for the working class in its battle with reaction and oppression.

Death to Isolation—Onward to Class Unity!

"We plan the death of our former policy of isolation in this conference, and in its place we plan action in our struggles against our oppressors, the capitalistic class. We are carrying out this program based on the class struggle of society.

"We have many times received communications from you pertaining to boycotts and strikes in the marine industry. Many times when you and the membership of your respective organizations have been on strike or in conflict with the employers, we have been working and unconsciously helping the employers to defeat you and your fellow workers in wage wars against your employers, and vice versa.

Face Capitalist International.

"If at those particular times we had been working under some definite plan of co-operation and unity of acton, we believe that the final results of these conflicts would have been inevitable victory for the workers taking part in these strikes and demonstrations.

"The capitalistic ship owners are organized on an international basis, and the United Fruit company, Atlantic Fruit company, Sinclair Oil company, Standard Oil company, Ward Line, Munsen Line, Morgan Line, Luckenbach Line and several others, oppress all of us in their campaign for profits and industrial autocracy.

Workers Internationalism Imperative

"It is up to us to combat them with their own weapon, internationalism. They have been able to oppress us in the past thru our lask of organization on the international basis,' and as soon as were are able to show an international aspect, they will be helpless to drive us as they have in the past, as our numbers will overwhelm the opposition that they may use against us.

"We have many resolutions an suggestions to offer for your earnest consideration and approval, and hope that we may be able to look back at this date some time in the future and know that this was the beginning of an international understanding between the marine transport workers for the advancement of the working class as a whole.

Strike Planned for Spring.

"We plan a strike in the spring of this year to rectify the abominable conditions prevailing, and hope that the delegates to this conference will consider this question and act favorably on it, so that we may have an international strike if conditions warrant it, and opportunity affords a successful termination of it.

"We again wish you success in your efforts and you can rest assured that we and the membership of M. T. W. 510, I. W. W., will co-operate with you to the best of our ability for a successfuly termination of this conference, and we will co-operate with you in your economic actions in the future.

"Signed: Ed. Jeppon, general organization committee chairman; Frank Patino, East Coast; Hector McRae, Gulf District; August Walquist, West Coast; John Breeze, Great Lakes; T. P. Sullivan, secretary-treasurer."

Excludes Anti-Political Attacks

The committee on resolutions then presented the following which was adopted:

"Whereas, the I. W. W. is an industrial organization, and

"Whereas, the majority of the other unions represented have political connections, therefore be it

"Resolved, that none of the I. W. W. delegates shall criticize the politics of the other unions in their believing in joint political action, as this will not tend to bring harmony amongst all the delegates assembled."

The conference then adjourned until ten o'clock Tuesday morning.

labor unions object to making it illegal to strike in violation of an agreement between an employer and his employees, or any employer and any labor unions object to making it illelabor union? Similarly, of what use was an arbitration award if it was not binding?"

Clause D provided that on any railroad or public utility a "fair and reasonable offer of arbitration must first be made to and rejected by the parties against whom the demands are pending". Wells thought this a necessary protection for the people of the state, since 85 per cent of the food stuffs came from outside of the state.

Clause E required a written request presented to the other party, and "a reasonable time given for their consideration". A strike or lockout is rendered illegal where "there is no trade dispute involving issues of direct benefit to the acting parties" and G. "to prevent or terminate the employment of any person because of membership or non-membership in any labor union". Wells declared that all these provisions were already in the common law laid down by the supreme court of the state.

Others appearing in favor of the bill were representatives of the Manufacturers' Associations of Hartford and Bridgeport.

Labor in Opposition.

All the labor representatives were opposed to the bill. The main argument by the trade union officialdom was that there were already sufficient laws to handle anything unlawful; that relations between the employers and employes for the last few years had been quite harmonious. Secretary Egan of the State Federation of Labor, opened the discussion, and E. C. Hotchkiss of the machinists, contended that the workers and not the courts should have the right to determine when they should strike.

Defiant Speech of a Communist.

Speaking on behalf of the Workers (Communist) Party, District Organizer Simons condemned the tone of harmony between labor and capital shown by both sides. Even the bill was called by the labor baiters one on "unwarranted industrial warfare". He complimented the bosses on their frankness (which drew an admission later from their representatives that a "strike was in a sense, war"), thus proving the existence of the class struggle. The Kansas industrial court law had been smashed by a strike, and he predicted the same result here. The railway labor board was shown to be a tool of the railroad interests, with no power against the owners but ripping the workers' organizations full of holes.

The present wage cutting campaign in the state of Connecticut revealed the rapacity of the open shoppers in the New Haven Clock Shop and other plants. The monstrous profits of the Scovill Mfg. C. of Waterbury were laid bare. Extra dividents of 103 per cent in 1916 and 140 per cent in 1917, and a stock divident of 200 per cent in November 1922 proved that wage cutting was not justified. Comrade Simons demanded to know, since the manufacturers were so zealous in protecting workers as they claimed, why they did not guarantee the worker the right to a job?

And if the open shop interests gave financial aids to bosses in other states, and the bosses joined Chambers of Commerce which were even international in their scope, why should not workers be allowed to help their striking brothers? He justified the Boston police strike (which the labor representatives did not do) showing that after the strike, wages were increased to $1,100 a year (the wage before the strike being $900). The increase went to strikebreakers, the strikers being refused their jobs. He denounced arbitration as a weapon to oppress the workers (while the labor leaders pointed out that it was working satisfactorily, and did not require the imposition of penalties).

Capitalists Warned

The goal of the Communists was given as ownership and control of the factories, etc. by the workers, under a workers' and farmers' government.

While Comrade Simons was speaking, there was a hurried consultation between the commisioner of labor and the members of the committee on labor; but the speech was not interrupted. It was the first time in the history of ocnservative, republican party dominated Connecticut, that a Communist spoke at a legislative hearing.

The speech was well received by some representatives of a local carpenters's union, and Comrade Simons was invited to address the local union in the near future.

SOVIET RUSSIA SHOWS BIG GAIN IN 1924 OUTPUT

Kellogg Is Expected to Ask Recognition

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 5.—Information that the industrial output of Soviet Russia for 1924 was $788,750,000, or a gain of 25 per cent over the previous year has made Coolidge administration politicians sit up and take notice.

The Russian Review also reports that the state bank is increasing its capital to $50,000,000 and the bank for foreign trade is increasing its capital resources to $15,000,000.

Senator Borah, chairman of the foreign relations committee of the senate, is said to be contemplating a speaking trip to prepare the American people for restoration of diplomatic and commercial relations with Soviet Russia. He will go as far west as San Francisco it is reported. Borah said he does not contemplate bringing the issue of Soviet recognition before the senate in its brief special session beginning March 4, but expects Secretary of State Kellogg to act without waiting for instructions from congress.

Turks Not Fooled by Chamberlain's Recent Attacks on Russia

MOSCOW, March 5. — Angora reports that Turkish political circles have been carefully watching Mr. Chamberlain's conversations at Paris and Rome, in view of rumors that these conversations have a bearing on the interests of Turkey.

The Constantinople press remarks that Mr. Chamberlain and those British interests which he represents are worried over the consolidation of Soviet-French and Franco-Turkish relations. As for Chamberlain's statements regarding bolshevist propaganda in the East, the Turkish papers maintain that this is but an excuse for bringing further pressure on the British colonies. The Egyptian affair, the refusal to refer the Mosul issue to the league of nations, the rejection of the Soviet-British treaty and the frank return to secret diplomacy—all this, they say, evidently shows that England is entering upon the path of strengthening her imperialistic policy.

The Hakimiet Milliey, a leading Angora organ, notes that while the British have been purposely pointing everywhere to the "Bolshevist danger," they have arranged against Bolshevism all the apparatus of European reaction. "It is, however, an open secret"—ironically remarks the paper—"that the anti-British feeling in the colonies has been called to life thru England's own faults." The author concludes by saying that it is "naive and futile" to hope, as Mr. Chamberlain does, that the British government will be able easily to solve this knotty problem.

COOLIDGE DEFENDS MILLIONAIRE TAX DODGERS IN ATTEMPT TO KILL INHERITANCE TAX ON RICH

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

President Coolidge's broadside against the federal inheritance tax as socialistic calls attention to the immense wealth concentrated in the small minority he represents. The inheritance tax returns suggest that he is ready to brand as socialism any attempt to curb a hereditary oligarchy of multimillionaires.

Only about 1 per cent of the persons over 25 years of age who died in 1923 left over $50,000, the lower limit of estates subject to the tax. There were 13,013 such estates with an aggregate value of $2,494,978,471.

Huge Concentration Shown.

These estates of the well-to-do minority were touched by the federal tax collector by only 2¾ per cent of their gross value, the entire tax collected by the government amounting to $68,090,266.

But the concentration of wealth in a few hands is much more serious than these figures for the group show, and Coolidge evidently feels called upon to speak for the small fraction of a per cent of those dying who leave millionaire estates. The 13,013 estates included in 1923 returns may be grouped:

Size of net estate	Number	Average estate gross
Under $250,000	11,651	$ 116,600
$250,000 to $750,000	862	562,500
$750,000 to $1,500,000	196	1,332,000
$1,500,000 to $3,000,000	68	2,443,000
$3,000,000 to $5,000,000	25	4,443,000
$5,000,000 to $7,000,000	4	6,461,000
$7,000,000 to $10,000,000	6	9,620,000
Over $10,000,000	1	23,636,631

The 1,362 estates out of 13,013 in which the net estate was over $250,000 were relatively so much larger than the others that they totaled over 45 per cent of the aggregate value of all estates reported to the revenue bureau. Their total was $1,136,200,045.

In the Dead Hands of a Few.

Those leaving estates of $1,000,000 or more numbered only 197, less than 1½ per cent of the 13,013 returns. Yet they died possessed of estates aggregating $738,122,524 or nearly 30 per cent of the total covered by all the tax returns.

The exaggeration practiced by Coolidge and other special pleaders for these large estates is apparent. The federal estate tax took just about 6 per cent of the total estate of the 197 millionaires, or a total tax of $45,907,152. The tax on the largest estate amounted to $5,321,479 or about 18½ per cent, leaving $23,315,152 to provide for the rich man's funeral and other obligations and make sure that his heirs need not work for a living.

Congress Prepared to Adjourn Until Its December Term

WASHINGTON, March 5—Wielding the party lash, administration leaders today jammed thru the dying congress the $54,000,000 second deficiency appropriation bill, which had been used as a weapon in the senate by the western farm bloc in its efforts to force a sepcial session for the consideration of farm relief legislation.

Passage of the bill removed the last obstacle to an adjournment of congress until next December. As passed the bill was stripped of all public building appropriations, but carried large sums to meet debts incurred by the various government departments during the current fiscal year.

Wants "Convention" of I.W.W. "Members" Who Don't Pay Dues

SEATTLE, Wash.—Joe Weight, one of the myriad investigators who streamed into Chicago from this section last summer to probe the headquarters of the I. W. W. returning with as many reports as there were investigators, has managed to have a branch at Lowbridge, of the badly split Construction Workers Industrial Union 310, pass favorably upon his idea of a "convention" to be held at this city in May.

The idea of who should be represented at such a "convention" could only occur to any I. W. W. who is hopelessly at sea (as most of them are, however) in the present controversy. Weight wants a "convention" with only those admitted who have paid dues to neither the Chicago administration or to the Rowan faction, which is engineering a split—or trying to.

This incident illustrates the tragically sad condition of the I. W. W. in the northwest and shows how little the basic condition of unionism, unity in the union and on the job against the boss regardless of varying opinions and differences with the officialdom, is understood by the membership of this district. It shows, moreover, that when this principle is disregarded, the union will disintegrate.

March Number of Russian Review Is Interesting

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 5.—Two interviews in the Russian Review for March 1, with Krassin, Soviet ambassador to France, and with Tchitcherin, commissar for foreign affairs, treat of the latest diplomatic developments. Krassin sketches the results of resumed relations with France and gives an insight into problems to be settled at forthcoming conferences, while Tchitcherin sees in the new agreement with Japan the completion of the Soviet Union's circle of friendship in the far east and the transformation of the complex of international relations.

Educational and scientific circles will be interested in the announcement that the Russian information bureau, Washington, D. C., is to represent the joint information bureau of Moscow in an effort to bring the cultural spheres of the two countries into contact by exchanges of publications, professors, etc.

A number of items on banking in this issue demonstrates that the Soviet Union's credit institutions are rapidly growing in step with expanding agriculture, industry and commerce. The state bank is bringing its capital up to $50,000,000, while the bank for foreign trade is increasing its capital resources to $15,000,000 to meet the enlarged needs of the export and import trade.

NEW YORK BACKS SACCO-VANZETTI IN LIFE FIGHT

Masses Wade Thru Rain to Protest Frame-up

NEW YORK, March 5.—Throngs of men and women of the working class waded thru a heavy rain to attend the Sacco-Vanzetti mass meeting at the Central Opera House Sunday afternoon and renewed their pledge of solidarity in the fight to liberate the two victims that face the electric chair under the vicious "justice" of American capitalism.

Any who have thot that the Sacco-Vanzetti case can be forgotten or neglected must have felt guilty of a huge misunderstanding of the temper of the working class as the waves of demonstration resounded in response to the call for the speedy liberation of the two men who have fallen into the clutches of a crew of blood thirsty hangmen.

Climax of Red Baiting.

"The climax of the red raids conducted by A. Mitchell Palmer in 1920 was the arrest of Sacco and Vanzetti," said Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, chairman "and now after five years of waiting for final action the two martyrs are still in jail. The appeal to the supreme court of Massachusetts will be made next month or the month after."

She related the statement made to her at a recent visit with the imprisoned comrades who said: "We have no faith in the capitalist courts, but we have much faith in the working class. If the working class fails us we are lost."

Contradictory Evidence.

Moissaye J. Olgin spoke in Jewish and showed how contradictory was the evidence at the trial. He pointed out that 22 witnesses swore they had seen Sacco and Vanzetti far from the place of the crime with which they were charged on the day it was committed, and only 4 testified for the state, and these have later made affidavits that they were mistaken. He also showed how the experts had declared that the mortal bullet could not have been fired out of Sacco's pistol, but in spite of all that the men are still held.

Flag Waving Justice.

Juliet Stewart Poyntz showed how ridiculous it was for the judge to go into spasms over patriotism and loyalty to the country and the flag in his charge to the jury when no such question was raised. "In no ordinary criminal case is the loyalty of the defendant to flag and country made part of the arguments," said the speaker. "For a judge to tell the jury to do its duty even as the soldiers did theirs in the trenches in France removes this case from one of murder to that of persecution for political ideals. Shall Sacco and Vanzetti die? Then millions of workers shall know the reason why."

Professor Felice Guardagni of Boston, who was one of the witnesses and who has been a lifelong friend of the martyrs spoke in Italian, and gave detailed facts in one of the most notorious cases of miscarriage of justice during the present century.

The meeting was held under the joint auspices of the Workers Party and the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee. A collection of $223 was taken up.

Viking Sea Captain to Make Trans-Arctic Air Trip Over U. S. S. R.

MOSCOW, March 5.—At a meeting of the Norwegian Geographic Society, the German sea captain, Bruns, read a report on his project of a Trans-Artic air-route over the U. S. S. R. The same captain Bruns read his paper at Stockholm and Helsingfors, and everywhere evoked a great amount of interest.

It is learned that in the coming spring a Zepplin, specially built for the purpose, will leave Murmansk and fly over in the direction of Alaska, to explore the Arctic regions in question. Prof. Nansen has agreed to go at the head of this expedition.

Prof. Nansen considers that Captain Bruns' project is quite practicable and certainly most important for the study of fundamental questions of the Polar oceanography and meteorology.

BUILDERS AT WORK

LOS ANGELES DID IT!

YESTERDAY, in this column, we told how European BUILDERS of the Communist press successfully used the method of getting correspondence on shop conditions and distributing the paper at the place written about. We suggested this method to enable the DAILY WORKER to reach the circulation of other great Communist newspapers.

As the words were on the press we received a story by Wm. Minte of Los Angeles on a large local department store with an order for 500 copies, to be distributed to the employees. This story headed: "May Co. Begins Big Wage Slash in Los Angeles" went on the front page of the issue of March 4, because of its importance and for greater effectiveness.

Without solicitation, these comrades in Los Angeles and the author of the article in particular, realize the importance of this splendid propaganda method. They hit exactly on the one way that as much as any other, will build not only our DAILY WORKER but our Workers (Communist) Party as well.

We offer this method to other BUILDERS of the Communist movement, to locals and DAILY WORKER Committees to "paste in their hat" for immediate use as "sure-fire" ways of making the DAILY WORKER in the second year of its existence a greater weapon, to gain a stronger Communist foot-hold in the stronghold of world capital.

SHOP NUCLEI ARE HARD AT WORK IN MORE CITIES

Find Work Among Miners at Orient and Dowell

The shop nucleus in Dowell, Ill., made up of miners is functioning and writes in very briefly to the District No. 8, Workers Party as follows.

"Sold $11.75 campaign fund stamps. Resolution on child labor passed some time ago by Local Union 3703, also the one on Sacco-Vanzetti. The one on Michigan defense was lost 11 for and 14 votes against.

"In regard to The DAILY WORKER policies, I have so far been able to send in $9.00."

"Secretary, Dowell, Ill. Shop Nucleus.

"P. S.—The Young Workers' League branch will soon be reorganized here, too."

Active in Oil Town.

Whiting, Indiana, District No. 8, Workers Party is also taking up shop nuclei question seriously and discussed the question at the last city central committee. However, in order to clarify all of the members, the city central committee called a membership meeting for Thursday, March 5, and asked for a district speaker.

The district committee sent Comrade George Maurer to take this matter up fully in order that the Whiting comrades can go ahead with the shop nuclei reorganisation.

Reach Miners at Orient.

A shop nucleus in Orient, Ill. is functioning well as indicated from the report of the secretary who writes in part as follows:

"Our shop nucleus meets very regularly with good attendance. At our last meeting we accepted a new member, subject to the approval of the city central committee. We also took up the child labor campaign with United Mine Workers of America, Local 303, with success, also the Sacco-Vanzetti defense campaign. The local elected a committee to arrange for a mass meeting in West Frankfort and also to interview other locals to co-operate with us.

"But, as our membership is divided, living in two towns four miles apart, I believe we have been very successful so far. Fraternally yours, Secretary, Shop nucleus, Orient, Ill."

LONDON.—The Daily Mail today printed a Geneva despatch stating that the construction of the world's largest observatory on Mount Saleve, 4,000 feet above sea level, has been started.

Union Oil Syndicate Reports Sale of 75,000 Tons of Oil to France

MOSCOW, March 5.—The Union Oil Syndicate reports the conclusion of a contract for the sale of 75,000 tons of crude oil to the French ministry of navy.

This deal is acclaimed with great satisfaction by the business circles of Moscow, as they hold optimistic views on the prospects of developing the exportation of Soviet oil to France "This is our first big deal with the French government," Mr. Lomoff, chairman of the Oil Syndicate told a Rosta correspondent, "and in many respects it is more important to us than if we had just sold double that quantity to the Standard Oil or the Shell Co. We feel confident," concluded the head of the Russian Syndicate, "that the supplying of the French market with Soviet crude oil will gradually become of a permanent and more extensive nature."

Borglum is Indicted.

DECATUR, Ga., March 5.—Gutzon Borglum, noted sculptor, today was indicted by the De Kalb grand jury on three counts, charging him with malicious mischief, larceny, and larceny from from a house, following his destruction of working models for the confederate memorial he had been carving on Stone Mountain near here.

OMAHA LISTENS TO 'INDEPENDENT THINKERS'' THOTS

Workers Decide That They're Neither

OMAHA, Nebr., March 5.—The complete bankruptcy and death of both the so-called socialist and LaFollette movements was strikingly demonstrated when J. L. Beebe and Pater Mehrens, LaFolletite and socialist respectively, reported to the Omaha Independent Club last Monday evening on the Chicago convention and burial of the C. P. P. A.

Both Beebe and Mehrens allowed themselves to sink into the mud and attack the Communists, but Mehrens showed that he is at least sincere and has some little respect for the truth. While Beebe stated that the convention represented "the greatest gathering of independent thinkers in the history of America," Mehrens declared that it was "the grandest aggregation of political tricksters and horse traders he had ever been among."

Has Enuf But Wants More.

While Beebe pretended enthusiasm for the "new third party" Mehrens stated that he had enuf of the "bankupt middle class" and would stick by the socialist (!) party.

Not realizing that they already made themselves appear more than sufficiently ridiculous, these gentlemen then launched into silly attacks on the Communists to further prove their complete lack of both mental and moral decency. Beebe quoted the stale lies of Abramovich, while Mehrens declared that the Communists were "out to disrupt every organisation, including this club." Beebe pretended to be very much wrought-up about the Abramovich lie to the effect that 5,000 of Beebes' beloved "independent thinkers" are languishing in "Russian dungeons, as victims of the cruel Communists."

Quite a Contrast.

The comment of the majority present showed that the striking difference between the up-and-coming Workers Party in contrast to the dying La Follette and "socialist" movements is being recognised by the masses of the workers.

It is characteristic of dying movements that they should vent their spleen on the living. Beebe and Mehrens seem to be no exception to the rule.

Fomenting Race War in Washington, D. C.

The story of the organized move to segregate the Negro population of Washington, D. C., which we published yesterday, shows that most of those who breathe the poisonous atmosphere of the nation's capital have learned nothing from the race wars that have broken out from time to time under the shadow of the capitol's dome.

As usual, the real estate sharks, an element whose close connection with the underworld has never been given the publicity it deserves, are the moving spirits in a campaign that can result only in bloodshed. The Negroes are being forced north by the same historical factors that sent wave after wave of white workers westward to the now vanished frontier—pressure of population, persecution and industrial development—economic and political pressure.

The Negroes are here. They, unlike the European immigrants, did not make the choice of location. They cannot be placed on reservations like the few hundred thousand Indians, neither can they be deported like foreign-born workers who put the interests of the working class ahead of loyalty to the oppressors and their state.

It is useless, of course, to urge upon the middle-class groups who look upon the Negro as fit only for the most menial tasks, inferior to the noble Nordic prune-peddlers, the only way of solving the race problem, i. e. accepting the Negro as an equal and treating him as such. Segregation is prima facie evidence of hostility to the Negro, as an individual and as a race. It will intensify the friction by creating in the whites an intolerable attitude of superiority and in the Negroes a justifiable resentment which will and does find expression in spite of lynching, burnings, denial of social, political and economic equality.

Our social system is, of course, in the hands of parasites, but that is no reason why even in a stronghold of theirs like Washington, matters in which the lives and happiness of thousands are involved, should be left to the sinister control of "realtors" whose idea of the solution of the race problem is to patronize Negro prostitutes, "to change their luck" while always referring to the Negro masses as "those black bastards."

There is a great opportunity for the Communists in Washington to make the revolutionary position on the race question clear to both black and white workers.

The medical profession should take a great interest in Mussolini's influenza. It is the only case on record caused by overindulgence in murder.

Making a Mussolini

General Dawes did his stuff yesterday in the best vaudeville headliner style and that is the kind of thing that goes big with the boys who read the headlines and the sport pages—the great American electorate.

We hope that none of our readers will think that we are partial to General Dawes because we live in his home town, but we say again he is the white-haired boy picked by Wall Street for the 1928 race and that he is right now the real boss of the White House.

The "quiet dignity" picture of Coolidge created by clever publicity men went well in the last campaign, but to the red blooded American there was something lacking. The rotarians and kiwanises like the lads that whoop it up, and the noisy general gives them what they like.

This is the only country in the world where a proven bank crook without the sense that an all-wise providence is said to have given geese, by the use of a deformed pipe and a loud voice, could become a popular hero. His attack on the senate, which ignores all of the host of fundamental faults of that body, will arouse great popular acclaim. It would bring loud cheers from all the babbittry even if it had been made by Doctor Cook. The senate is about as popular as the bubonic plague and even General Dawes has the wit to know that.

It is said that the inaugural address of the general is the sensation of Washington and we have no doubt that it is. We said recently that Cal would run a poor second when Dawes reached the capital for the very good reason that Cal is "something the cat brought in" and the process of eliminating him is about to begin.

What we are witnessing is the creation of an American Mussolini. Let us not forget that in addition to being the slavery expert of the House of Morgan, Dawes is also head of the Minute Men of the Constitution, a militarist and labor hater.

With the co-operation of the red light journalists he will soon be anointed savior of the republic from labor unions, the closed shop, vengeance of the almighty and Bolshevism.

"The Leader" Explains

Pity the Milwaukee Leader.

For years it has been neglecting the class struggle for "Hoanesty in government" and now the chambermaids of the German socialist party who minister to the wants of capitalism—German and allied—have gone and spilled the contents of their receptacles all over the landscape. The resulting odor is too much even for socialists who could smell the blood of Liebknecht and Luxemburg and hundreds of Communist workers without a qualm.

The Milwaukee Leader is good—in its way. It has been hypocritical so long that it has long ago lost any sense of decency and it therefore sees nothing incongruous in saying:

> The socialist party the world over seeks to breed a social conscience in place of the present individual selfishness. It needs leaders that deny self, that devote their lives to the noble ideal of human brotherhood, that expect no reward for this work save that of the artist expressing the best, and that cannot be BRIBED, bullied or misled.

The emphasis is ours.

The Leader explains that all the corruption in the German socialist party is due to the fact that the socialist party of Holland once let a banker carry a message for it to Ebert. This banker thus came in contact with the German socialists and seduced them.

This tale may go well in the lounging rooms of Milwaukee's "socialist" policemen, but it will hardly be credited by the workers. The responsible socialist ministers of Germany sold everything they could lay their hands on to the big capitalists and pocketed the proceeds. Minor officials of the Soviet government who did similar things on a smaller scale were shot and this has been one of the chief indictments of the social-democracy against the Russian workers' and peasants' government.

Well, we know now why they were so excited over this effective method of dealing with social traitors.

The Communist press is interested in the corruption of the social democracy's leaders only insofar as it can be used to show the working class what a rotten gang they are. The taking of bribes by the socialist ministers in a capitalist government is after all a small matter compared with the outright purchase of the leadership and machinery of the whole Second International by international capitalism.

It is this kind of bribe taking that we are interested in and this is the charge we have made and proved against these red cross workers of the terror bands of capitalism.

From MacDonald and his biscuit-capitalist angel to Bauer and his banker, Barmat, the whole noisome crew of the Second International is engaged in selling the workers who still follow them into the slave pens of world capitalism.

The Milwaukee Leader recommends the calling of a "purity congress" of the Second International. It is a waste of effort. The only way to purge the Second International is to blot it out in the fire of social revolution—and this will be done.

The Chicago Tribune's jazzy economist Scrutator sees in Russia a future heaven for capitalist exploitation after the Soviet government is driven to complete and abject surrender. The wish is surely father to the thought. This accounts for the refusal of the United States to recognize the Soviet government to date. The above dream would undoubtedly come true if the capitalists and their yellow socialist allies succeeded in overthrowing the proletarian dictatorship.

Indiana Operators Come In

The latest news of the open shop drive against the United Mine Workers of America is that the Indiana operators will take part in the conference to be held March 17.

The Illinois operators look sympathetically at the purposes of the gathering, but so far have not announced their intention of participating. With Kansas, western Pennsylvania and Ohio lined up, with Indiana's coal barons taking an active interest and preparations being made which are of a nature the capitalist press has evidently been ordered not to reveal, it is apparent that the coal operators mean business.

The slack season in coal mining is near and there has been terrible unemployment for more than a year in most of the unionized fields. The coal barons have a lot of finance that they have accumulated for union fighting purposes and which they seem ready now to spend.

With Coolidge and Dawes in Washington, they feel sure that any weakness on their side will be more than discounted by the unusual energy in which the federal government will play its usual role of strikebreaker.

The western Pennsylvania operators, or at least the largest of them, have said that they will close their mines for some time and then open up on an open shop basis. This will probably be the plan followed by operators in other states.

They expect to starve the miners out.

There is enough fighting spirit and reserve force in the United Mine Workers to defeat the coal barons if it is mobilized. In the coming struggle the members of the Workers (Communist) Party and the Trade Union Educational League will be the rallying center for the militants. Their program is the only one that offers hope for the miners.

Build for the Seventh Year of Communist work in the United States under the banner of the Communist International.

Against the fascism of Dawes the workers and poor farmers must raise the fight of the oppressed for Communism.

Coal Miners: Fight the Open Shop!

THE central executive committee of the Workers (Communist) Party has issued the following statement on the open shop drive now being prepared by the coal operators' associations against the United Mine Workers of America:

To the United Mine Workers of America, the members of the organized labor movement and the unorganized workers:

The most powerful coal barons of western Pennsylvania, Ohio and Kansas have said frankly that they will break the Jacksonville agreement with the United Mine Workers of America and have called a conference to organize war on the union.

Owning mines in the non-union West Virginia and Kentucky fields, these enemies alike of organized labor and the whole working class give the hypocritical excuse that non-union competition forces them to reduce wages and worsen working conditions.

THE coal barons of western Pennsylvania, Ohio and Kansas state that their goal is the open shop. In Indiana and Illinois they have the whole hearted support of the coal owners there who simply await a more favorable opportunity for a declaration of war.

The Workers (Communist) Party of America says to the coal miners that they have been chosen again, as they were chosen in 1919, to bear the first brunt of a new open shop offensive which will be directed against the whole labor movement if it is not resisted militantly.

Like the textile workers the coal miners are feeling the effect of the Dawes' plan here in America.

The election of Coolidge (supported by the reactionary Lewis administration of the United Mine Workers of America) has given aid and comfort to every anti-labor element in America. Coolidge, as representative of the Wall Street and the whole group of finance and industrial capital which it symbolizes, is pledged to the open shop. The coal barons will get the full support of the Coolidge government because they and their kind own it.

They will try to reduce the American miners to the same living level as the German miners. The Dawes' plan is internationally directed against the working class.

THE Workers (Communist) Party of America declares that the aid given by the Lewis administration to the anti-working class Coolidge forces, the attack of Lewis and his payroll tools upon the Communists, his revoking of charters of those locals of miners that fought the hardest against the oppression of the bosses and capitalist government, his expulsion of the best fighters in the union because they supported the Communist program or were members of the Workers (Communist) Party, his failure to organize the non-union fields while spending money like water to hound the spokesmen of the militant miners, has encouraged the coal barons to launch their attack, by weakening the union and convincing them that under the present officialdom, the United Mine Workers of America will not be able to make a real fight.

THE Workers (Communist) Party of America warns the miners against being led into a struggle by districts. It declares that the only effective way to fight the open shop offensive of the coal barons is to throw the whole strength of the union into the fray. It urges the miners to be on their guard against anyone who tells them that by localizing the struggles the miners have a better chance to win.

It urges the miners to call upon the whole labor movement to join them and to show to the rest of the unions that this is but the beginning of an attack on labor all along the line as in 1921-22.

The Workers (Communist) Party points out to the coal miners the manner in which the coal barons have broken the "sacred contracts." It maintains that all agreements with the capitalists are only scraps of paper when it suits the purposes of the robber class to break them.

THE coal miners are the best organized workers in the United States. They are the backbone of the labor movement. If their union can be destroyed or seriously weakened, the capitalists will have an easy time with the rest of the unions. The miners must fight and they must be backed by the rest of the unions just as the coal barons are backed by the rest of the capitalist class and the capitalist government.

The Workers (Communist) Party pledges its fullest support to the miners. It urges them to solidify their forces and to set up immediately a united front with the railway organizations who can aid them the most. It urges them to a deal directly with the rank and file of the railway unions to disregard the officials who have already betrayed the interests of their own members and all of the American working class just as the officials of the miners' union have.

THE Workers (Communist) Party of America urges the coal miners to rally to the program of the Trade Union Educational League and the progressive miners, to set up committees of action—shop committee—in each mine.

These shop or pit committees should be centers around which the struggle of the miners is organized. They will naturally be composed of the best fighters and most trustworthy and experienced workers at first but into them should be drawn all the workers employed in the same mine.

THE effective way in which such committees can organize and lead the union members for a fight against wage cuts and a breaking down of working conditions has been shown by the "grievance committees"—which are really shop committees—in the anthracite fields around Scranton and Wilkes Barre. In this district these rank and file committees were able to rally thousands of miners for a fight against violations of the working agreement and to force reinstatement in the union for the locals whose charters had been revoked for going on strike.

SHOP committees are the best means of getting unity of action and developing the fighting qualities of the workers. They do not and cannot take the place of the union but they strengthen and build the union by organizing the best elements of the rank and file for control of the union.

Shop committees are of the rank and file and directly responsible to them. They will fight and win when officialdom is willing to quit and accept failure.

The Workers (Communist) Party urges the coal miners to resist the efforts of those who preach that there is no danger and no need for watchfulness and struggle, to eye carefully each new move of the coal barons, to remember that only rank and file revolutionary discipline can meet and defeat the wavering and treachery of the capitalist politicians in the union.

IT urges them to support the drive for world trade union unity as the best weapon against the Dawes' plan and to assist the Red International of Labor Unions in its efforts to unite the unions of the world in one great body.

Fight Against the Open Shop!

Build the Union!

Organize Shop Committees!

More Wages and Shorter Hours!

Fight the Coal Barons.

Fight the capitalist government that backs the coal barons!

Long live the united front of the workers against American and world capitalism!

Workers (Communist) Party of America.

The Professional Woman in the Class Struggle

By MARY J. REUBEN.

IN ever increasing numbers from the ranks of the proletariat we find women struggling into the professional class. They had seen the women of their class wreck their health and mental opportunities in industry, or in benumbing drudgery in the home, and they had often seen endless tragedy among the women of the masses, and were determined at great sacrifice, to escape from that class, and gain, as they thot, their freedom once and forever.

So that in the colleges, in the public libraries, we see them daily, pale-faced and heavy-eyed young women, cramming at their studies with an earnestness that is almost tragic. In off hours they work as waiteresses, mothers' helpers, as part-time salesgirls, at almost anything, to earn enuf to pay the heavy tuition fees, and after four or five years of this heinous grind, with broken down physique, with every ounce of pep and original thinking knocked out of them, they are still looking forward (with perhaps some slight misgivings) to a "Certificate of Freedom," together with their diplomas.

Then comes the great day of job-hunting, for even "free" people under capitalism must go job hunting, and they find themselves at every step bucking up against an economic system for which they cannot find a single formula in their textbooks to offset the antitoxin. They soon find that in attempting to fight the capitalist system as individuals, they are far worse off than their fellow sisters in the trades who are organized to protect their interests.

Capitalism forces the professionals, in spite of themselves, into organizations. They try desperately to find a name for their organization that will not resemble the word "union." But the more dissimilar the name is from that of "union," the less effective it is.' One notices a conscious straining after something genteel so as to avoid any taint of connection with the labor movement. For that reason, virility and effectiveness are lacking in those organizations, and becomes almost useless as the class struggles are intensified.

In European countries, where the professionals have been reduced to the most degrading poverty, there was no other alternative for them but to join the ranks of the militant workers to overthrow their common enemy. The lessons learned from the European situation is sufficient argument for the professional women to affiliate themselves actively with the militant labor movement in America to apply themselves practically in carrying out the slogans, and participating forcefully in the class struggle.

The opportunities for the professional women in a Communist society are far-reaching and numerous. Capitalism, constantly reaching out a greedy hand for greater profits, and therefore cheaper labor, forces the professional men to organize against the professional women as a competitive force. The men fear the women as competitors who will accept smaller remuneration for their labor, so they organize to the heel, and utilise every advantage of tradition, of usage and convention to keep the women from selling their services more cheaply to the capitalist, and thereby gaining control of the profession. And so capitalism forces the sexes into an economic war that corrupts the ideals and the usefulness of the profession.

Communism aims at eliminating the system of competition and gives the men and women of training and ability an opportunity to put their creative powers to practical use, to benefit society by their labors without draining their strength to solve the bread and butter problem. Also in a period of revolution with one powerful shove of proletarian brawn, the old, stultifying traditions, and superstitions, the obsolete customs, are thrown into the bonfire and burnt in effigy, while new ideas, new inventions, progressive forces are given every opportunity for expansion, and the woman comes into her own.

Let me mention by way of passing that the so-called liberals among the professionals with their "open minds" and their smoke-circle discussions, as well as their periodicals with their prophetic editorials that do not pan out as prophesied, lean back in their Morris chairs and wait for the proletariat to bring about the revolution. Before long violent quakes of economic upheavals will shake them out of their easy chairs and force them into action. Those who are studying the movement seriously, know the value of a preliminary training in the Communist movement. Women especially, who are not inclined for the most part to take an active part in politics, are given every opportunity for developing themselves in the Communist party. It is the duty of every professional woman to join the ranks of the militant workers, and advance with them step by step to a new system of society.

The Communist party is taking the initiative in organizing the women and training them to be efficient workers in the daily class struggle. The task of organizing the women is a difficult one. Capitalist propaganda has so hemmed in the women in a labyrinth of convention and restrictions, that the task of organizing the women outside of those engaged in industry, requires special attention. In recognition of that fact, the Communists have declared an International Women's Day to mobilize the women in all capitalist countries for active work in the movement.

Simultaneously, on March 8, the class conscious women in all countries will be holding huge demonstrations, mass meetings, to arouse their less enlightened sisters to the tasks before them, pledging their active co-operation to create an international Communist form of society. The place of the professional women, one and all, must be within the ranks of the women in industry together with the men fighting for the emancipation of the working class.

Y.W.L. NUCLEUS IS LEADING STRIKE IN NEW YORK SHOP

Young Militants Active in Wage Struggle

NEW YORK, March 5.—For a long time the firm of Greenspans Upholstery, located at 202 E. 100th St., has been operating as an open shop. A few well paid mechanics and the rest young workers who were "learning" the trade and receiving wages in many cases less than $10 a week, made up the working force. Very little effort has been made by the union up to this time to organize the shop.

Thru the agitation and activity of league members in the shop, the workers emanded a raise in salary, and improvement in the conditions of work. This was followed by the firing of some of the workers and the employment of new "learners." The league members became active and succeeded in bringing about a strike which tied up the factory.

Thru negotiations the union was engaged to take charge of the strike. The league members organized into a nucleus is very energetic in keeping the fight going and contributing largely in the activity. The strikers demand: the recognition of the union, that the discharged workers be taken back and are not to be discriminated against, a union scale of wages based on the same rate in the union shop, 44-hour week, etc. There is day and night picketing and up to the present moment no scabs have been obtained by the boss. The union is very actively engaged in the strike.

This is another overwhelming proof of the superiority of the shop nuclei form of organization. This nucleus of the league has demonstrated that with activity based in the shop, results are forthcoming.

parts of the country. These plans will be announced in the near future. There is no doubt that this news will be welcomed with enthusiasm by both the Young Workers League members and the Workers Party.

Some time ago when we wrote an article announcing the inauguration of the Intensive Training Course we expected a most excellent response on the party of the party members to this new great stride forward in our work, but the response we have gotten thus far has excelled our expectations several-fold. Comrades who have been selected for this work, have eagerly responded, appreciating the necessity of the work.

Comrades who have heard of the school have written in from all over the country, congratulating the party on this step.

Rochester, N. Y., Notes

Sacco-Vanzetti Meeting.

Upon the initiative of the Workers (Communist) Party of Rochester, a Sacco-Vanzetti protest meeting was held on Feb. 28. Syndicalist and other labor groups participated. After some negotiations the hall of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers was obtained and speakers, with Joseph Ettor as the leading one, were chosen. B. Sussman, of the Workers Party, was designated as chairman. About one-half hour before the time of the opening of the meeting, officials of the A. C. W. put in an objection to Comrade Sussman as chairman, and the arbitrary condition was laid down that the use of the hall would be refused unless Sussman withdrew as chairman.

Placing the interest of the gathering above all other conspirators, Comrade Sussman withdrew, another chairman was selected and the meeting was held. All of which shows to what length the reactionary elements in the American labor movement will go to gain what they in their littleness imagine advances their own selfish scheme.

YOUNG WORKERS FIGHT WAGE CUT IN N. Y FACTORY

Organize Picket Line in Wire Strike

NEW YORK, March 5.—In the Automatic Wire company, a strike was called, after the company decided to reduce the wages. A member of the local Young Workers' League was instrumental in bringing about this action. The workers in this plant were employed under the most brutal system of exploitation. The speed-up system and piece work, characterizes the mode of production in this shop. Many young employes have been crippled as a result of the dizzy speed at which they were expected to work. After working each week for 49½ hours, the workers only received an average salary of 20-25 dollars.

Union Officials Against Negroes.

The league membership succeeded by activity in inspiring the workers and to it direction was looked for.

The International Association of Machinists was approached. The only contribution of the representative of the union in the situation was the flimsy excuse that because of the large number of Negro workers, it would be very inadvisable to take steps towards organization, since they were on strike. The Young Workers' League thru its speakers, continued then to press the necessity of organization and organized the men to resist the wage cut. Demands were put up and picket duty organized. The participation of the league demonstrates that it is the only organization representing the interests of the young workers and fights for them.

League Members Arrested for Picket Duty.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Two league members, Eda Elsman, Bessie Elsman and six other members of the Brownsville branch have been arrested while on the picket line against the white goods industry.

AS WE SEE

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

NOW it can be told! Not that we care a thraneen (Gaelic for a very thin blade of a certain grass) whether the Archduke Francis Ferdinand of Austria was shot, or hanged, drawn and quartered, but as his death was the spark that exploded the powder magazine of Europe in 1914, news of the plot that led to his death is of interest. Until now it was believed that some nationalist student, acting under the orders of a nationalist organization, was solely responsible for the assassination, but according to an article written by Arthur Ponsonby, undersecretary for foreign affairs in the MacDonald cabinet, the Serbian government planned the murder.

THE assassination was hatched by the head of the intelligence section of the Serbian general staff, with the knowledge and connivance of the Serbian government. The president of the Serbian parliament has made this confession in writing. It is quite likely that the Serbian government was acting in 1914 under the orders of the British government as it is today.

AN old man with bushy whiskers died a few days ago. He was worth about 200 million dollars. He was one of the wealthiest men in the world. His income was so enormous that he never took the trouble to get the low down on it. One mine alone enriched him to the tune of $12,000,000 a year. He was one of the principal owners of the state of Montana and was director in several companies. His passing does not stop one wheel from moving. The strike of a few thousand garbage collectors in Chicago was of greater moment to millions of people than the death of a man who had the economic lives of hundreds of workers in the hollow of his hand.

THE tory government of England is in a delicate situation. During the election campaign one of the promises made by the extreme reactionaries was that a bill would be passed thru the parliament prohibiting trade unions from using their general funds for political purposes. Of course, the funds of the trade unions went to the labor party. The die hards in the tory party insist on keeping this promise, despite the reluctance of the cabinet to go on a trouble hunting expedition. The fact is that British labor is now considerably more militant than when the labor party government was in office. The ascendancy of the pro-Soviet element and the comparative fall from grace of MacDonald, Clynes, Hodges and company has keyed the spirits of the British workers to a high pitch and it looks as they were ready for a scrap.

THE Baldwin cabinet does not care to rouse the lion. Even such a fire eater as Churchill is opposed to pressing the bill. The die hards, however, insist on a vote and it is likely that the bill will be defeated as the tories are split on it and the liberals will vote with the labor party. The victory of the tories in the recent elections was not so overwhelming that it can stand severe punishment. The workers had a chance to scratch their heads since then, and the recent visit of their trade union delegates to Russia would make it difficult for another "Zinoviev" fake letter to be put over on them.

THE report of the voting in the recent miners' election is very interesting. John L. Lewis polled only

AN ANALYSIS OF 100 PER CENT PRODUCT OF AMERICAN EDUCATION

NEW YORK, March 5.—Nicholas Murray, the Butler, head of Columbia University, may well be proud of his handiwork.

Of course, passing an amendment to the constitution guarding children from being turned into dollars and morons in factories is contrary to the spirit of America. Furthermore, it tends to break up the American home. Therefore, scions of American families who are educated in his diploma factory called Columbia University, are imbued with a spirit to thoroly uphold American traditions.

Here is a smaple of their ideals as shown by answers to a questionaire just circularized among the class about to graduate and to assume intellectual leadership among the American bourgeoisie:

Liquor is the favorite drink of the majority of the class.

They expect to marry for money and not for the bunk—love.

Within five years from date of graduation they expect to earn $[illegible]000 per year.

Sixty out of the hundred and sixty do not read a daily newspaper.

How it that for equipment for intellectual giants?

LEGATE FROM FAMINE REGION COMING TO U. S.

Thousands Face Death from Starvation

John Patrick McCarthy, representative of the International Workers' Aid in the famine regions of the west of Ireland, is coming to the United States shortly to solicit aid for the starving workers and peasants according to a statement issued today from the headquarters of the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee at 19 South Lincoln street.

McCarthy has covered the sections of the west coast, most severely hit by the famine. The following cable from Killorglin, county Kerry, was received from McCarthy yesterday by T. J. O'Flaherty, secretary of the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief committee:

"Will leave for United States at once. Thousands in danger of death from hunger. Urge aid be sent at once to relieve distress. Workers and peasants rely on United States comrades.—McCarthy."

McCarthy will speak at a series of meetings in the eastern part of the country after his arrival. Demonstrations for relief are already arranged for in some of the larger cities.

Endorse Relief Committee.

The entire machinery of the International Workers' Aid is now turned over to famine relief according to George Maurer, secretary of the I. W. A. Requests for contribution lists are pouring into the national office daily.

Among the first to endorse the work of the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee is Angela Murphy, secretary of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic in West Virginia. Miss Murphy has been intensely active in the movement for Irish freedom and was mainly responsible for the showing made by West Virginia in raising of funds during the Black and Tan fight in Ireland. She is an ardent Irish republican, and an active worker for the progressive labor movement in the United States.

All who desire to help in Irish famine relief work should immediately communicate with Irish Workers' and Peasants' Famine Relief Committee, 19 South Lincoln street, Chicago, Ill.

28 LEGISLATURES ON RECORD FOR CHILD SLAVERY

Only Three States in Favor of Law

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 6.—Rejection of the proposed child labor amendment to the federal constitution by the Missouri house of representatives on March 4, brings the total number of disapprovals, by one or both branches of state legislatures up to twenty-eight.

The ratifications remains three, namely, Arizona, California and Wisconsin; partial ratification has been recorded in New Mexico, and a vote rescinding previous approval has been passed in Arkansas.

Ten legislatures now in session—Colorado, Florida, Illinois, Iowa, New Hampshire, Maine, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island and West Virginia—are expected to act and indications favor rejection of the amendment in all of them.

It is also presumable that there is little adoption sentiment in the five states—Alabama, Kentucky, Mississippi, Maryland and Virginia—whose legislatures have no session this year.

MINERS TRY TO END WAR WITH WARREN S. STONE

CHARLESTON, West Va., March 6.—A committee of four representing the Coal River Collieries company, which is owned by members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the United Mine Workers of America is in session here in an effort to reach an agreement in the dispute between the union and the coal company over the non-union policy of Warren S. Stone, chairman of the board of directors of the coal company.

Stone is a well known reactionary labor leader, and is director in several coroprations and banking syndicate. He is a republican in politics, as is his rival, John L. Lewis.

DETROIT CARPENTERS IN COURT ANSWER INJUNCTION "PRAYED FOR" BY HUTCHESON'S OFFICIALS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., March 3.—(By Mail.)—Hutcheson's tools in Detroit spent today in court trying to establish that William Reynolds should be jailed for life or some shorter period for violating an injunction issued in answer to a "prayer" by them alleging that Reynolds was just about to wreck the whole organization by his mere presence at the meetings. Such is the potency of Communists in the opinion of these skates.

The major argument of the defense turned upon the point that the right of assembly guaranteed by the constitution cannot be abridged by any law or court order. Many prior points of law which, in the opinion of the defense, might be sufficient to disqualify the injunction were raised and argued.

Spoiled Perfectly Good Paper.

The judge, Ormond Hunt, suggested from the bench that the argument of the defense was that the paper bearing the restraining order was a perfcetly good piece of paper until the restraining order with the signature of the court was inscribed thereon, but the order being a nullity made the paper worthless. In other words, it spoiled a good piece of paper. Attorney for the defense, Maurice Sugar, admitted that that was the contention.

Minutes of local unions were then introduced to establish the fact that the members of these locals unions were against the expulsion and the injunction action.

Hutcheson's weasels have been ferreting out all of his dubious supporters in this city, (about 20 in all) and have secured their signatures to still more dubious affidavits, some of them, as in the case of two members of L. U. 2140 averaging as many as four deliberate and obvious lies to the affidavit. In the case of Local 2140, Reynolds' own local, an affidavit was filed by two yellow-backed curs alleging:

Two Poor Liars

First—that the action taken in repudiating the expulsion was not the unanimous opinion of the body;

Secondly,—that only 25 were present;

Third,—that it was an oral vote;

Fourth,—that it did not represent the opinion of these deponents.

The facts are that there were about 40 members present, that these members by unanimous rising vote affirmed the motion, and that the two deponents, John R. Vaughan and Alex Peat, stood and voted in favor of it whatever their craven opinions might have been. These two are the extreme belly-crawling liars of the aggregation. A few of the deponents are well-intentioned but misled tools of Botterill and Sharrock.

Judge Plays to Crowded House

The court room has been crowded to about three times its intended capacity at each session that the case has been called. Most of these men are carpenters. They crowd every available inch of standing space and are perched in the windows. Attorney for the paintiffs advised the court to not be impressed with the attendance of carpenters, as about half of them were for the plaintiffs.

To this, the defense attorney, Maurice Sugar, replied that he would submit the case to a referendum of the carpenters in court requiring a 9 to 1 vote in favor of the defendant. The court ruled the referendum out.

The Battle of Affidavits

Yesterday, when a sheaf of affidavits was being submitted by each side, the court inquired if this was going to be a battle of affidavits, the side having the largest number to win. Attorney Sugar said that he was willing, as his client could get about three thousand additional, and the other side about three. The court declined to act as a tabulating committe of one.

The impression is inescapable that the plaintiffs are the defendants in this case, and that the damaging evidence being presented by the defense is an indictment of the plaintiffs.

N. Y. DRESS GOODS JOBBERS QUIBBLE OVER NEW PACT

New Conferences Being Held with Bosses

NEW YORK, March 6.—Claiming that the new agreement entered into between the manufacturers and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was not ratified by the jobbers' association, the matter of price adjustment is forced upon the union for the second time.

The new agreement went into effect Feb. 24, and the organization expected no further argument on the matter. Now the jobbers are found to be carrying on negotiations as if the matter had not been settled.

Officialls of the joint board are again holding conferences with the bosses and trying to patch up the differences.

Local 22, of the dress goods workers, will hold meetings in five of its sections to take up the question with the members and bring decisions to the joint conference of all the parties to the controversy.

WOOD SENDS TROOPS TO CRUSH REVOLT OF PHILIPPINE PEASANTS

MANILA, P. I., March 6.—The rebellion in the Philippines against the autocratic dictatorship of the United States is spreading. At San Jose Nevaeciga, only 100 miles east of Manila, uprisings have already occurred.

Further moves for independence are expected north of Luzon. The impoverished peasants have had trouble near Luzon lately. They have been terrorized by contabulary, under the direction of Colonel Duckworth Ford, sent out by General Leonard Wood.

JURISDICTIONAL ROW TAKES OUT 500 CRAFTSMEN

Other Building Trades Strike at Carpenters

The jurisdictional fight between the Sheet Metal Workers' Union and the Brotherhood of Carpenters, as to which union should be entitled to set metal trim in new buildings, has its first test case in Chicago according to J. J. Conroy, secretary of the building trades council, in the strike of all building crafts but the carpenters on the Hotel Sherman annex now under construction.

The board of jurisdictional awards, in which sit the representatives of the employing contractors, awarded the work to the sheet metal workers, but the carpenters refused to accede to the decision and withdrew from the building trades department.

That the contractors may be playing off one craft against the others to their common injury, is seen in the fact that altho they acted in the jurisdictional award decision in favor of the sheet metal workers, Harry Jensen, of the carpenters' district council, says that the contractors want the carpenters to set the metal trim, that they have done it and will "keep on doing it."

Approximately 500 workers of the other crafts affiliated to the building trades council are on strike since Saturday, Feb. 28. Only 15 carpenters are working on the setting of metal trim.

The building trades section of the Trade Union Educational League has repeatedly pointed out that amalgmation of all the building trades crafts into an industrial union, is the way out of all jurisdictional squabbles.

Death for Kurds

CONSTANTINOPOLE, Turkey, Mar. 6.—Ismet Pasha, who has been chosen the new Turkish premier, in an address proposed a "people's party tribunal," with powers to instantly shoot all rebellious Kurds caught. This tribunal will be sent to Kurdistan, where the Kurds have captured much territory from the Turks.

Trial of Raditch Opens

SOFIA, March 6.—The trial of Stefan Raditch, leader of the Croatian peasants' party, has opened, with Dr. Trumbitch, who was elected deputy in Zagrab, and three other lawyers defending Raditch.

CRANEMAN KILLED IN STANDARD OIL PLANT AT WHITING, INDIANA

HAMMOND, Ind., March 6.—Jesse Lewman, employe of the Standard Oil plant in Whiting, was instantly killed here when a locomotive crane hit him and snapped his spinal column. Lewman was a locomotive crane fireman.

The Standard Oil company practically owns the entire town of Whiting. Conditions in Whiting are extremely bad for the workers. Pay is small and accidents are frequent.

Rail Workers in Germany Threaten General Strike Because of Dawes Plan

RAILROAD WORKERS OF GERMANY, ENSLAVED BY DAWES, BEGIN STRIKE

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

BERLIN.—The German railway strike was reported today to be spreading to Saxony and other points westward.

Local strikes have occurred in the Ruhr. The walkout, the first time since the German railroads were taken over under the Dawes' plan, affects only freight laborers, it was stated. The strikers are seeking wage increases.

The danger of a general railway strike in Germany loomed ominously tonight when the railway workers in various parts of the country threatened to go out in sympathy with local strikers at Leipzig, Dresden and Goerlitz, and because the Dawes and the quasi private reichsbahn management are procrastinating in negotiations with the committees for wage increases.

SOCIALISTS ARE UNABLE TO JAIL SIX COMMUNISTS

Pittsburgh Victims of Treachery Are Freed

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 6.—The strennous efforts made by the yellow Forward gang, ably assisted by the Pittsburgh capitalist papers and the city police, to create a disturbance at the meeting at which the international working class traitor, Abramovich, slandered and villified the Soviet republic, and then had Communist workers indicted for "Inciting to riot," failed miserably.

The charges could not be made to stick. It was too apparant to anybody who cared to know the actual situation that whatever real disturbance took place was caused by the Forward gang.

The six comrades who were arrested are Margarette Yeager, John Truhar, Peter Skirtic, Eli Kapic, Bleddyn Thomas and J. H. Bay.

The six who were arrested and held for federal investigation are now free. The federal authorities immediately admitted that there was no evidence warranting an investigation and refused to give the matter any further consideration. The six comrades, however, were ordered to again appear before the magistrate, and, altho "his honor" had formerly ordered them held for federal investigation and thus dismissed the original charge, in order to maintain his allegiance to the socialist politicians, he fined each the sum of $25.00.

Expect Hot Meeting.

Some of these politicians are attempting to keep up the aggressiveness shown last Suneay and have threatened to come in full force to voice their protest at the meeting Sunday, March 8, at the Labor Lyceum, when Bob Minor and M. J. Olgin, will expose the traitorous yarns of Abramovich. Members of the Workers Party have invited them to come stating that everybody is welcome and that even a yellow socialist may learn from hearing the truth. At any rate say the Workers Party members, "No matter how militantly you voice your protest, we will not ask the police to be present."

COOLIDGE FEARS DISCLOSURE OF WARREN'S RECORD

Republican Senators Shut Out Public

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 6.—The Coolidge republicans showed their fear of shedding light on the past record of Charles B. Warren when they voted down a senate proposal for public consideration of the nomination of Warren by Coolidge for attorney general. The republican senators rejected the proposed at the request of administration leaders.

Hohenzollern Prince Sends Flowers for Traitor to Workers

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

HEIDELBURG, Germany, March 6.—Completing the tributes of the enemies of the workers who have loaded the bier of the social democrat traittor Fritz Ebert with enconiums and flowers, Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm Hohenzollern today sent a wreath for Ebert's grave.

Thus a prince born to the throne of monarchy, bows before the socialist who rendered such inestimable service both to the kaiser's regime during the war and to capitalism after the war.

LOCAL CHICAGO STARTS DRIVE FOR THE DAILY

Branch Agents to Meet on March 10

Chicago is getting an early start in the national subscription drive for the DAILY WORKER. Every branch of the Workers Party must be represented by its DAILY WORKER agent at the first campaign meeting to be held Tuesday, March 10, at 8 p. m. in room 307, 166 W. Washington St.

The last general membership meeting of local Chicago unanimously endorsed the drive and pledged the support of the Chicago membership. This support can be recruited and mobilized only thru the medium of the agents in the branches.

Local Chicago has over fifteen hundred members. Here is an organization that, if properly maneuvered, can make Chicago echo with the name of DAILY WORKER. Every one of these comrades wants to see the DAILY WORKER grow, they want to do something. A central organization of DAILY WORKER branch agents can marshall them.

The DAILY WORKER has developed a number of excellent plans for local use in getting subs. They have got to be worked out in detail and supplied to local Chicago. That's the job to be done by the DAILY WORKER agents committee on March 10.

If you are interested in seeing the daily put over in Chicago, whether you are a branch agent or not, you are invited to the meeting. There will be plenty of work and then some for everyone who is willing to undertake it.

RAILROAD MAGNATES FIGHT SAFETY DEVICES IN SPRINGFIELD LOBBY

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 6.—The railroad magnates are lobbying vigorously against several bills aimed to eliminate the danger of grade crossings, which kill thousands of people every year. Representatives of every railroad operating in Illinois have combined their efforts to fight a bill limiting the number of cars in a freight train to 50, and a bill providing for a minimum train crew.

Representative James A. Reeves of Champaign, is sponsoring a bill requiring railroads to equip the tenders of all locomotives engaged in hauling freight with a cabin for the head brakeman, and another bill has been introduced requiring the railroad to provide a flagman at every point where a railroad crosses a street or road in public use. The railroads are fighting all of these bills.

TORY BILL AIMED AT LABOR DEFEATED IN HOUSE OF COMMONS

LONDON, March 6.—The house of commons this afternoon passed the amendment, killing the trades union levy bill. The bill sought to prohibit trade unions from levying on workers' wages to support the labor party. The tories originally planned to support the bill, but feared the strength of the organized workers.

MILITANTS OF SEATTLE TAKE THE OFFENSIVE

Want No Businessmen in Central Labor Council

SEATTLE, Wash., March 6.—To make the Central Labor Council a real representative body of trade unionists and rid it of a certain element who at some bygone age have worked at the trades and crafts they represent but who for years have derived their income from sources other than that of working for a boss (from rent, profit and holding political jobs), is the aim of an amendment to the by-laws of the council introduced last night and if adopted at its third reading would exclude from that body among others—David Levine, petty shopkeeper for more than fifteen years, Robert Hesketh, a city councilman for about twelve years, Frank Cotterill, a member of the chamber of commerce and a number of others interested in various business enterprises.

The proposed amendment reads as follows:

"In order to qualify for membership in this body the delegate shall be actively employed at his trade and must receive the major portion of his income from wages received for actual work at the trade represented or as an employe of a local union of that trade."

The amendment was introduced by F. H. Brown, delegate from the [illegible] delegate from shipwrights [illegible] Buchanan, delegate from building laborers, Leo K. Ford, delegate metal polishers, and has the backing of a large number of other delegates who have voiced their sentiment that the council is a representative body of workers and its delegates should also be workers.

Resolutions were received from Machinists Local 79 and Millmen's Local 338 condemning the action of the council and urging that it rescind its action in an attempt to unseat delegates because of their political opinion.

Militants Present Appeal

The six delegates accused of being Communists and who are being given a hearing before the strike and grievance committee of the council have issued a leaflet to the delegates and

UTICA MILLS TRY TO BREAK STRIKE, FIND NO SCABS

Other Unions Donate Funds in Support

(Special to The Daily Worker)

UTICA, N. Y., March 3 (By Mail.)—Thru the local papers, an announcement was made that the Utica Steam and Mohawk Valley cotton mills will resume work Wednesday, March 4, and the statement was published that many of the workers would return.

This is a straight out fight to break the strike, and to aid it, the second hands and the bosses visited some of the strikers to ask them to go back to work. This was reported at the meeting of the strikers in the Labor Temple this morning.

Bosses Try to Get Scabs.

The bosses told the strikers that the strike was over, but the strikers visited replied that if they get their old scale of wages without the ten per cent cut, they would go back, but not otherwise. At this morning's meeting the strikers determined that they would all go back together or not at all, as they were all in the union and would stick.

Fine Support from Other Unions.

The Utica Co.operative Society has donated 1,000 loaves of bread to the strikers. The Typographical Union has donated one dollar per member for four weeks, or $600. The Carpenters' Union, Local 62, donated $100. And the Painters' local contributed $100 to the strikers. The strikers are determined to win the strike, and with continued support by other unions stand a fine chance of coming out victorious.

COAL [illegible]RATORS REVIS[illegible]LANS TO FIGH[illegible] UNION

Conference Is Postponed Indefinitely

CLEVELAND, March 6.—The coal operators' conference, originally scheduled for today and postponed until March 17, was finally postponed indefinitely, after preliminary conferences between advance agents of the scale committees of the central competitive fields.

It is reported here that the conference was frowned on by the Coolidge administration which does not want to give out the impression that the big business moguls can kick up their heels just as soon as his inaugural speech was delivered. Coolidge and his backers want to move slowly until the time for drastic action comes.

The secretary of the Pittsburgh operators' association declared that he did not know why the conference was postponed. Phil. H. Penna, secretary of the Indiana operators' association and recognized strategist of the coal barons, is said to have suggested that the best plan to adopt would be to follow the example of the Kansas operators and shut down the mines on the ground that they cannot be operated at a profit. In fact the coal barons are doing this on a wide scale and getting away with it.

Great Fighters.

It is not unlikely that the operators hesitated to throw down the gauntlet to the members of the United Mine Workers of America who, despite their treacherous leadership, are the greatest fighters in the American industrial battlefield. The vote of 66,000 counted for the Communist opponent of John L. Lewis in the recent elections also struck terror into the hearts of the operators. They know that this army of militants can fight, know how to fight and are only too willing to fight the common enemy.

The struggle of the operators to smash the union and break down the present wage scale is not off. It is only postponed. In the meantime with the connivance of John L. Lewis the task of sapping the foundations from under the miners' union is going on.

RED INTERNATIONAL JOINS WITH RUSSIAN MINERS' UNION IN CASH AID TO DORTMUND MINE VICTIMS

MOSCOW, February 20th, (By Mail) The bureau of the Executive of the Red International of Labor Unions addressed to the German miners the following appeal:

"The Executive was deeply moved by the terrible disaster which befell the German miners of the pit 'Stein' through the fire damp explosion. The responsibility for these new victims falls upon the greedy mine owners, who suck the last drop of blood out of the mine workers, and upon the social democratic leaders who are kept by speculators and profiteers, as well as upon the bureacrats of German trade unions who betrayed the seven-hour-shift.

"A repetition of similar catastrophes can only be avoided by an unflinching struggle for the seven-hour-day and by creating a united front against the coal and iron magnates. The Executive sends ten thousand roubles for the families of the victims, no matter whether they belonged to an organisation or not."

The Russian Miners' Union sends to their German colleagues the following appeal:

"The Russian mine workers have heard with indignation and sorrow of the terrible catastrophe that occurred near Dortmund and to which over 130 of our brethren, after awful sufferings, have fallen victims. The capitalist press writes glibly of its sympathy with the sufferers. This hypocrisy is alway made use of by the mine magnates whenever proletarians have been sacrificed.

"The responsibility for the catastrophe falls upon the capitalists, their economic system, and the eight-able attitude of the social democratic, hour-day below surface.

"Responsible is also the abominreformist and Christian leaders of the miners, who, for the benefit of the owners, are sending you to destruction. Down with them!

"The miners of the USSR call upon you to fight on. At the same time we send you from the funds collected by the miners of USSR. ten thousand roubles for the support of the families, irrespective of trade union tendencies."

CUT WAGES AND FIRE 40,000 ON MEX. RAILWAYS

Calles Nationalizes Men to Break Union

(Special to the Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, March 6.—Further Mexican workers in carrying out the Mexican workers in carying out the De la Huerta-Lamont agreement and the sale of the resources of Mexico to Wall Street by President Calles, is seen in the report that the govenment is immediately to proceed to hand over the present government national railways to private stockholders.

To favor these banker stockholders as much as possible, a campaign of wage cutting and wholesale discharges is being carried out, so that the private company will get the roads given to them with the union crushed and the wages as low as possible. wage cut is being made of from 25 to 50 per cent.

Must Swear Loyalty

Another outrageous act is that of the government, before it turns over the lines, requiring all employes who receive $150 (Mexican) or more per month, to take an oath to support the government and the laws of the country or be discharged. This is aimed to weed out agitators who are not be wise enough to take the oath with tongue in cheek. Workers who get less than $150 per month cynically ask if they are expected to rebel before the end of the month. Fully 40,000 employes will be discharged from their jobs.

Martial Law Over Rail Workers

This campaign of Calles against the railway workers began a few days ago, after much talk and some preparation, by a decree signed by Calles, nationalising the railway workers. In practice this means putting the workers under martial law, and this was quite frankly announced to be done in order to "cope with possible labor trouble following the wage cuts and the wholesale discharge of workers."

Normal Unemployment "A Pleasing Fact" to the U. S. Government

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Introducing the latest industrial employment information bulletin, showing the degree of joblessness in all parts of the United States, Francis I. Jones, director general of the U. S. employment service says:

"Existing condtions are normal. Altho considerable unemployment exists in some sections, it is a pleasing fact that much of it can be accounted for by the seasonal curtailments which accurred during January in many lines."

By this it appears that Director Jones sees nothing wrong with "normal" unemployment, and is much pleased because he can explain that it is customary to throw large numbers of men on the job market, with no takers, in mid-winter

CARPENTERS ARE FIGHTING ORGY OF EXPULSIONS

General Secretary Makes Lame Explanation

NEW YORK, March 6.—The rebellion against the dictatorship of General President Hutcheson of the Carpenters' Union is becoming so strong that the reactionary bureaucrats have finally decided to explain the reason for the orgy of expulsions which the "czar" has recently inaugurated.

In a letter to the New York district council, Frank Duffy, general secretary, admitted that several New York locals had written in, asking for information concerning the expulsion of William Reynolds, president of Local 2140 of Detroit, without trial or hearing.

Hitting Straw Men.

Duffy delivered a tirade against the I. W. W. and the One Big Union, two organizations that are not giving the reactionary officials the slightest trouble, for the good reason that the policy of both organizations is to give the old trade unions the absent treatment. The O. B. U. is now nothing but a glorified gambling casino and does not function outside of Winnipeg, Canada. Duffy knows this if he knows anything.

Fighting on the Inside.

The fakers have used the One Big Union bugaboos against those who were fighting the bureaucrats where they were most vulnerable on the inside of the unions. The Trade Union Educational League, declared Duffy in the letter to the New York district council, is a dual organization and when it was learned that Reynolds was a member of that organization, the G. E. B. simply expelled him. That was the explanation.

Duffy also referred to the Chicago, Los Angeles and Philadelphia expulsions. The first was a local case, affecting only Local 181, Chicago. The Los Angeles carpenters were expelled because they were members of the T. U. E. L. Burgess of Philadelphia, because he "issued scurrilous and defamatory literature" against the general president.

That the fakers are compelled to come out and defend their actions is proof that the fight of the militants led by the Trade Union Educational League is winning.

Five Killed at Crossing

LAFAYETTE, Ind., March 6.—Five persons were killed and one perhaps fatally hurt at Williamsport, 25 miles south of here today when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a switch train on the wabash railroad.

Housing Crisis in Norway

OLSO, Norway, Mar. 6.—There are more homeless people in Norway, in proportion to population, than any other country in the world. The housing crisis has grown to such an extent that out of 70,000 families, ten thousand lack dwellings.

Russo-Poland Relations Improved

VIENNA, Austria, March 6.—Relations between Poland and Soviet Russia further improved when an agreement was signed between the two countries not to obstruct the mails. M. Skrzinski signed for Poland and M. Wojkow for Soviet Russia. Normal postal and telegraph communications are expected to be restored by the agreement.

NEW YORK, March 6.—On Sunday, March 8th, J. O. Bentall will lecture on "The Vitality of Communism" at the Workers Hall, 1347 Boston Rd., at 8 P. M. Sympathizers and their friends are invited.

WATCHERS TELL HOW HUTCHESON WAS RE-ELECTED

Ballots Were Counted by His Own Cronies

"Eternal vigilance is the price of re-election." This is the motto of President William L. Hutcheson of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners. Having taken this slogan to heart, the "czar" saw to it that no matter how many votes were cast for his opponents he would be elected. Anybody can elect himself provided he can count the votes. Hutcheson counted the ballots, and was surprisingly generous to his opponents. He allowed their representatives to watch the tabulators at work but did not allow them to count the ballots. In fact, nobody did.

How the Watchers Fared.

A very interesting story is told by H. E. Elmore and George Myers, representing candidates Brown and Mulcahy, of their experience at Indianapolis during the time the ballots cast in the election for general officers of the union were being tabulated.

On the first going off, Elmore's credentials were not accepted by Hutcheson, tho the chairman of the tabulating committee said they were alright. The watchers were subjected to all kinds of indignities and during the month that they watched the tabulators at work, they were refused the use of chairs to sit on. The tabulating committee opened the envelopes containing the election returns when the representatives of the candidates were not present. As all the members of the tabulating committee were Hutcheson henchmen, it is quite obvious that this procedure enabled them to use their own judgment as to the number of votes cast by a particular local union for the various candidates.

Violates Constitution.

The watchers also charged that the tabulating committee did not count any ballots as voted on by the membership, but only used the report furnished by the recording secretary, which is not in accord with the constitution. Section 9, paragraph one, of the constitution reads:

"Any candidate shall have the right to be represented without expense to the United Brotherhood, at the count of votes and have the right to examine any statement, sheet or ballot on request." This the watchers were strictly forbidden to do. A protest was lodged with the general secretary against this illegal conduct.

Indiana Mine Blast Caused by Lack of Safety Precautions

SULLIVAN, Ind., March 6.— The City coal company's mine was filled with gas, which caused the explosion resulting in the killing of 51 miners, witnesses testified at the coroner's inquest here. A dust explosion followed the gas explosion according to the witnesses. The gas escaped from an old working, and was ignited, the miners testified.

Miners said that had proper safety precautions been taken, the explosion could have been prevented.

Drop Radio Interference Probe.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—With the failure in congress of a $125,000 appropriation to investigate radio interference the department of commerce today dropped its plan for this survey, by which it was heped to eliminate much of the trouble now confronting listeners.

Renew Fight on Warren.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—The senatorial fight over the nomination of Charles Beecher Warren of Michigan as attorney general was reopened this afternoon when President Coolidge again asked the senate to confirm the appointment.

Klan Chief Arrested.

PEORIA, Ill., March 5.—George R. Wagner, official of the ki klux klan, was arrested here on five warrants charging him with acceptance of money under false pretenses and operating a confidence game.

Miners Overcome.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 6.—One hundred coal miners were overcome with black damp in the Peabody mine at Roverton, near here, today. All except 17 had been removed at noon. Physicians at St. John's hospital here said there probably would be no fatalities.

The Phone Trust Takes $100,000,000 in Profits from Unorganized Labor

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, and every day, nerves snap or minds go wrong, as exploitation's lash drives armies of harried girls, still in their very early youth, to put thru the nation's 45,000,000 daily phone calls. Similarly the men, stringing and repairing the millions of miles of wire, from pole to pole in the open places, or deep down in conduits in the great cities, in winter's cold and summer's heat, suffer the fate of all unorganized workers—the long, life-sapping, murderous conditions of labor, wages that provide a bare subsistence.

But what a contrast is furnished by the monster employer of these workers—the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. It has just totalled its net income for 1924, and it reaches the staggering sum of $91,040,321; nearly a hundred million dollars as one year's profits on its outstanding stock of $917,344,371 or on 11.31 per cent dividend.

Poverty, wrecked bodies, shattered nervous systems, minds destroyed for the workers; fabulous riches for the stockholders, for the American Telephone and Telegraph Company now feels that its special field of exploitation is so fertile that it plans to increase its capital stock from one billion dollars to one and a half billion dollars, making it the greatest American corporation, if not the world's largest monopoly.

This is a brutal picture of unorganized workers, mostly girls, pitted against highly organized capital, that outstrips in the proportions of its pile, the United States Steel and the General Motors Corporations.

The phone monopoly has put an individual Bell instrument at the disposal of an average of every seven persons, but the main point stressed in its annual report was not how to distribute the $100,000,000 in profits among its wage slaves, thru increased wages or in bettering their conditions, but in advancing a lengthy argument for an upward revision of rates. It is argued that the present dollar is lower in value than the pre-war dollar, when the profit rate was about equal to what it is now. Therefore, in order to make up for the shrinking dollar, the phone trust demands higher rates, in order to take care of its stockholders. No mention is made of the dire straits faced by the worker who must meet the higher cost of living not only with his shrinking dollar, but with his shrinking pay envelope, hit by wage cuts.

• • • •

There have been spontaneous strikes of phone operators in isolated sections of the country. But these have been short lived. Child slavery continues under capitalism, endorsed almost unanimously by the capitalist law making bodies in the states, and new armies of young and healthy girls, 15, 16 and 17 years old, crowd each other at the doors of the phone exchanges, as they do at the cotton mills, the department stores, and elsewhere, seeking employment. The organization of the youth workers is one of the least worries of the American labor movement. This in face of the fact that the few electrical workers organized within the realms of the phone trust have been mostly wiped out.

• • • •

The phone trust is hungry for new worlds to conquer. On Coolidge's inauguration day it sent the first inaugural pictures by wire. The American Telephone and Telegraph Company is one of the corporations named in the so-called trial of the alleged radio monopoly before the federal trade commission. But the attorney for the A. T. & T. Co. is none other than John "Wallstreet" Davis, recent candidate for president on the democratic ticket. It is safe from harm.

Large sections of the Gompers' wing of the American Federation of Labor supported this lawyer, Davis, attorney for the anti-union phone trust, in last fall's elections. Let the phone workers know that it is the left wing alone that fights such class-collaborating labor leadership.

It is not enough that the slaves of the phone trust decide to organize. They must build the right kind of organizations; unions that are ready at all times to enter the class fight against the oppressors of labor. The phone workers need such an organization. They can only get it thru enlisting under the banners of the left wing of organized labor, inspired by the Communist principles that will lead to final victory not only over the phone trust, but over capitalism itself.

48-Hour Bill Is Used As An Election Bait and Then Voted Down

CONCORD, N. H., March 6.— The 48-hour work week bill was defeated by the New Hampshire house, 153 votes in favor to 198 against, with 70 members absent.

This bill was to affect women and minors in the industries. The only reason advanced for adoption of the bill was that the present is an opportune time to enact such a law to attract skilled labor to New Hampshire. This contention is sheer political hypocrisy since it is a matter that is supposed to aid women and minors only, and among whom there are few if any "skilled" workers in New Hampshire and the prospects for attracting "skilled" women and minors nil.

This 48-hour bill is a fraud and was concocted by the politicians for use as bait during the recent state elections. After obtaining the labor votes some pretence of fulfilling their promise had to be made, hence the joke of the "48-hour bill."

When the vote was taken, 21 democrats voted against it in order to aid the republican opposition to the bill while a goodly portion of the 70 members were democrats that did not want to commit themselves one way or another.

Another bill known as the Fernald bill, to create an industrial court, a la Kansas, was referred to the next legislature.

WORKERS PARTY TO WAR ON OPEN SHOP IN OHIO

To Call Unionists Into Conference

By ALFRED WAGENKNECHT.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, March 6.—There are fifteen million automobiles and trucks in use in the United States. Horses are already extremely old-fashioned. And jackasses would attract as much attention as a string of Barnum's elephants upon any city thoroughfare.

The Ohio legislature at Columbus, is, however, still living in jackass days. The Ohio senate passed a bill yesterday repealing a law making it a misdemeanor to drive a jackass past a cemetery at a greater speed than six miles an hour. The bill was introduced by Senator Geo. Bender of Cleveland, and secured a vote of 24 to 2 amid much horseplay. If at any time within the next few years any worker gets a yearning to see a genuine jackass, or a flock of them in action, let him hike to Columbus.

But the "jackass" bill is a red herring. While the legislators are braying to detract attention, they are putting over a pile of dirt on the workers by devious back-room methods. The best representatives union labor has in Ohio, the most forceful lobbyists, had to speed to Columbus this week to help void the "yellow dog" contract. What is the "yellow dog" contract? It is a contract forced upon workers by the bosses by which the workers are compelled to agree not to belong to a union as a condition for getting a job—as a condition for living!

Manufacturers Lobby.

Major Long and Malcolm Jennings are steering the ship of state for the Ohio Manufacturers' association at Columbus. The Ohio Manufacturers' association has another name, which is, the American Plan association. The American Plan association loves the "yellow dog" contract and the open shop. These are the gentry who also O. K. the strike breaking state military police bill.

Union Leaders Are "Good."

It seems as if union labor is attempting to prove itself "good" at Columbus. Major Long of the manufacturers' association fired this at Max Hayes and other labor union lobbyists: "You would not protest if employers refused to hire I. W. W.' and Communists and I say that there are some organizations masquerading as trade unions that are just as bad." Major Long knows that workers are workers and that the capitalists will have to keep an eye upon all of them if capitalism is going to have fair sledding.

Shall Labor Beg and Lose?

On the other hand, the labor union lobbyists at Columbus seem to believe that they can pick sweet grapes for workers in the enemy's vineyard They have not yet learned that all of labor, the Communists, the I. W. W., the trade unions, all workers' organizations must enter into a mighty united front and fight the offensive of capital every inch of the way if labor is to be victorious.

Shall labor fight and win, or shall labor beg and lose? Will the "yellow dog" contract live and deceminate the ranks of organized labor? Will labor learn that Columbus is an enemy camp, that it is the seat of the bosses' boot-lickers? These are the questions which trade unionis in Ohio will have to face and answer. The Workers Party intends to call the trade unions into conference so that the solution will result in a militant uncompromising struggle against all open shoppers.

Discuss Insect Problems.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., March 6.—Two of the most important insect problems facing the middle west, the Mexican bean beetle and the European corn borer were discussed today at the conference of entomologists from middle western universities in session at Purdue university.

"CULTURE IN RUSSIA" NEXT WORKERS' SCHOOL LECTURE BY OLGIN

NEW YORK, March 6.—Moissaye J. Olgin will lecture on "Cultural Activities Among the Masses in Soviet Russia," next Tuesday, March 10, 8 p. m., at the new headquarters of the Workers' School, 108 East 14th street.

Comrade Olgin will deal with the cultural institutions established by the Soviet government, with its efforts to raise the cultural level of the proletariat and make them class conscious. He will describe the Circles of Marxism, the party schools and universities, the general character of the press. He will tell about the cultural activities in the factories, one of the most important phases of the educational work of the workers' and peasants' Republic.

Comrades will find this lecture highly interesting and instructive, and should not miss it. Remember the date—Tuesday, March 10, at 108 East 14th street.

'RELEASE SACCO AND VANZETTI', MINERS DEMAND

Ohio Valley Workers Hold Protest Meeting

TILTONVILLE, Ohio, March 6.—A mass meeting here of workers of the Ohio valley, mostly miners, unanimously adopted a resolution demanding the release of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti from the Massachusetts bastile where they are held on framed up charges of murdering a paymaster.

Tow English and two Hungarian speakers gave the history of the frame up of the two labor leaders. Daniel Spehar acted as chairman. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Workers (Communist) Party. The resolution states:

"TO THE GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF MASSACHUSETTS:

"We, the workers of Ohio Valley, assembled at a mass meeting held in Tiltonville, on Sunday, March 1, 1925, hereby register our protest against the attempt to railroad to the electric chair, Sacco and Vanzetti, two labor leaders, who have been convicted on framed up charges, because of their activity in the labor movement.

"We demand that these men be given a new trial, where they will have a chance to prove their innocence.

"We insist that the frame-up of men in the working class movement must stop.

"We call upon all workers to join us in this protest, so that these two men may be returned to their families.

WEST VIRGINIA SCAB MINES NO PARADISE FOR COAL DIGGERS AS STRIKING MINER PROVES

Only 44 cents a day per person to provide food and clothing for a miner's family and an inevitable deficit at that, is promised by the 1917 scale forced upon coal diggers in the nonunion mines of West Virginia, according to H. A. Woodrum, a striking miner of Longacre, West Va.

Woodrum sets 10 tons as a fair average day's loading. At the 1917 rate of 44 cents this would give the miner $1,277.20 if he gets 113 working days. But there were only 227 working days in 1923 which would mean $998.80 for the year.

The expenses the average miner would have to meet are given from Woodrum's own expenses for the year:

Rent (company house)	$120.00
Gas bill	34.50
Electric lights	10.66
Doctor bill ($2 per month)	24.00
Hospital ($1 a month)	12.00
Burial fund	12.00
Carbide for lamps	6.81
Powder (at $2.25 a keg)	36.63
Four pick handles	1.40
Four boxes squibs	.90
One coal shovel	2.00
Food and upkeep for family at 44c per person per day	803.00
Total	$1,063.00

Thus the miner would find himself in debt $65.80 at the end of the year. The mine motormen, highest paid men in the mine getting $5 a day in the Kanawha and Hocking mines, would come out with a surplus of $109.45, but common mine labor at $4.30 would end the year $72.15 in debt.

"In making these computations," says Woodrum, "no allowance has been made for the payment of lodge and union dues, altho all the other expenses of a miner's family are included in the 44c a day allowance."

Plan Overnight Air Mail from Chicago to New York, June 1

WASHINGTON, March 5.—An overnight air mail service between New York and Chicago will be inaugurated by the post office department before June 1, it was announced today.

Tentative plans called for a plane to leave New York at 9:30 p. m., arriving at Chicago the next morning at 5:30 a. m. The Chicago plane will leave at 8:30 p. m., arriving in New York at 6:30 a. m.

Stops for re-fueling will be made at Cleveland, Marion, Ohio, and Bellefonte, Pa.

This new service will supplement the transcontinental air mail service between New York and San Francisco and is designed to give the several million people in New York and Chicago quicker mail service. Beacons to light the planes on the night fight will be erected at several points over the Allegheny mountains.

one thousand votes more than his opponent Voysey in District 12, while Arley Staples, candidate for vice-president, polled over six thousand more than his rival Phil. Murray. It should not be forgotten that this is the official tabulation, and that the counting was done by the Lewis machine. The official figures for the election of District 12 officers are not yet available, but it is significant that Frank Farrington polled only approximately 24,000 votes for delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention. A little more organization and the militants in District 12 will rid themselves of the barnacles.

THE British government is worried over the Turkish mobilization, which is ostensibly for the purpose of putting down a Kurdish rebellion. The Britsih being seasoned burglars and experts in finding excuses to attach themselves to other peoples' property, believe that the rebellion does not justify the number of troops which the Turkish government is hurrying to the scene of trouble. It now happens that where the Kurds are kicking up a shindy is within a gunshot of Irak, where valuable oil fields are located. France has given the Turks the use of the Syrian railway for the transportation of troops. The British kicked. The French simply grinned and asked the British foreign office to have a smoke.

THIS is very interesting. It is a sidelight on how capitalist governments work. France is operating against England thru Turkey. England is knifing France thru Greece. Turkey is but the handmaiden of France, and Greece is England's concubine. Ditto for the litter of republics that were formerly under the czar's yoke, but are now on the payroll of some big power.

THERE are only two big capitalist powers in Europe, England and France. England is more or less solvent. France is less, but possesses a good supply of finished steel and plenty of men willing to carry it. She has no use for bill collectors, provided they are not her own. The French government has been able to work up a good trade in alliance on borrowed money. The supply seems to be exhausted and the little allies are notoriously fickle. The situation in Turkey will bear watching. The germs of another world war are running around loose in the Near East.

Portuguese Revolutionists Busy

LONDON, March 6.—An attempt was made by revolutionists to seize the military headquarters at Lisbon, Portugal, yesterday morning but the attack was repulsed by the military guard, according to a dispatch received here today. Three revolutionists were arrested. The others fled. The city is quiet, the message said.

SPRING STRIKE PLAN OF MARINE UNITED FRONT

Universal Demands to Be Worked Out

NEW ORLEANS, La. (By Mail) March 3.—The second day of the conference of transport workers' unions from five of the twenty or so maritime countries of the western hemisphere was held here today.

As there are representatives from Cuba, Ecquador, Argentine and Mexico, proceedings are carried on in both Spanish and English.

Great Strike Planned.

An international strike was agreed upon of all countries in the western hemisphere, at least of those five represented, to be called in the spring. It aims to tie up all ports in the western world, of course, both salt and fresh water, and to include not only the seafaring unions but the stevedores and longshoremen as well. This was adopted after a debate, and the conference will work out detailed plans.

A strike stamp to be issued by the unions involved was tentatively agreed on, subject to the ratification of the unions represented.

Universal Address Infers no Dualism.

A universal cablegram address, to take the place of the lengthy titles of the unions, was adopted. This address, which will be the word, "Emancipation," followed by the name of the port, will be registered with cable, telegraph and radio companies. This will be used between the various unions represented, a cablegram, for example, addressed, "Emancipation, Havana," would be delivered to the Laborers' and Stevedores Union of Cuba, and to nobody else.

This infers, however, that the unions represented do not intend to set up branches or organizations dual to the existing union in any port. This runs counter to the practice of the M. T. W. of the I. W. W. in Europe.

May Blockade California.

The conference went on record as demanding the unconditional release of class war prisoners, and agreed to boycott all California made goods until the prisoners held in that state under the slave "criminal syndicalism" law were released. This boycott may take the nature of a strike in refusal to handle California shipments.

The proceedings of the conference will be printed in both English and Spanish.

IOWA BEING ORGANIZED IN WORKERS PARTY

Des Moines Forms New Branch, More Coming

DES MOINES, Iowa, March 6.—Des Moines labor heard the message of Communism last Sunday afternoon when J. E. Snyder and David Coutts spoke at the Trade Assembly Hall, in the wind-up of their successful month's speaking and organizing tour thru this state.

The crowd of workers present listened very attentively to the remarks of these capable speakers, and at the close of the meeting Des Moines had a full-fledged, genuine English branch of the Workers Party.

While the half-wits and the hasbeens sit back and scoff, the Workers Party is going right ahead and doing thinks thruout the state of Iowa.

Before the year is out Iowa will have functioning Workers Party locals in every industrial center. And the building of the Workers Party in Iowa will mean the building of the entire labor movement in this state.

McAndrew Locks Door on Representative Teachers Appointed

Superintendent of Schools William McAndrew refuses to recognize the representative chosen by the Teachers' Federation to meet with his board of superintendents on the matter of secret markings of teachers. Objections have not been made to any other representative chosen from any other teachers' organizations. But against the representative chosen by Teachers' Federation refuse to pertendent locked his doors tight.

The 6,000 teachers comprising the Teachers Federation refuse to permit the superintendent to choose their representative. They have instructed their board of managers to call upon their attorney, Isaac T. Greenacre, to assist them in fighting this case. Upon the decision of Mr. Greenacre rests whether or not the federation will institute court proceedings against the superintendent.

This step was taken by the teachers after the board of superintendents of which McAndrew is chairman notified Miss Mary Abbe, president of the Teachers' Federation that it will not recognize its representative, Miss Margaret Haley.

Bill Would Put Children in New Jersey Sweat Shops

JERSEY CITY, N. J., March 6—The Jersey city commission has adopted a resolution protesting against the passage of a bill by the New Jersey general assembly, which it is declared, permits children between the ages of 10 and 14 years to work in factories between 6 a. m. and 7 p. m.

The bill, according to the resolution, is "a damnable effort to permit sweatshops again to employ children, break down laws we have already passed, and would result in undermining the health of the children of this city."

The bill has passed its second reading, and before the Jersey City protest was made, met little opposition in the assembly.

the members of organized labor in which they point out that the entire issue and charges against them are a camouflage and a fake instigated by business agents. The leafleft says in part:

"Six of us have been charged with holding a political opinion—that of Communism—by five co-delegates four of them paid business agents and one an ex-business agent.

"You all are aware that the attempt of the accusers to instigate persecution and intolerance within our ranks was occasioned when we, out of a desire to help innocent brothers convicted under the Michigan criminal syndicalism law, asked the council to give its endorsement to the Michigan defense so that we might do something to help these workers who are about to be railroaded for almost the rest of their natural life to the penitentiary under this vicous anti-labor law, against which the A. F. of L., its executive committee, the State Federation of Labor, our own Seattle Central Labor Council and the entire labor movement went on record condemning it and declared it to be inimical to the interests of all organized labor.

Are They Favoring The Slave Law?

"Why, then, are these business agents, our accusers, camouflaging the issue and trying to get us in a roundabout way by charging us with being Communists?

"Are they in favor of this criminal syndicalism law and do not dare to come out in the open?

"Is it because we are favoring the abolition of this law enacted at the behest of the open shoppers and the advocates of the American plan and the associated industries, that these accusers are trying to unseat us from the council?

Defy Acusers

"We declare that for years we have consecrated our lives to our organized labor movement and have given the best in us to help build it up, and we challenge, dare and defy these accusers and persecutors to specifically prove when and where any of us has done the least thing that has injured our labor movement.

"This appeal is not made so much on our own behalf but rather to prevent the wrongs that are to be instituted in the council by such action which is bound to bring strife struggle and disruption. Yours for a united labor movement.—Paul K. Mohr, Joe Havel, W. H. Jones, M. Hansen, H. G. Price, J. C. Carlson."

DAILY WORKER READERS IN NEW YORK INVITED TO TAKE PART IN MADISON SQUARE GARDEN PAGEANT

NEW YORK CITY, March 6.—The privilege of earning free tickets for the press pageant, concert and ball that will take place at Madison Square Garden, Sunday, March 15, is not limited to members of the Workers Party and Young Workers League. Every reader of the DAILY WORKER who disposes of five 1-month subscriptions to the DAILY WORKER at the regular rate of 75 cents each can not only give a ticket to the entire afternoon and evening program with each subscription but will also receive an extra ticket for himself.

This makes it possible even for readers who are out of work and who have no money to earn tickets for themselves to this wonderful affair. Others who ordinarily can only go alone can in this way make it possible to bring their families.

Every reader of the DAILY WORKER who is not a member of the Workers Party is invited to come to the DAILY WORKER New York agency at 108 East 14th street to get a supply of these subscription tickets at once. Party members who cannot attend their branch meetings within a week should also call at the office immediately and get their supply of this ammunitions with which to help bring fifteen thousand people to Madison Square Garden, March 15, and place fifteen thousand New Yorkers on the DAILY WORKER mailing list.

PITTSBURGH TO SPEED WORKERS PARTY ACTIVITY

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 6.—The demonstration made by the Pittsburgh workers at the Abramovich meeting held Sunday, March 1, in protest against his slanders and vilifications of Soviet Russia has stirred the Pittsburgh party membership.

The understanding has taken hold of them of the great need for active party work. The immediate party campaigns are to be extensively planned at general party membership meetings which are being scheduled for the East Pittsburgh membership at the Workers' Home, corner Electric and North Ave., 8 p. m., Tuesday, March 10, and for the Pittsburgh membership at the International Socialist Lyceum, 805 James St., 8 p. m., Thursday, March 12.

The new district organizer, Arne Swabeck, proposes to bring before the membership the problems of organizing on the most possible active basis, our party campaign, and also to initiate a discussion on shop nuclei organization. All party members should make sure to participate. Young Workers League members are invited to be present.

Newark, N. J., Notice

NEWARK, N. J., March 6.—There will be a general membership meeting of all members in Newark Wednesday, March 11th, at 8 p. m. at 704 S. 14th Street, Newark, N. J., Labor Lyceum. All members must be at the meeting as it is very important. A representative of the district executive committee will be at the meeting.

Real Progress for Marine Workers

It assuredly will be welcomed as a decided change of things for the better, that the Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union of the I. W. W., over the signatures of its officials, announces its program to the conference at New Orleans, which is striving to set up a united front against the ship owners and exploiters, as follows:

"We plan the death of our former policy of isolation in this conference, and in its place we plan action in our struggles against our oppressors, the capitalistic class. We are carrying out this program based on the class struggle of society."

If these are not mere words, they signify recognition of the tremendous power of international capital which has driven even those whose traditions and philosophy is so reluctant as those of the I. W. W. to accept a frank reversal of policy to meet conditions which are totally different than those prevailing in pre-war history when the I. W. W. and its ideas and attitudes toward other organizations were formed.

Furthermore, this declaration means, if it means anything, that the Marine Transport Workers' section of the I. W. W. has found the key to a bigger and more powerful industrial union with more chance for victory than ever before—unity on an international scale based on the revolutionary class struggle.

It means that the lesson has been learned that any union, however perfect in plan or aim, cannot attract great numbers, nor win battles against the capitalists by a studied attitude of hostility toward and effort to break up other unions, however antiquated their form or limited their aims.

That this attitude, which is quite as "legal" as one of hostility so far as the I. W. W. constitution is concerned, is genuine, seems to be proven by the first act of the conference, in which the I. W. W. delegates have a majority of seven to four, voted to approve the resolution not to criticize the political connections and beliefs of the other Latin-American unions as such criticism would destroy unity.

Actually, this amounts to a sensible and flat reversal of the policy inculcated by anti-Communists during the hysterical years of Sandgrenism, the leading idea of which was that the I. W. W. could have no conversation with the Red International of Labor Unions, because it had some ideas in common or connection with the Communist International!

That the Marine Transport Workers of the I. W. W. are now wise enough to sit in conference for united action with unions which have political connections, is significant of real progress in the I. W. W., and should serve as an example to the whole organization.

Bosses Nervous in Pennsylvania

The closing by the police of the hall in Scranton where Communists were to meet to discuss the situation in the anthracite fields, is an example of the difficulties faced by our comrades in carrying out the simplest kind of work.

In the big industrial centers where the closest watch is kept on the activities of the workers the Communists are spied upon more continuously than any other group. The coal barons and steel kings of Pennsylvania know that the Communists are organizing the workers for efficient action against the capitalists and their state instruments and it is instructive to see the close co-operation between the labor bureaucrats and the bosses in the war on Communists. There is a real identity of interest between the exploiters and betrayers of labor in this respect.

It is not so long ago that the Lewis machine of the United Mine Workers incited assaults upon some of our comrades at a miners' convention in Scranton, but it would have a hard time getting any support from the rank and file for such action now.

The recent action of the police in Scranton is a tribute to the growing influence of the left wing in the miners' union and the activitiy of the Communists.

Police do not bar workers from halls unless the bosses and their retainers are nervous.

Slipping It to the Senate

The senate is peeved at the way it was treated by Dawes, its new presiding officer, but the capitalist press is jubilant as we predicted it would be.

The metropolitan papers—Boston, New York, Chicago, Kansas City and Detroit—all praise the banker-general-vice-president for his attack on the senate.

This is as it should be. America is moving rapidly towards an open dictatorship and the biggest plunderers are impatient with legislative delays.

Ave Imperator!

The Chicago Party School

The intensive training school organized by the executive committee of District 8, Workers Party of America, which begins March 16, is a new venture in the field of working class education.

Its purpose is to equip active party members with a knowledge of the party and its functions, its relation to the labor movement and all struggles of the workers, its major role as the most conscious and militant section of the working class movement.

The school will have little if any of the academic atmosphere commonly associated with such institutions. The pupils and the instructors all bear the scars of the class struggle. The school will turn out fighters better fitted to organise and lead the workers in their respective localities. They come to Chicago to get a broader view of the battles of the working class of which all of them are part. The courses have been selected with a view to imparting all the information in two weeks that can be made use of. Both pupils and instructors are busy people—they have no time to waste on non-essentials.

The importance of the school to the party, the labor movement and the pupils and instructors themselves can scarcely be exaggerated. The workers outside of Chicago will be drawn closer to the party and the party will gain a clear insight into the problems of the workers.

This is one school where the instructors will learn at least as much as the pupils.

Anti-Strike Law in Connecticut

The capitalist forum of Connecticut, the state legislature, has had its sacred precincts invaded by Communists.

In direct and refreshing contrast to the apologetic attitude of the labor officials, William Simons, district organizer for the Workers (Communist) Party, showed the class nature of the anti-strike bill the employers' association was trying to put over, at the hearing before the joint legislative committee.

The bill is designed to make strikes illegal. It is another blow at the working class of Connecticut—one of the poorest organized groups in the country. All of New England is a hive of industry, but the workers are but little better paid than those of the semi-feudal south. There are few revolts in Connecticut and the bosses must be preparing an unusually drastic slash on living standards if they believe it necessary for all strikes to be outlawed.

Communist members of legislative assemblies could do great work in exposing the anti-working class nature of these bodies, but until we elect some we must take advantage of such opportunities as in Connecticut where the Communist position was clearly set forth.

Wall Street and Mexico's Railways

Reports from Mexico are to the effect that the nationalized railways are to be returned to private hands and the Calles government is discharging thousands of railway employes as a beginning of the reorganization.

The handing over of the German railways to private owners is one of the major features of the Dawes plan. Mexico is now operating under a similar scheme altho it has not been officially christened. It seems that wherever American imperialism attains power one of its first moves is to grab the railways for some of its retainers.

Railways are to the social organism what the circulation system is to the human body. The control of transportation, as the farmers of the United States can best testify, is one of the most powerful weapons of exploitation. Those who own them can control the lives of the masses and direct development in almost any direction they choose.

American capitalists hold most of the stock in the Mexican railroads and return to private ownership means Wall Street ownership of the railways—and the natural resources of Mexico.

Here is another example of the Monroe doctrine in its modern application.

Rank and File Support

Unions of painters, carpenters and machinists, affiliated with the Seattle Central Labor Council, have protested the drive on the Communists made by the reactionary ring of that body.

This is a healthy sign. The test of Communist policy is the manner in which the rank and file of the unions and workers in general understands and supports our position. To secure election to a central body as a delegate is one thing, important but of no special value as a guide to the sentiments of the union unless the delegate is well known as a Communist. But to be able to get mass support against the well-entrenched officialdom is evidence of real work and influence that comes from Communist activity.

The growing support of Communists in the face of the campaign of slander and expulsions carried on by the labor fakers is an indication that our tactics are correct.

The British colonies are not very enthusiastic over the proposal of Austen Chamberlain that they endorse his scheme to guarantee the security of France and Belgium. South Africa, Australia and Canada are not anxious to enter any more agreements about protection for "bleeding Belgium," and la belle France. They had enough of this bloody foolishness in 1914-18.

Wage cuts for workers; salary boosts for kept politicians—that's the Coolidge-Dawes Wall Street program.

Detroit Carpenters Answer an Injunction

who attempt to explain away or justify the facts set forth in the evidence.

His Honor Is Amused

The appeal to Hutcheson by Reynolds, which was read into the record, was characterized as "good work" by the lawyer for the plaintiffs, John W. Gilmore. A petition from a mass meeting of carpenters held Sunday, March 1st, was characerised by Attorney Sugar, when presenting it to the court for what the court considered it worth, as "an historical document which would find a place in the nation's archives." The court received it with apparent amusement, but without comment.

These documents, which should be preserved in the archives of the labor movement are given below, first the resolution petitioning the court to dissolve the injunction against Raynolds, and secondly, the appeal of Reynolds to Hutcheson for reinstatement.

To the Circuit Court of Wayne County, Michigan

"We, the organized carpenters of Detroit in mass membership meeting assembled on Sunday, March 1st. 2:00 P. M. at 2646 St. Aubin avenue, Detroit, do hereby avail our constitutional right to petition this court for redress of grievances from which we suffer.

"Those presuming to represent us, namely San Botterill, James Sharrock and Harold Fish have petitioned this court for an injunction against Brother William Reynolds to restrain him from attending our meetings. It is alleged by plaintiffs that they have taken this action in our behalf to protect our interests.

"To this we wish to answer that we can govern our meetings without the aid of the police or injunctions both of which our self appointed protectors have resorted to.

"We assert that we can keep any person from our meetings whose presence we do not desire. We have demonstrated this to the plaintiffs in this case and have satisfied the police that only the undesired and disorderly elements attending the various meetings have been the plaintiffs and those associated with them.

"We have no interests and rights separate and apart from those of our brother Wm. Reynolds.

"We renounce the said plaintiffs Sam Botterill, James Sharrock, and Harold Fish. We state that every local union and the district council of this city has requested the removal of San Botterill as general organizer of this district.

"We state that the resignation or recall of James Sharrock and Harold Fish as district officers of the brotherhood have been demanded by the various local unions and this mass meeting.

"Had the district council met last Thursday, Feb. 26th, as it should have, instead of our self apopinted protectors locking the doors and hiding themselves, the two names above would now be under charges for the very action which may land brother Wm. Reynolds in jail.

"We urge the court to consider these facts in passing on the validity and justice of this injunction.

"Adopted, Mar. 1, 1925, M. D. Long, secretary.

"(Sworn before Al. Nickerson, notary public. 2955 Lycaste)"

The following is the appeal from William Reynolds to Hutcheson:

"Detroit, Mich., Feb. 5th, 1925.

"Wm. Hutcheson, president,
"United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America,
"Indianapolis, Indiana.

Dear Sir and Brother:

"I am writing you, President Hutcheson, to appeal to you to use your power as head of our organization to the end that those provisions of the constitution which were drafted to protect the rank and file in their rights of membership until they are proven guilty of injuring the brotherhood, might act as a guarantee to me, even though I may hold political and economic opinions not concurred in by yourself or the general executive board.

"I do not admit I have been expelled in a manner which can appeal to any fair-minded man or to anyone familiar with the constitution of the brotherhood. I do not recognize my expulsion as an act that can have any validity with any except those prejudiced beforehand against my opinions and who act clearly on bias.

"I call your attention to the fact that section 55 of the constitution, which alone covers the preferring of charges, trial, conviction and penalizing members whose acts or affiliations may be in conflict with the constitution and laws of the brotherhood is very explicit in the following provisions.

"A. A member must be charged and tried within the jurisdiction of the local union or district council where the crime was committed.

"B. All charges must be made in writing and must specify the offense or offenses and the section of the constitution and laws of the united brotherhood so violated, and be signed by the member or members making such charges.

"C. The charges must be read at the meeting and lay over until the next meeting, and the member must be notified by registered mail by the recording secretary to be present, and at the same time shall be furnished by the recording secretary with a copy of the charges specified...

"F. All charges shall be referred to a trial committee consisting of five, the accused and the accuser shall have the right to challenge any three members of said committee...

"G. The accused shall have a fair and impartial trial and shall be allowed until the next regular meeting to appear and reply, either in person or by counsel.

"J. ...it shall require a two thirds vote of the members present to convict the defendant and to affix such legal penalty as they may deem proper.

"It will be apparent to you from a summary of my case which follows that none of the above provisions or any of the provisions of the constitution have been complied with. I receive a letter dated January 13, 1925, which reads as follows:

"Wm. Reynolds, 233 E. Willis Ave., Detroit, Mich.

Dear Sir and Brother:

"I have under date of Jan. 10th, 1925, a letter from General Secretary Duffy, notifying me that you are no longer a member of our organization and consequently are not entitled to a seat as a delegate of the district council.

"Very truly yours, (Signed) H. R. FISH, Secretary D. C."

"At the meeting of Local Union 2140 held January 23rd, a letter over the signature of Frank Duffy was read, which stated in addition to the above that I was expelled because of membership in the Trade Union Educational League.

"The two communications above mentioned constitute the sum total of official information which I have received on the matter, except that the bill of complaint on which an injunction was secured restraining me from attending any meetings of the brotherhood cited section 42 paragraph U. as the provision of the constitution violated. Thus I secured the first official information as to the constitutional basis of my expulsion thru the medium of a court while answering an injunction secured in the name of the brotherhood and signed by San Botterill, general organizer, James Sharrock, president of the district council, and Harold Fish, secretary D. C., the two latter also signing as individuals.

"Need I call your attention, President Hutcheson, to the fact that organized labor has always viewed the injunction as a usurpation of power by the judiciary, and that Samuel Gompers has countless times urged labor to ignore and violate this weapon against labor? Are you not acquainted with the expressed attitude of various conventions of the American Federation of Labor toward the injunction? You have represented us at these conventions, President Hutcheson, and your memory should easily recall many bitter strikes where the injunction was the strongest weapon in the hands of our class enemies.

"The constitution has been so flagrantly ignored and contradicted in this expulsion proceeding that I confess I am at a loss as to how to state my appeal. The constitution provides that:

"'A full and complete copy of the minutes and charges as presented at the trial' shall be forwarded to the general president. As no such records exist in this district, it is obvious that I cannot comply with this provision. The next paragraph, section 56-F provides that if I do not comply with the above (which I cannot do) I forfeit all rights to further appeal.

"The constitution provides that I appeal first to the general president, and then to the G. E. B., but when the action originates with the G. E. B. can I appeal to the general president?

"You will, I hope, sympathise with the predicament in which I am placed by this unusual procedure. You will bear in mind that if I must wait until an appeal can be taken to the next convention, that I will either be denied the right to earn my living at the trade or I must accept the role of a scab, which this unconstitutional expulsion would force upon me after nine years of struggle to uphold union conditions. I therefore ask you to use your good offices to set this matter right by enforcing the provisions of the constitution.

"While I expressly condemn my expulsion as unconstitutional, while I hold that its recognition would constitute an abnegation of all constitutional guarantees, while I repudiate it and will ask all those who are zealous for the maintenance of constitutional protection of the rank and file against official usurpation of power to do likewise,—still, to protect my rights and comply with the formal provisions of the constitution, I do hereby appeal my case to the next general convention of the brotherhood. I ask the convention to review the whole proceedings and to give me the fullest opportunity to appear and defend myself. (It is also understood that if this expulsion is set aside and I am restored to full rights of membership, this appeal will be invalidated and the matter considered closed by me.)

"Our organization can only be of greatest service in protecting and improving our working conditions, and standards of living when its leadership is strongly and worthily entrenched in the confidence of its members. I am hopeful that this matter will be speedily settled to the satisfaction of all without further injury to the morale of the organization.

"With fraternal greetings, I am sincerely yours,

"WILLIAM REYNOLDS."

WANT BIGGER TAX RATE TO BOOST TEACHERS' WAGES

Principals Preferred Over Teachers

It is being urged that a referendum vote be taken on the matter of a larger tax rate to increase the present educational approriation from $1,92 to $2.92. This increase would meet the new schedule for the boost in teachers' wages is now before the board of education.

The new schedule calls for the following increases:

The entrance scale for teachers remains the same, $1,500. The maximum for elementary teachers is raised from $2,500 to $3,250. Teachers in the junior high schools will start at $1,800, the present scale and receive $4,100 at the end of ten years as against $3,300, the present maximum. High school teachers will start at the present schedule, $2,000 and increase to $4,700 in ten years. The present maximum is $3,800.

The principals in the elementary schools would be given a flat increase of $1,000 a year. Their starting point is raised from $3,000 a year to $4,000 and increased to $6,250 in ten years as against the present scale of $4,800 for the same period.

High school principals are to receive $5,000 a year the first year, with a $500 increase each year until they reach $7,500. The present schedule is $4,300 for the first year, increasing to $5,700 in eight years. Junior high principals will start at $4,250, with an increase of $250 a year for ten years, making the maximum $6,500. The present minimum is $3,600 and the maximum $5,400.

Insane Hospital A Firetrap House Committee Reports

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 6.—The Chicago state insane hospital at Dunning was condemned by the legislative committee which made its report to the house after investigating conditions there. The committee declared that at least $500,000 is needed to make the Dunning institution safe from fire hazards and declared the building to be "frightfully overcrowded and a firetrap." An investigation by the state fire marshal was recommended.

In December, 1923, one life was lost and many inmates of the asylum were injured in a fire which burned down one of the buildings and started the present investigation.

Forbes Escapes Jail While Judge Travels in Europe

Charles F. Forbes, former head of the veterans' bureau who was sentenced to two years imprisonment and a fine of $10,000 for bribery and corruption, is dodging jail while Judge George A. Carpenter, who has jurisdiction over Forbes' appeal, is touring Europe.

Forbes and his fellow conspirator against the government, John W. Thompson, contractor who bribed Forbes, were denied applications for writs of supercedes by Judge Alschuler. Alschuler said that the matter would have to wait until Carpenter gets back from Europe some time next month.

Mussolini's Envoy Received.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Signor Giacomo de Martino, Mussolini's new ambassador in Washington, has presented his credentials at the White House and has assured the president that Italy's people are "conscious of their duties as well as of their rights."

To this fascist doctrine the Cautious One responded by suggesting that payment of her share of obligations—meaning war debts to the American treasury—by Italy would be a fine thing.

OPEN SHOPS GIVE IN TO COMMITTEE OF VOLUNTEERS

Rank and File Army in Successful Campaign

NEW YORK, March 6.—Steadily and surely, day by day, the volunteer committee of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 300 strong, are forging ahead in their campaign of organzing the open shops and getting the entire ladies' garment industry lined up with the union 100 per cent.

Pull Down 220 Shops.

Since the beginning of the organization campaign over 220 shops have been pulled down and the committee is not thru. One after the other is called out on strike and the bosses told that no work will be done for them until their shop signs the agreement and recognizes the union.

Over 100 shops have already signed up and others are following. A loyal picketing force is on the job continuously, union men and women, both those who are working and those on strike faithfully performing their duties on the picket line.

Picketing headquarters are maintained at 16 W. 21st St., and all members of the union are asked to come there at 7 o'clock each morning and be assigned to such duties as are required of them.

Minimum Pay is $44.

Since Tuesday the new agreement has been in force. It has a number of new features that are of utmost importance to the workers. The minimum pay per week must be at least $44. If piece workers drop below this amount it must be made up by the boss. The average for all piece workers must be $52 per week. If piece rate is so low that an average of $52 per week canot be made by the workers there must be an adjustment so that this average may be sustained. The 40-hour week is unconditionally established, no worker being allowed to put in more time in any one single week.

The workers pay one per cent unemployment insurance and the employer two per cent. The agreement also includes a schedule of standardized prices, and provides for the sanitary union label.

Fight Piece Work.

The union is now busy preparing for a drive to abolish piece work altogether and place all work on the week basis.

The success made by the union in this special campaign has encouraged the workers to still greater efforts and their enthusiasm is growing as shop after shop is won, and it is the intention to continue till all shops have fallen in line and signed up.

Coal Miners and the Dawes Plan

By G. Slutsky

IN order to carry out the terms of the Dawes plan, that has saddled Germany with a reparations' installment of one milliard gold marks for the period of 1924 to 1925, German industry in general and the mining industry in particular is execting itself to increase exports, and to supplant English competition, which already in pre-war times, dominated the north German market. To this end, since October, German coal prices as well as freight rates have been lowered.

THE decrease in coal prices has been carried out chiefly at the expense of the workers. Work has been speeded up to a terrific degree. According to the "Revolutionary Miner," (Germany) there are now about 77,000 fewer miners employed in the Ruhr than in 1922, the number having dropped from 530,974 to 453,595. Despite this decrease in the number of miners working, the output has increased from a total of 7,981,761 tons to 8,817,458 tons, the daily output being 32,000 tons and the monthly, 835,697. The same situation exists in the coal fields of Upper Silesia. Here, too, the number of miners employed has been reduced, in this case by 6,039, from 52,239 to 46,200, the total output at the same time increasing from 721,850 tons to 1,046,495. A similar increase in production can also be observed in the other German coal fields.

Piecework Increases Output.

THE increased output is due to the introduction of a merciless piecework system. The miners are compelled to exert themselves beyond the limits of endurance in order to meet the vicious demands made upon them. The best witness to the terrible overstrain to which this system subjects them can be seen in the appalling increase in mine accidents.

In addition to all this, the bosses are making the work day longer. In place of the former seven and eight hour day, an eight hour underground and a nine and a half hour day on the surface is now in general force, while in many places the bosses have already forced thru a twelve hour day underground and a fourteen hour day on the surface.

NOT contented with this accomplishment, the coal owners are now trying to put over a general wage cut. They have artificially increased unemployment by shutting down many of the smaller mines, and laying off thousands of miners. In order to make quite sure of their position when strikes break out, the mine-owners of the Ruhr have supplemented the already over-large labor force there by bringing in numbers of men from the rural districts who are naturally much less class-conscious than the industrial workers, and can easily be used as strike-breakers.

THE reformist social democratic labor leaders are doing nothing to help the German miners in their present struggle. During the elections of last December, they used the situation to parade revolutionary phrases and to set themselves up as the true defenders of the interests of the working class, but immediately after the elections these promises were forgotten.

THE revolutionary miners under the leadership of the Communists have been presenting a program before a number of factory council conferences, demanding among other things a 40 per cent wage increase, reinstatement of workers who have been dismissed, support for the unemployed, etc.

Situation in Other Countries

THE measures taken by the bosses in Germany, have of course, enormously increased coal exports, According to the Manchester Guardian, German coal exports to France and southern Italy for the first half of 1924 amounted to 20.2 million tons as against 15.4 million tons pre-war.

IN Poland the situation has grown proportionately worse. Before the war the Polish mines supplied coal to Austria, Germany, and, to some extent, to Russia, the domestic market not being able to absorb the whole supply.

IN BELGIUM the same situation arose thru the reparations deliveries. Here, too, the coal barons utilized the situation in order to launch an offensive against the miners. Under pretext of German competition wages were reduced in the Borinage fields, for example, by 8 per cent.

In HOLLAND the miners were forced to accept a wage reduction in the new agreement arranged last December.

In ENGLAND, from similar causes, the coal demand is on the decrease. The demand during last September was 270,000 tons less than in the same month of 1923. The number of miners employed, which in July amounted to 1,190,300 had sunk to 1,163,300 by September. There are over 125,000 unemployed miners in England at present, and great numbers are employed only three, four and in many cases, only one day a week.

Revolutionary Miners and Dawes Plan

A CONFERENCE of revolutionary miners was held in Berlin in September, during the great strike of the Belgian miners in the Borinage coal fields. All the more important European countries—England, France, Germany, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Poland and Holland were represented. The conference concerned itself particularly with the situation in Belgium. In addition to a number of practical measures for the organization of international aid, the conference came to the decision to carry on energetic propaganda among the miners for directing their struggle against the London agreement.

The revolutionary miners answered the call, and took various steps in aid of the strikers. In France the United Miners' Federation (Left) held a conference, explaining to the French comrades the importance of the strike movement in Belgium, and organized a mass meeting at which 30,000 francs were collected. In addition, delegations of French and Belgian comrades established direct communication between the miners of the two countries; the French Federation Unitaire (left) declared itself ready for a sympathetic strike in case a general strike should be declared in Belgium.

IN Germany and Holland the revolutionary miners launched a rousing propaganda campaign informing their comrades of the situation in Belgium. These steps gave the impetus for

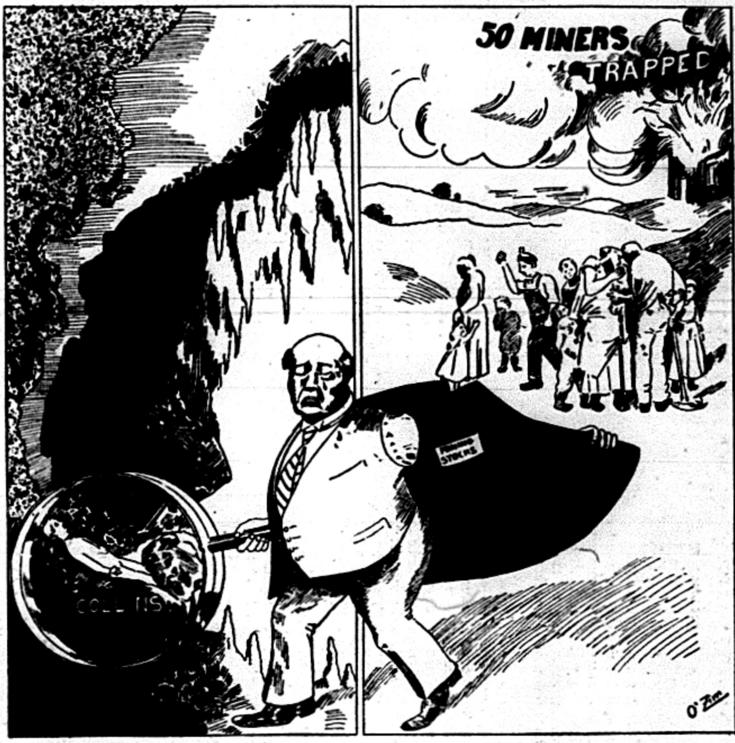
What the "Public" Sees



THE article on this page by G. Slutsky, secretary of the Miners' International Propaganda Committee of the Red International of Labor Unions, containing as it does a detailed account of the conditions of the miners in the principal countries of Western Europe, is especially interesting to American coal miners in view of its account of the operations of the Dawes Plan.

THE coal operators' association is now trying to cut the wages of American coal miners and there is a close connection between this assault on the wages of miners here and in Europe.

The Dawes Plan is a scheme of international capitalism.

THE coal miners and all other workers must have their international unions and it is to this end that the Red International of Labor Unions is working—world trade union unity.

Social Democratic Fakers Rob the Unions

THE socialist supporters of world capitalism—its last bulwark in fact—debauched by capitalism, act the same in all countries.

The betrayal of the workers of Germany and the corruption among the leaders of the social-democrats there is being paralleled now in all European countries.

IN the Scandinavian nations the machinery of the trade unions, like in Germany, was in the hands of this group. The extent of the graft and thievery was not suspected until more or less accidental revelations brought a flood of disclosures that has shocked the masses of the workers into action.

THE Communist press does not chronicle these disgraceful matters with any sense of joy but only with the realization that the moral breakdown of social-democracy is coincident with and a consequence of its political insolvency.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

STOCKHOLM—(By Mail)—The reformist labor movement shows the same sign of decadence as capitalist society, with which it has been closely bound up for the last few years. It is no longer, as before the war, a state within the state, but it forms in all countries an integral part of the state, which it formerly wished to destroy, and it is for this reason that it must undergo the same process of decay as that which is undermining the capitalist state.

In the social democratic movement one meets with all the defects of the capitalist state, and it is characterised just as the other, by corrption and graft. It is no longer a question of isolated cases, as one might observe before the war; the exception has become the rule.

It must not be forgotten that one swindler does not voluntarily aid in unmasking the other, and that the bourgeois and social democratic bureaucracy succeeds, in most cases of graft, in hood-winking the public. We see the same picture, not only in Germany, where social democracy first came to power, but also in other countries, in which a "normal" situation still exists.

We see how chiefs of the social democratic parties and the trade union leaders make profit out of their opinions, how they sell themselves to their "enemies," and how they dupe the workers who put them into office.

IN Sweden, where social democracy is the party in power for the third time in four years, one big scandal has been taking place after the other, and the graft in the labor movement is constantly on the increase. Just as in Germany, the corruption in Sweden began since the war, and the first one to sell himself to the enemy was the greatest among the great, Hjalmar Branting, the leader of the social democrats, who, during the war traveled, as an agent of England, thruout Europe, preaching, evidently for good pay, the "war of right" among the central powers, and coming out for intervention in Russia after the Bolshevik victory.

ON another occasion, accompanied by a large number of Danish labor leaders and their German brethren, Branting made an expedition to the German western front. Upon their return, the labor fakers suddenly became possessed of the means for founding a company for the impertation of coal, and, in order to show themselves properly grateful for the generosity of the imperial government, they naturally felt under an obligation to give public expression to their sympathy for Germany's "just cause." During the first months after the end of the war, a large number of Swedish labor leaders were mixed up in various shady deals including the sale of rotten provisions to the counter-revolutionary troops of Yudenitch.

THE whole of the coalition government was involved. Certain ministers and members of parliament had to be sacrificed in order to calm down the public before the elections . . . In October of this year it was discovered, after the death of the treasurer of the Swedish Railroad Workers' Union, Carlbom, that he had been systematically stealing from his organization for the last ten years. More than a million and a half kronen had been embezzled during this period. The indignation aroused by this discovery had not yet died down, when the treasurer of the Lumber Workers' Union committed suicide, and it was afterwards found that he had run thru 150,000 kronen of the funds entrusted to him.

ALREADY after the first incident, the president of the Swedish Trade Union Federation had promised to see that a searching investigation was made into all union treasuries, but this promise was not carried out, and everything continued as in the past; and now, at the demand of Communists, on the revision committee, the attorney of the Goteborg Metal Workers' Union, F. J. Moberg, has been impeached and arrested. Moberg who, as secretary of the union, received a salry of about 5,000 kronen, found this salary insufficient for the needs of a one-time worker, and so he set up a pipe-fitting company, of which he was the boss. He set aside a special room in the offices of the trade union for handling his business affairs. He had an automobile, and for five years played the part of the "grand seigneur," without the union executive committee, which knew all about his activities, lifting a finger to put a stop to his graft. Moberg used about 43,000 kronen of the union funds in speculation, and he concealed the deficit always by paying the union dues to the central trade union committee several weeks late.

THE investigation showed that Moberg, who was one of the main leaders of the social democratic party of Gothenburg, was, among other things, municipal councilor of this party, and had several accomplices among other party members. He was, in addition, director and business manager of the important social democratic paper Nye Tid, which, after the discovery, made desperate efforts to save their grafting colleague.

The social democratic editor of this paper, who had a yearly income of 10,300 kronen, had joined Moberg in buying shares in a shady enterprise. On the former's initiative a committee was formed, which declared that it was willing to save Mobert, by refunding a portion of the stolen money, but only upon certain conditions.

They stipulated that the executive committee of the local union should keep the committee's action secret, making it appear as tho Mobert had made good his theft himself, and telling the union membership merely that when the books were examined it was found that the union's money had been employed in an unwise fashion.

IF these conditions were complied with, a small part of the money could be paid in cash, and for the remainder, stocks (which happened to be worthless, by the way), would be given as a "guarantee."

These conditions are extremely edifying. They show the moral depravity of the social-democratic "class fighters," who were not ashamed to ask their comrades to swindle the 6,000 members of the local union, in order to save the "honor" of a thriving leader, or rather, to save a whole gang of social democratic thieves and grafters from the scandal that was threatening them.

The local trade union committee had the decency to reject the propositions, whereupon the gang left their brother to his fate. Moberg was finally brot to trial, and sentenced to a year in jail. The union immediately elected a Communist, one of the leading militants, in his place.

A FEW more instances must be added to this edifying recital. Last December, the treasurer of the Gotheborg local of the Factory Workers' Union was arrested for robbing his union of some 12,000 kronen. Then, just before Christmas another official of the Metal Workers' Union, Lundin, of Stockholm, treasurer of a co-operative society of the Stockholm Pipefitters' Union, was arrested for taking 45,000 kronen of the society's funds, out of which, by the way, he built himself a beautiful residence.

When this last theft was discovered, Lundin promised to refund the sum that he had stolen, on the condition that no case would be brot against him. The other trade union bureaucrats were willing to accept but the Communist members of the union raised hell, and the Communist press made the scandal public, and Lundin was arrested.

LUNDIN is the fifteenth in a series of "leaders of the Swedish working class" who have been shown up as thieves and forgers within the last four months.

These continued revelations of the corruption of their leadership are beginning to arouse the rank and file in the unions to opposition, and the Communists are gaining in influence. At an extraordinary congress of the Railroad Workers' Union, recently held in Stockholm under pressure of the rank and file in order to discuss the thefts of the treasurer, and other irregularities in the executive committee, the Communist representation was stronger than at any previous congress. Among the delegates from northern Sweden, 19 out of 25 were Communists. In order to divert attention from the principal question on the order of the day, the bourgeois and social democratic press came to the aid of their allies and representatives, the labor fakers, and launched a violent campaign against the Communists.

IN all the unions the labor bureaucracy is fighting to keep its hold on the workers, but the latter are thoroly disgusted with the social democratic leadership that has cynically robbed them, at the same time refusing funds for carrying on strikes, brought chaos into the unions, and systematically sabotaged amalgamation, which was voted for several years ago by the rank and file membership. And there are already definite indications that they are turning to the Communists for leadership in their struggle against the new offensive that capital is launching against them under the Dawes' plan.

REVOLUTION STIRS IN JAPAN

By E. SHIMA

Japan's Anti-Sedition Act

Article 1. Anyone who initiates an organization for the purpose of disturbing the sovereignty or who joins any such organization understanding the nature of said organization, will be punished by three years or more imprisonment with hard labor or confinement.

Article 2. Anyone who initiates an organization for the purpose of disturbing the social order or who joins such an organization understanding the nature of said organization, will be punished by hard labor, imprisonment or confinement not exceeding ten years.

Article 3. Anyone who attempts to commit the crimes heretofore mentioned in articles 1 and 2 or who makes any preparation for committing the crimes mentioned in articles 1 and 2 will be punished by hard labor imprisonment or confinement for not exceeding three years.

Article 4. Those who assemble for the purpose of discussing means for disturbing the sovereignty or the social order will be punished by not exceeding seven years hard labor imprisonment or confinement.

Article 5. Those who circulate propaganda or groundless rumor for the purpose of distributing the sovereignty or social order will be punished by not exceeding seven years in hard labor imprisonment or confinement.

Article 6. Those who instigate the violation of law for the purpose of disturbing the sovereignty or the social order will be punished by not exceeding ten years in prison or confinement.

Article 7. Those who supply money or material or make proposals or promises to supply money or material or accept or make proposals or promises to accept money or material in order to accomplish the crimes heretofore mentioned will be punished by not exceeding five years in hard labor imprisonment or confinement.

Article 8. If anyone who having committed the crimes heretofore mentioned presents him or herself to the authorities before the detection of said crimes, his or her punishment for the said crime will be mitigated or exempted.

Article 9. It is strictly forbidden to publish in newspapers or any other publications the grounds for the decision regarding the punishment of anyone who commits any of the above mentioned crimes, except that the examining judge or the court of justice may decided to the contrary in any given case. In the case of a newspaper violating this law the editor and the publisher of the said newspaper or in the case of any other publication violating this law the compiler (writer) and publisher will be punished by not exceeding two years in hard labor imprisonment or confinement.

Article 10. This law furthermore applies to those persons who commit the above mentioned crimes even outside the limits of the enforcement of this law.

WHEN any government takes drastic measures to suppress its people it is because the ruling class sees the danger of a revolution. In czarist Russia such laws far from accomplishing their purpose of preventing the internal disturbance at which they were aimed, had the opposite effect and stimulated the class consciousness of the workers.

The hysterical bourgeoisie of Japan are repeating the history of czarist Russia by introducing the anti-seditious act which is now before the imperial diet. The anti-seditious act will never prevent a revolution in Japan so long as the worker refuses to consent to be a slave.

THE working class in Japan still has red blood in its veins and will not stand for such oppression any more than the Russian worker would stand for the czarist regime. The stronger the government's oppression the more active will the class conscious worker become. The capitalists of Japan are so terrified by the fear of a revolution that in trying to pass this anti-seditious act they do not realize that they are repeating the history of czarist Russia and at the same time digging their own graves.

NO worker in Japan can sponsor this act which provides, for instance, that anyone who organizes or joins the Communist Party will be punished by from three to thirty years' imprisonment. The act actually says "three years or more." By so light sounding a sentence does the ruling class hope to deceive the public into belief of their kindly tolerance of Communists. Those who drew up the act might just as well have said "ten days or more." Adding the "of more" to any number of days or months or years would give the judge the privilege of sentencing the convicted to imprisonment for any length of time up to thirty years, conviction for more than thirty years constituting a life sentence.

ARTICLE number 2 is obviously for the purpose of destroying all labor unions in Japan (the labor union in Japan is still illegal) article number 3 being a preventive measure for preparation for labor organization of any sort, and article number 4 aims directly against the strike. Article number 5 would unish those who circulate radical propaganda of any sort, and article number 6 would imprison those who instigate the violation of law for accomplishing radical ends.

IT is evident from article 7 that the Japanese government actually believes the rumor that Communists are being supplied with money from the Third International. In order to gather inside information from the coward who fears that his arrest is imminent the act would coax him into confession by promises of exemptions from punishment as a reward for his seeming repentance of his sin. Article 9 would keep from the Japanese public knowledge of the trials and punishments of political prisoners, and article 10 would prevent organization outside of Japan against the imperial government. The last article, of course interferes with the sovereign rights of other countries.

THE passing of the anti-seditious act would create terrorism in Japan, stirring people to nihilist assassinations. But whether or not this or any other laws are passed in Japan for the suppression of the class conscious workers the Japanese revolution cannot be killed. You may hear the revolutionary song of Japan in the factories and streets, everywhere.

Japan's Revolutionary Song

The revolution is near! The revolution is near!
Arise ragged children of the slums
Awake ye poor of the streets
Behold these who trampled your paradise of freedom
Behold those who destroyed the open road of justice
Our brothers of Russia cried;
If we have no freedom we choose the grave.
The luminous moon of autumn
The glorious flowers of Spring
Bloom only for the rich
The luminous moon of autumn
Shines only for the glittering mansion and vermillion tower
Our children have been murdered in imperialist wars
And out old parents have starved to death
And we are freezing, we are starving
But we stall have the power to organize
Arise, comrades. The revolution is near for us.
Arise, farmers with your plows,
Arise miners with your picks
Arise woodcutters with your axe
Arise factory girls with bobins
Ye mountains and forests, arm yourselves
Ye stone, why do ye not fly?
When we arm ourselves the flag will be stained with red
And we will wave it higher and higher
To cry against the oppression of the bourgeoisie
The revolution is near! The revolution is near!

Women in the Class Struggle

The Road to Freedom

By RACHEL HOLTMAN

AT the time when the proletarian women of the world over are celebrating International Women's Day, it is worth the time to stop for a while to consider what the women in the different bourgeoisie countries have achieved for the last few years in solving the so-called "women's question."

It is worth while to know whether the great promises made to the women during the great war in regard to their liberation bore fruit, whether they are taking part in public affairs, or whether they are secluded as years ago, leading the old life of drudgery and hardships.

In European countries it is an outstanding fact that men are not rushing towards new fields of conquest and achievement for these fields are closed to them.

In Germany the women took a different stand than in other countries. They have learned much during the last few years of struggle. In Latin countries the position of women has not changed. In France and Italy public sentiment is much less in favor of the new role played by women in social life, than it has been before the war. This in spite of the co-operation of the women in the war. It is very apparent how conservative the bourgeoisie world is, how little it changed the old traditional attitude of the masses towards women in general.

During the war, a group of suffragettes in France tried to take advantage of the participation of the women in the war. They brought in a bill to the chamber of deputies asking for full suffrage rights. The bill was turned down. In Italy, during the war women were given prominent responsible positions from which they were kept away before. But when the war was over of the fascisti made it posmade Mussolini its spokesman, the demand for full suffrage became a joke. The chief of the Fascisti made it possible only for the women of the bourgeoisie to attain municipal suffrage. In England, the situation of the women is no better than in other countries. The political, economic and social status of women has not improved. The voting age for women is 30 years, while men vote at the age of 21. Women cannot sit in the upper house of parliament. The divorce law in England legally sanctions a double standard of morals.

In the United States there are 35 million women. There are only two women representatives in congress. Many professions and some universities are closed to women. Can the bourgeoisie world solve the "woman" question? Of course not. A world that is built on competition will be against giving women the opportunity of displaying her abilities. It is difficult for the bourgeoisie women to understand this truth. But it is very important that the proletarian women realize the importance of the fact.

The proletarian women must know that there is no such thing as a separate "women's question." They must realize that they are a part of the working class, that the cause of the working class is their cause and that is why they must align themselves very closely with the Communist parties of their respective countries. Only a Communist state of society will give the women real freedom and independence.

On the eight of March, seven years ago, the women of Petrograd began the struggle for the emancipation of the working women as well as for that of the entire working class of Russia. They succeeded and today have been rewarded for their labors. They are the freest women in the world today. We must follow in their footsteps.

World Women's Day

By MARGARET UNDJUS

INTERNATIONAL Women's Day is celebrated by the workers of the world to proclaim that the struggle of the entire working class to liberate itself from world imperialism, is also the struggle of the women workers, both in factory and in the home. Women's Day is celebrated as an expression of solidarity of women of the working class the world over. On International Women's Day, the Communist Parties of all countries call upon the masses of women of the working class in the factories, in the home, the unemployed women and the mothers of children to revolt against the intolerable conditions under which they are forced to exist, and to join in the world struggle for Communism. For it is Communism which alone stands for the economic independence of women and the right of motherhood to be cared for during pregnancy. Communism will save women from exploitation and suffering, provided the women actively join in with the whole of the working class to overthrow the monster capitalism and in its stead institute the Communist society thru the dictatorship of the proletariat.

The general oppression of the world bourgeoisie against the workers of all capitalist countries is still continuing. It wrests the last bit of bread out of the workers' mouths, intensifies their toil and tramples down the last few poor privileges and rights won in hard struggle.

In America, the great masses of working women are still isolated from the movement of the working class. But on this, the great International holiday of the working women of the world, March 8, the Communist women ask them to pause a moment at the washtub or the machine and realize that they are part of the great movement of proletarian women whose home life has been destroyed by capitalism, and who are destined to destroy capitalism in their turn. The women of all countries are our sisters. They are facing the same problems as ourselves. The wife of the unemployed man who rocks her baby by an empty fireside in Germany, the mother in England, France, Italy, Japan, etc., are under the same lash of capitalism as the sweated women workers in America. The same capitalism is robbing all alike of the joy of life. Only Russia, where the women have achieved their freedom and independence under the leadership of

THE RACIAL QUESTION IN SOVIET RUSSIA

By LOVETT FORT-WHITEMAN.

THERE was no country in the world more harrassed with racial problems than Russia before the revolution. In the Crimea, it was Tartar against Turk; in the Caucusus, Georgian against Armenian; in the Ukraine Gentile against Jew, and in Asiatic Russia, Moslem against Christian.

It might be said that the Jew was the Negro of Russia, insofar as the Jewish question exhibited in its general outlines many features common to the Negro problem of America. Under the czarist regime, the Jew was not permitted to live in the larger and more important cities of Russia and in only a few places was he permitted to carry on agricultural pursuits. A fundamental measure of the czarist policy toward the Jewish race in Russia was that of segregation, and thus the Jew was confined to what was called the Pale Settlement, a strip of territory on the Austrian border.

THE Jew was subjected to periodic wholesale lynchings, termed in Russian "pogroms." No Russian of reputed respectability would patronize a cafe that served Jews. The Jew was in every sense of the term a pariah in Russian society. In Asiatic Russia, particularly in Turkestan, the native people were not given equal accommodations on tramways, in theaters, in restaurants, etc., nor were adequate school facilities afforded them. No Moslem native was permitted to live in what was known as the European section of the cities in Turkestan. Of the many racial groups within the old Russian empire, each and every one had its social problems. Racial maladjustment was an outstanding fact in the social life of old Russia.

BUT folowing the proletarian revolution, the Bolsheviki approached these racial problems with a directness and a scientific understanding such as characterizes the statesmanship of no other country in the world. Wherever the Jew, prior to the revolution, was strictly segregated and ostracized from the full life of the nation, today he has become a complete integer of national life. He lives wherever he chooses, and the question of the Jew no longer constitutes a subject of political discussion. In respect to the races of the Caucausus, of Crimea, and of Eastern Russia, which constituted colonials within the old Russian empire, the recent territorial realignment made by the Soviet government has meant the creation of a number of republics in which each of these races may enjoy group autonomy as a solution of the national and racial problems and the means by which every trace of racial friction is obliterated.

THE native race of Turkestan is the Uzbek people, but since October Turkestan has been converted into what is known as Uzbekstan. An Uzbek race which, before the revolution was subject to the most repressive policy on the part of the czar, finds itself today a quite free and independent and a politically important people.

The Kirghizes people, a nomadic race of the Russian steppes, hove for themselves a Kirghizes republic. The Turkomans, of middle Asia, have their republic. The Armenians, who have suffered much, both under the sultan of Turkey and the czar of Russia have their own republic. It is the same with the Tartars, the Georgians, etc.

THESE many republics do not stand alone as small political entities, isolated from the larger and more developed Russian life, but together they constitute the Russian Federation of Socialist Soviet Republics, or the Russian Union of Socialist Republics.

When one analyzes the racial problem that once existed in Russia, it is surprising to note the strong similarity that obtained between them and the Negro problem of America. It is striking to note in these former Russian problems the same measure of repression, the same tricks of deception, the same attitudes, etc., that characterize race relationships in America. In the very inherent nature of the Soviet system, race friction today in Russia is unthinkable.

A PRIME motive of my trip to Russia was to ascertain to what extent the Soviet system of government was able to effect a solution of the many vexatious racial problems of old czarist Russia. My eight months stay in Russia, attended with travel and study, has rendered me thoroly convinced that the solution of the Negro problem in America is possible only after the revolutionizing of the American social order. Race prejudice is not an inherent thing in the mental make-up of the individual, but springs from the capitalist order of society. The individual, the child, it may be noted in the most remote section of the Southern states, does not affect racial arrogance until it has been brot in touch with public institutions—the school, the church, the press, etc. The very nature of capitalism makes this form of society dependent upon racial disharmony within a given capitalist state, upon religious antagonisms, etc. Only seven years after the proletarian revolution, the extent to which all vestiges of racial hostility has been eradicated is marvelous, to say the least.

IT is probable that no colonial people suffer the weight of imperialism to the extent that the Negro does, whether he be in the new world or in Africa. If we look at the map of Africa, we note that there are only two free and independent Negro states—the Republic of Liberia on the West coast and the Abyssinian empire on the Eastern coast. The rest of Africa has been parcelled out among the imperialist nations of Europe, and we find Portugal politically responsible for territory in Africa twenty-one times the size of Portugal itself; Belgium with territory almost forty times its size; and Britain and France ruling far more black than white men all in all. This is an unnatural situation and certainly cannot continue.

AND why do we find these European powers maintaining a political hold on the African continent? It is for no other purpose than to maintain markets for their surplus products and even to have a ready source of raw material for their home industries. And the system inherently brings the dispossession of the native from his land, forced labor, military conscription, a policy of extending only a minimum of education, and in every respect the institution of a policy on the part of the imperialist nations that shall-function in ever keeping the native African dependent, backward and in every way a pillar of the imperialist structure.

The black man cannot rise under the weight of capitalism.

THE extent of the power of any given imperialist state over the darker races may be a fine measurement of the extent to which racial problems obtain within that particular state, for in the very nature of imperialism the working class of the dominant race assumes an attitude of arrogance and racial superiority towards the colonial peoples in that state.

One who has just returned from Russia experiences an astonishment in reading the many false accounts in our great metropolitan papers of the conditions in Soviet Russia, and certainly of the Communists. It is to be expected that the capitalist class of all countries must ever keep up a campaign of lies against Soviet Russia, the first government of workers and peasants, for they know that Russia, left alone, becomes a source of the deepest inspiration to the workers of all lands. Too, they know that the workers of Russia are interested and are willing to give their active support to the workers of all other countries in their effort to establish a free society—a society free of oppression of the working class, a society free of all racial friction and in which the masses should have the opportunity of imbibing and benefiting by all that our twentieth century has brot us in the way of culture.

THE American Negro has never been contented under his social conditions; he has begun many movements with the definite aim of his social uplift. The outstanding social abuses always uppermost in the mind of the Negro masses are those of lynching, Jim Crow-ism, residential segregation, political disfranchisement in the South industrial discrimination, etc. His reformist organizations are directed primarily towards the removal of these social inequalities. But we find that those who direct the fate of the race are themselves so involved in the interests of the ruling class of this country that they, out of self-interest, are always compelled to limit their actions. Race riots, lynchings, racial hostility in general between the black and white worker are conditions conducive to the maintenance of the system.

The Negro petty-bourgeois leader, the Negro intellectual, have betrayed the interests of the working class of the race time and time again. And if the Negro is developing at this time a real revolutionary group, it is because more and more of the members of the race are coming to see that freedom and the solution of the Negro problem can only come thru a mass movement on the part of the Negro working class.

THE Negro proletariat holds the key of salvation of the race. The Communist society of the future alone will save the race, and it will be in the new society only that the inherent and native power of the race will be enabled to bloom forth in full fruition, and the Negro to give his true and real worth to human progress. The Workers Party is the Communist Party of America, and it is the logical party to which the Negro race should ally itself, for it alone is the only party which can propagate the idea of equality for all peoples.

Iniquity of the Russian Intervention

By W. A. WARREN.

W. A. WARREN is an American civil engineer who graduated from Lehigh University in 1879. He has been in Russia for the last four years, the most part of this time having been spent with the Kuzbas Colony at Kemerovo, Siberia, where he is in charge of the topographical survey. His home is Seattle, Wash.

THE securing by American financiers of a concession from the Russian government for the operation of the manganese deposits in Georgia for a term of twenty years, throws an illuminating side light on the Russian intervention. If the intervention had been successful, the aforesaid financiers would in all probability have secured permanent control of the deposits for nothing, instead of their costing the tidy sum of $100,000,000. Can Messrs. Hughes and Hoover still hold the opinion that "Russia has nothing to trade"?

ONE can put two and two together, and reach a conclusion that will require positive evidence to dislodge. That conclusion is, that the Russian intervention was a plot by international financiers, who dominated their respective governments at the time, to secure and divide up the resources of Russia thru the activities of the allied governments acting as their agents.

THE plot failed, partly on account of the disaffection of the American troops in the Murmask region and in Eastern Siberia, partly on account of the mutiny of the sailors in the French Black Sea fleet, and partly on account of the refusal of the British transport workers to load munitions and supplies for the armies of occupation; but the principal cause of its failure was the heroic efforts of the Russian Red Army which beat back the invaders on all fronts. This Red Army, by the way, was composed mainly of young Russian peasants who had not been on the Austrian and German fronts and this was their first experience in war.

LEST they forget, it is well to remind the financiers of these little occurrences which show that they cannot always depend on the common people to help carry out their purposes even when their governments act as their agents.

The British oil companies without a shadow of right had taken possession of the Baku oil fields, and held possession until the Red Army was almost within striking distance, when the workers rebelled, and the British were forced to retire. The oil extracted during the British occupation is one small item to be considered in the final settlement if it is ever made. Russia very properly refuses to consider a settlement in which the items on one side of the ledger only are to be taken into account.

IT is said here in Russia that Kolchak's army was accompanied by American engineers or army officers whose task was to investigate the natural resources adjacent to the Siberian railways.

If the armies of Kolchak, Deniken, Wrangle, and the Murmansk army had met in Moscow or somewhere in central Russia, the international financiers could have set up a puppet government, and proceeded to divide the resources of Russia among themselves. They would then have had the same stranglehold on the Russian people that the Dawes plan has probably given them on the people of Germany.

RUSSIA had been a loyal ally during the war and had been disabled, and the morality of the attack made on her by her allies in her crippled condition, was that of a pack of wolves devouring one of their number that has been wounded.

If this is not the correct explanation of the Russian intervention, let some member of the Lloyd George government or of the Wilson cabinet come forward with the true explanation and clear up the mystery.

The Communist Debate in Main St.

By TOM MATTHEWS

YOU haven't seen Main Street, nor America, if you haven't seen Marshalltown, the metropolis of Marshall County, Iowa.

They say that not so many years ago Main Street (beg pardon—Marshalltown) had its own unique brand of hospitality for itinerant workmen, more commonly known as hoboes. When one of these unfortunates strayed in the direction of Marshalltown and knocked at the door of one of her proud citizens, he was cordially greeted with a ticket reading "good for one meal" and directed to the marshal. If the "hoe boy's" hunger exceeded his pride, he presented his ticket to the law, who provided the meal and a two hours' job as well, usually in the nature of garbage removing, weed-cutting, or some equally pleasant task.

IT is not recorded whether this hospitality became too expensive or to what extent it drove away Marshalltown's labor supply, but the citizens of this community no longer keep meal tickets by the door. Perhaps the reputation of "Marshal's Town" became so widespread that the unshaved hobo no longer came around for a hand-out.

Be that as it may, the Communists have become the recipients of a different brand of Main Street "hospitality," and in that connection hangs a tale, of how Communism came to be a subject of debate among the unionized employes of Babbit, and how the entire time of a Central Labor meeting was taken up discussing the dangers of discussing Communism.

IT is a "far cry" (and a long railroad haul) from New York to Marshalltown. In New York the high officials of the trade unions decry against the "menace of Communism" while the rank and file, fully 15,000 strong, fight their way into Madison Square Garden to express their solidarity with Lenin and to hear the "convicted Red" C. E. Ruthenberg. In New York the rank and file are stirring from their apathy and in ever larger numbers embracing the ideas of Communism, at least to the extent of sympathy, while the high officials carry out expulsions and campaigns of slander against the militants.

BUT things haven't progressed so rapidly in Main Street. The rank and file of Marshalltown labor still read their weekly "labor paper" and digest its contents with the same faith as they do their gospel. So when the Workers Party organizers, J. E. Snyder and David Coutts, arranged a meeting to be held at the Labor Temple under the auspices of the Workers (Communist) Party, they reckoned without the contents of the little local labor paper. This consisted of the usual "International Labor News Service" (synonym for bunk in 29 letters) telling about the alleged efforts of the Communists, working under orders of Moscow, to destroy the American Federation of Labor, and of the action taken by the Chicago Federation of Labor in refusing to aid in the defense of C. E. Ruthenberg.

ENOUGH for Main Street! The union men of Marshalltown will have no discussion of Communism in their Labor Temple (so they said) yet they proceeded to their Central Labor Union meeting and discussed it themselves, without any assistance from the naughty Reds.

Watch this! The Communists were defended in this debate by the president and the secretary of the Central Labor Union. The delegates on the floor, with one or two exceptions expressed their fear of Communist ideas—the fear which Main Street has of everything it knows nothing about.

THE bureaucracy of the American Federation of Labor does not exercise the direct power and control out in Main Stret which it enjoyes in New York. The officers of the Marshalltown Central Labor Union are from the rank and file. They are the militants of the unions in their locality, and it is for precisely that reason that they hold office in the labor movement. What the rank and file of Main Street recognize unconsciously, despite their fear of new ideas, they must sooner or later come to recognize consciously and accept—THE LEADERSHIP OF THE MILITANTS.

WHEN Marshalltown unionists debate Communism, they are recognizing Communism as an issue. One discussion leads to another. New vistas of progress are opened before them as the old barriers of superstition and prejudice melt away.

When these American unionists themselves participate in a discussion of Communist principles, they are stripping the brand of "foreign importation" from the Workers Party, despite all the efforts of the capitalist class and their henchmen to keep such a brand upon our movement. Their discussion of Communism means the recognition of our movement as American, as one born from the needs of the working class in this country.

Instinctively, the rank and file look to the Communists for leadership. Instinctively, the great masses of the workers in this country look to us to show them the best means of struggle against the capitalist class and their henchmen.

ONE year after the death of Lenin 15,000 workers in New York meet to honor his work. One year after the death of Lenin, the trade unionists of Marshalltown gather in their Central Labor Union meeting to debate the ideas for which Lenin lived.

From Madison Square to Marshalltown—from the international metropolis to the heart of Main Street—Communism is the issue. As Marx would say:

A spectre is haunting American capitalism—the specter of Communism. And that specter is embodied in a living, organized force—the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

GOMPERS

(A class conscious member of the A. F. of L. renders tribute to his fallen chief—fallen long ago)

I

Not recreant was he,
The record shows
A pliant anxious servant
Of the rule of gold.

Each bitter struggle
Days of endless dread
Workers, producing all
In want of bread
Were stepping stones
By which he mounted high
His lips curled with a sneer
Mouthing a lie.

Mocking the workers' hopes, their lives, their dreams
Cringing towards those who own the means
Of circumstance, of pomp and gaudy show
Scorning the burden bearers, bended low.

II

Labor lieutenant of the powers that be
Urging the slaves at home to bend the knee
The boundaries of the empire were to him
The farthest reach of Morgan's lust
When dollars wandered forth to alien shore
He heard the eagle scream
For lie to cover up the fraud
In this he edged the bible out
And lying priests
Such was his talent.

III

When Moscow echoed Lenin's rebel cry
Flaunted the crimson banner to the sky
Trampled the hosts of tyranny to the dust
Then was in senile Samuel roused the lust
To maim, to kill, to crucify, or hang
Each doughty warrior of the rebel band
With lies of ancient time
And some more recent
With spew of his foul brain
And some more decent

IV

With help of Wilson, Hughes, and other blackguards
With half-consent of Debs, and other laggards
He plumbed the depths of calumny and libel
Concocted lies enough for Wells' new bible
To no avail
His lies die with him
While from her long night
Awakened Russia marches
Triumphant toward the light.

V

Our southern brothers
Bound to Morgan's wheel
Hotly resentful
Toward the Iron Heel
That robs in Freedom's name
Were last to feel his leprous touch
Mouthing a sounding phrase
To mask his master's voice
He bid them calm and prudent be
The while the robber bands
Despoiled their nation of its wealth
Such was the brotherhood
Of "Brother" Gompers
Toward weaker peoples
Such too his services
To oily Christians
Who did great honor
To him—a Jew.

VI

Then sound the dirge
Let hollow cant of greatness fill the land
Let prostitutes of pen their pages fill
Let sour-faced chief of state (a flunky too)
Spill empty palaver upon his bier
We workers mourn him not
We know the price of praise from those on high
We see the stain of Judas silver on his palm
The smirk of service on his face.
To save his fame 'mid decent men
This day has come not soon enough
By forty years.

BUD REYNOLDS.

New York Soloist's First Performance Here Wins Favor

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Mr. Stock's twentieth regular program, given at Orchestra Hall last Friday and Saturday, brot us two soloists, both of them well known and well liked in New York, but who had their first Chicago hearings on this occasion. The one was the conductor, Hermann Hans Wetzler and the other was the pianist, Alexander Brallovski.

Wetzler directed the first Chicago performance of an orchestra suite of his in five movements calles "Visions." Carrying out the ideas of Richard Strauss and Alyexander Ccriabine, Wetzler attempts in this suite to express philosophic and mystical ideas in tone. But he has more sincerity than Strauss, if not all of his brains, and he is more on the earth than the Russian super-mystic. "Visions" opens with an introduction in which is set forth a "Theme of the Struggling Spirit." This leads into a slow movement intended to express the idea of prayer in the form of a sonnet written by no less a man than Michel Angelo.

The third movement is a "Scherzo Demonaico" describing Sharon, the boatman of the Styx. This is followed by a most curious "Intermezzo Ironico," in which life is distorted and caricatured. Wetzler tries to burlesque the modernists and fails for the simple reason that those whom he attempts to burlesque are themselves writing with a laugh in the sleeve. But for the moment Wetzler is Honagger, writing music descriptive of locomotives that turn out to be nothing but toys of tin and paint, for the moment he is Poulenc and young Georges Auric playing with the baby rattles of jazz, for the nounce he is Irving Berlin. But the whole winds up with a "Fugato Risoluto" and a "Risonanza Estrema," a great pain laden slow motion section in which the "Theme of the Struggling Spirit" attains heroic size.

Alexander Brallowski came and played and conquered. He is a keyboard genius of limitless power. His interpretations are not the ordinary ones, but he never goes to the extremity of distortion to which some pianists are driven in an effort to find original readings. He played the Saint-Saens fourth concerto and got out of it one of the biggest ovations any soloist has got this season, and every handclap of it was deserved.

INTERNATIONAL NOTES

RUSSIA.

LENINGRAD.— The Society of Friends of the Red Air Fleet of the U. S. S. R. has presented the Red Air Fleet with a second "Lenin Esquadrille." The esquadrille is composed of 18 aeroplanes, given by the central committee of the Railroad Workers' Union, the central committee of the Union of Soviet Employees, the Society of the Frends of Red Aviation of the Khirghiz, the same society of Tula, etc.

POLAND.

WARSAW.—The Communist fraction in the Polish Diet introduced an interpellation regarding the closing down of the Bielostock trade unions by the police.

The police have closed down almost all the unions of this city, sealing the premises occupied by them.

Great mass meetings of workers have been held in Premysl and Stebnik (Eastern Galicia) to demand the freeing of the Polish Communist Deputy, Comrade Lanczucsky.

Adolphe Lanter, editor of the Lemberg "Tribuna Prolotnitcha," the organ of the union of the city and country proletariat of Poland, has been sentenced to seven months in prison, and forbidden to return to Lemberg for five years after that. The paper which he was arrested for publishing was appearing legally.

GERMANY.

BERLIN.—The campaign being carried on by the German Communists for trade union unity is proving extremely effective. The first definite break with the anti-unity policy of the reformist union leaders has been made by the Berlin section of the German Metal Workers' Federation, the most important section of the strongest federation in Germany, which unanimously adopted the following resolution introduced by the Communists at a general session of the union:

"The session instructs the local committee to request the executive committee to take steps towards the establishment of a Trade Union International and to agitate for all the trade unions of the world taking their stand on the ground of the class struggle, and for their reunion in one Trade Union International, whether or not they belong to an international at present, and which ever one they belong to. The executive committees of the two internationals shall decide in conference on the method of calling, and the composition of a world congress.

Saxon Peasant Congress.

BERLIN.—At a congress of the poor peasantry of Saxony recently held at Koenigswald, the Communists gained a signal victory, despite the strenuous efforts of representatives of the German nationalist party to swing the delegates round to their side. The chief points under consideration were the bad harvest and the heavy taxation to which the peasants are being subjected. After the German nationalists had spoken at length, a member of the Communist reichstag fraction explained to the congress the sort of agrarian policy that the German-nationalists are really pursuing in the reichstag. Thereupon a resolution drawn up in accordance with the line of the Communist Party in relation to the poor peasantry was adopted unanimously by the 700 delegates.

NORWAY.

OSLO.— During the interpellation of Comrade Stestag, leader of the Communist fraction in the Storthing, regarding measures to be taken in order to halt the present rapid growth of unemployment in Norway, a great demonstration of unemployed took place before the parliament building. The crowd massed before the building grew to such proportions that the session was forced to receive a delegation, headed by the Communist Mausset.

After leaving the session, Mausset addressed the waiting crowd of unemployed, reporting the evasive answer of the president of the storthing and showing the necessity of the seizure of power by the proletariat. In the course of his fiery speech he proposed that greetings should be sent to the victims of bourgeois justice in the general strike in Trondheim, and ended with a call to the workers to establish a "Soviet Norway." The police intervened to put a stop to the meeting.

Prison for Two Communists.

OSLO.—The Communists Durendal and Hergardsen have been sentenced to a year in prison and ten years' loss of civil rights for a clash with strikebreakers during the strike in Trondheim last year. A mass meeting was held in the city to protest against the sentence.

"The Romance of New Russia"

IN a boys' school in California I was reading to a large class in Modern History the story of what young people are doing—are living in far away Russia, land of the hated Bolsheviks. To my surprise, even the most frivolous members of that class listened to this reading with intense interest, so gripping was its revelation of a human social life utterly unknown to their experience.

The book was "The Romance of New Russia" by Magdeleine Marx, published by Thomas Seltzer, New York City. It was the story of one typical girl of Russia—one of hundreds of thousands like her in that country—and of a school of boys and girls—that I was reading: parts of two chapters in this book. This typical girl of New Russia, "Lena," at 20 is one of "an endless stream of youtn pouring into Moscow, eager for study, without the remotest chance of finding quarters, but confident of running across some stranger—this could happen only in Russia—who would be only too glad to share his crust and the cold attic where one stumbled over sleepers when one came home at night."

"WAS Lena a Communist . . . Child of a mechanical age, the daughter of revolutionaries, twin sister to the proletarian, enrolled from birth in a mad army, in a chaotic world, Communism was not a mere doctrine to her, a parcel of ideas. It was unscathed spirit of her twenty years, her unerring instinct for nobility and justice, something that emanated from all her studies; it was nothing less than the world itself, spread out before her like a huge arena; it was the pitiless urge of her blood."

Mme. Marx had seen the older Communist women of Russia: Kollontai, Krupskaya, Lebodeva, Gasparova and others—the mothers, the servants, the priestesses of the revolution—its saints and martyrs. And she well says that "every sacrificial and unselfish instinct that is implanted in human nature caused these older women to become revolutionists."

BUT "when you are with Lena, you have a sense of well-being, an assurance that all the flood-gates of joy are wide open. The older women have sacrificed everything to the revolution; Lena has RECEIVED everything from it."

The striking contrast between the civilization of the new Russia and that of the whole fabric of bourgeois social life anywhere is well put in these two paragraphs:

"In the daughters of the bourgeois world, in whom intellectual activity and familiarity with books develop nothing but the analytical spirit, intelligence is poison, knowledge is a misfortune. Keen as their brains are, all they use their mentality for is to bolster up a sterile pride in never being taken in. 'What's the use?' they cry. Logically, there is nothing for them but to commit suicide.

"WHEREAS Lena is all for life. What has she to do with bitter skepticism, with despair, with the view that humanity is groping at night in an impasse? With her everything is resolved into action. Nothing comes to the surface upon which she does not act."

Lena—indeed, an uncounted number of the youth of new Russia—is living and acting within the most stimulating, invigorating, vital atmosphere a human being can know—in a world of which the whole fabric of church and state thus far has not even dreamed. "She does not know, nor so much as suspect, that one can get satisfaction out of owning dresses, furniture, a house, precious objects; or experience pleasure in adorning oneself with jewels; or use one's strength for one's personal career, or accept an idea for what it can bring one." In a word, Lena is having her life in a civilization that is right now consciously in process of building—building toward ideals which others have been content to dream about or merely to mouth, but which the new Russia is proceeding to translate into every day reality. Little wonder that Anna Louise Strong felt an irresistible urge to return to Russia in spite of illness and privation, that even the exotic Claire Sheridan, in spite of herself, had the feeling that such an atmosphere as this of Russia is supremely the one in which children should be educated, that Mme. Marx herself felt that the lot of her own child in France is pitiful compared with that of hundreds of thousands of even orphan children in new Russia.

THE school Mme. Marx describes—one of thousands of the same sort established by the new regime in Russia—can be matched nowhere else in the world. There the children consciously create their school. It is their life together. It is the rare fortune of these children—hundreds of thousands of them orphaned by the capitalistic world war—to live in a country which regards its children as its dearest treasure. "As between fathers and children, the code chooses the children and takes their part. Books are written for them; for them the whole country works, sacrifices, builds. For their sake everything has been torn down and is now being reconstructed.

"TO govern oneself, to work, to be responsible—these, for other children, are only words; flabby words, without meaning, that collapse the moment they are said. But this nation of children LIVES the words. For them, they are not mere words: they are the strength of their muscles, the warm spirit that stirs their limbs.

"Their opportunity above all is that they are beginning life in a country where the nature of every existing institution is being called in question. It is not only the social regime that has changed; it is not only in the political order that buildings and beginnings are going on; change characterizes every element in society. All barriers have gone down, not only between society and the individual, but wherever barriers were, wherever life was divided into compartments, and thought was kept back from being free and human life was held back from its limitless destiny."

THRU twenty chapters does this consummate writer hold the mirror up to nature in the new Russia, and the result is a book which any man or woman with red blood lays down, after reading, with a sense of joy, a feeling that human society has possibilities of which most of the books we read give us no inkling.

"GREED"—AN AMERICAN FILM WORTHY OF SOVIET RUSSIA

One of the opening sub-titles quotes Frank Norris, the author, as saying: "I never truckled; I never took off my hat to fashion and held it out for pennies. By God, I told them the truth. They liked it or they didn't like it. What had that to do with me? I told them the truth."

Strange as it may seem in an American film reputed to have cost two million dollars and two years in the making, this fanatic declaration of faith has been carried out thru this gripping, stark film worthy of the sponsorship of the Moscow Art Theater itself.

Upton Sinclair, in his latest book, "Mammonart," writes of this story: "The theme of McTeague" (upon which "Greed" is based) "is avarice, and we see a dentist's office with a big gold tooth for a sign, and all thru the tragic story we run upon the motif of gold in everything from sunsets to decorations."

The director of this remarkable film, Eric von Stroheim, caught the same note from "McTeague" and faithfully recorded it even to the extent of a subtle use of color photography that emphasizes only the gold and brass and leaves the rest of the picture in tremendously suitable black and white and gray. Only twice do other colors than gold get their deserts—once in the greedy, green eyes of the cat as she contemplates a dinner of canary, and again in the finale where a bag of gold coin is spattered over with jackass blood in the sink of Death Valley, as two handcuffed men, hunter and hunted, both victims of the bag of shining yellow metal, settle down to their approaching death.

The capitalist press has either openly roasted it, or more subtly damned it with faint praise on its "artistic and intelligent altho sad and sordid qualities." The latter is the more effective method of fighting a good picture, since many newspaper readers have a habit of judging newspaper opinions by opposites. Thus the dubbing as "sentimental" the film "Tongues of Flame" in which Tommy Meighan gave the Indian a square deal for the first time in reel life, quickly drove him back to a safe and sane strikebreaker role in "Coming Through." We shall see what "Greed" is going to do to von Stroheim's next picture.

Many of the reviewers of "Greed" have hit upon one very true generalization—"You are either going to like it tremendously, or you will hate it." That's the kind of a film it is. It tells the truth. About real people. And real situations and emotions.

The final tragedy can be traced back to a strictly capitalist rendition of "sacred mother love." McTeague's mother works herself almost to death as a mine camp cook, and sacrifices her all, "to make something of the boy." And that "something" is, of course, to take him out of the ranks of the workers and make a professional out of him, a "non-union" dentist. But instead of this great "progress" leading to happiness it ends in wife murder and a miserable death in the middle of Death Valley. No fake about it either, the film was shot in the valley with temperature over 120.

The New York Workers' School

By REBECCA GRECHT.

THE WORKERS SCHOOL marks the first serious attempt of the Workers Party to set up a permanent educational institution in the New York district. Organized originally as a private undertaking by a group of comrades not directly responsible for the work to the party, the school became an instrument for Communist training and the spreading of Communist ideology when, about a year ago, it was brot under the direct control and supervision first of the district executive committee and later of the national executive committee of the Workers Party.

The school is a Communist educational institution. It purposes to give workers that knowledge of labor history, of the principles and tactics of Communism, which is indespensible for militant action in the struggle against capitalism.

THE importance of this work cannot be exaggerated. Practical activity of our comrades in the struggles of labor, the crystallization and organization of the left wing, both industrially and politically, requires a knowledge of facts, an understanding of revolutionary theory and tactics. The Fifth Congress of the Communist International issued a thesis on agitation and propaganda which calls upon all Communist parties to intesify their educational efforts so as to make their organizations real parties of Lenin, and extend Communist influence amongst the masses. In the spirit of this call, the Workers School aims to spread the teachings of Marx and Lenin so as to develop a Bolshevist ideology, and strives to train comrades to take active leadership both in the various units of the party and in the shops and trade unions.

WITH this in view, a program of activity was formulated for the district in the spring of last year providing for the training of our party membership and the extension of educational work to the trade union elements. In accordance with this plan, the school opened last summer with a party training course covering a period of ten weeks and consisting of several classes in history and Communist theory. The course met with considerable success and prepared the ground for the succeeding work of the school.

The school began its winter season on Dec. 1. The main part of its activities were concentrated at the central school headquarters now at 108 East 14th street, where party and trade union training courses, in addition to general lecture courses, were offered. Classes and forums were also started in verious parts of the city and in various towns of the district.

Party Training Courses.

THE party training course was planned to afford members of the Workers Party the long-desired opportunity of studying the principles and tactics of the Communist movement. It consists of four classes in Communist theory and tactics, Marxism, and American Economic History. These are not lecture courses, but study classes, each of which is open to all party members who wish to learn and are ready to devote some time to serious study.

The course as a whole takes up the fundamental aspects of Marxism and Leninism, and also the basic factors in American economic and social development. It embodies our efforts to give party members that understanding of our movement which is of prime necessity for effective service in the party, from the lowest to the highest units.

Trade Union Training Course.

THIS course was designed primarily for workers active in the trade unions. The growth of the left wing movement in the different industries has made it imperative that we develop a body of militants capable of directing this movement. Practical activity in the shops and trade unions is all fundamentally necessary. The left wing, however, has not merely a program for immediate struggles in the industries. It has a vision of the entire labor movement, a definite goal—the workers' republic. Effective leadership therefore demands a knowledge of labor history and revolutionary theory and tactics.

The trade union couise given at the Workers School consists of three study classes in Communism, American trade union history, and public speaking. The classes are open to all workers. Already considerable interest has been aroused in the courses, and the classes are being attended by militants active in different industries.

General Courses.

IN addition to these study classes, the school is offering two lecture courses, one on the Russian Revolution, conducted by Moissaye J. Olgin, another on Current Events, given by Ludwig Lore. These give workers who have no time for study an opportunity to hear the Communist point of view explained and analyzed by leading Communists.

Finally, a general course in Public Speaking and classes in Elementary and Advanced English complete the list of activities at the central school.

Workers' Educational Centers.

MOST of the educational activities of the school, as has been stated, are carried on at the central headquarters. In order to reach wider masses of workers, however, workers' educational centers have been established in the Bronx, Harlem and Brownsville districts under the supervision of the Workers School and the section committees of the party. These offer classes in the Elements of Communism, and English and also conduct open forums.

The educational centers are but the beginnings of what we hope to develop into branches of the Workers School. More classes will be organized as the work continues and interest grows.

Classes in Elements of Communism.

ONE of the main purposes of the Workers School is to make our party more truly a Bolshevik party by spreading the teachings of Marx and Lenin amongst our membership. To this end, classes in the Elements of Communism are being given in the workers' educational centers as well as in other parts of the city. At present five such classes are in progress and a sixth one is being organized for lower Manhattan.

All party members who have joined during the last year, and who have had no instruction in Communist theory, are expected to attend the classes. We hope that soon it will be possible to make such a course a requirement for admission into the party in this district.

The clases are open to non-party members. The first term deals with the general theory of Communism. The second term will study the principles and tactics of the Communist International.

Open Forums.

THESE are being conducted every Sunday evening, 8 p. m., at the workers' educational centers, with prominent Communists as speakers; among them, Ludwig Lore, Joseph Manley, Oliver Carlson, William Weinstone, Juliet Stuart Poynts and others. The forum will continue thru May.

District Activities.

THE activities of the Workers School are not confined to New York. The school is a district institution of the party and has in charge all educational work in the territory of District 2. During the winter, classes in the Elements of Communism were started in Union Hill and Newark, New Jersey, and also in Yonkers, New York. These classes follow the same course of study as in the city.

Open forums are also being held in Union Hill and Passaic, New Jersey. A class in Communism will be organized in the coming term.

Our Tasks.

THE above is a very brief account of the activities of the Workers School since its organization as a Workers Party institution. In the short period of its existence, we have not, of course, been able to realize all our aims. But a definite beginning has been made in systematic, educational work. We have succeeded in rousing a more serious interest in education within our ranks. We have begun to develop an appreciation of the importance of training in revolutionary history and theory for our political and industrial work.

OUR tasks, however, are just commencing. Much pioneer work has yet to be done. The Workers School can be built up only thru the combined efforts of the party membership and sympathisers. We are now completing the first term. The spring term starts March 16. Our immediate task is, to increase the registration for all the classes, to urge comrades to enroll in the party and trade union training courses, to give the school publicity among all the workers we meet, and wherever we congregate. Tho most of the courses started in December and January, they have been so arranged that they can be taken very profitably in the second terms as well.

The foundation has been laid. Now we must build. Every member and sympathiser giving his co-operation, we will establish a Communist school which will become the center for revolutionary working class education in this city.

Comrades should enroll at once. For information and registration inquire any day or evening at office of Workers School, Room 34, 108 East 14th street. Telephone Stuyvesant 8100.

WOMEN IN THE CLASS STRUGGLE

the Communist Party of Russia, stands out as the shining light to the women of the entire world.

International Women's Day was started by American women socialists in 1909 and adopted on an international scale by the Socialist Women's Congress at Copenhagen, in 1910. In the year 1911, on March 8, in Vienna, 30,000 women celebrated, demanding political rights and the protection of their labor. In 1914, when the shadow of the great war lay across the path, great demonstrations were held on March 8. In 1917, of all European countries, the Russian women alone dared to celebrate March 8, demanding bread and peace. It is now officially designated by the Communist International as Women's Day.

The women of Russia have thrown off their yoke. We too, must know that only by united action of the entire working class — both men and women—can the burden of capitalist exploitation be lifted from our shoulders and then only dare we hope to live a nobler life.

On this International Communist Women's Day let us join in with the women of other countries in one great cry: "The exploitation of the peoples of the world shall be ended! Let us arise and unite in our strength, working men and women of all countries in the Communist International and replace the capitalist state by the workers' government!"

GREED—AN AMERICAN FILM

your money and live and die in hell" proves "Greed." No worthy human sentiment can withstand the corrosive qualities of the gold won on a raffle ticket. Love, industry, friendship, honor, all are tarnished in the course of the very thought processes that are basic to capitalist success.

From every angle the film is perfect. No hint of the star system mars it, the director chose his cast deliberately from among artists who had distinguished themselves chiefly in pie-throwing and slap-stick comedy. Yet here they give us flawless high tragedy. The camera work is marvelous in its daring, new tricks of perspective and focus are employed without end.

For a good story, perfect direction, flawless acting, and technical preeminence, "Greed" will live as long as films are shown.

Social-Democracy Strips Itself Naked

ARTICLE III.

THE next witness, the retired representative and minister of the reich, Dr. David, was then heard with reference to the assertions made by the witness Kloth on a change of policy on the part of the social democrats during the war.

The witness declared that such an assertion was not in the least in accordance with the truth.

The social democratic reichstag fraction, even after the outbreak of the Russian revolution, still continued the policy of national defense and granting of war credits. At that time Mr. Ebert openly defended this policy, stating as justification that we had to go on granting credits because the will to peace was lacking on the other side.

Herr Ebert invariably opposed the pessimists, and stated clearly and unequivocably that there could be no question of peace at any price. He never abandoned hope that the situation, even the military situation, would improve. When Austria and Turkey collapsed, and when our military headquarters failed us, the majority of the fraction were in favor of either granting no more credits or of entering the government. Despite all this, Herr Ebert did his utmost towards inducing the party to sacrifice even this to the country. This suffices to show the assertion that we had changed our policy, to be false. —(Vorwarts, December 15.)

Social Democracy is not Revolutionary.

HEINE (barrister): Have you reason to believe that the policy of the social democratic party has been detrimental to national defense?

Witness Fehrenbach (the one time clerical chancellor of the reich): I can only say that the great majority of the social democrats—apart from split off groups—has felt as patriotically as any other party. I am of the opinion that the whole revolutionary trend of feeling obtaining in November, 1918, was not supported by the majority socialists. Ebert himself once told me that at that time he negotiated until far into the night with trade union leaders, in the endeavor to prevent a general strike or a revolutionary movement.—(Vorwarts, December 15.)

Stampfer and the Commanders

BINDEWALD (barrister) moved that the head mayor Scheidemann be again called upon to appear the next day, in order to give information as to whether he wrote the article published in "Vorwarts" on January 29, 1918, in which the munition workers' strike was fully approved of.

Chairman: The investigation made at the time showed the article to have been written either by Herr Stampfer himself or by Herr Kuttner.

Dr. Landsberg (barrister):

I should like to observe here that at that time our military headquarters expressed to Herr Stampfer their regret that proceedings had been taken against Herr Stempfer on account of this article.—(Vorwarts, Dec. 16.)

Professor Bears Witness

EVIDENCE given by Alfred Weber, professor at Heidelberg:

I have come forward as witness on my own initiative. In the spring of 1918, after the Brest Litovsk negotiations, I considered the situation to be internally politically endangered, and believed it to be highly probable the radical elements would gain power over the working class.

I considered the best purpose to be attained by making it possible for the majority socialists, as superior and quiet people, to retain their hold upon the working class.

I thus endeavored to act as intermediary. I finally consulted with Herr Ebert and Herr Scheidemann, and was able to assume that this was not disagreeable to the secretary of state Roedern.

We consulted upon the best way of putting an end to the strike as speedily as possible.

Formal Satisfaction

WITNESS Professor Alfred Weber: I can only say that Ebert's conduct was entirely the contrary of what it would have been if he had been desirous of aggravating the strike, or of gaining any political advantage from it. On the contrary, Ebert told me that the point of first importance was to bring the workers to reason. We should then be able to calculate upon the rapid settlement of the strike. I cannot remember any further details.

The question was, as these gentlemen told me, to give the workers the formal satisfaction that their economic wishes—political questions were not mentioned at all—were at least being listened to. With this information I went next day to Roedern, and told him that I had the definite impression that the strike, should it take place, would be settled within a very brief period.—(Rote Fahne, Dec. 17.)

Counter Measures Against Strike

HEINE (barrister): I have a letter from Schlicke (chairman of the Metal Workers' Union) in which he opposes General von Wriesberg's declaration, and states that he journeyed to Stuttgart as member of the army commission, with the knowledge of his then superior, General v. Wriesberg, for the express purpose of consulting with the committee of the German Metal Workers' Union on measures to be taken against the strike.

—(Rote Fahne, Dec. 17.)

"A Tactical Maneuver."

DR. MARTIN (barrister): Was the number of strikers increased by the participation of the social democrats?

Witness Henning (police councillor): That can scarcely have been the case. The participation of the S. D. party was a tactical maneuver; the party feared that it would otherwise be crushed against the wall by the independent social democrats. The greater number of the workers belonged to the independents.—(Vorwarts, Dec. 17.)

WITNESS Kindler (carpenter): expressly emphasized that we were all under military authority, and that anyone failing to obey was liable to punishment.

Chairman: Was Ebert applauded?

Witness: On the contrary, he had to stand a great deal. Such expressions as "strike sabotager" and "betrayer of the workers."

Chairman: But had he mentioned the strike at all?

Witness: No. This was why the audience called out to him to come to the point. After Ebert's speech we did not know any more than before. He spoke of "food shortage" and tried to quiet us down in general.—(Vorwarts, Dec. 17.)

Ebert as Strike Speaker

WITNESS LEHNHOFF (editor of the Berliner Tageblatt, who attended the strike meeting on the Treptow common where Ebert spoke) I was accustomed to Ebert's fresh and energetic way of speaking, and from the very beginning I had the impression that the speaker was much depressed; his address was also extremely colorless. He declared that it was the duty of the workers at home to support their brothers and fathers at the front, and to supply them with the best possible weapons. The workers in France and England were not missing a single working hour in their efforts to help their brothers at the front. We must do our utmost to bring about a peace which would enable Germany to live.

It struck me that Ebert did not utter one revolutionary word.—(Vorwarts, Dec. 17.)

Richard Muller on January Strike

WITNESS RICHARD MULLER: At the beginning of 1918 the feeling in favor of revolution increased, and we had to hold back certain strata of the workers, as we considered united action to be the only right method. We revolutionary leaders fixed the day on which the strike was to start for January 28. On January 27, I called the important group of metal turners together in Berlin, and said to them: "The strike begins tomorrow!" As a matter of fact 300,000 to 400,000 workers downed tool in Berlin on January 28. I wished the social democrats to join the strike committee.

The first meeting of the strike committee took place in the evening of the 28th, between 6 and 7 o'clock, and was participated in by deputies belonging to the social democratic and independent socialist parties. At this meeting, at which I acted as chairman, Ebert expressed the wish for equal representation in the strike committee, but we rejected this motion. Ebert declared a discussion on the demands to be absolutely necessary, We then discussed organizatory questions referring to the strike. At this moment we received news that the affair was getting shaky, and the police were coming, whereupon the social democrats made themselves scarce.

On January 29, between 10 and 11 o'clock in the morning we met again in the Trade Union Buildings. Scheidemann was present. I do not remember whether Ebert was there. Scheidemann reported that the secretary of state, Wallraf, had refused to receive representatives of the striking workers.

We had resolved that the deputies should not go to Wallraf alone, for we had no confidence in the social democrats, and wanted to keep the independents under observation as well.—(Vorwarts, Dec. 17.)

Regain Confidence of the Workers

WITNESS RICHARD MULLER: The excitement was very great among the workers in January, 1918, the influence of the social democrats and the trade unions very small. It was thus an excellent opportunity for these gentlemen to join the strike committee, and thus to regain the confidence of the workers. I am also of the opinion that if the affair had turned out differently at that time, these gentlemen would have acted just as they did act later.

WITH reference to defence of native country, vacillation has scarcely been observable in the standpoint of the S. D. party. From the very beginning it preached the principles of holding out and of national defence. In order to prove this I should have to produce innumerable articles and resolutions here, but as I have already stated, the right wing of social democracy has maintained a fairly consistent attitude on this question.—(Vorwarts, Dec. 17.)

Our Readers' Views

The Circus Show in Washington.

To the DAILY WORKER: The fourth of March was a big day for our beloved rulers.

They had a big circus - show in Washington. The elephant performed all his tricks again. Our "Save a penny" Coolidge and "Hell an' Maria" Dawes proved to be excellent trainers. Everybody was happy. Even the circus staff was full of glee. I mean the senators who feed the elephant. They had their wages raised without striking, and they were not sold out by their union chiefs, besides the raise (10c a day) came quite handy: The price of booze is going up ($140.00 a case, market price.)

I am proud to say that our Chicago was not behind in expressing its patriotic feelings. 500 of our best citizens of the gold coast (a rich settlement on the north side) took a day off and went to Washington. Their bootleggers followed the next day.

Among the spectators you could see William Jennings Bryan, the famous donkey trainer, who is also well known as an opponent to the theory of the law of evolution. But here with his own honest eyes he had a chance to see how an honest-to-god donkey can eventually evolve into a great sized elephant, especially, when the donky's forebears had their vacuum brains filled with religious matter and were carrying on a flirtation with the ku klux klan.

Mr. Bryan, shakes hands with Mr. Darwin! . . . For the next four years the elephant will wear the crown of a champion trick performer, till Wall Street will get tired of his bad manners and will crown the head of a more refined animal. So far everything is lovely!

By the way, Cal had broadcasted a speech on the theme "How to feed an elephant." He is considered to be the best authority on that subject. (He was hunting striking cops in the wilderness of Massachusetts.)

He claims that if you feed too much oil to an elephant, the animal is bound to develop a fatal disease, known in medical terms as "teapot domities," but in moderate portions oil is quite beneficial and besides, he said, one kind of food is not advisable for any animal. Food must consist of graft, etc.

Coal Miners and the Dawes Plan

a widespread campaign of agitation against the Dawes plan.

Reformists and the Dawes Plan

Although the Dawes plan affects above all the interests of the mine workers, the reformist leaders of the miners' organizations have done absolutely nothing to combat it. Even the congress of the International Trade Union Secretariats in Prague did not seem to think it necessary even to touch upon the problems brought into existence by the Dawes plan. The executive board had held a session in Brussels before the meeting of the congresses, but the only action taken on this question was the decision to ask those in the districts affected to make a plea for lightening the reparations deliveries.

THE most active in this connection has been the English union, which sent a delegation to MacDonald laying before him the hardships resulting for the English miner from the Dawes plan. But this was all. The reformist miners' organizations actually came out in support of the Dawes plan parties. When the miners' strike broke out in Belgium, the reformist unions kept silent about and did not move to help their striking brothers.

Final Conclusions

The carrying out of the Dawes plan has increased international competition on the coal market.

The pressure brought to bear on the miners by the coal owners is increasing proportionately.

Wages in Poland, Belgium and Holland have been lowered, unemployment in England is increasing, and working conditions in England and Germany are becoming worse.

The offensive of the coal barons is pronouncedly international in character, and is intensifying the class struggle.

For this reason the workers' organizations must act on an international scale.

THE reformists, who are in the closest contact with capital in their various fatherlands, are not in the slightest degree fitted for the struggle in their own countries, let alone for struggle on an international scale.

Consequently it is the duty of the revolutionary miners to unite the masses, to assume leadership and to show them the necessity of fighting the Dawes plan.

At the same time it is necessary to fight for the restoration of international unity, since this alone assures the possibility of exerting influence over the masses of the miners.

NOVA SCOTIA[illegible]RS STRIKE AGAINST L[illegible]UT; STARVING WORKERS APPEAL FOR RELIEF

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GLACE BAY, Nova Scotia, March 8.—After months of fruitless negotiations between the British Empire Steel Corporation (Besco), and the coal miners of District 26, United Mine Workers of America, the miners declared a one hundred per cent strike Friday night at eleven o'clock. 12,000 miners, and their families are involved.

The situation is regarded more as a lockout, in view of the fact that the company has practically closed down ten collieries since the first of the year.

Corporation Tries Starvation Pressure

Credit was stopped at company stores a week ago. The situation is tense in the extreme.

Miners and their families are actually starving as a result of no work for the past months. Soup kitchens and relief depots have been going for a few days, but can relieve the situation only a little.

The company is preparing for a long siege and in alliance with the dominion government is planning to beat the miners into the earth.

Appeal to Organize Labor

The miners must rely on general labor support by financial assistance and contribution of clothing and foodstuffs. There is but little money in local treasury. The Nova Scotia miners are appealing to labor bodies everywhere to support their battle in a fight to a finish against corporation and governmental oppression.

Gives Million To Enslave Negro

NEW YORK, March 8.—John D. Rockefeller Jr., has donated $1,000,000 to the Hampton and Tuskegee institute for the Negroes. Rockefeller intimated in his letter to the schools that he donated the money because they sent Negroes into industry.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

IT requires brains to make money or amass wealth! This is what we are told. Our "betters" also tell us that in order to get along well in the world and secure the blessing of the bourgeois deity, it is necessary to avoid sin—particularly sins of the flesh But W. E. D. Stokes, millionaire New York hotel owner, never heard of those requirements or if so he paid no heed. This person has taken up more space in the American press for the past few years than the French debt. Apparently he has only started.

STOKES is now an old man. Like most old men who marry young wives he courted trouble. Having plenty of money, lawyers were willing to help him out in making more trouble—for Stokes. The old millionaire started the fight with his young wife by suing for divorce. He got lots of evidence, which proves that if Stokes had to depend on his brains for his wealth he would not have to bribe a social-democrat.

EVERY half-witted unemployed tout of the big city sex marts took his money away from Stokes, in return for yarns that a dope fiend would sneer at. Having first started the war on his wife the latter had the Cook county state's attorney make a counter-offensive. Stokes has money and a good time. The circulation managers of the Chicago dailies are smiling. There hasn't been a first class murder for almost two weeks and unless the New York millionaire gets the foot and mouth disease, the supply of mental moron food promises to last until some other enterprising capitalist runs away with one of the Yaks in the Lincoln Park zoo.

WE are not so much concerned about the right or wrong of the case. Whether Mrs. Stokes lived in the red light district or not before she caught the millionaire mental defective is of no account. The sacred marriage system under capitalism is a farce. Among the upper classes it is a hypocritical and nauseating farce. The burglar who holds you up on the highway or in an alleyway and separates you from your small change is not a desirable kind of person by any means, but he is a gold nugget compared to the capitalist burglar who robs you of the product of your sweat and blood in the mine or factory, under protection of the law. Prostitutes may bark their wares on the street corners and stand the chance of landing in a prison cell (unless they take the precaution of fixing up the cop). Others are married in churches, but money and not love is often the basis of the alliance.

Amsterdam Writes to the Russian Unions

MOSCOW, Feb. 20. (by mail)—The central council of the trade unions of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics has received from the International Federation of Trade Unions (I. F. T. U.) a letter, signed by Oudegeest in which the question of the affiliation of the trade unions of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is brought to the official notice of the Russian unions.

BULGARIAN COMMUNIST DEPUTY IS MURDERED IN SOFIA ON BUSY STREET

SOFIA, Bulgaria, March 8.—Haralamby Stoyanov, Communist deputy, was murdered in broad daylight as he was walking down the main street of Sofia. The murderer was captured. Comrade Stoyanov was the third Bulgarian deputy to be murdered in the last three weeks.

Japanese House Passes Sedition Law Hitting Reds

TOKIO, Japan, March 8.—The anti-Communist law, prohibiting membership in any organization "opposed to the organic system of Japan," and providing imprisonment for a period of from five to ten years for all forms of Communist activity, has passed the house.

The liberal and labor members of the house fought the bill vigorously, and a heated debate, carried on while the parliament was heavily guarded by government troops, preceded the debate.

BANKERS BOOST BILL FOR STATE CONSTABULARY

The enemies of labor—the bankers, property owners, employers and big business men of Illinois—are unanimously working to saddle a state constabulary on Illinois with which to protect their property and club union men in time of strikes.

John H. Camline of Rockford, president of the Illinois chamber of commerce, admits that he wants a state police force exactly like those now used in other states to club into submission workers who are striking for a living wage. "There is no politics in the state police," says Camline. "Republican and democratic governors alike testify to the splendid work done in their own states."

The Illinois state bankers' association, the conservative farm bureau, the automobile clubs, and the ku klux klan are supporting the state police bill.

The workers universally condemn the plan to bring cossacks into Illinois to ride roughshod over the working-class.

Peace Protocol Is Dead As West European Capitalism Girds for New Slaughter

WAR CLOUDS HOVER OVER EUROPE TODAY

Big Powers Eye Each Other Suspiciously

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

LONDON, March 8—The diplomatic atmosphere in Europe is as tense as it was in the months preceding the late war in the opinion of trained and cautious political observers, who have painstakingly followed the various moves of France and England since the pact of Versailles officially terminated one war only to sow the seeds of another."

The famous peace protocol which Ramsay MacDonald expected would enshrine his name in the annals of history, is dead. That is certain. The opposition of the dominions killed the protocol. Uncle Sam showed a surprising willingness to flirt with the grown-up British colonies wherever John Bull showed signs of coldness.

What Great Britain wants is a loose four or five power pact, not officially binding, but of such a nature as to satisfy French demands without at the same time giving British isolationists and the dominions a chance to kick the government out over a question of foreign entanglements or committments.

France wants a real tangible Belgian-Franco-British military treaty with all the i's dotted and the t's crossed.

Germany is sparring for time in order to get her wind back and is offering the neutrality of the Rhine as a peace guarantee. Brtain is said to be satisfied, but France is not, because France's allies, Poland, Roumania and Czecho-Slovakia do not feel any too safe under those conditions.

One of the foremost military experts in Britain and a close confidante of the foreign office has written an article for the March Fortnightly Review of London, which throws a strong light on the basic policy of the British government of today. Those who imagine that peace is possible under the capitalist system should read this article carefully:

The Article.

LONDON, March 8.—The line of British security is on the Rhine and on the Scheldt. Geographically France and Belgium are within this line. This is the first reason why we must have them with us. With us and not against us. For the middle solution of neutrality has ceased to exist, as the example of Belgium has proved in 1914. We must also have these countries with us because, if Germany becomes a danger, she will be a great danger. The splendid industrial organization of Germany and the capacities of Germany's military experts guarantee effective warlike preparation. We cannot afford to neglect a single element which may assist success. French military power will not increase, but for a long time it will remain considerable, and even Belgian assistance is not to be despised. These are the reasons why, when considering British security, we must bring in the French and the Belgians.

Entirely New Plan.

At the first glance it appears that, under a different sauce, the old dish of the security pacts is being prepared again. This is not so. When we say that the line of British security is on the Rhine, this means that we refuse to be committed at all eastwards of that line. The negotiations with M. Poincare for a security pact broke down because he demanded a definite committment as to the numbers of the expeditionary force and also the inclusion of Poland. Neither of these points was conceded then. Much less can they be conceded now.

The position today is simplified by the fact that France, and especially Belgium, have reduced their pretensions, and, for example, will not insist any more on their demand for a definite promise of a British expeditionary force of a certain size.

View on Germany Joining.

There are people in this country who believe that the solution is in a pact of security which would include Germany. This solution is the ideal one. There is this objection to it, that, being ideal, it is not practical, because Germany's inclusion into the pact would mean the complete surrender by her of the cherished hope of a revanche on her eastern border. Such a surrender can only occur when the party of forceful revenge in Germany is conquered.

Co-operation of Staffs.

What really seems indicated as an immediate practical solution is the close co-operation of the allied general staffs, but without any obligation for the governments to be bound by any tentative scheme which the military experts may prepare. A resumption, in fact, and an extension of the pre-war Wilson-Duball agreement of 1906, which was so fruitful in preparing common action in case of German aggression.

Secrecy Not Possible.

The situation today resembles in many respects that which existed before the war. But there is a difference. Then it was thought necessary to keep the arrangements secret, because Europe was hypnotised by the idea that war was inevitable. Now the object is not to make war, but to prevent it by all means. This object would be certainly defeated if the Germans did not know exactly what they will come up against if they allow the ardour for revenge to gain the upper hand. If there is to be an entente of the general staffs it must be a public one, and, in any case, the German government should be aware of its existence.

Geneva Protocol Useless.

The Geneva protocol is at present useless—useless because premature. It presupposes an international situation in social affairs which exists yet only in the imagination of certain idealists. When a league of nations will embrace all peoples, and when and if these peoples learn to place the interests of humanity above their own national ones, then the protocol will come so naturally that there will not be even a ripple of discussion.

What could have been the draft of an important international document of great educational value has become a bad bill of exchange which will not be honored. The English government is anxiously considering ways and means to get rid of the whole business.

British Interests First.

So let us stand firmly on the strong ground of British interests and of British security, and let us leave to the future what belongs to it; the building up of real national leagues, regional or world embracing. There is a special reason why this is the only attitude which we can usefully assume. It lies in the peculiar structure of the British empire as it exists today. In 1914 Great Britain went to war with Germany without consulting the view of the dominions. The dominions were not consulted before the war began, neither was their approval of the declaration of war asked for afterward officially. Neither did the dominions expect to be so consulted at that time. But now the situation has undergone a complete change. The great dominions, by their effort in the war and with our consent, have acquired national status not only within the empire itself but also among the states of the world.

Dominions Would Not Follow.

Even if it were fair, we could not consult the empire about a French or a Belgian interest. With the best will in the world the dominions would not be able to understand us, and certainly would refuse to follow us in assuming a binding obligation towards peoples which do not belong to the British commonwealth of nations. The only possible way of approaching the dominions is by making out a simple, straight case for a British interest; for British security.

GERMAN RAIL STRIKE SPREADS AS DAWES PLAN ANGERS WORKERS

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

BERLIN, March 8.—The railway strike spread Saturday to the freight handlers in the three principal freight houses of Berlin. Shipments are badly tied up. The next group likely to join the strike are the maintenance of way employes.

Yesterday the union officials resumed the negotiations which Friday were without result, because the administration refused to consider the demands of the men. The strike began in Saxony and in the Ruhr.

The men are dissatisfied with their wages, and are made more so by the Dawes' plan administration raising the salary of the higher railway officials, while ignoring the starvation wages of the lower paid workers.

BRESLAU, Germany, March 8.—The local railway union for Breslau and the surrounding districts has decided to join the Saxony railway strike and will walk out tomorrow morning, it was announced today. The demands of the Breslau railway men are identical with those of the strikers of Saxony.

The strike will embrace railway workshops, freight and passenger service.

COLOGNE, Germany, March 8.—The railway men's unions of the Cologne and Essen districts have voted to support the Saxon strikers in every manner possible. Union officials are attempting to prevent an immediate strike, but their sabotage will be halted by the rank and file led by the Communists.

DRESDEN, Germany, March 8.—The Christian and national trade unions, which at first held aloof from the railway strike, have joined the socialists and Communists in a common effort to bring the railway administration to terms.

NEW YORK COMMUNISTS ARE INVADING THE SHOPS WITH SIX SHOP NUCLEI ORGANIZED

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, March 8.—Six shop nuclei have already been organized by District No. 2 of the Workers (Communist) Party in the city of New York. Many more are in the process of organization. When the re-organization in this district will be completed and the party transformed into shop nuclei units we wil have in the metropolis industrial districts hundreds of Communist strongholds in the big and small factories where the armies of New York's wage slaves are exploited. The party members of District No. 2 are enthusiastic over the results obtained.

Shop Nucleus No. 1 is organized in one of New York's fashionable restaurants that employs over 150 workers. Thru the activities of the shop nucleus

COMMUNIST DAILY "FREIHEIT", SAYS COURT FIGHT WILL PUT RIGHT WING LABOR HEADS ON TRIAL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, March 8.—As one of the first broadsides in its reply to the court attack levelled against it by Harry Lang, labor editor of Cahan's Forward, Lucy Robbins, a Gompers' agent, and a republican congressman, the Jewish Communist Daily, the Freiheit, has issued a statement revealing the motives back of these charges and calling for the defense fund that will enable it to fight this case.

The Freiheit declares that thru this trial it will be able to put the entire reactionary right wing in the labor movement on trial The statement prepared by M. Epstein is as follows:

Dear Comrades: Charges have been submitted to the court against the Freiheit by Harry Lang, labor editor of the Jewish Daily Forward, Lucy Robbins, close associate of the late Gompers, and Congressman N. Perlman, republican politician in New York connected with the right wing machine of the Jewish labor movement.

This libel suit against the Freiheit is based upon two articles that appeared in the Freiheit on the 8th and 9th of February, exposing the corruption and degeneracy of the right wing clique in the labor movement. The exposure involves the reactionary labor leaders in the needle trades and partly in the building trades whose trade union bureaucracy is working hand in hand with the worst elements of the underworld, professional gangsters, fakers and swindlers. All this is being done under cover of socialism and working class interests.

I do not propose to go into detail as to what were the reasons that brot about the prevailing outrageous situation in those unions which contain large numbers of Jewish, Italian, Russian and Polish workers. Suffice it to say that in spite of the comparatively high degree of class consciousness that prevails among the rank and file in the unions, its leadership is permitted to perpetuate the most indecent outrages against the labor movement under the cloak of progress and socialism.

Forward Plays Big Part.

In this work of betrayal and corruption of the trade union leaders, the Jewish Daily Forward is playing an important part. By means of its powerful apparatus of publicity and its large funds, it is capable of covering up the deeds of reactionary labor leaders.

Gangsterism and personal corruption are the characteristic features of these labor bureaucrats in the needle

Mexican Supreme Court Just Like Our Own Bill Taft

MEXICO CITY, March 8.—The state of Vera Cruz had a law, (it should be noted that it has it no more) compelling employers to share, in a small way it is true, but still to share profits with their workers. The Mexican supreme court last week declared the law illegal.

Teapot Scandal In Court

CHEYENNE, Wyo., March 8.—The government's civil suit for the annulment of the Teapot Dome oil lease opens here in federal court tomorrow. Ex-secretary of the interior Fall is en-route to Cheyenne. Fall was found to have illegally given the lease to the Sinclair Oil company for a bribe of $100,000. The disclosures of the transaction revealed the corruption of the national government and the two old parties.

WOOD'S COSSACKS KILL 7 UNARMED RICE WORKERS

MANILA, P. I., March 8.—Constabulary sent out from here by General Leonard Wood, dictator of the Phillipine Islands, under the command of General Rafael Crame, have broken up a meeting of the agrarian workers in the rice province of Nueva Ecija, killing seven defenseless peasants.

The rice workers are organizing against their exploiters.

Two hundred and fifty rice workers gathered on a hill near San Jose, a large town in the northern part of the province of Nueve Ecija. Wood's constabulary, hearing of the meeting, rode into the defenseless peasants, who were unarmed, and shot down seven of them. The constabulary pursued the peasants into the mountains where it is still spreading terror, and shooting all rice workers who can be caught.

Unemployment Grows and Strike Wars Are Impending in Britain

LONDON, March 8.—The American chamber of commerce in London in its February summary of British trade dwells on "threatening clouds on the horizon." These clouds are described as wage disputes pending in the three key industries—mining, engineering and railways.

The summary points out that unemployment increased during the year by 79,733, as compared with the figures of January, 1924, when the total was 1,239,800. Shipbuilding was much depressed. Only 30 per cent of the available berths in shipyards were occupied.

The coal market is reported to have been dull, with large stocks on hand and lower exports. There is some suggestion of a government bonus of 30 pence per ton to consumers. Iron and steel both showed declines.

In the American section the cotton industry again was curtailed to 35 hours a week. Three Lancashire organizations will be represented at the Washington cotton conference.

BALDWIN BOWS TO LABOR STORM WITH CONCESSION

Kirkwood, Ousted Member, Stirs Scotch Workers

(Special to the Daily Worker)

LONDON, March 8.—The section of the labor party which resumed its seats in the house of commons without David Kirkwood, who was expelled from the house Thursday for heckling Austen Chamberlain, foreign secretary, applauded Prime Minister Baldwin's adroit speech against the trade union political fund bill.

Baldwin, who thus opposed a bill offered by his own kind, feared that if it passed, a storm of labor oposition would arise at once, which would be a misfortune for his regime, now going thru a ticklish situation. By his speech, it is presumed, the bill was defeated, disgruntling some of Baldwin's party members, but pleasing the labor party members.

The bill would have practically forbidden the trade unions from making contributions to political parties. It would have immediately affected the labor party.

Kirkwood, meanwhile, enjoyed his vacation outside of parliament, by calling the prince of Wales a "nincompoop" and attacking the house of commons in a speech to his constituents in Scotland.

"Thursday's incident was an effort to crush a workingman," Kirkwood told a large audience of his constituents. "Chamberlain is incapable, fitted neither mentally nor physically for his job."

He promised his constituents never to apologize to the commons because, he said, that body wanted to crush him for his attacks on that "nincompoop prince."

Harriman to Buy Output of Soviet Manganese Mines

LONDON, March 8.—Interesting lights on the dealings of the Soviets with the rest of the world came to light as a result of the Harriman proposition to contract for the output of the Georgian manganese mines.

It is expected that a contract will be signed Monday between Mr. Harriman and the Soviets under which the Harriman group will invest $4,000,000 in new railways to the plant.

The Soviet government is to be paid a minimum annual royalty of $3,200,000, of which $1,000,000 is to be paid in advance. The former owners of the properties are to be compensated. Altogether the Harriman deal means $64,000,000 royalty in twenty years.

The deal, if consummated, means that one of the world's richest manganese fields goes to one American interest. An unusual feature is the indemnification of the former owners, 90 per cent, of whom are Russians.

Even David Lloyd George in his dealings with the Soviets only provided for compensation to foreign and not Russian owners of various properties.

The German and British press apparently are hostile to the Harriman deal, following the failure of their own nationals to get similar concessions.

"Jim Crow" Beaches at Washington Are Again Abandoned

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 8.—The Negroes have temporarily won their fight against segregated bathing beaches in Washington, owing to the refusal of senate and house conferees to include the sum of $9,000,000 in the District of Columbia appropriation bill to maintain separate beaches.

The action was taken, it is thought as a result of the protest of the Negro citizens of Washington. Colonel Sherrill, officer in charge of public buildings and grounds in Washington and advocate of "Jim Crow" beaches fought bitterly for the appropriation, but was defeated.

Spain Asks Recruits in Morocco.

MADRID, Spain, March 8.—Spanish consulates in New York, Havana, Santiago, Santo Domingo, Galveston, Honduras, Guatemala and Manila have been instructed to prepare to recruit volunteers for service in Morocco.

The Spaniards have suffered heavy defeats at the hands of the Riffian tribes in their North African colony, and are preparing to attempt to crush the movement for independence from Spanish imperialism.

Calls God "A Scoundrel"

BERNE, March 8.—M. Canova, member of the national council, was convicted here as a blasphemer because he said that God was a scoundrel. Canova's defense was that "there is no God, and can therefore be no offense."

Bread Up in France

PARIS, France, March 8.—The price of bread will again be increased a sou on March 15, as the bread commission has already advanced the price in flour. Bread will cost one franc, sixty six centimes per kilogram after that date.

INJUNCTIONITES IN COURT USE PERJURED AFFIDAVITS AND RAIL AT "EXHIBIT 10" TO HIS HONOR

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., March 8.—The injunctionites, who are trying to carry out Hutcheson's expulsion policy here by some innovations in expulsion technique, are finding that their ambitions far outstrip their capacity. During the last two days, their case has become steadily worse, until tonight they would gladly accept some loophole of compromise if such were offered them.

Monday night they called all their cohorts together by a novel method of notification. A list of about a hundred, who they thought would do their dirty work, was compiled and telegrams sent to them. Some 50 gathered at the law office of one, Scallon, attorney for the plaintiffs, and the business of turning out lying affidavits was begun.

A Witches' Cauldron stunt

Using a mixture of about a grain of truth to a bushel of half truths and lies, they concocted an affidavit covering each local union, seeking to establish that the members of said local unions were strong for expulsions without trial, and that injunctions were eats, drink, and pretty good clothes for a wood-butcher.

The aggregation from each local union then signed the affidavit covering what purported to be the action of their local union. Some who were reluctant to so perjure themselves were bludgeoned into the act with threats of expulsion of the local union to which they belonged if they did not sign.

Little Things Like Perjury

One member said that although the affidavit stated that he was present at a certain meeting and he told the fakers that he was not at that meeting, they insisted that he sign it anyway, which he did.

Secretary "Jelly" Fish, under cross examination, admitted that he had not worked at the trade for seven and half years and wanted to keep his job, if he could. He stated that he had been threatened with the loss of it thru the columns of the DAILY WORKER.

Yellow Sharrock, president of the district council, and one of the plaintiffs in the case, in a cheap effort to ingratiate himself with the court, stated that he kept his records and his naturalization papers in his private office at the district council.

Fakers Fight to Hold Jobs

When the judge remarked, on reading the district council constitution, that Sharrock got $60 a week for discharging the duties therein set forth (and getting an injunction on the side), Sharrock volunteered that it didn't stipulate how much abuse he got, whereupon Maurice Sugar, attorney for the defense, remarked that neither did it state how much abuse he earned.

During the taking of evidence of Fish, old Sam Botterill sat and shook his head "yes" or "no" at each question to indicate the answer, until Reynolds across the counsel table indicated by pantomime what he was doing and that he should stop it, whereupon the spectators burst into laughter, in which Botterill himself joined.

Honorable Court Reads Honorable Worker

Attorney Gilmore dramatically introduced the DAILY WORKER today in what he thought was a clever attempt to prejudice the court, (the old red herring trick), pointing especially to the article in the issue of February 5th entitled "A 'Honorable' Court Enjoins a Carpenter," referring only to the copy of the bill of complaint embodied therein. Attorney Sugar took a similar copy from his portfolio, announcing that he is a subscriber to the DAILY WORKER, and told the court that the "Honorable" applied to this court.

He then proceeded to read the introduction to the bill of complaint and the following comment, in which the court was referred to as a "capitalist court" serving "capitalist labor fakers," and to the injunction itself as a "scrap of paper." Judge Hunt seemed highly amused during the reading of the article. The DAILY WORKER was included in the record as Exhibit No. 10.

Faker Claims Jurisdiction Over "Daily Worker"

Sharrock told the court that he had stated that he would hold anyone who sold the DAILY WORKER responsible for what was published therein. This in spite of the fact that he and "Jelly" Fish are both subscribers and shyster Carson says he reads it every day. These fakers are trying to set up a censorship on what the rank and file may read.

The carpenters of Detroit are getting some valuable information as to what may be expected from fakerdom and its local flunkeys. At a meeting tonight of delegates and visitors who gathered for the regular district council meeting, which was not held because Sharrock and Fish failed to appear, special consideration was given to the bunch of snakes who signed these lying affidavits Monday night.

Painful Proceeding Promised

It was intimated that at the first meeting of each local union a copy of each affidavit would be read before the meeting and discussion and action would follow. It is safe to assume that a painful half hour will be had by these traitors.

POLICE GUARD AROUND JAP PARLIAMENT AS IT PASSES GAG LAW

TOKYO, Japan, March 8.—The peace preservation act, also known as the anti-Bolshevist law, providing for imprisonment for nearly every form of Communist activity, was passed by the house while a heavy police guard surrounded parliament. The law is designed to check Communist propaganda and is said by government officials to be a direct result of the Japanese-Russian agreement.

Jurisdictional Row Handed to One Man For Arbitration

After a confab Saturday in the office of the Building Construction Employers' Association, led by Patrick Sullivan, of the Building Trades Council, and Edward M. Craig, of the employing contractors, it was agreed to submit the dispute to J. D'Esposito, who is made the arbiter.

Business agents of the striking crafts will hold a meeting with D'Esposito, who will be expected to order the men back to work pending a decision.

The strike, which has lasted over a week, was called by the other crafts against the practice of the carpenters in setting metal trim, which was a defiance of the jurisdictional award that gave the metal trim work to the Sheet Metal Workers' Union.

Killer of Negro Freed.

The murder charges against Morris Greenberg, indicted Jan. 6, in connection with the lynching of William Bell, the Negro, who was beaten to death with a baseball bat at Miller and 14th street, have been dismissed in Judge Charles Williams court. Greenberg pleaded guilty, but Assistant State's Attorneys Romano and Miller claimed they could get no one to identify Greenberg.

Otto Epstein, keeper of a wine shop, who was also charged with taking part in the lynching, was freed some days ago.

Intermarriage Bill Killed

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 8.—The attempt of the ku klux klan to push a bill thru the Ohio legislature preventing the intermarriage of persons of different races was foiled when the bill was killed in committee. At a public hearing on the bill the main speaker defending it was Rev. George who admitted that he was a lecturer for the ku klux klan.

POLAND BURNS PRIEST ALIVE TO REVENGE HIS FRIENDSHIP TO RUSSIA

KIEV, Ukraine, March 8.—Father Andrée Fedoukovitch, a Polish catholic priest, has been burned alive in the town of Jitomir, in the Polish Ukraine. The murderers poured kerosene over the priest's body and then ignited it, say the advices from Jitomir.

Fedoukovitch was the author of a widely known letter to the pope in which he protested to the vatican against the participation of Polish clergymen in the anti-Soviet campaign.

His friends declare he was killed by his enemies for divulging to the authorities the activities of Polish spies against the Soviets in the Ukraine.

St. Paul to Have First Communist Wedding March 14

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 8.— On March 14, the Young Workers League of St. Paul will take charge of the wedding ceremony of Max Allen and Anna Quartermaster, both members of the league. The Y. W. L. of St. Paul will make a great celebration out of this real Communist wedding.

The program will consist of Communist music and songs thruout. The hall will be decorated with Communist slogans, especially with those dealing with religion, for in performing a marriage, the league is showing the complete separation of the Communists from all religious superstition.

All members of the league and of the party of the Twin Cities will be invited.

IRISH TENANTS PAY NO RENT; USE PITCHFORKS

Need Their Money to Purchase Food

ENNIS, County Clare, Ireland, Mar. 8.—Captain James Charles Arthur, one of those who figured in the adventure of separating the mysterious "Mr. A.," otherwise known as Sir Hari Sing, for three quarters of a million dollars, will not be able to live in luxury, pending another good piece of business if the tenants on his Irish estate in County Clare can help it.

On March 6, a sheriff accompanied by police, attempted to seize property belonging to Captain Arthur, for non-payment of rent. Clare is in the center of the famine region and the poor peasants did not have enough money to buy food for their children not to speak of paying rent to a profligate landlord living in Paris.

In other days, under Dublin castle rule, the evils of landlordism were attributed to the Britism government. But the police that aided the Sheriff in attacking the poor peasants wore the uniform of the Free State government.

This did not seem to bother the farmers in the slightest. They waded into the sheriff and his police, sending them flying from the scene. The sheriff returned with the military and a pitched battle took place. Again the farmers were victorious and the enemy was compelled to retreat. The natives felled trees across the bridges leading to the district to prevent the return of the sheriff and his forces.

Teachers Wise to Chicago "Big" Business Plots

Coming into the open with their planns the big business school board and its big business superintendent propose to increase the tax rate 52 per cent for education and jamming almost 10 per cent more children into each crowded elementary class room. Instead of 44 children under a single teacher in the elementary school-room the speed-up kings are providing for 48. Not many years ago 20 children was thot a reasonable number for one teacher to handle at a time. About $2,000,000 is expected to be saved by making 10 teachers do what is now done by approximately 11.

At the same time the taxpayers are asked to approve a boost in the school tax of over 52 per cent.

The organised teachers are repeating their refusal to profiteer at the expense of reduced education for the children and at the expense of increased taxes for the ordinary taxpayer. They repeat their proved assertions that the taxes now dodged by big business are sufficient under the present tax rate to pay all wage increases, build better schools and give bettter schooling to the children. A battle is promised along these lines.

French Ambassador Received in Russia with Enthusiasm

MOSCOW, Jan. 30. (By mail).—Jean Herbette, the new French ambassador, arrived at Moscow and was met at the station by representatives of the people's commissariat of foreign affairs, members of the diplomatic corps, journalists and big crowds of people. Herbette, in a short interview with representatives of the press, expressed his deep satisfaction of the very friendly reception accorded him and declared that he feels happy to be in the capital of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in the capacity of the first ambassador of France in order to work hand in hand for the re-establishment of normal relations between the two countries and their closer rapproachment. Herbette hopes that all outsanding questions will be successfully settled, because there is not one problem amongst them in his opinion which could not be settled provided that both sides really want a settlement. In the evening, Herbette was received by Chicherin, people's commissary of foreign affairs, with whom he had a long conversation.

Play About West Virginia Mine War Out in Book Form

NEW YORK, March 9.—"Processional" John Howard Lawson's jazz symphony of American life which the New York Theater Guild is producing, is now available in book form. This play treats on West Virginia's mine war to the tune of jazz. The mingled burlesque, melodrama, humor, tragedy, and almost irrationality of the piece created considerable difference of opinion on the play. The workers' point of view is well presented—a rare occasion upon the American stage.

AUSTRIA, March 8.—There are approximately 200,000 persons entirely out of work here and tens of thousands on part time basis. Unemployment has become a real menace to the country.

Morgan Picks Agent to Chain German Labor to His Dawes Scheme

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, the Coolidge clique in Washington considers sending a "business man" as the next ambassador to Berlin. Just as if every American ambassador, or minister, abroad is not the direct spokesman of American big business. The German ambassador, however, as the agent of the Morgan-Dawes plan must have special qualities, and so Charles Dewey Hilles who has had a post graduate training in both Washington and Wall Street, is being prominently mentioned for the job.

Hilles will have his hands full when he arrives in Berlin. The German workers will keep Hilles busy. This is seen in the unrest among the coal miners and the growing strike on the railroads. They will give him plenty of bad news to report to "J. Pierpont."

Hiles was an assistant secretary of state under President Taft, later becoming secretary to this same "Bill the Fat" during the closing days of his regime in the White House. His loyalty to the present chief justice of the supreme court, and to the rampant reaction in the republican party in the days before the opening of the world war, made Hilles chairman of the republican national committee. From these beginnings Milles has since become a director in the Liberty National Bank of New York. He also holds a directorship in the anti-union Otis Elevator company. Recently Hilles has been specialising in activities with firms having an international character, which makes him no doubt additionally acceptable for the most ticklish post that Wall Street has to offer at the present time.

• • • •

The only other man mentioned for the job at Berlin is Jacob Gould Schurman, a long time ago president of Cornell University, one of America's most obedient "goose-step" educational institutions. Since it is Wall Street's ambition to colonialise not only Germany, but all of Western Europe, not to mention the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, if such a thing were possible, Schurman also has good qualities for the job. As long ago as 1899, immediately after the Spanish-American war, Schurman helped place the shackles of the new American imperialism on the limbs of the Filipinos, just freed by an altruistic United States from Spanish oppression. Schurman was president of the first Philippine commission that performed its job so well that the Filipinos have remained enslaved to Wall Street rule ever since. Schurman was also promoted. He is now American minister to China, where his main job is keeping an "open door" for the almighty dollar to the whole orient. This includes stirring up internal trouble in China and supporting counter-revolutionary elements against those revolutionary Chinese who protest against the depredations of foreign imperialism. But compared to his success in the Philippines, Schurman's usual report from China is, "not so good."

• • • •

The workers and poor farmers of this country must get better acquainted with the doings of these spokesmen of dollar diplomacy abroad. Hilles or Schurman, whichever one is chosen, will go to Berlin to tighten the Dawes plan on the whole German nation, which means the German working class. Already the effects of German slave labor are being felt in other countries, especially in England and Belgium, where the army of unemployed in the coal mines, for instance, grows as German labor is forced to bear its increased burden. In fact, the same results are already beginning to make their appearance in the United States.

• • • •

When Hilles or Schurman go abroad as Morgan's benchmen, they become the enemies, not only of the German or Chinese workers, but also of the whole American working class. It is impossible to degrade the workers of Germany and China, without also increasing the ruthlessness of American capitalism at home.

The German workers, more and more, are resisting the Morgan-Dawes plane. Let American workers and poor farmers echo their struggle by organising against Morgan and Dawes rule at home. While German and Chinese labor are winning victories against dollar dipl omacy in their countries, let labor in the United States plan and work to crush it here.

Calles Forces State of Jalisco to Repeal Law on Landlordism

MEXICO CITY, March 8.—No more bank capital will be extended to Jalisco, the richest state in Mexico, by fiat banks of the country because the state legislature has passed a law limiting the possession of land to homestead holdings.

Even the national bank, a government institution, notified Jalisco that no more capital would be forthcoming unless the new agrarian law was repealed.

Senor Valenzuela, in commenting on the action, said today:

"Agrarians must respect private property or the government will compel them to do so."

Miners' Officials Break Strike.

TAYLOR COUNTY, W. Va., Mar. 9.—A strike of 550 miners at the Galloway mine of the Simpson Creek Collieries company in Taylor county, W. Va., was called off the next day by union officials. The strike was called because a near-by mine known as the Galloway mine, was working open shop but the union officials ordered the men back to work with the information that the open shop was conducted in accordance with the union agreement.

Union Official Helps Bosses.

ORANGE VALLEY, N. J.—A strike of over 700 hatters of the Orange Valley, N. J. has been stopped by President Moffitt who has agreed to arbitration. The matter under dispute will be considered by the manufacturers and the international officers of the hatters' union which of course means that the hatters will be the losers.

SINCLAIR OIL COMPANY MAY LOSE SAKHALIN

Japs Held Trumps of Force Majure

(Special to The Daily Worker)

RIGA, March 8.—The Soviet government has filed a suit in the Moscow provincial court for the formal cancellation of the concession granted to the Sinclair Oil company to exploit the oil resources of North Sakhalin. The trial will begin on March 11.

The Soviet's case is based on the contention that the Sinclair company failed to start operations as the contract stipulated and to make the necessary expenditure for technical equipment. According to the Soviet's own version, Harry L. Sinclair duly paid the sum stipulated in the contract in September, 1923, and wanted to begin operations.

The Problem of Force Majure.

On March 6, 1924, Mr. Sinclair's representative, M. Templeton, officially informed the Soviet government that the Japanese troops of occupation had refused to admit the expedition equipped by the Sinclair company to North Sakhalin and that Mr. Sinclair therefore requested the Soviet to consider the circumstances as governed by force majure and automatically to prolong the contract until conditions changed.

An Unhappy Situation for Sinclair.

The Soviet government then gave the Sinclair company six months' grace, but now the Soviet jurists refuse to consider the Japanese occupation as a force majure on the grounds that the Sinclair company was aware of the occupation when the contract was signed and that the American government did not attempt to ease the way for Mr. Sinclair's operations as the latter had expected.

These provincial courts are not composed of jurists, the chief qualification required for members being a fixed period of Communist service. The judges are elected by Communist committees.

Capitalists Get "Fair Trial."

In view of the court's lack of juridical red tape, it is safe to predict that the decision will be in favor of the Soviet where one party is the Soviet government itself and the other is a foreign bourgeois capitalist company.

ZALESKAS FOR PRESIDENT OF DISTRICT ONE

Progressives Want No Conciliators

SCRANTON, Pa.—The Progressive miners' demand for the abolition of the conciliation board in District No. 1 of the United Mine workers of America, has been furnished with an additional sample of the "impartiality," "justness," and "fairness" of this body when the "impartial" umpire, Charles P. Neill handed down a decision denying the right to the union to limit the number of cars of coal a miner should be permitted to load during one day.

The glaring "impartiality" of this decision is in conformity with the past acts of this board and is one of the chief reasons for the seething discontent that is almost constanly expressing itself in the many outlaw strikes in the anthracite fields.

These Two are Enough.

The anthracite miners have just two grievances against the conciliation board; one is that it takes the board many months, and sometimes years, to decide on a case, and the second is, that the vast majority of the important decisions are made against the miners, and this latest atrocity is a typical example containing both earmarks of the conciliation board.

It is well over a year since this matter was laid before the board when Local Union No. 400 passed a decision prohibiting any member from loading more than three cars during the eight hours of work.

The decision of the union was a first step towards bringing uniformity of wages in the mines and preventing of the pace-setting methods used by the boss's favorites who are always given favorable places in the mines and whose earnings are used as an argument for wage reduction.

Rinaldo Cappellini, whose record of betrayals surpasses even that of the conciliation board of which he is an ardent supporter, will have a hard time explaining away this decision.

Zaleskas Against Cappellini.

The miners of District 1 will have an ample opportunity of repudiating Cappellini and the conciliaton board during the coming election for president, vice-president and the secretary-treasurer, by supporting the progressive candidates, headed by the rank and file miner, Bernard Zaleskas, who is running for president on a progressive platform which demands the abolition of the conciliation board, establishment of the minimum wage, direct settlement of grievances between the union and the operators within 30 days, abolition of topping, a six-hour day, five-day week, and a number of other demands that will solve the many burning grievances and problems facing the anthracite miners today.

Electrical Union Agrees with Boss Not to Organize

NEW YORK, March 8.—"Out of consideration of the interest of the public which stand above the interests of both the employers and the employes," the officials of the Electrical Workers' Unions in this city have just entered into an agreement with the New Edison company not to attempt to unionize the company's power house employes, "lest organized employes might resort to strikes in putting forth and enforcing various demands upon the company and thus deprive the public of electric current."

The attitude of the workers to this shameful betrayal and bondage at this time could not be learned.

The company, of course, in its merciless exploitation of the workers will readily put forth any sham and pretense, such as the public's interests, in order to beguile them, and the labor fakers readily co-operate with the company in delivering the rank and file to the capitalists for this exploitation.

Militant Call to the Coal Miners

THE National Committee of the Trade Union Educational League has issued the following statement against the "open shop" drive on the coal miners' union, and calling for a united front of the workers against the unity of the capitalists:

TO THE RANK AND FILE OF THE WORKERS IN THE COAL INDUSTRY:

ONCE again the coal miners are called upon to bear the brunt of a new "open shop" offensive. This time under a more difficult and trying situation than in 1922. Not only have the miners to face the powerful coal barons of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Kansas, who have the whole-hearted support of the coal operators of Illinois and Indiana, and the financial interests of Wall Street and the Coolidge government, but they have to meet the situation with a leadership that is the most reactionary and corrupt in the American labor movement.

The signatures to the Jacksonville agreement were scarcely dry when the coal operators began breaking it, while, on the other hand, the miners were severely criticized and punished by their officials every time they attempted to compel the mine owners to abide by the agreement. The Trade Union Educational League pointed out, at the time of the signing of the Jacksonville agreement, that this was the last act of a long line of treachery committed by John L. Lewis, having for its purpose the destruction of the United Mine Workers of America as a militant fighting organization.

THE signing of the Jacksonville agreement was to purposely tie the hands of the miners while giving free scope to the coal barons for the undermining of the morale of the organization and preparing a condition more favorable than in 1922 for an "open shop" drive. The operators now think the opportune time has arrived. So, they have openly scrapped the agreement and are now preparing to complete the work of destroying the miners' union. In this they are being ably assisted by the Lewis-Farrington bureaucratic administration, which, instead of fighting the enemies of labor, is waging a relentless war upon the Communists, the T. U. E. L., and the Progressive Miners' Committee, which represent the forces within the miners' union that have fought the hardest in the interests of the miners and against the interests of the operators and their capitalist government.

John L. Lewis' expulsion policy, which has resulted in the expelling of some of the best fighters in the union because they stood for the class struggle instead of for class collaboration, dovetails in with the "open shop" policy of the employers and has encouraged them to launch their attack at this time.

The coal miners are the best group of organized workers in America. In spite of their corrupt leaders, they are the very heart of and stand as an example and incentive to the rest of the organized workers. If their union can be destroyed or badly demoralised or weakened, the rest of the unions will fall an easy prey to the assaults of the employing class, who are now watching this impending struggle with the keenest interest.

THE TRADE UNION EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE pledges its fullest support to the miners. It points out the necessity of waging the fight upon the basis of the class struggle and on a national scale, and urges the miners to immediately form a united front with the railroad unions, and to support the program of the Progressive Miners' Committee. The attack upon the miners is an attack upon the entire labor movement, and the only way to successfully combat this offensive is to call upon the whole labor movement to join in the fight. Today it is the miners and textile workers, to morrow the railroad workers, etc., just as it was in 1921-22. It is a general attack upon the living standards of the American working class.

This attack upon the miners has two significant angles. It is directed against the most powerful union in America, because the arrogant brutal capitalist class of this country feels that, with the election of Coolidge and Dawes, it is strong enuf to attack labor at its strongest point and with one fell swoop destroy the labor movement or reduce it to a low level of resistance. Secondly, the Dawes plan, which is international in scope and directed against the working class of the capitalist world, (Russia being the only country not affected), demands the reduction of the miners' standard of living to the level of that of the German miners.

The Trade Union Educational League calls upon the miners to meet the stituation by forming committees of action in each mine; that these pit or shop committees be the center around which the struggle of the miners is organized. Those committees are complimentary and not antagonistic to the union. They do not take the place of but strengthen and build up the union by drawing the membership closer and into the activities of the union and the fight.

A GOOD example of the effectiveness of these committees and how they can lead and organize the membership for the offensive was shown by the Grievance Committees—which are shop or pit committees—in the anthracite coal fields around Wilkes Barre. There they were able to rally the miners for a strong fight against wage cuts and violations of the working agreement. So powerful did they become that they compelled the Lewis administration to return the charters to the local unions, which had been revoked because of their going on strike.

Shop or pit committees develop the fighting qualities of the workers. It gives them a better understanding of the struggle, and is the best, quickest, and surest means of getting unity of action and of holding, strengthening, and broadening the strike front.

Shop or pit committees, composed of actual workers, are closer to the line of battle. They are directly responsible to the membership. They understand the situation, will fight and carry it to a successful conclusion, where the officialdom, whose interests are not directly involved, would be willing to compromise and accept defeat.

The Trade Union Educational League calls upon the coal miners to fight against the efforts of those politicians within the union who urge co-operation with the bosses. The present situation means struggle not class collaboration. The coal miners must watch very carefully every move made by the coal operators and to keep a watchful eye on their own leaders.

It urges the miners to support the campaign now being conducted for world trade union unity as the best means of combatting the Dawes plan, and to assist the Red International of Labor Unions in its effort to bring the unions of the world into one solidified organization.

THE TRADE UNION EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE points out to the coal miners that only the rank and file, with class struggle understanding and revolutionary discipline, can offset the treachery of the capitalist apologists within the union and defeat the coal operators in their attempt to put the coal fields upon an "open shop" basis.

LAUNDRY DRIVERS WIN RECOGNITION FOR THE UNION

Strike Brings Increase in Wages

BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 8.—The prolonged fight put up by the Laundry Chauffeurs' and Drivers' Union in Brownsville, during which the bosses have slugged and beaten the strikers and nearly killed the president, William Berman, has resulted in the capitulation of the laundry association and in the breaking of the backbone of the opposition.

Out of the 14 laundries that were involved 11 have signed the agreement to the increased wage and the recognition of the union. The drivers are now paid $23 a week in straight wages and 15 per cent of the wet and 10 per cent of the flat wash.

While this increase is not all that was asked for the drivers claim that the recognition of the union which is the big element in the settlement makes up for much. This gives the union a chance to strengthen itself during the year and be able to get what it asks for next time.

The 11 laundries that have signed up are the largest ones and the others will not be able to operate until they make peace with the union. Those still on the warpath are the Blake, Clovelen and Erasmus. It was the boss of these who led the assault on Berman who is still in a weak condition and unable to return to work, the doctors are still undecided as to the final outcome of his condition. The trial of his assailant was postponed for two weeks.

How We Live and Work

Editor's Note:—This paper is printed for the workers, poor farmers and those who work and sweat under the present system of society. It is a paper of the workers, by the workers and for the workers. We want to reach every corner of this country where labor is being exploited for private gains, for profit. We want the workers and farmers all over the country to read the DAILY WORKER. In order to make it more interesting and be able better to reflect the life of the wide laboring masses, WE WANT OUR READERS TO WRITE TO US. This new department "HOW WE LIVE AND WORK" will appear as often as there will be sufficient letters from our readers about the life and working conditions under which our masses struggle. Try to make the letters interesting bringing out facts which may not be known to workers in other sections of the country. Try to make them short and to the point.

"Yellow" Drivers Get $20 a Week

To The DAILY WORKER:— I am writing this article to prove that the Yellow (Scab) Cab Co. is a deliberate liar when it tells job-hunters in the daily papers that the "average pay is $35 per week." The writer has recently worked for this company and can truthfully say that the average pay is $20 per week for a 6-day week. Weekly tips will amount to about $10 per week; but out of this the driver must pay about $4.50 for gasoline, thus leaving about $25 as earnings. If tire chains are lost or stolen, (as is very often the case) the driver must pay $3 a piece out of his own money. The day-men work from 6.30 A. M. until 4 P. M., but an additional hour is always consumed in checking in and turning in the day's receipts. The night men work from 4 p. m. until 1 and 2 P. M. and often later. Thus a 10 hour day is the rule with 11 and 12 hours not uncommon.

The $35 per week pay that the Yellow Co. speaks of applies only to about 5 per cent of their drivers. These are men who have been with the company for years, have a single shift car and receive dividends on their hard earned stocks.

As to conditions under which these 5,000 men work,—well, most of their time is spent on the street where they enjoy some measure of freedom. However, when in the garages, they are usually sworn at and bullied about by garge czars.

If anyone doubts this story, they can have it verified by any yellow driver, providing of course the driver is disposed to take you into his confidence.

A Well Wishing Reader.

Australian Labor May Boycott U. S. Fleet in Summer

(Special to the Daily Worker)

MELBOURNE, Australia, March 8.—The Australian section of the Industrial Workers of the World is meeting with some sympathetic response in its effort to persuade the Australian labor unions to put a strike boycott on the United States fleet when it visits the island continent next summer. The left wing of the unions approve the demonstration, while the officials are mostly opposed.

The action may be taken as a political demonstration against the continued imprisonment of members of the I. W. W. in California, and a labor delegation may previous to the visit of the fleet, call upon the American consul to make a formal protest.

MARINE WORKERS' CONFERENCE ENDS WITH SUCCESS; CENSURE OFFICIALS FOR OBSTRUCTION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 5.—(By Mail.)—The first international conference of marine transport workers of the western hemisphere adjourned yesterday after conclusion of what may be known as the most successful, even if initial effort, to bring real unity into the ranks of this shamefully disorganized oppressed group of workers.

Censure Former Officials For Obstruction.

Taking note of the fact that the International Propaganda Committee of the Red International of Labor Unions had extended an invitation to the Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union 510 of the I. W. W., to attend a conference at Berlin of all revolutionary transport workers' unions of the world on Feb. 25, the conference passed a vote of censure on the former executive of M. T. W. 510, for withholding and concealing from the membership this invitation.

This obstructive tactic of the former officials of the M. T. W. 510 had been subject to much criticism since it became known by publication of the letter of invitation by the Red International Affiliation Committee, and by a communication to the conference from the Pan-American Anti-Imperialist League, that a world conference of the same nature and for the same purpose was meeting in Berlin almost at the same time. The M. T. W. officials had neither answered the invitation, nor allowed news of its existence to reach the membership. This obstruction to unity it was which drew the vote of censure.

Opposes I. W. W. Attacks on Other Revolutionary Movements.

The conference took a sympathetic and constructive attitude when it accepted a resolution opposing adverse criticism in I. W. W. papers of any movement having revolutionary ideals. This is considered a sharp rebuke for the officials of anarcho-syndicalist tendency who have been leading the organization in the direction of the anarchist international which goes by the name of the International Workingmen's Association.

The most significant organic results of the conference, was the approval of free and interchangeable membership among all marine unions of the western hemisphere whose preambles or constitutions are based upon the revolutionary class struggle of the proletariat for emancipation. All members in good standing in any country are to be accorded all privileges as members of the unions in the country where they happen to be.

Next Annual Meeting in Havana.

This strong organic bond between existing unions was made stronger by setting a date for the second annual conference of marine unions of the western hemisphere to convene at Havana, Cuba, on January 15, 1926.

The international strike, which was much discussed, and which is to affect Latin America as well as North America, is left in the hands of a committee composed of McRae, Canfield and Harney, all I. W. W. who are to draw up strike demands and details.

Resolutions adopted also covered an educational campaign against drunkenness, narcotics and race prejudice, while the shipping crimps came in for condemnation, as an enemy of seamen.

BONUS LIKE THE B. & O. PLAN, IS TRICK OF BOSSES

An increase in 1924 of more than $2,500,000 in the excessive 1923 profits was what stockholders of the Southern Railway got in return for a petty efficiency bonus included in agreements signed last year with the operating brotherhoods. The employes affected got about $34 apiece or a total of perhaps $400,000, less than one-sixth of the cash gain of the owners.

The employe bonus was only 1½ per cent of the annual pay. The stockholder bonus for doing nothing amounted to over 20 per cent more in their annual profit.

The Southern bonus plan belongs with the B. & O. shop co-operation scheme for getting increased profits for the owners with as little as possible to the employes in exchange. It was incorporated into 3 year agreements giving the 4 operating brotherhoods a 5 per cent increase in rates of pay and the dispatchers from 6 per cent to 10 per cent. But the bonus was to be paid only if the ratio of certain transportation expenses including these wages was kept as low as 1923. The men were to be induced to pay their own wage increase in efficiency which would result in loss of jobs to many.

The test ratio in 1923 was 21.4 per cent of the gross receipts of the road. The 1924 figure will be close to 20.3 per cent. The ratio of all transportation expenses was reduced from 36.3 per cent to 35.1 per cent, an unusual achievement in view of the 1924 slump in traffic and revenue.

The nature of the economies is shown thus. Fuel consumption per 1,000 gross ton miles fell from 199 to 178 lbs. Toward the end of the year it was running as low as 172 lbs., a reduction of over 13 per cent. Two cars were added to the average freight train enabling the road to transport more tons per train, that is, per crew. The average train speed was increased from 11.9 to 12.5 miles per hour. Train hours were reduced 8 per cent while net ton miles declined only 1.7 per cent.

The Southern's gross revenue fell from $150,487,985 in 1923 to $142,486,574 in 1924. But net income increased from $28,128,137 to $30,442,720 and the profit remaining to common stockholders increased from $12,136,998 to $14,769,140. The 1924 profit amounted to a return of 12.3 per cent, a record higher than even the most prosperous war years.

SOCIALISTS TRY TO PUT DAMPER ON BAKERY FIGHT

Try to Hamstring Real Organization Campaign

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, March 8.—Bankrupt in ideas and staggering in the breadline of reaction, the socialists, led by Araham Shiplacoff, urged, as the only way to working class emancipation that the slaves in the bakery industries start a campaign to induce the population of the city of New York to buy bread in bakeries, groceries and delicatessen joints who carry the union label, in speeches and resolutions made at the conference of Bakers and United Hebrew Trades held here Sunday.

The conference was an evident attempt to widen the breach between the bakers of the American Federation of Labor and the Amalgamated Food Workers who are making every effort to effect unity in spite of the reactionary bureaucracy that has kept up a fight between the two organizations for over ten years.

At a meeting of the Amalgamated Food Workers held recently at Cooper Union, it was decided to inaugurate a campaign of organization and seek co-operation with the Bakers' Union in an effort to unite in the fight against the bosses and line up the rank and file in the entire bakery and food industries for harmony and concerted action among the workers.

Called a Counter-Move.

This effort of the Amalgamated Food Workers was deeply resented by the reactionaries and the meeting of last Sunday was held for the purpose of counteracting the good start that had been made toward an understanding between the different organizations.

There were 315 delegates from 146 organizations present, representing branches of the Workmen's Circle, the socialist party and women's organizations.

The socialists were in control and speeches were made by Vladek and Rogoff of the Forward, Hugh Frayne of the A. F. of L. bureaucracy, Pachodsky of the capitalist Morning Journal and Shiplacoff of the socialists.

Timid Socialists Aghast

A resolutions committee brought in a report advising all who eat bread to buy from grocers, bakers and delicatessen stores that had bread with the union label. The timid, but in comparison flaming revolutionary, Pachodsky, of the capitalist Morning Journal, moved to amend that the populace be invited to a strike against the grocers, bakers and delicatessen joints that handled scab bread, but was sat on heavily by the socialists for his Moscow imported ideas and his suggestion of this bloody revolution method.

The total lack of any suggestion in the resolution for organization and demand for better wages and conditions inspired a minority report from part of the resolutions committee, which report called for real unity and a campaign of organization and amalgamation of all the bakers and food workers. This minority report was eyed over by the strong heads of the conference and was not allowed to be read.

Shiplacoff Becomes Hysterical.

Whereupon Shiplacoff launched into a spasm of hysterical denunciation of all progressives telling his hearers to "clean out all the rats and mice with knives at the back to stab the nice cats," or something else which he did not make sufficiently clear to be fully grasped by the rank and file who seemed to be unable to relish the classification as "rats and mice." And as a result there was a mighty roar and a ditto noise that came pretty nearly calling upon "pussy" to shut up. But after some five minutes of celebration by the "rats and mice" as he had baptized the rank and file, he went on attacking especially the Jewish Freiheit for its policy of unity of all the workers.

Then the conference went home, the socialists of New York, almost a bakers' dozen of them, triumphantly resolved to emancipate the working class of the world by purchasing bread at grocers, bakers and delicatessen stores where the union label is favored, Pachodsky the capitalist editor slinking away, like a guilty LaFollette republican, for having suggested his aforesaid revolutionary plan of action.

Coal Production and Employment Falls Off in Ruhr

ESSEN, Germany, March 8.—The Ruhr valley coal production has fallen off as a result of decreased orders. November production figures were 365,000 tons daily. December 370,000 daily, but in February, it fell to 344,000. A considerable number of the underpaid miners have had their lives made still more miserable by being thrown into the growing unemployed army.

Anyone who uses a Remington Portable will tell you how indispensable it is.

It makes writing swifter—likewise easier. And—without any reflection on your penmanship—it makes reading easier.

Compact—fits in a case only four inches high. Easy to pick up and carry around, or tuck away in a desk drawer.

Convenient—can be used anywhere—on your lap, if you wish.

Complete—with four-row keyboard, like the big machines, and other "big machine" conveniences.

Price, complete with case, $60. Easy payment terms if desired

COMMUNITY WORK IS SOVIETS' AIM, ANISE DECLARES

Boston Workers Hear of Peasants' Problems

BOSTON, Mass., March 8.—Anna Louise Strong, recently returned from Soviet Russia, spoke to a crowded hall here at a meeting arranged by the Boston English Branch of the Workers Party at the party headquarters.

Comrade Strong spoke on "What's Soviet in Soviet Russia." She called the government in Russia a planned government and all tne planning, she said, is done by the workers. She gave an interesting account of the way the planning is conducted. She told how the government carries out the "plan" to develop friendly relations between workers in the city and the peasants.

"The unions in different cities appoint delegates to visit villages to become acquainted with the peasants, their life and work and the peasants send delegates to the cities to learn about factory life and city folks. This plan does not terminate here but is extended even to the elementary schools, where groups of children are appointed on committees to visit villages and farms or cities and factories. In some instances an entire class goes.

"The main aim of the Russian leaders just now is to teach the peasants and city workers that community undertakings are more efficient and economical than individual undertakings. This plan is put into execution from the school room up. In their school subjects, and especially mathematics, the children are taught the value of co-operation."

The big crowd that turned out to hear Comrade Strong showed warm appreciation of her interesting account of educational activities in Russia. The whole affair, in fact, was like a big holiday gathering.

Ukrainians Invited to International Fair at Prague

MOSCOW, March 8.—The Ukrainian state trading department received an invitation from the representative of the Czecho-Slovakian government at Kharkov to take part in the international fair to be opened at Prague end of next March.

Invitations have likewise been received to participate in the Danzig fair and the Paris international exhibition of decorative arts and art industries, the latter to be held next year.

COMRADES! MEET R. H.!

"The DAILY WORKER, Editor.—Enclosed find $2.00 as my first payment on an unlimited policy for the upkeep of our paper. I will send a dollar every week . . . R. H."

March 4, 1925

"The DAILY WORKER, Editor.—Enclosed find $1.00, my weekly payment ou the unlimited policy which I have taken for our paper. R. H."

Who is R. H.? Why, he's a Builder! This particular R. H. lives in Philadelphia,—his letters are postmarked there. But there are many other R. H.'s in the DAILY WORKER Builders army. Some send subscriptions or "bricks" instead of dollars; some send news of their union meeting or letters describing life of the workers in their industry; some send important newspaper clippings.

What makes them real builders is the fact that they never lay down their tools. Their letters come as regularly as invoices: that's why a Communist editor never loses his smile,—at least, not for long!

Court Fight Will Expose Reaction

trades. Co-operation with the bosses and graft are dominating features in the life of these leaders.

It is no wonder, therefore, that the personal lives of these union bureaucrats had sunk to the lowest possible grade of corruption. Harry Lang, former anarchist and present labor editor of the Jewish Forward, is an oustanding example. With the assistance of a young woman by the name of Lucy Robbins, an adventuress of the worst type and one of the most intimate friends of Samuel Gompers Harry Lang succeeded in connecting the Jewish Daily Forward with Gompers and in unifying the Jewish labor bureaucracy for the support of the Gompers machine. Thru the manipulations of this little group, Gompers, Harry Lang and Lucy Robbins, it was possible to fuse the union bureaucrats in the needle trades, the Forward and the Gompers machine in the A. F. of L. into one powerful instrument of reaction among the Jewish speaking workers of America. Since 1919, when thus fusion took place, the union bureaucracy in the needle trades, feeling secure in their position, have indulged in the worst kind of graft, betrayal and corruption.

The acceptance of graft by union officials from manufacturers is a generally known fact. These union officials in the needle trades have received large sums of money for assisting the manufacturers in transferring their shops from the large centers in which the union has control into smaller towns in which the union has no control at all.

Union Officials Get Graft.

Union officials have been receiving graft not only in the form of money but also in the form of various other favors which enable some of these union bureaucrats to go into business for themselves, to buy real estate and other property.

An outstanding example of corruption and betrayal by the union bureaucracy in the needle trades is offered by a so-called "amnesty movement" initiated by Harry Lang and Lucy Robbins with the approval of Gompers. It can be easily proven that this so-called "amnesty movement" was nothing else but a maneuver to defeat the real movement for amnesty that was started by the radical elements in the labor movement. Furthermore, it can be proven that the funds collected in the amnesty movement championed by Lang, Robbins and Gompers were spent for personal ends by the people involved.

As to the libel suit started against the Freiheit by Lang, Robbins and Perlman, this is clearly an attempt to terrorize our Jewish Communist daily, the Freiheit. This clique of union bureaucrats has plenty of funds and also powerful connections. They probably believe that irrespective of the merits of the evidence that the Freiheit will submit in its defense, no jury in a capitalist court will side with a Communist daily against union bureaucrats. These bureaucrats are planning, according to our information, to exhaust the Freiheit by means of a long and costly trial.

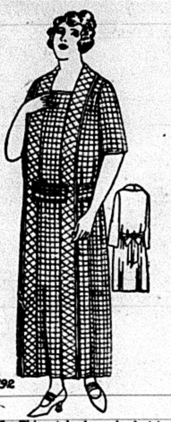
Charges Can Be Proved.

I wish to say that everything stated here can be proven in court. There are documents to substantiate these charges. We can compel such persons as Abe Cahan, editor of the Jewish Daily Forward, Morris Hillquit and many trade union officials, to appear in court as witnesses to substantiate many of our charges. It is our opinion that this libel suit against the Freiheit can be made by us into a tremendous trial of the personal corruption and degeneracy of the right wing gang in the labor movement, but for this we have got to have funds. We must employ a number of investigators to collect data and other information. We must have enuf money to employ a few prominent lawyers, experienced and capable of handling such trials.

If we do this we may be able to deliver a death blow to the prestige and influence of the right wing reactionaries in the American labor movement.

OUR DAILY PATTERNS

A POPULAR ONE PIECE DRESS



4392. This style has slenderizing lines and is becoming to youthful and to mature figures. Gingham with linen would be fine for this, or ratine with binding in a contrasting color. Taffeta too will be attractive for this style.

The pattern is cut in eight sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires 6⅛ yards of 32-inch material. The width at the foot of the dress is 2½ yards.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in silver or stamps.

WEEPING JOBLESS PARADE STREETS—AT BOSS' BEHEST

Tears Roll for Class Collaboration

By TOM MATTHEWS.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

OMAHA, Nebr., March 8.—Over 500 workers, employes of the bankrupt M. E. Smith & Co., garment manufacturers, marched to the federal building and jammed the courtroom and corridors in one of the most remarkable demonstrations ever staged in the history of the city. But underneath their genuine appeal, the fact was apparent that they paraded by request of the company.

While lawyers were fighting over the acceptance of one of two bids for the assets of the bankrupt concern, the workers, men and women, paraded thru the streets and circulated thousands of posters with the appeal: "Save Our Jobs." They marched in a body to the federal building, carrying banners with such captions as:

"Our Babies Need Milk."

"Our Rent Must Be Paid."

"Two Thousand Children Depend Upon Us."

"We Need Our Jobs."

"Labor Market Now Flooded," etc.

"We're marching for our bread and butter," one young girl sobbed as she entered the federal building where the "auction" was in progress. Their feeling of utter hopelessness was emphasized by the tears in the eyes of the women, and the blank, downcast look on the faces of the men.

"Patriotic" Workers.

The M. E. Smith company was one of the most notorious "ratty" concerns in the middle west. Only in 1918, a sign of militancy manifested itself and quickly died. At that time about 30 per cent of the women workers, who operate power machines at piece rates, came out on strike, practically all of those who came out being Italians.

During the war, the M. E. Smith women workers always formed a conspicious contingent in the various "patriotic" parades, despite their magnificent income of from three to ten dollars a week. Dressed in white uniforms, they "hoofed it" for everything from "preparedness" in 1916 to "defense day" last fall. For their reward they were given a "jobless parade" last Tuesday. Anyhow, they have learned the art of collective demonstration.

Their banners which they carried Tuesday were in sharp contrast to the flags which they carried during the war. "M. E. Smith Workers One Hundred Per Cent" was always the banner carried in every parade during the various war drives. Any suggestion of higher wages or unionization always met with a prompt rebuff from these super-patriotic wage-slaves.

Even in their final appeal this same spirit of Main Street loyalty is evident. Instead of the demands of class conscious workers, it presents arguments for the "benefit of Omaha" thru the pay roll and bringing of trade into the city. It was based on class collaboration. They wanted Smith to keep on exploiting them. They made common cause with "the creditors."

The bid of a rival concern was accepted, which is considered to mean the complete closing of the plant. The creditors will get about 30 per cent. Remaining liabilities total $4,000,000, with approximately $1,750,000 derived from the sale, and expenses to be deducted from this figure. The slaves get nothing but a lesson.

Kurdistan Revolt Gains Headway As Turks Rush Troops

CONSTANTINOPLE, Turkey, Mar. 8.—The grand national assembly has voted confidence in the new Ismet Pasha ministry by a vote of 155 to 23. The new minister of war, Redjeh Bey, speaking before the assembly, said a ruthless policy will be carried out against the rebels in Kurdistan. He said "the Germans lost the world war because they were not ruthless enough."

The Kurdish rebellion is gaining strength. The rebels have captured Arghana, a great copper center, and again attacked Diarbekir. The latter town has a population of 40,000. Turkish troops are being rushed to the fighting by the Bagdad railway. All institutions and publications suspected of favoring the Kurds are being suppressed.

BUILDERS AT WORK

Red Sundays in Kansas City, Mo.

"RED SUNDAYS" did not disappear with improved conditions in Russia, but passed on to Communists the world over as a method of building for working class power.

There is something reminiscent of the determination and action of the Russian comrades immediately after the revolution in the plans of our Kansas City, Mo., comrades. Comrade A. A. Buehler, city agent for Kansas City, writes of their proposed work as follows:

> Dear Comrades:
> On February 16 the meeting of DAILY WORKER agents decided on a three-month campaign—March, April and May—of which every second Sunday will be "Red Sunday" when everybody must get out and hustle subs.
> Every member in the English branch is expected to get at least two subs in three months—all members in foreign branches are expected to get "a sub each month."
> If 50 per cent make good, we will make our quota of 100 subs by June 15.
>
> On March 28 we are giving a dance and entertainment for the DAILY WORKER.
> Here's hoping that Kansas City goes over the top by June 15. If you have any good suggestions about the DAILY WORKER sub drive let us have them.
> Fraternally yours,
> A. A. Buehler.

There is something about the plans of our Kansas City comrades that we like particularly. They start out very modestly. Each member is asked to get "at least two subs a month for the next three months"—surely a modest task for a determined Communist.

And the "Red Sunday" idea is so good we only too gladly sent a bundle of both the DAILY WORKER and Workers Monthly to be used as sample copies with which to secure subs.

These Kansas City comrades are really "Builders At Work," and we pass the suggestion on to you, your branch and your local.

WORLD RENOWNED BALLET DANCER ON PROGRAM OF INTERNATIONAL UNITY DEMONSTRATION, MARCH 29

Among the many other prize numbers on the program of the International Unity Demonstration to be held at Ashland Auditorium, Chicago, on Sunday afternoon, March 29, is the well known ballet master, Art Comiacoff, formerly of the Russian Imperial Theater of Petrograd, and now conducting a studio in this country.

With him will appear two of his prize pupils, the Misses Mozika and Lutkas. Our well-known pianist, Comrade A. S. Hambro, will accompany the dancers. The following program is to be presented:

1. Czardas (Roth), Art Comiacoff and Miss Mozika.
2. Classci Mazurga (Schworenka), Miss Lutkus.
3. Toe Dance, Miss Mozika.
4. Valse Clossci (Ivanovitch), Miss Lutkus.
5. Gypsy Dance, Art Comiacoff.

All of these dances have been personally arranged by Mr. Comiacoff. Anyone interested in the Russian ballet can secure information from the studio, Mark White Square, 30th and Halsted streets, Yards 7282, Wednesdays 6 to 7 and Saturdays 2 to 3 p. m.

Drama on Program.

Fourteen excellent numbers will make up the program. Not only well known professionals but also the best ensembles that the labor movement can offer will be represented, all on this one gala occasion. There will be song and dance, drama and gymnastics, speakers and motion pictures.

Tickets are only fifty cents and can be had from the headquarters, 19 S. Lincoln St., or from the DAILY WORKER, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., or any of the organizations affiliated with the Chicago Council for Labor Defense and Relief. Proceeds will benefit the Irish Workers' and Peasant' Relief Fund, and the Labor Defense Council to fight the Michigan cases.

On March 29th Program

ART COMLACOFF,
Well-known Ballet Master.

War Maneuvers Take Heavy Toll in Hawaii

HONOLULU, N. I., March 8.—Eight enlisted men of the United States army were seriously burned, three propably fatally, as the result of an explosion at Schofield barracks, near here.

The men were loading shells in preparation for the army-navy maneuvers aimed to impress the south American countries and Japan with the power of the United States forces. Some powder exploded, burning all of them.

Killed at Grade Crossing.

LINCOLN, Ill., March 8.—Arthur Lucas, 55, restaurant keeper, at Elkhart, near here, was instantly killed today when his motor truck was struck on a grade crossing by a Chicago and Alton locomotive. His son Glenn, 25, escaped with injuries.

JAIL HINDUS IN INDIA'S FIGHT AGAINST EMPIRE

CALCUTTA, India, March 8.—Many Hindus belonging to the Swaraj party in India, which is endeavoring to oust the British empire by pacifist methods, are being arrested thruout India. The arrests are being made under the Bengal ordinance of Viceroy Lord Reading. Dr. Proteb C. G. Roy was arrested here following a speech he delivered recently. Roy was previously sentenced to serve six months imprisonment in the Charmanian defamation case and his appeal is being heard in the high court.

The Gondal police recently filed a suit against twelve men in the first class magistrate's court at Dhoraji. Seven of the men are in the Gondal jail. These prisoners were brought to Dhoraji and were given ten days with which to prepare their cases. However, the next day they were arrested and throw ninto jail.

In the Allahabad "communal riot shooting case," Ramkishen has been sentenced to transportation for life for murder. This was done in spite of the fact that the sessions judge who sentenced Ramkishen, has ordered the prosecution of fifteen of the witnesses who testified in the case, for perjury. He declared the evidence given by them "constituted a grave scandal" but sentenced Hamkishen, nevertheless.

The Diplomats Bicker

Great Britain has set out to re-draw the map of Europe. The Geneva protocol of the league of nations has been junked and British imperial diplomacy has set three objectives for itself:

1. To arrange an offensive and defensive alliance among the western European powers that will satisfy France and at the same time be acceptable to the British dominions that have spoken very openly against being drawn into another European war.

2. To rearrange the eastern frontier of Germany, enable that country to become a power to offset France in Europe and weaken the influence of France in Poland and other border states.

3. To use the new alliance as an anti-Soviet Russian bloc and thus relieve the pressure on British imperialism in India, Persia and China.

France will oppose stubbornly the first two proposals.

If the coal and iron of upper Silesia, now Polish territory, comes into Germany's hands, the French iron and steel industry has a dangerous competitor and Germany, with her superior industrial organization, would not be long in building the metallurgical basis for her army. France has Germany strangled at present and no substantial recovery is possible without changing the European map. England needs a strong Germany, France wants her weak and helpless—this is the basis of all the diplomatic jockeying taking place in Downing street and the Quai d'Orsay between Chamberlain and Herriot.

The best informed capitalist political writers of England and France agree that the situation is acute. Augur, the semi-official mouthpiece of the British foreign office, compares it to the pre-war months of 1914.

England is willing to guarantee the security of France, but insists that Germany be a party to the agreement. It is this aspecet of British policy that holds the greatest danger for Soviet Russia, but to which it is the most difficult to secure the consent of French imperialism. If Germany can be brought into a western European alliance she can be used against that powerful enemy of French and British imperialism—Soviet Russia. France knows, however, that she has less immediate cause for worry over the increasing influence of Soviet Russia than Great Britain. Germany to her is the enemy that must be tied hand and foot.

British diplomacy is the cleverest and most unscrupulous in the European capitalist world, but the task it has set itself this time is an impossible one.

The European news of the next few weeks will be full of interest and meaning for the working class as the imperialist powers strive to reconcile their inevitable rivalries the better to combat the rising tide of world revolution.

Japanese Sedition Law Passed

The Japanese imperial diet has passed what is probably the most drastic suppression law on the statutes of any country. The full text of the law was published yesterday in our magazine section. It will be noticed that one clause brings under the provisions of the act anti-capital propaganda or organization work conducted in other countries. Japanese exiles and immigrants who retain their connection with the revolutionary movement are liable therefore to the savage penalties of the law in case of their return to their native land.

The law itself is the product of a ruling class whose grip on the masses of the Japanese workers and peasantry is slipping. It was the pressure of the masses more than anything else that forced the recognition of Soviet Russia and a great sympathy for the workers and peasants of Russia has swept thru Japan. The bonds between the workers of both countries have been strengethened by the signing of the treaty.

On the other hand, the industrial and financial system of the Japanese empire is in extremely bad shape. Late news places the number of unemployed at 3,000,000 and like most of the other capitalist nations, its ruling class has been mortgaging the workers to the House of Morgan.

The only way out for the Japanese rulers is a war that might unite all classes behind them for a time. But this, too, is a grave danger. It is almost a certainty that in the event of war the 15,000,000 Koreans would begin an armed struggle for national independence and the growing strength of the labor and revolutionary movement in Japan is a menace to any continued militarist policy.

The drastic nature of the law just passed, prohibiting as it does even the ordinary activities of the workers' organizations, is the best of evidence of the fear that the Russian revolution, the tremendous power of Soviet Russia in the Far East and the spread of labor organization and revolutionary thought among the Japanese masses, has struck to the hearts of the imperial government and its supporters.

The German Railway Strike

The present political crisis in Germany following the death of Ebert, one of a long series, has been intensified by the strike of railway freighthandlers who have been joined by the workers of other occupations and which may become general.

The German railway workers have been among the first to suffer from the operation of the Dawes plan. It is a striking coincidence that the day the House of Morgan henchman, for whom the plan was named, becomes vice-president of the United States, the German workers are forced to strike against the reduction of their pitifully low living standards. It is not hard to see what class the Dawes plan is directed against.

The German railways were owned and operated by the state, but under the Dawes plan they become private property and their income is one of the principal sources from which the reparation payments and interest on the House of Morgan loans is paid.

The railway workers of America can get an accurate idea of what the Morgan-Coolidge-Dawes government has in store for them by studying the effects of the Dawes plan on their fellow workers in Germany.

The DAILY WORKER expresses its solidarity with the German railway workers and urges them to support the Communist Party of Germany and its program, to strive always for the overthrow of German and allied capitalism and the establishment of the dictatorship of the German workers and peasants.

Nova Scotia Battle Line Forms

Once more the Nova Scotia coal miners are challenging the might of the British Empire Steel corporation. Evictions and denial of credit at company stores were the weapons used by the company during the lockout that preceded the strike and unquestionably the history of the bitter struggles of 1922-23 in which Jim McLachlan went to jail will be repeated.

No place on the continent have the miners fought with greater determination. Troops, police, spies, the press and crooked union officials have been used against them. They were expelled from the United Mine Workers in the midst of their struggle by the Lewis machine, but they maintained their organization, forced concessions from the coal and steel capitalists and fought their way back into the union.

The coal operators are attacking all along the line. The lockout forced the strike in Nova Scotia and on this side of the line the coal barons are massing their forces for an open shop drive.

If the whole union is animated by the spirit displayed by the Nova Scotia miners the offensive of the coal barons will be short lived.

Polish capitalism and Russian Communism are contrasted in the news of the excution of a priest by the Polish authorities.

Accused of exposing the priestly spy system of Poland, he was covered with gasoline and burned to death. The Russian Communist gave Butchkovitch, the holy Polish spy, a merciful death by shooting.

We are awaiting a loud outburst of indignation from the catholic and capitalist press over this latest exhibition of Polish capitalist culture, but we are afarid we will wait in vain.

The railroad strike is an other indication that the workers of Germany are not going to accept the Dawes plan without protest, even if the German socialists beg them to. Under Communist leadership they may shortly kick this pet plan of Morgan into the discard completely along with its socialists lackeys.

The final rejection of the Geneva protocol by Great Britain means that the chronic European political crisis has entered a new phase. Questions of territory and security are raised now that the army and air fleet of France and her vassals—Poland, Roumania and Czecho-Slovakia—and the navy of England, may be called upon to settle.

With goodly bunches of Communists in all the state legislatures it will not so easy for the capitalist lackeys to kill anti-child labor legislation. The Communists will unmask the effort of these bought lawmakers to carefully and quietly shelve all legislation for the benefit of the workers.

If you want to keep touch with the valiant fight that the Irish workers and peasants are making against the famine that has hit great sections of Ireland, then you will have to read the DAILY WORKER.

The open shop war of the mine owners against the miners' union has not been called off. It has the miners union has not been called off. It has barons are working under cover. Let the mine workers get busy.

All Communists and Communist sympathizers in Chicago should give their best efforts in support of the local subscription drive for the DAILY WORKER. New readers make more Communists.

CHILDREN SOLD FOR PROFITS IN SOUTH DAKOTA

Welfare Workers Find Solons Corrupted

PIERRE, S. D., March 8.—The misguided welfare workers who have been here lobbying for the passage of bills to raise the standard of living of women and children, to take children out of industry, and to protect illegitimate and orphan children, have been ground in the machine of rotten capitalist politics.

The women do not understand, as yet, that these politicians are controlled by the business interests, and that the only way to improve living conditions is for the workers to take control of society.

A letter which reveals the futility of the activity of these welfare workers, as well as the manner in which the capitalist politicians sacrifice the interests of the children and women of South Dakota to the business interests has been received by the DAILY WORKER. The letter shows how the governor of the state punishes the women in industry for crossing him in politics, and how the catholic hierarchy doctors and lawyers prey on defenseless orphans.

The letter, sent by Mrs. Franklin Denver Smith to her sister, states:

Given Away Like Kitten.

"Dear Sister:

"I have been here, Pierre, South Dakota, two weeks trying to get our children's code adopted. But I find that while they appropriate money to protect the pocket book, to protect animals, pigs, bugs and even frogs, children, especially tnose born out of wedlock, are denied any protection whatever.

"They may be given away like an unwanted kitten.

"I have been able to get three bills past the house, and they are now in the senate. I think they will pass. But the two most important bills were lost because every catholic hospital is fighting them, and every disreputable lawyer and doctor, who wish to traffic in children.

Catholics Buy Children.

The catholics wish to place all the illegitimate children they can get hold of in catholic homes, and the lawyers get a fee out of drawing up papers transfering the custody of a child without court action.

"The governor is peeved because some of his plans were checked. He claims our commission did it, so he is taking it out on the children, because he knows that is what I am most interested in.

"He was trying to fix up a measure to supply jobs for his particular friends, and we used all our influence against it, because the whole thing was wrong.

Legislature for Profiteers.

"The men in this legislature have moved heaven and earth to break every measure that affects in any way the women and children.

"Mrs. Franklin Denver Smith."

Organize Six Shop Nuclei in N. Y.

the Communists in the shop have won the support of their fellow workers because the shop nucleus is daily fighting in their interest. Only recently this shop nucleus prevented the boss from discharging one of the workers.

In Brooklyn Shoe Factory

Shop Nucleus No. 2 is organized in a shoe factory in Brooklyn that employs 60 workers. The nucleus is made up of five members of the party. Due to the activities of its members in the shop one of them has been able to win the chairmanship of his local union and to obtain a place on the executive board. The organizer of this nucleus is positive that in the very near future the best elements among the workers in the shop will join the nucleus and thus become members of the party.

Shop Nucleus No. 3 is organized in one of New York big cloak and suit houses that employs 150 workers to manufacture the beautiful garments the ladies like to wear. This nucleus started with six members. It is actively functioning in the shop. Among its members are some of the most active militants of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. The activities of this shop nucleus will be well worth watching.

Nucleus of Working Women

Shop Nucleus No. 4 is made up only a big men's clothing factory. One of in a dress shop that employs 40 workers. There are many shops in New York that employ only women or the working force of which is overwhelmingly composed of that sex. Due to this many shop nuclei in New York will be made up entirely of women comrades. Active militant trade unionists are members of this nucleus.

Shop Nucleus No. 5 is organized in big men's clothing factory. One of the members of the shop nucleus holds one of the most strategic positions in the shop. The comrades who took part in the organization expect to add many more members to the party from this shop.

Shop Nucleus No. 6 is another shop nucleus composed only of women comrades. It is functioning in a dress shop that employs 60 workers. The members of this shop nucleus are comrades who have actively participated in the struggles of the girl workers in the dress industry. They are enthusiastic and expect to make good headway among the workers in their shop.

Centers of Communist Work

This week there will be organized a shop nucleus in what is perhaps the largest shoe shop in New York City, and another in a large waist shop. The success the party is having in this district in organizing shop nuclei proves that not only is it possible to reorganize the whole party on such a basis but that it is also essential to do so if the party is to keep good contact with the workers and the Communists to become their leaders. Shop nuclei in the New York industrial districts are turning the attention of the Communists to the workshops where the workers daily feel the lash of capitalist exploitation. The slogan in the shop nuclei drive is, To The Shops. As shop nuclei are being organized one shop after another is becoming a center for Communist work.

Cruelty Killed Negro in County Jail is Charge

Relatives of Marvin Prestwood, 18-year-old Negro who died recently in the county jail, after a sudden illness, have started an investigation into the causes of his death. The coroner's inquest at the time of the youth's death decided that Prestwood had died of pneumonia.

Relatives, however, say they have found that Prestwood was confined to the "island" in the county jail, where those who break rules are confined for punishment, from Wednesday to Sunday without food and clothing.

The two brothers of the dead boy, Clem and Andrew Prestwood, who are conducting the investigation, declare that their brother died of exposure caused by the punishment. They said they "hired a white lawyer by the name of Ames, but he did nothing for them."

Three Miners Die in Another Indiana Mine Catastrophe

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., March 8.—Three more Indiana miners were added to the long list of those sacrificed to the greed of the Indiana coal operators. Two shot firers were killed and another entombed at the Shirksville mine seven miles northwest of here. The cause given for the accident was that it was the "result of a windy shot."

Fifty one miners were killed in an explosion at the mine of the City Coal company at Sullivan Indiana, a few weeks ago. This disaster was followed by several other fatal accidents in Indiana mines. Safety laws have been much discussed in the Indiana legislature at Indianapolis, but nothing done to stop the heavy loss of life in Indiana mine catastrophes.

Walter Lemon Dies at Kamerovo, Siberia

NEW YORK, March 8.—Walter Lemon, widely known American industrial worker, died at Kemerovo, Siberia, on January 31 from hemorrhage of the lungs. He was sick only a few days.

Walter Lemon left for the Kuzbas Colony in 1922 where he took part in the splendid growth and development of Kuzbas into one of the most modern producing organizations in the U. S. S. R. For twenty years Comrade Lemon was a member of the American railroad unions. He was 53 years of age at the time of his death. His wife will remain in Kemerovo.

of slaves. What a commentary on the capitalist class and their morality! Their paid literary hacks and their sanctimonious pulpit pounders have rung the changes on the horrors of Communism, its tendency to break up the home and destroy the family. Disregarding the major family destroying and home-breaking capitalist industries, such as war and industrial lockouts, no day passes that does not show up the capitalists as a set of idle perverts, good for nothing but to waste the product of useful human toil on their female toys and on male panderers to the idle rich.

WHAT concerns Communists is not that capitalists are immoral, or that they make fast and loose with their own moral codes. Our objection to them is not because of misconduct, but because of their existence as a class. They are human leeches, who render no useful service to society in return for what they get out of it. One capitalist wastes more wealth than would keep thousands of workers in comfort. Their licentious animadversions will gladden capitalist newspaper publishers and the hearts of our morons will throb over their amorous adventures until the workers of the United States consign them to the ash heap of history as the workers and peasants of Russia did to their human garbage.

SIR John Cowan was quartermaster general of the British army during the war. He was a good one, according to all reports—the best since Moses fed those who fled from Egypt on quail and other delicacies. But a scandal has hit Sir John. When the capitalist papers are not busy coining yarns about the mariage laws of Soviet Russia and retailing the hoary lie about the "nationalization of women," they might draw the moral from the tale woven around the adventures of the gallant soldier and the captivating wife of a British general who was ambitious for promotion. The general got promoted. Sir John not alone fed his army, but spared a few thousand pounds for his affinity, who in turn loaned the money to her ambitious husband. The story is now being told to the judge.

SOME capitalists undoubtedly have brains. But it can be proven quite easily that neither brains nor virtue is required to amass wealth. Stokes is one example; Harry K. Thaw is another. Those who have contributed most to human knowledge and whose inventions have helped most to speed up the process of production, have died either in want or in comparative poverty. The wolf and fox type are only concerned with amassing wealth. The real men and women of genius are concerned with producing something that will be of benefit to society.

Soviet Bank For Russia

PARIS, France, March 8.—Negotiations have been begun here by M. Tartouta, financial representative of the Soviet government, and M. Preobrajensky for the founding of a Soviet Russian state bank in Paris, it is reported.

The Paris Commune and the Russian Revolution

By ISRAEL AMTER.

JUST 54 years ago, the workers of Paris, disgusted with the manner in which the bourgeoisie had sold out their power; disgusted with the manner in which the bourgeoisie had deserted their posts; oppressed and suffering from the war against Germany, by which France was defeated, took the power into their own hands. For sixty-three days, the workers of Paris held this power, manning the factories, hospitals, city offices, taking care of all municipal affairs. They put an end for the time-being of all bourgeois control, and it appeared as if the revolution, the establishment of the Commune, would be permanent.

The enthusiasm of the Parisian workers was inestimable. Their courage in understanding a task of such dimensions as ruling a city at that time was unparalleled. Inexperienced tho they were, they did not hesitate, but plunged into the work of consolidating their forces and fortifying their power. It meant much—fo on the other side of the border, to the east, were the German armies, led by the brutal, tyrannical, shrewd, conniving Bismarck, ready at all times to plunge into the struggle against the Commune.

The inexperience and lack of understanding of the Paris workers ultimately led to their defeat and to the breakdown of the Commune. They committed two fnundamental mistakes. They did not understand that Paris could not hold out if the bourgeoisie retained their arms. The bourgeoisie and their hangers-on retired to Versailles, where they organized their forces. They had considerable equipment and whatever they lacked they knew they could procure from the victorious German army The bourgeoisie armed is a bourgeoisie that may conquer again. A bourgeoisie armed is a force that can be met only with force.

The Paris workers made a second mistake: they understood how to take power, but they did not consider the methods of holding power. Paris could not maintain herself, the people could not be fed if food supplies were not obtained. The workers of Paris did not think of this problem—until it was too late. Paris had to be connected with the peasants, who had to be won over to the side of the revolution. The workers of Paris looked upon the revolution as a proletarian revolution—and what had the peasants to do with the proletariat? The peasants had very much to do with the workers: if they were not on the side of the workers—on the side of the revolution—then they would be on the side of the counter-revolution And this actually took place. The poor peasants who had not been won over to the side of the revolution, let the city starve. This in itself endangered the revolution. But the peasants also militantly aided the counter-revolution. How could they trust to the managing ability of the workers of Paris—the "rabble" trying to do things that only their "superiors" had the ability to perform? How could one believe that workers would have any understanding of state matters, since they were totally inexperienced?

The Paris workers forgot the peasants—and they forgot that the bourgeoisie still possessed their arms—and that necessitated and actually brot about the downfall of the Commune. This happened in 1871.

In 1917, another revolution took place—this time in an agricultural country. The proletarian revolution in Russia did not fail and cannot fail because the revolutionists took cognizance of the mistakes of the workers of Paris in 1871 and guarded against them. The workers of Russia did not allow the bourgeoisie to retain their arms. On the contrary, immediately upon instituting their power on Nov. 7, 1917, the campaign for seizing the arms of the bourgeoisie, for destroying the organizations of the bourgeoisie, for completely uprooting bourgeois influence and power began. It was a campaign of iron, no mercy being shown. Either the workers must rule alone or the bourgeoisie will continue to rule. Disarming the bourgeoisie, therefore was one of the fundamental ideas of the Russian revolution.

The Russian workers, however, did not forget another fundamental idea The workers must unite with the poor peasants in order to beat down the bourgeoisie. They made their decision not because Russia was an agrarian country, with an overwhelming agricultural population. They made this decision because that is in the nature of the proletarian revolution. The workers may get power without the aid of the poor peasants; but they cannot hold it without their help They will be starved out and their power broken. The peasants will be lined up with the bourgeoisie and form the counter-revolutionary army.

Russia is an agrarian country—but let the workers of the industrial countries not imagine that it will be different in their revolutions. The support of the poor peasantry is even more essential in the industrial countries, for the proletariat is more dependent upon the supply of food which cannot for an indefinite time be requisitioned, but must be regulated in its supply by the friendly co-operation of the poorer peasantry.

Coalition with the poor peasantry is a revolutionary factor of the greatest importance. It breaks up the backward elements of the potentially counter-revolutionary forces, it brings into close, active alliance with the revolutionary workers these sections of the peasantry that likewise suffer under the rule of the bourgeoisie, thus facilitating the course of the revolution. To neglect this factor is to endanger the proletarian revolution.

But the Russian revolution was a success for another fundamental reason. It had as its leader a Communist party, which understood the ways of the revolution, which formulated its policies and methods. A Communist Party, which had learned from the mistakes made by the workers of Paris and did not repeat them. Soviet government, with a proletarian dictatorship—hard, unbending, making no concessions to the bourgeoisie—that was the way of the Russian revolution, which stands today more powerful than ever before.

The workers of Europe and America must learn from the mistakes of the workers of Paris. They must understand the fundamentals of the Russian revolution. The Paris Commune did not fail because economic conditions had not yet sufficiently developed; the Russian revolution did not succeed because these conditions had developed. The workers of Paris did not understand; the workers of Russia did understand. Thru the propaganda and organization work of the Bolsheviki they grasped the basic principles of the revolution—principles and policies that they are carrying out today with even greater intensity. Unless the workers of Europe and America understand those methods, unless these ideas and the organization for their realization have become part of the very life-blood of the Communist parties, the proletarian revolution will fail, as it failed in Hungary and Italy.

March 18, 1871 and November 7, 1917 are of tremendous significance to the revolutionary working class of the whole world. Let the workers take heed; the day of their revolution must still come. Let them not commit the errors of our Paris comrades; let them comprehend the genius and leadership of the Russian Communists— who not only knew but also acted.

AS WE SEE

By T. J. O'FLAHERT

BRITISH labor leaders have become members of the king's privy council. American labor leaders have joined with the biggest of the big fellows in the National Civic Federation in order to co-operate with the ruling class in keeping this putrid capitalist system stenching the social atmosphere. The ingenuity of the capitalists combined with the treachery of the labor fakers has produced many surprises, but it is doubtful if even the most cynical would expect to see a member of a chamber of commerce sitting as delegate from a local union in a central labor body. Yet this is exactly what has happened in Seattle.

OUR readers should be well acquainted with the struggle that is now going on in Seattle, with the reactionaries waging a hopeless war on the Communists. The word "hopeless" is used advisedly because the fakers have no more chance of winning a permanent victory than an Eskimo pie has of retaining its frigidity in a fire room. The future belongs to the revolutionary working class and it happens that the Communist Party is today the actual leader of the militant workers in the never-ending battle against the capitalist system. The sight of several Communists in the Seattle Labor Council did not look good to the eyes of the fakers, among them this chamber of commerce business man.

AFTER a big fight, the fakers succeeded in having a motion passed calling for the expulsion of any delegate who was a member of the Workers (Communist) Party. But the worst was yet to come. The local unions are now doing a lot of talking and before the smoke of this battle clears away, it is not at all unlikely that there will be at least one vacant chair in the central body on which now sits the chunk of animated protoplasm, who represents the open shop chamber of commerce in the Seattle Central Labor Council. The local unions are now waking up to the fact that a house cleaning is needed and their eyes are not fixed on the Communists. They know that the Communists stand on the basis of the class struggle, which is written into the constitutions of many of the now conservative unions. But they do not see any reason why business men and representatives of the scabby chamber of commerce should sit in council with the representatives of the workers who know no enemy except one; the capitalist.

MEMBERS of the Pressmen's Union don't know how well off they are! It's mighty hard to satisfy the workers nowadays. They insist on demanding increases in wages and shorter hours thus eating into the profits of the poor employers who may be sick from gout or trying to recover from delerium tremens. Every once in a while honors are showered upon them and still they are not satisfied. The very honorable and very fat "Bill" Taft went and joined an international union, the bricklayers, I believe. Instead of appreciating this fact, the greedy bricklayers kept on asking for more wages as if they did not have a president and a supreme court judge on their roster. The funny thing is, that their "Brother" William, the Fat, always has a pen ready to sign his name to an injunction against his "fellow workers" in case the employers ask for such an instrument.

WHEN the bricklayers threaten to park their trowels unless their wages are increased, and some ecomist gives them a yarn about the fab-

Klan Makes Drive on Herrin Miners in Illinois House

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 9.—The ku klux klan is massing its forces in the Illinois legislature for a concerted drive to gain complete control of Williamson county, preparatory to breaking up the miners' union there. Mrs. S. Glenn Young, wife of the slain klan gunman and scab herder, has been brought to Springfield by the klan, which is using its influence to have Mrs. Young appear before the legislature.

Representative Wallace A. Bandy, klansman from Marion, is bringing a bill before the house judiciary committee which would give the county supervisors of Williamson county power to discharge Sheriff Galligan from office.

BELLAIRE, OHIO, COAL DIGGERS IN CONVENTION

Reactionaries Raise Smoke Screens

BELLAIRE, Ohio, March 9.—Sub-District 5, of District 6, Ohio, representing some 18,000 miners, went into convention yesterday morning. This is one of, if not the largest, subdistrict in the U. M. W. of A. The Lewis administration is making desperate efforts to insure control of the convention. This sub-district portrays one of the many incongrouous situations within the miners' union, with a progressive militant rank and file the reactionaries are still in a position to command the official positions of the union.

This sub-district cast a heavy vote for Geo. Voyzey, Arley Staples, and Jos. Nearing, the candidates on the progressive slate against the Lewis administration. In their own subdistrict election Frank Ledvinka, socialist and supporter of the Lewis machine, received 3,108 votes for subdistrict president, while J. J. Hoge,

OPPRESSION BY JAP CAPITALISTS DEVELOPS SOLIDARITY OF WORKERS IN UNITED STATES AND THE ORIENT

On the receipt of news of the sedition law by means of which the Japanese government is trying to outlaw the labor and revolutionary movement, the Central Executive Committee of the Workers' (Communist) Party of America has forwarded a statement to the Japanese workers' organizations.

The statement is of historical importance. It marks the entrance of the Japanese and American revolutionary movement into a closer alliance and it is the first Communist expression of solidarity between the workers of the two nations whose rulers struggle for control of the Pacific.

The statement is as follows:

To the Communists of Japan, the labor unions and all workers and peasants:

The imperialist government of Japan is proving its right to take its place side by side with the United States, Great Britain, France and other capitalist governments in their war on the working class.

Before the imperial diet is a law whose passage will take from the Japanese workers and peasants the rights to meet, to organize or to even discuss the tyrannies of Japanese capitalism or to give publicity to the attacks of Japanese capitalists and their government upon the working class.

The law is patterned after the infamous espionage act passed by the United States congress during the world war and the "criminal syndicalism" laws now in force in many states of the union.

The activities of the Japanese work-

Unemployed Stage Demonstration in Utah State Capitol

SALT LAKE CITY.—As a result of a determined effort on the part of progressive elements in the Salt Lake Federation of Labor, a demonstration recently was staged of unemployed, rallying about 500 jobless workers to march on the capitol building and demand relief in an appearance before the labor committee of the house of representatives.

Previous to the demonstration, a mass meeting of both unemployed and employed was called, pursuant to the action of the central labor body. This was the chief action resulting from a resolution proposed by the progressive element.

Of course, the solons could "do nothing" but express their sorrow personally, altho it was clearly in their power to pass legislation appropriating funds to relieve distress.

WEST VIRGINIA MINERS BETRAYED BY LEWIS AND URGED BY BITTNER TO "CO-OPERATE WITH SHERIFFS"

By JOHN J. MORRIS.

Unless the rank and file members of District 17, U. M. W. A., wake up and realize their duty to the coal miners' organization and the whole American labor movement, they will find themselves in the very same predicament they were in before the miners' organization got a hold on the W. Va. coal operators and checked, to a great extent, the brutal treatment forced on them by coal company gunmen.

A History of Struggle.

The history of the West Virginia coal miners is a history of struggle with the greedy coal operators, some of the struggles very violent, in which large numbers of men gave their life's blood in the cause of the coal miners and their organization.

At Cabin Creek and Paint Creek in Kanawha county, before the great strike of 1912-13, the conditions of the coal miners were almost unbearable, long hours and starvation wages, "freedom" and "democracy" were dished out at the point of a 45 Colts with a Baldwin-Felts gunman at the business end.

During the strike of 1912-13 the coal company gunmen learned that they had competition in the gunning game. They learned that the coal miners could peep along the barrel of a Springfield or Mauser rifle with as much accuracy as they could wield a pick or coal shovel.

The Only Reason the Union Won When It Did

That is the reason, and the only reason, that the gunmen disappeared from Cabin and Paint Creeks and the coal operators recognized the U. M. W. of A., paid the union scale and reduced the work day to eight hours.

What would those brave fighters who gave their lives on Cabin Creek and Paint Creek during the strike of 1912-13 say, if it were possible for them to return and see the conditions

Coolidge Lawyers Shield Higher-ups in Teapot Trial

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CHEYENNE, Wyoming, March 9.—Former U. S. Senator Atlee Pomerene special oil counsel, and Coolidge republican, today opened the government's case in its efforts to obtain annulment of the Tea Pot Dome naval oil leases.

Senator Pomerene sketched the general outline of the famous case which has brought about cabinet changes and resulted in charges of fraud and bribery on the part of Harry F. Sinclair and former Secretary of Interior Fall.

Pomerene said "The whole scheme was entered into as a result of a conspiracy between Sinclair and Fall.' It is apparent that the lawyer is shielding his other fellow republican office holders from connection with the case.

He charged fraud and undue secrecy. E. C. Finney, first assistant secretary of the interior department, was immediately called to the witness stand.

FASCISM STARES AT GERMANY AS YELLOWS DECAY

Communists to Have the Support of Labor

BERLIN, Germany, March 9.—The German presidential elections are resolving themselves into a clear-cut struggle between the monarchists, imperialists, and big industrialists on the one hand and the Communists on the other, as sole representatives of the working class.

Despite desperate political manuevers, the social-democrats appear at this time unable to prevent a successful right wing, fascist coalition. The socialists admit that they must either join with the extreme right wingers or see their petty bourgeois party disintegrate as the result of the election. The presidential election may mean the rise of fascism to power in Germany.

The socialists will present Otto Braun as their candidate, under the slogan reminiscent of Woodrow Wilson's second presidential campaign, "Save the republic." The right wing fascists have invited the catholic party to enter their coalition to eliminate the socialists, and have proposed Herr Stegerwald, member of the center party, with a leaning toward the right, as the coalition candidate. Such a coalition, the fascists hope, will bring them a majority of the votes in the election, and prevent a run-off election to be decided by a plurality.

The so-called "left wing coalition" of socialists, and other petty-bourgeois elements, has been wrecked. The fascist coalition already controls 40 per cent of the votes, they claim.

The Communists are expected to poll a tremendous working class vote, as many workers have turned away from the social democrats in disgust at the persecution of the Communists in the Beuthen "conspiracy" trial, the exposure of Ebert's betrayal of the workers during the munitions strike in the war period, and the corruption of the social democratic leaders brought to light in the Barmat financial scandal, as well as the recent disgusting political manuevers of the socialists.

Altho Ebert has been buried his social democratic colleagues are as determined as ever to prove that Ebert was heart and soul with the capitalists of Germany during the world war. They have appealed the decision of Judge Bewersdorf that Ebert technically committed treason in connection with the munitions strike of 1918. They declare that the judge's decision is unjust, inasmuch as Ebert was a loyal strikebreaker on the side of the imperialist war lords, and was indorsed by von Hindenberg.

ASK LYNCHING BE MADE CRIME AGAINST U. S.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Appeal to President Coolidge "to urge upon the incoming congress the necessity for enactment of an adequate law making lynching a federal crime," is made by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People thru its secretary, James Weldon Johnson.

The case of the Negro burned at stake in Georgia, at which even the Macon Telegraph admits the lynchers made no attempt to hide their identity, is brought to the president's attention and the letter of the association and the letter of the association to Governor Cliff M. Walker of Georgia is cited.

The association's letter to the governor reminds him of the fact that the lynchers are known because of his offer of $500 reward for the apprehension of guilty persons.

Coolidge's statement in his first message to congress that "the congress ought to exercise all its powers of prevention and punishment against the hideous crime of lynching" is quoted to him by the association in its appeal. It is not on record, however, that this means any more than numberless other presidential sweet words which have uniformly turned out to be pure hypocrisy.

Students Form Co-Operative

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 9.—The students co-operative supply company, Garrett Administration Building, of Northwestern University Campus, Evanston, incorporated here today for $2,000 to sell students and others books and school supplies.

THREAD MILL TEXTILE WORKERS TO STRIKE AGAINST WAGE CUTS

WILLIMANTIC, Conn.—Workers in the Willimantic mill of American Thread company are ready to strike against wage reductions posted by the company. The 2,500 workers voted almost unanimously to oppose the cut, averaging 10 per cent.

Schurman the Man Morgan Will Send As German Agent

WASHINGTON, March 9.—President Coolidge has virtually decided upon Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, now American minister to China, as the new ambassador to Germany, it was learned authoritatively today. It is understood that inquiries have been made at Berlin as to Dr. Schurman's acceptability.

RUSSIA REDUCES TAX ON PEASANT FORTY PER CENT

Chitcherin Predicts An Early American Pact

TIFLIS, Georgia, March 9.—The Soviet government announced to the Russian assembly meeting here a 40 per cent reduction in the 1926 agricultural tax. The tax will be 300,000,000 rubles instead of the 470,000,000 rubles fixed last year. The Soviet government announces that a higher tax will not be needed in 1926.

Foreign Minister Chitcherin, told the convention that the American policy of expanding in Asia is bound to bring America into relations with Soviet Russia sooner or later. Russia's influence in the east and in Asia is growing very strong, he said. Chitcherin declared that Russian relations with Mexico are very cordial, and "Mexico gives Russia a good base to develop further contact with America." He predicted negotiations with the United States in the near future.

Premier Rykoff said that as the result of the Soviet relief measures last winter, the sowing area of the districts affected by the crop shortage will increase 15 per cent, and the number of farmers with insufficient cattle will be fewer. He declared that public work organized by the government in certain areas brot great relief to the peasantry.

On the proposal of President Kalinin, amnesty has been proclaimed for Transcaucasia. The amnesty covers the participants in last year's rising against the Soviet government of Georgia, which was engineered by foreign imperialists.

The Sinclair Oil company threatens suit against Soviet Russia, because they lost the Sakhalin oil concession, following the signing of the Russo-Japanese treaty. Sinclair is said to have broken the terms of his concession, which was then forfeited.

William A. Harriman, New York financier, announces that he has secured a promise from the Soviet government of concession of the rich manganese deposits in the Caucasus. The contract calls for an annual production over a period of twenty years of half a million tons at $3.00 a ton the first three years and an annual minimum output of 800,000 tons in succeeding years. Harriman is to guarantee the Soviet government a minimum return of $62,500,000 in royalties, over the twenty year period, he declared.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Leprosy can be cured—according to the United States health service, which today announced the release of four patients from the national leprosarium at Carville, La.

RUSSIA EXHIBITS ART AND CRAFT WORK AT LYONS FAIR IN PARIS

PARIS, March 9.—Soviet Russia participated actively at the Lyons fair held yesterday. Large exhibits of the best art and crafts work produced in Russia was in view everywhere. M. Krassin the Soviet Russia ambassador attended the fair.

Chicago DAILY WORKER Agents Meet

Tonight, at 8 o'clock, at Room 307, 166 W. Washington St., there will be an important meeting of all agents and active workers on the question of a city-wide Communist propaganda drive. Your branch should be represented—even tho you may have to do it.

CARPENTERS OF CHICAGO SCORE W. L. HUTCHESON

Hear Reynolds Tell of Detroit Expulsion

More than one hundred and fifty carpenters representing practically every local of the United Brotherhood in the city of Chicago, met in Imperial Hall, last Sunday afternoon to hear the story of the illegal expulsions in Chicago and Detroit by William L. Hutcheson, president of the union and by his local satellites.

The principal speaker was William (Bud) Reynolds, vice-president of the carpenters' district of Detroit. Reynolds told the story of his expulsion without trial or hearing. The only reason given for the autocratic action of Hutcheson was that Reynolds was a member of the Trade Union Educational League and that the league was a dual union. Reynolds showed that the T. U. E. L. was an educational institution that carried on propaganda inside the trade unions, in order to strengthen them. The T. U. E. L. was the most bitter foe of dual unionism in the United States and none knew that better than the labor fakers. The entire membership of the Detroit district is solidly behind Reynolds.

One carpenter pointed out that Hutcheson, who is expelling loyal union men for membership in the Trade Union Educational League, does not raise a finger against the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor which is organizing carpenters' locals dual to the United Brotherhood in several cities. It would appear that a conspiracy existed between Hutcheson and the Building Trades Department of the A. F. of L. to destroy the carpenters' union.

The five members who were expelled from Local 181 were on the platform and each one of them spoke. DAILY WORKER readers are already acquainted with the story of this expulsion. They are stronger now with the rank and file, of every local in Chicago, than when the fight started and there is reason to believe that the bureaucrats who started the fight are now sorry they ever initiated it.

The following resolution was unanimously passed by the gathering and the carpenters promised to bring the matter up before their locals and fight for a square deal for the expelled members.

Whereas, Five members of Local Union No. 181 of the U. B. of C. & J. of A., Chicago, have been declared expelled without trial, in violation of Section No. 55 of the general constitution; and

Whereas, The supposed crime that these five members have committed was the signing of a resolution criticizing the Chicago agreement as be-

PITTSBURGH HAS GOOD EXPOSURE OF ABRAMOVICH

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 9.—The anti-Abramovich meeting held here yesterday heard Robert Minor and Schacno Epstein, tell the crimes of the Second International against the working class and particularly the crimes of Raphael Abramovich, the stool pigeon propagandist now in this country for the purpose of maligning Soviet Russia.

The hall in which the meeting was held seats 800 persons. It was jammed. The audience was one of the most enthusiastic that ever gathered under a roof in this steel and coal barony.

Seven new members joined the Workers Party after the meeting was over and four joined the Young Workers League.

Minor told the story of the exploits of the Eberts and Noskes in Germany and their fellow hangmen in Hungary, Bulgaria and Esthonia.

Comrade Epstein explained the difference between Communism and menshevism. When the name of Abramovich was mentioned a few started to applaud but there was no encouragement and the applause died down.

TORIES READY TO SPRING DROP ON 'PEACE' PACT

France Is Raising an Awful Howl

GENEVA, March 9.—When the council of the league of nations meets here next Thursday, Austen Chamberlain is expected to make things so uncomfortable for the "peace protocol" that it will fade away and die.

Originally concocted by Ramsay MacDonald and Herriot its death warrant was drawn tho not signed when the British dominions looked on it with a cold and unfriendly eye, as a result of the military adventures it promised to drag its signatories into.

Chamberlain is reported to have said that agreement could be reached provided France accepts the Anglo-German pact, proposed recently by the German government. Britain wants Poland, Rumania and Checko-Slovakia to sign the agreement. This is just what the British dominions do not want. Perhaps Chamberlain feels quite safe in dangling this bait before the French snout, knowing that Paris will not bite.

PULLMAN BRANCHES HOLD SUCCESSFUL WOMEN'S DAY MEETING

The Pullman city central committee of the Workers (Communist) Party held a very successful entertainment Sunday night to commemorate International Women's Day. Stancik's Hall, east 115th Street, was crowded with over two hundred Communists and their friends who listened to the music, drama and speeches with evident appreciation.

The Junior group of Pullman took a prominent part in the entertainment.

Karl Reeve, reporter for the DAILY WORKER spoke on the effect of the Coolidge election and the Dawes plan on the working class of America. He told of the ultimate aim of the Workers Party and the Communist International, and gave the immediate united front demands of the Workers Party on behalf of the American workers. Reeve told of the work of the Communists to celebrate International Women's Day.

Comrade Yuris acted as chairman.

8-Hour Day for Women Up Before Committee at Springfield Today

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. March 9.—Miss Jane Addams is expected to answer tomorrow as the principal speaker to defend the women's 8-hour day bill before the Illinois general assembly. This measure was introduced in the upper branch by Senator W. S. Jewell Lewistown, and in the house by Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill of Downers Grove. Senator William Sneed of Herrin is chairman of the senate committee and Representative Charles W. La Parte of Peoria of the house committee hearing the measures.

The speaking program for the mesure includes Agnes Nestor of the Chicago Women's Trade Union League and Mrs. O'Neill. The Ilinois Manufacturer's association together with other employers will speak against the bill.

Coolidge Extends Power of Plutes in South America

WASHINGTON, March 9.—In his capacity as arbitrator of the long standing boundary dispute between Chile and Peru, President Coolidge took occasion to extend the influence of American imperialism in the South American countries. Coolidge decided the northern boundary question outright in favor of Peru.

However, Coolidge decided that a plebiscite should be held in Tacna and Arica to determine which of the two nations shall acquire control of these provinces. In this plebiscite, America will take a prominent part, and will award the disputed provinces to the country giving the most favorable terms to American capitalists.

Navy Officers To Dissipate

MELBOURNE, Australia, March 9.—An extensive program of feasting, dancing and parties has been arranged for the officers of the American fleet on their arrival here next summer.

The fleet is to manuever in Pacific waters to impress the English, Japanese and South American countries with the power of the United States in the Pacific. No entertainments have been aranged for the common sailors.

Would Repeal Direct Primaries

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 9.—A bill now before the house would abolish the direct primary law and revert to the system of selecting state candidates at state convention of political parites.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE OF T.U.E.L. ISSUES STATEMENT ON STRUGGLE OF NOVA SCOTIA COAL MINERS

Twelve thousand Nova Scotia miners, hungry, desperate, but determined that their living standard shall be raised instead of lowered, are on strike against the powerful British Empire Steel corporation (BESCO). The Nova Scotia miners are among the worst exploited slaves in the mining industry of America.

Revolutionary and militant in all their struggles against this giant corporation, betrayed time and time again by the treachery of the John L. Lewis administration, harrassed continuously by governmental interference in behalf of the coal operators, and having to contend with the dualistic theory of the O. B. U., it is a real achievement for the officials of District 26, who, following the united front program of the Communist Party of Canada and the Trade Union Educational League, have been able to overcome these difficulties and to weld the 12,000 miners of that district together on a common program and to fight the common enemy.

The class struggle is the basis upon which the Nova Scotia miners and their officials enter the strike. The representatives of the Lewis machine, following their ruinous and disruptive class collaboration policy, left District 26 sometime ago when informed by the Besco, British Empire Steel corporation, that a wage cut was going to be demanded.

It was thought then that Lewis had so thoroly demoralized the district that the miners would be in no position to fight against the wage cut. But the militant miners of Nova Scotia, with true revolutionary spirit, have rallied their forces, shattered temporarily by the traitorous conduct of John L. Lewis, and are determined that not a ton of coal shall be mined or a pail of water pumped until every demand made by them has been won.

The excuse advanced by the coal operators for cutting the wages of the Nova Scotia miners is the old hoary one that they can't compete with the coal mined in the United States. Canada can't compete with the United States, Germany can't compete with France, England can't compete with France, Germany, Italy, or Belgium, and then within the national boundaries, Illinois can't compete with the non-union fields in Kentucky and W. Virginia—so therefore, the solution is, according to coal operators, a wage reduction all around. And when this vicious circle has been completed they begin all over again.

The wage cut proposed by the British Empire Steel corporation is a part of the "open shop" drive now being started in the coal mining industry of North America. The employers believe that if they can crush the Nova Scotia miners and add this district to the growing number of the non-union coal fields, that they will then be in a better position to launch a general campaign against the union fields.

Already we see conferences being held by the powerful coal operators of Illinois, western Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Kansas for the purpose of repudiating the Jacksonville agreement and enforcing a general wage cut in the mining industry. The progressive miners know that the signing of the Jacksonville agreement was engineered by the coal operators thru their union representatives, John L. Lewis, et al, for the purpose of expelling from the industry "200,000 surplus miners." It was the rankest betrayal ever recorded in American labor history.

Wage cuts, yellow dog contracts, closing down of mines, open violations of working agreements, have been the lot of the miners under the Jacksonville agreement. Wherever the miners have tried to compel the coal operators to live up to the agreement, their efforts have always been blocked by the reactionary Lewis district machinery. Expulsion from the union, revocation of charters such as happened in District 1, have been the methods used by Lewis to aid the coal operators to enforce their will upon the miners.

The only hope of the miners is the spirit shown and expressed in District 26, Nova Scotia. This strike must be broadened out to cover the entire mining industry of the United States and Canada.

A united front of the miners and the railroad workers against the united front of industrial and finance capital.

Nationalization of the mines, with management by the miners' union.

Against wage cuts—For wage increases.

A national agreement to cover the entire coal industry.

Unemployment insurance to be paid out of the profits of the industry and administered by a committee of miners.

The six-hour day and five-day week.

These slogans should be the basis of a nation-wide strike and upon which there should be no compromise. The boldness which the coal operators show in their wage-slashing "open shop" campaign must be met by determined effort on the part of the progressive rank and file. To expect the Lewis administration to start the fight against the coal operators without tremendous pressure from the membership is expecting the impossible. Every local union must demand from the executive boards of their sub-district, district, and the international that preparations be made for a nation-wide strike against wage cuts, and that the strike be conducted upon the basis of the class struggle.

Set Income Tax Publicity Case.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 9.—The test case to determine the legality or illegality of publishing income tax returns was set for argument on April 13, by the supreme court today. The case to be argued is against the Baltimore Post.

Sears Tower Kills Worker.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 9.—One man was killed and two others badly hurt and may die, when a steel construction tower fell on them today at the $5,000,000 Sears, Roebuck plant under construction here. The tower fell 80 feet.

100 Marooned on Barge.

LOS ANGELES, March 9.— Caught in high seas, 100 men and women, all deathly seasick, were marooned today two miles off Redondo Beach on a fishing barge, where they had been held prisoner by rough waters since Sunday afternoon.

KIRKWOOD'S SUSPENSION MAY BE LIFTED IN BRITISH COMMONS IF CENSURE MOTION IS WITHDRAWN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, March 9.—If the motion of censure offered against the speaker of commons for his action in suspending David Kirkwood, laborite member from Dumbarton, Premier Baldwin will recommend the dropping of Kirkwood's suspension, the premier said today.

GERMAN GENERAL RAIL STRIKE IS SPREADING FAST

Rank and File Against Dawes Plan Slavery

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

BERLIN, March 9.—The stubborn attitude of the Dawes' plan railway administration, which has granted big increases in salary to themselves—the higher administration officials of the railways, while grinding the wages of the real workers down to starvation and discharging them by the tens of thousands, making the other speed up—all this is causing the strike of the freight handlers to grow rapidly into a general strike.

Why Not Reparations to Working Class?

The workers are modest in their demands, asking only a 10 per cent increase, but the Dawes' plan management refuses even to discuss the matter.

In spite of this, the treacherous yellow socialists trade union leaders are urging the strikers to go back to work, then "talk about it afterward." They sharply conflict with the Communists in the unions who are urging that a general strike be declared at once by all railroad workers in Germany.

Even Socialists Admit General Strike Near.

This seems probable, as even the socialist daily Vorwarts admits that a general rail strike is coming soon. Practically every Berlin freight yard is tied up and train service is crippled. Berlin union meetings show strong rank and file demand to ignore the reactionary union officials and support a general strike, even against the orders of the officials.

About 11,000 men joined the strike in Saxony during the day. The strikers held secret meetings and held demonstrations in Dresden and other Saxon towns.

Suppress Communist Daily

The Communist daily paper, the Rote Fahne (Red Flag) has been suspended for two weeks as the German capitalists fear that its call for a general strike would further the cause of the railway workers. The government announces that the Rote Fahne is suppressed because it attacked the dead socialist president, Fritz Ebert.

But the fact that the monarchist papers are not touched, although they attack Ebert in very insulting terms, shows that it is not a dead president, but a live general strike situation, that moves the German capitalist government to suppress the Communist daily.

Coolidge Lies to Bankrupt Farmers, Listens to Profiteers

WASHINGTON, March 9.—No special session of congress for legislation in the interest of the farmers will be summoned by President Coolidge, because he is convinced that the enemies of the "best interests" of the farming industry now control the majority opinion in congress. That is the latest suggestion from the White House.

Once more the farmers are told that the president's special commission which reported, a few weeks before the old congress died, that American agriculture should cultivate the home market and help the manufacturers to build up a higher tariff wall, was their wisest counselor. Indeed, the president will listen to no other plan. Until congress is ready to surrender its own views and accept the views outlined by this special commission, he will do nothing. All other advice, he holds, comes from selfish sources, and is aimed to help the promoters of farm organizations and the middlemen.

Workers Can Only Win Emancipation Under the Banners of Class Fight

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, it isn't difficult to follow the omnipresent class struggle thru the unfathomable muck that engulfs the principals in the defamation suit brought by Helen Elwood Stokes against her multi-millionaire, aged husband, W. E. D. Stokes.

The kept press presents only the salacious side of it. It slavers the redlight filth over its pages. It narrates to the minutest detail Stokes' sordid attack on the young mother of his two children.

Just like the prostitute press of his own class, Stokes glories in the social mire in which he wallows. The stench stirred up is perfume alike to his aristocratic nostrils, and to the nose for news of the brass check editors who are his friends.

• • • •

The capitalist press is loyal to Stokes. So is the capitalist court, threatening at one stage of the proceedings to dismiss the case, throwing Stokes into a fit of joy.

Stokes, the man of millions, drooling his putrid spittle, and no matter how diseased his mind, must needs be worshipped, to the publication of his blackest thought, for is he not haloed by the almighty mark of the sacred dollar! And the victim, the wife, came out of the working class, in which Stokes claims he did not find the "fine people" with whom he likes to associate. But that wasn't sufficient crime to merit complete ostracism when he tired of her. So the aristocratic blue blood must needs drag her name thru the underworld mire of Chicago's "segregated district," especially thru the exclusive Everleigh Club, vice haunt of the great rich, being careful, however, to cover up any retelling of the murder here of young Marshall Field, Jr., first heir of Chicago's richest merchant prince, and the untimely deaths of the two sons of George Pullman, the czarist, labor-baiting head of the Pullman Sleeping Car trust, who spent and ended their parasitic lives in the same surroundings.

• • • •

Helen Elwood Stokes gets more space in the yellow press than did "Cautious Cal" during his inauguration. The problem of this once daughter of the working class is featured more prominently than the great political issues now shaking Europe and the world.

For the Stokes' story is the sequel in real life of the so-called romance that makes "best sellers," crowds theaters, turns "movies" into winners, and has the most columns allotted to it in capitalist newspapers and magazines.

• • • •

Capitalism holds out its lures; some to all its downtrodden subjects. To the growing boy the opportunity to become president, a fable that never dies. His life is poisoned with it. Or he is flooded with the whole literature of "success"; how to succeed in business. He is not allowed to behold in Coolidge, for instance, a sample of utter subservience to big business; or in Rockefeller, the murderer of workers in giant strikes, whether in the coal fields of Colorado, or the oil refineries of Bayonne, New Jersey.

So the bosses' propaganda, thru books, newspapers, magazines, movies, the drama, holds out to growing girls the alluring possibilities offered them thru marriage. This vision is supposed to brighten life on the factory treadmill, lighten the crushing toil of a great department store or office; to soothe the excruciating pain of excessive labor. The story of the fall of a Helen Elwood Stokes doesn't blur these possibilities to rise thru marriage; to escape from the dread monotony of a toil-burdened life. It only convinces the unsophisticated that they can do better. If they fail, they blame only themselves.

The absence of a mighty class consciousness among the workers in this country is testimony to the temporary success of this vile propaganda of the employing class. Yet the workers, men, women and children, will gradually learn, in spite of it, that their place is in the working class; that they will only win freedom thru the emancipation of their own class.

"A president," Coolidge or anyone else, is one in 110,000,000. Those who respond to Rockefeller's lash may reach a million; condemned to perpetual toil as long as the system lasts. Helen Elwood Stokes is typical of those very, very few social moths, who are even able to invite the destruction of the flames. The lives of these three must be convincing testimony that there is no escape under capitalism; not even for the individual.

• • • •

Let all workers stay with their own class, suffer with it, fight with it, and triumph with it,—for a better civilization.

COPPER TRUST STOLE BILLION FROM TREASURY

Government Accepted Crooked Tax List

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 9.—Testimony that the government has lost more than $850,000,000 in erroneous tax deductions to big copper interests has been presented by treasury experts before the senate committee investigating the bureau of internal revenue, it was declared today.

Heaviest losses to the government were from the Anaconda Copper company and the Inspiration Copper company, L. C. Manson, special committee prosecutor testified.

This resulted from the treasury accepting the copper company's valuation claims.

Copper Trust Dictates.

In its tax returns for 1917 and 1918, the Anaconda company claimed a valuation of $184,152,965, altho John A. Grimes, chief of the metal valuation section of the internal revenue bureau, said the amount should have been only $54,865,822. The company received a big saving in taxes when the treasury permitted a valuation of $188,713,192.

Government Kind to Bosses.

The Inspiration company claimed a valuation of $62,214,800. Grimes reported it should have been only $17,292,074, but the treasury allowed $92,134,730 as a tax basis, said Manson.

"In other words, they ignored Grimes' valuation?" asked Senator Couzens. Manson replied in the affirmative.

Valuing property at a greater figure than it is actually worth, results in a tax saving in figuring depletion allowances.

Manson also charged the treasury was losing vast sums annually thru unscientific methods in checking returns and allowing deductions for depletion, amortization and similar deductible items.

Standard Oil Also Cheats.

Similar losses to the government have resulted from larger oil companies, according to A. F. Fay, consulting engineer for the committee, who said oil concerns had "set up a valuation for depletion purposes which is absurd in the extreme."

Mellon Stole Millions.

Evidence designed to show that the government lost millions of dollars in taxes from the United States Steel corporation and the Aluminum company of America thru excessive amortization allowances, has been laid before the special senate committee investigating the bureau of internal revenue, the committee's records disclased today.

Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon is a heavy stockholder in the Aluminum company.

L. C. Manson, counsel for the committee declared that the Steel corporation was allowed an amortisation over allowance of $27,926,014, and the Aluminum company, "at least $6,500,000."

Taxes collected from a corporation by the government decrease as amortization allowance increase.

"The amount of amortization claimed by the United States Steel corporation, was $83,482,061," declared Manson. "The amortization allowed by the bureau of international revenue was $55,063,312. The amount considered proper by your counsel and engineers (the committee's) is $27,136,987. The over allowance was $27,926,014. The tax difference was $21,438,313."

Indiana Democrats Double Crossed

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 9.—Without comment or debate the Indiana senate today passed the Penrod "Gerrymander" bill by a vote of 27 to 0. None of the democrats voted.

This bill, transferring Lawrence county from the third to the second congressional district, was responsible for the recent "strike" of the democratic minority, the senators fleeing to Ohio to avoid arrest for breaking a senate quorum.

West Virginia Coal Miners Are Betrayed By Lewis

as they are in West Virginia today?

What could they say? The situation is enough to make them turn over in their graves!

Are we going to stand to one side and let John L. Lewis and the coal operators take away from us what we have fought for?

Union Can Be Destroyed Only From Inside.

It is almost impossible for the coal operators to destroy or cripple the U. M. W. of A. without the aid of John L. Lewis and company.

Lewis has done more harm to the organization since he became president than the Baldwin-Felts Detective agency ever did do or could do.

Lewis Busy Destroying U. M. W. of A.

The whole history of Lewis' activities in the U. M. W. of A. is one of betrayals to the miners; he has worked in the interest of the operators ever since he became president.

Lewis was never elected to any office in the U. M. W. of A. Every position he has held, including his present position, he got by being appointed, not elected by the miners. Because, where he was known, he could not be elected for president of a local.

Never Elected—Always Appointed.

For years in his home state, Illinois, he tried to induce the miners to elect him to office, but each time he was defeated. Three times he asked the membership of District 12 to elect him secretary, and each time he was defeated by a large majority.

As I said before, Lewis was never elected to any office. In 1917, John P. White, then president, appointed Lewis as statistician. Later he was appointed manager of the United Mine Workers' Journal.

In 1918, John P. White was induced to resign and take the job as advisor to the fuel administration of the government. Frank Hayes then became president and he appointed Lewis vice-president.

Examples of Trickery and Fraud.

In a very short time, Lewis was in complete control of the international executive board. Hayes was soon discredited, and, thru an agreement with Lewis, Hayes received a year's salary in advance and resigned, handing the presidency over to Lewis.

So we see how Lewis reached the highest office in the U. M. W. of A. without ever being elected.

An organization is in a pretty bad state of affairs when an appointed official has the power and authority to remove from office, and expel without trial, an official who was elected by rank and file members, as in the case of Alexander Howat of District 14.

Alexander Howat is a fighting union miner, a man who cannot be bought off by the coal operators. The operators tried to buy him, but he wasn't for sale so they had their tool, John L. Lewis to expel him.

Reinstate Alexander Howat.

The very least we can do is to force Lewis to reinstate him to his former position as president of District 14. Howat was in jail sacrificing his liberty in the interest of the Kansas miners at the time Lewis expelled him.

Lewis then sent Van A. Bittner to take charge of District 14, at once the district dropped from 11,000 to 7,000 members in a very short time.

Bittner is at present in Fairmont, W. Va., serving his bosses. He was not elected to his present position either. He was appointed.

Bittner has sent to the officers and members of local unions of northern W. Va. an official circular, which appears to have been written by an attorney for the coal operators.

Van Bittner's Craven Advice.

It has all the ear marks of a document that was written by a lawyer or a professional politician. It states the miserable condition that the miners are in, and says that the operators are trying to enslave "our people" and, "our membership is passing thru most trying times."

He is right. If we can stand this kind of times without kicking, we can stand most anything.

He says that the operators have imported hundreds of gunmen and erected forts and have manned them with machine guns and high powered flashlights to keep the miners in subjection, and also states that over four hundred miners and their families have been evicted from their homes by these gunmen.

Then he says, "There is only one thing to do in this crisis, and that is, keep our heads and depend upon the righteousness of our cause." A very good tactic, indeed!

How About the Country's Duty to Miners?

This flunkey of the coal operators also has in his "official circular" such bunk as this: "Remember your duty to your country, and, bear your cross with patience, and be a good citizen," etc.

He also advises, or rather instructs, the members to expel a member if he takes the floor in a local union meeting and advocates any progressive measures, claiming that anyone advocating ways and means of fighting the operators and their gunmen are "tools" of the coal operators.

Faker Wants Miners to Help the Sheriff.

Well, Moundsville penitentiary has got several of these "tools" for guests.

He says: "We have won the fight. The cause of labor is holy." And, "Co-operate with the sheriff," etc., etc.

After writing all this stuff he has the nerve to sign his name to it as chief international representative of the U. M. W. of A.

Down With Class Collaboration!

The only thing for us to do is to fight for the progressive miners' program and put out of office these lackeys of the coal operators and elect real representatives of the rank and file miners that will organize the unorganized and construct the U. M. W. of A. to fit the needs of the coal miners.

Down with class collaboration!

Down with the Lewis machine!

Dever Opposes Reduced Fare.

Mayor Dever has admitted that private persons have already subscribed $3,000 toward his propaganda campaign to put the traction ordinance over on the voters. A downtown headquarters will be opened. The Chicago Tribune has opened its guns in the drive to give the bankers now controlling the traction lines a long term franchise on the car lines under the guise of the "Dever municipal ordinance."

Dever, speaking at a methodist church, declared a "five cent fare is impossible. It is based on unsound and dishonest arguments."

JOBLESS DEMAND WORK WITH FULL PAY IN CANADA

Winnipeg Filled with Unemployed Army

WINNIPEG, Man., Canada, March 9.—At a meeting of several hundred unemployed single men in the Labor Temple here, a motion was passed, demanding that the minimum wage for single men sent to the farms should be $25.00 per month. Pickets were placed in front of the government employment bureau after the meeting to see that the demands were enforced.

Four thousand married men with families and 800 single men are on the list receiving government unemployment relief, but the men declare that this relief is a joke. Practically at all times the relief for single men is cut off, in order to force the unmarried men to go out on the farms. The men are sent out to these farms with the promise of work at $15.00 a month and board, but most of the time, they declare, they do not receive even this meager salary. Many of the men have been forced to walk back to the city, 100 miles or more, after the employers have refused to give them any wage.

There is no work of any kind in the city. Those who receive government relief are forced to pay for it by working in the city wood yard. The relief consists of meal tickets and a ticket for a bed. The beds are filthy and old, with insufficient covering and the food is nauseating.

COMMITTEE OF OTTAWA JOBLESS DEMANDS BREAD

Form Organization to Get Work or Pay

OTTAWA, Canada, March 9.—The unemployed workers have organized into an association and have adopted the name of the Unemployment Association of Canada, Ottawa branch. At the first meeting as a dues paying association, officers were elected. The membership has more than doubled since this first meeting a few weeks ago. Regular meetings are held in the Carpenters' Hall, every Tuesday evening. Dues are ten cents per month.

In order to obtain the relief work furnished by the municipality, it is necessary to register at the city hall, after which it takes two or three weeks to secure a week's work. The wages paid for the civic work are 50 cents per hour. If there is no work, and the unemployed workers can prove that he is absolutely destitute, owning not even a scrap of furniture, he may go to the social service department of the city, which gives a family of five an order entitling them to $2.82 worth of food to last the family seven days.

No provisions are made for the housing of the unemployed.

HILLMAN WARNED THAT BETRAYAL CANNOT LAST

Class Collaboration Condemned

By TURKHANSK.

There was a time when the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America really conducted a revolutionary struggle against the "open shop" and the unbearable slavery in the tailoring industry. After the well known Rickert's regime had been disposed of, the Chicago men's clothing industry was organized.

There followed a few successful years of co-operation between and advancement of the clothing workers. But it didn't take long for the Chicago clothing manufacturers, thru their high-paid diplomats, to influence the leaders of our organization.

The First Betrayal.

In 1922 they accepted the first general reduction in wages without giving the membership a chance to vote on the question. Since then the wishes and desires of the membership have been put in cold storage.

The more advanced workers thot it impossible for such a thing to happen in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. When such an act is committed only once or twice, the workers forget it readily. And so it was in this first instance. The membership rallied to the call of the general executive board for an organization fund, every member was taxed from $20 to $30, making a total of over $1,000,000 raised in Chicago within a short period of time.

A Million Wasted.

This gigantic sum was supposed to protect the general membership from future reductions in wages. But what do we see? Instead of showing the power of our organization, our leaders have accepted a second reduction in wages. This second betrayal brot a storm of ciriticism and condemnation upon the heads of these high paid officials who have forsaken the class struggle for class collaboration.

Reactionary machine rule is at last established in the A. C. W. of A. The president of our union has forgotten his duty to the membership. Instead of carrying on the revolutionary education of the workers in the industry, our ex-revolutionist and present class pacifist officials are playing regular A. F. of L. politics. Every local in the organization has an organized section of their machine, and everything is done according to the orders of the higher officials.

Workers' Democracy Abolished.

The rank and file workers' voice in the A. C. W. of A. is no longer the ruling force in the affairs of the organization. Democracy has been abolished. A powerful labor aristocracy, interested in labor banks, etc., has been built up and is taking away the revolutionary foundation of the A. C. W. of A. The victims are the poor workers who toil in the shops.

The officials say, boastingly, that the membership knows no better. While it is these same officials who keep the rank and file in ignorance so that they can control and exploit that lack of knowledge.

Not Forever!

There are shops where a shop meeting is called only once a year, and then only in order that the business agents may appoint a shop chairman. But this period of luxury and power at the expense of the rank and file workers in the industry will not last forever.

The clothing workers of Chicago and many other cities are waking up to the fact that they have been led, blindly, into a swamp. The spirit of revolt against our class collaborationist leaders is increasing. The last act of betrayal by the general executive board, against Local 5 in New York, has proven to the general membership that the general executive board of the A. C. W. of A. is no longer entitled to represent the organized men's tailoring industry of America.

With or Without or Against You!

The time is near, Brother Hillman, when you will have to face a strongly organized opposition. Your machine rule and autocratic dictatorship in suspending members of our organization and your present power will then avail you nothing.

Brother Hillman, you surely remember the Russian revolution of 1905, after the Russo-Japanese war. You lived in Lithuania then. Thru experience you ought to know that revolutionists cannot be disposed of by expulsion from the union. You also know that the A. C. W. of A. was born in the struggle, and by struggle, with or without your help, and even against your opposition, we will grow ever more powerful. The masses cannot be fooled all the time.

Splits Come From Above.

The clothing workers in general are class conscious and expect revolutionary leadership. Splits and division within our ranks come from above, never from below. These divisions come from the fact that official autocracy's personal interests come into conflict with the interests of the membership, and when it does, the workers are the ones who suffer.

It should be your duty to raise the slogans of "battle against wage cuts," "for a higher standard of living." Instead of slogans of struggle you raise slogans of betrayal such as "no strikes for the next ten years." Any chamber of commerce would endorse that slogan.

Away with the class collaboration policy!

The A. C. W. of A. will remain an instrument of the class struggle!

AMALGAMATION NEEDED BADLY IN THIS CASE

But Labor Fakers Do Nothing to Get It

CHICAGO—The tangled jurisdictional situation in the Chicago building trades unions of the American Federation of Labor is receiving an airing thru the test strikes on the huge Hotel Sherman annex.

After a week's strike of the unions affiliated with the building trades council because the Carptenters' Union, which is not affiliated, was given the setting of metal trim, the issue has gone to arbitration. Repeated awards by the national committee on jurisdictional awards, a mixed employer-union board, have favored the sheet-metal workers.

In the Hotel Sherman case the work was given the carpenters by the contractors who usually follow this course, whether to stir up trouble between the unions or because, as the carpenters claim, they can do the work faster and better. When the strike was called the carpenters remained at work and so did the steamfitters and the sheet metal workers.

An additional twist to the complications is given by the fact that these sheet metal workers are non-union. The carpenters claim that union building tradesmen are striking against union carpenters in favor of non-union sheet metal workers, but this is denied by Secy. J. J. Conroy of the building trades council.

Admitting that non-union sheet metal men are at work on the job, Conroy declares that the particular work done in opposition to the award by the carpenters will be done by union sheet metal workers if the contractor gives them the chance or is forced to do so by the strike.

Chamber of Commerce Fights Bills to Aid Ohio School Teachers

CLEVELAND—Two bills before the state legislature have an important bearing on wages and the tenure of employment of school teachers in this state. The main provisions in the first bill are:

1. Appointment of teachers for a complete school year. When the teacher has served in one school district for three consecutive years the next appointment shall be for an indefinite period.

2. When teachers may be dismissed written charges must be delivered to the employe, who may reply and demand a hearing.

The second bill would equalize the wages of men and women teachers. The Cleveland chamber of commerce has joined with the board of education in fighting this bill.

St. Louisians! Turn Out Wednesday Night!

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—The local general group of the Trade Union Educational League of St Louis, will meet Wednesday, March 11, at 8 o'clock in the evening at Workers' Hall, 2412 North 14th street. The speaker will be John Brown of Typographical Union No. 8. Every worker is welcome

LOCAL 5, A. C. W. EXPELLED, TAKES UP THE OFFENSIVE

Makes Demands on the Hillman Machine

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY.—Local 5 of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, recently expelled from the joint board, for offending the tender susceptibilities of the Hillman machine, has issued a leaflet explaining its point of view to the other locals of the A. C. W., pointing out the class collaboration of the administration, calling attention to the censorship over the official organ which prevents the membership—and even its editor, so it is claimed—from the right freely to express themselves, and setting forth the demands of the local.

These demands are as follows:

"1. The throwing of workers out of the shops should cease. We believe that if our leaders would co-operate less with the bosses and co-operate a little more with the workers in the shops, this can be carried out.

"2. We demand that reductions should not be made. The old story is being used. The tailors in New York are being told that the cities of New York compete for the work by cutting the wages, and if they consent to wage reductions the work can be brought back to New York. This same story is being told to the cities out of New York by our faithful representatives. A production inquisition goes on while thousands of workers are walking the streets idle, hungry and destitute. A stop must be made to this harmful policy.

"3. We demand that the two New York Joint Boards, including the cutters, amalgamate into one Joint Board. We hold that the organization must be unified before we can be successful in our fight against the bosses. We cannot and should not permit the continuance of a situation where in one firm one section of the trade goes out on strike while the other remains working.

"4. We demand that the locals in a given branch of the industry be amalgamated into one local. We believe that if it is possible for the Italians, Lithuanians in Chicago, Rochester, Pittsburgh, Boston and in all other clothing centers, pressers, operators and tailors in the same branch of the industry to belong to one local, there is no reason why it cannot be done in New York. The division of the workers into separate locals benefits the bosses and is advantageous to the politicians of the various locals. It brings only disaster to the workers in the shops.

"5 We demand that the manufacturers be prohibited from employing former union officals as managers in their factories, as has been the case with many of the betrayers who have obtained such jobs with the approval of the officials who have remained in the organization. The betrayers know well how to heartlessly exploit and drive the workers.

"6. W demand that the wages of the officials shall be no more than the prevailing rate of wages received by the workers. Officials that receive big wages forget very quickly the needs of the workers.

"7. We demand that two terms be the limit for any official to remain in office, and if the organization is dear to them they will gladly go back to the shop and keep in touch with the daily struggles of the workers. Officials that make a shop out of the union and a job out of their position cannot protect the interests of the workers as they should.

"8. We demand that unnecessary officials be removed. The organization under one joint board would do away with many officials, which would be a saving to the organization of many thousands of dollars which could be put to the use which would further the interests of the workers.

"We, the members of Local 5, believe that not one honest, class-conscious worker, no matter to what local or city he belongs, can afford to abstain from giving our local their utmost support in this fight. This is a serious and earnest fight.

"The events in Local 2 and in the other locals where the members do not get the opportunity to express themselves and are being ruled and persecuted by groups which are well rewarded by the officials for their nefarious acts prove that our leaders have in earnest decided to exterminate every trace of free expression in our organization. The fight concerns not only our local; it is a fight for the whole Amalgamated—a fight for a real union, a fight for the men's clothing workers all over the country.

"We hope that your local will immediately give this matter the consideration it merits and reach the right decision.

MYSTERY OF THE MISSING LETTER NEEDS SOLUTION

But It Doesn't Save Hutcheson

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY—Altho, as it seems, a letter and resolution from Local 2140 of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners was sent out January 30 to every local of the Brotherhood, it has not yet reached Local 2090. Without such official communication it was hardly possible to do anything to help our expelled brothers.

But at a regular meeting on March 5, was read General Secretary Duffy's letter in which he tried to whitewash Hutcheson by pointing out that by expelling Brother Reynolds and others, Hutcheson was carrying out the decisions from previous conventions that no member of the Brotherhood was allowed to belong to any dual union or antagonistic (to the Brotherhood) organization.

This opened debate. Mostly all speakers denounced the action of Hutcheson, but came to the conclusion that as long as the local has not heard the other side it cannot take any action.

The local business agent, in a lengthy speech, tried to prove that Brother Reynolds was guilty by belonging to the T. U. E. L.

After the business agent another member took the floor and made a motion that Local 2090 should make a protest against Hutcheson. He pointed out that it is useless to wait for further communications from Local 2140, that such communication, probably, will never reach us, but that the local has enuf grounds to base its protest on Duffy's letter, that it is everybody's privilege to belong to any organization or sect and thru his action, Hutcheson is trying to interfere in others' private lives.

As long as a member is not violating the constitution and laws of the Brotherhood he can not be expelled. Further it was pointed out that Local 2090 is not the first one who makes protest, that already over 40 locals have sent in their protests.

Another member pointed out that the local has already proven its distrust in Hutcheson by casting only 44 votes for Hutcheson and 400 for the progressive candidate, M. Rosen, and should not fear to protest.

The motion was adopted almost unanimously.

BABIES DIE LIKE FLIES AS MILLS EXPLOIT MOTHERS

Textile Towns Show the Highest Rate

PORTLAND, Me., March 9.—Because Lewiston, Maine, has the highest infant mortality rate in the United States, due to its overworked textile mill mothers, an investigation of the condition of the workers in the industry is being sought in the state legislature.

Representative H. E. Homes of Lewiston charges that women weavers in the cotton mills are so overworked that their health is seriously imperiled. He asserts that this is the reason Lewiston has the highest death rate for infants of any city in the country.

Authorization to hold hearings, summon and examine witnesses under oath, and power to compel production of books, papers, records which may be pertinent to the inquiry, and to employ necessary assistance is to be given a special committee.

Bath House Rubbers Organize and Walk the Picket Line

NEW YORK—Rubbers in Turkish and Russian baths on New York's lower East side are amazing their employers and bath patrons by their unprecedented strike for organization. For five months the union, a federal union of the American Federation of Labor, affiliated with the United Hebrew Trades, has been struggling to get rubbers organized.

When some of the employers got scared and locked out the union workers a strike was called and daily pickets parade in front of these baths with placards telling of the strike.

The rubbers have to work all hours of the day and night and are often paid only by tips. They must labor in the unhealthy over-heated, steamy, sweaty atmosphere for so many hours that many succumb to tuberculosis or to a peculiar skin disease.

UTICA TEXTILE MILL STRIKERS GET HELP FROM OTHER UNIONS

UTICA, N. Y.—Striking cotton textile workers of State street and Mohawk Valley mills, Utica Steam & Mohawk Valley Cotton Co., remain firm against the wage reductions of the company in spite of announcements that the mills would reopen. About 1,200 workers, organized in the United Textile Workers' Union, are out in their sixth week.

Employes of the New York mills in Utica pledged each $1 a week to the strikers and Utica Typographical Union No. 62 endorsed the strike and voted an assessment of $1 per week per member for four weeks for the strikers. Other local unions are doing the same.

JOB FEE SHARKS GET BIG GRAFT FOR POOR JOBS

Have to Pay Dearly for "Right to Work"

NEW YORK—The decision of the Central Trades and Labor Council of New York to probe the employment agencies that batten on the job seekers and supply strikebreakers calls attention again to an old evil in this most populous American industrial city.

One employment agent on the lower water front on West street offered, for a fee of four dollars, to ship the investigator out to an unnamed New Jersey town 34 cents' distance, transportation to be paid by the applicant There was a choice of two jobs; one in the yard at ten hours and $3.15 a day; the other inside at eleven and a half hours and $3.50 daily.

Along the Bowery similar wages were offered for fees, tho one railroad agent agreed to ship without a fee at four dollars a day. That was the highest wage offered for unskilled work.

At the plant of the Nedick orange drink concern, that vends drinks from dozens of sidewalk counters, the reporter was invited to peel oranges at 22 cents an hour. At 44 hours weekly this would mean only $9,68 but it was explained work would range from 54 to 60 hours, thus bringing up the pay.

Reports which delegates to the Central Trades and Labor Council are receiving from persons answering advertisements by laundries, candy factories, unorganized needle trades plants in the lower paid departments show that the above conditions are far from uncommon.

In the more genteel occupations wages are often lower even than in unskilled hard labor jobs. For instance many telephone operators are being placed at wages of fifteen dollars up, with the fee for the job ranging up to a whole week's pay.

Strike Against Speed Up in Pacific Mill at Lawrence, Mass.

LAWRENCE, Mass. March 9.—About 70 men and women frame tenders walked out of the carding room, cotton department, of the big Pacific Textile mills in Lawrence because of the company's efforts to introduce new speed-up methods of work.

The mill has been on a 72-loom basis in the weaving department for several months in spite of workers' protests. Gradually the employers have been doubling and tripling the amount of work in spinning and other departments. By making changes successive instead of all at once the company his sought to avoid a general strike in all departments.

The United Textile Workers is establishing headquarters in Lawrence again for the beginning of an organization campaign. Local wool spinners will first confer to lead the drive. Lawrence Central Labor Union is expected to assist.

LOSOVSKY WRITES OF THE UNIONS OF THE WORLD

Their Pre-War Number And Nature

By A. LOSOVSKY.
General Secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions.

In order to understand the development and the ways of the world trade union movement in the post-war period, we will have to give a short characterization of its conditions before and during the war.

Before the war the trade union movement could be characterized as follows, first of all from the geographical point of view it was not yet a world movement; it was mostly developed in Europe and in the Anglo-Saxon countries, and on the other hand in the British colonies, such as Canada, Australia, South Africa.

All Asia without mentioning Africa—this great area of working masses—which by its population is much greater than the so-called civilized world, had not been drawn into the world's socialist nor into the world's trade union movement, for the simple reason that the labor movement began to crystalize in these countries only at the end of the war and mainly in the post-war period.

So from the geographical point of view we have a trade union movement which is confined withon a certain territorial frame, which can only be called a world movement with certain reservations.

Trade Union Statistics.

In the whole world before the war there were about ten million organized workers, which were organized into unions of all kinds of political shades, beginning with anarcho-syndicalists and ending with catholic, democrat, protestant and so forth. The bulk of these organized workers were in Europe.

Taking the main countries we get the following picture: Before the war in Great Britain in round numbers, were about 4,000,000 organized workers; in Germany, about 3,500,000; in the United States, 2,700,000; in France, about 1,000,000; in Italy, 900,000; in Belgium, 200,000; in Holland, 220,000, etc., etc. We will stop with these figures in order to show the real value, to show what they really contain.

What These Figures Contained.

France before the war was showing 1,000,000 members in the trade unions; but in the General Confederation of Labor, the only organization which could be called a class organization, there were no more than 500,000.

The rest were unions of agricultural workers which stood on the other side of the national trade union movement—almost on the other side; unions of government employes, which in fact were in opposition to the C. G. T.; here we also find some little yellow unions; in short, the official statistics include in the trade unions every organization, which under the law of 1884 had to register its by-laws—and even without such registration was under that law.

It is clear such figures cannot give the real picture of the trade union movement, for such a picture we can get only when we know not only the amount, but also the contents—in other words, the political composition and the political movements which exist in that group of workers.

The same about Germany.

The same about England, where instead of four million and a couple of hundred thousand, we should say a maximum of about three million workers had, if not a class conscious platform, at least very close to it.

In the whole world we had about ten million organized workers. In the first question which naturally comes up—What actually did that big army represent?—we have to look behind the figures. That ten million is a big army is shown by the last war. Ten million well organized workers, knowing what they want, distributed all over the world, are a great power.

We can say without exaggeration that, if these ten million organized workers had been not only revolutionary in mood, but revolutionary in fact, the world war would have never come about. You will see that this mass of workers represented a very vivid and varied picture.

(Each week on this page we will print selected excerpts form Comrade Losovsky's great book, "The World's Trade Union Movement." The book may be ordered from the T. U. E. L., 1113 Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill., for 50 cents.)

TRACTION GANG PLANS TO STEAL MORE MILLIONS

Legislature May Permit Double Car Fare

NEW YORK, March 9.—The working class of New York City and surrounding boroughs will pay an increased toll of another $100,000,000 a year in car fare if the traction lords have their way.

A committee was sent to Albany to memorialize the legislature to grant an increase in the fare raising the present rate of five cents to not less than seven and leave the company to judge how much the traffic will bear. It is now rumored that a ten cent fare may be tried at first and if this causes a revolution a sop of a reduction to nine cents will follow to still the protest.

Pave Way for Robbery.

To pave the way for this huge piece of robbery the transit companies caused the governor to appoint Judge McAvoy to bring in a report on the traction stuaton. This report paints the condition of transportation as black as it actually is and calls for improvement. The old judge was shrewd enough to read the report as it was written by the companies stating in a keen way that it is impossible to improve the service unless the fare is raised.

Mayor Hylan who holds his political position by appearing to keep the fare down at the five cent rate is a winning favorite with the masses who do not realize that he never did a turn that hurt the big interests or helped the workers.

In his splurge into the opposition Hylan gives away some secrets of his confreres, saying that the officials of the transit companies are "squandering millions of the nickles of the fare payers at the gambling tables under the palm trees in Florida," forgetting to add that he himself also left several nickles at the same place not more than a couple of weeks ago.

In the stew over this matter the masses are made to believe that the low fare advocates are trying to protect the workers who are the only ones who use the subway, surface or elevated lines, and in their eagerness to escape the payment of higher fare they shout their heads off in support of Hylan, who has no power whatsoever in determining the matter, and if he had he would stand firm as the servant of the interests, tho apparently fighting them. Being a man strong with the people he can be that much better tool of the robbing crew that needs his services.

In the meantime the slaves are being prepared to submit to the next step in another holdup as capitalism is tightening its hold and becoming bolder every day in its assault upon the life of the toiling masses, oblivious of the fact that the larger robbery takes place in shop and factory where the exploiting boss takes his toll in profit that leaves the worker a victim of poverty and misery.

EDUCATIONAL WORK AND TRADE UNION ACTIVITY CHIEF TOPICS AT CITY CENTRAL COMMITTEE

The work among the Junior Section of the Young Workers League, the report of the Y. W. L., educational activities, industrial and trade union work, especially in the needle trades and carpenters were discussed at length and in a very constructive manner at the meeting of the city central committee, Workers (Communist) Party Local Chicago, Wednesday March 4th.

The successful work thruout District 8 among the miners, development of T. U. E. L. work, Labor Defense activity and other party work was reported on.

Buliding, Metal and Needle Trades Activity.

The discussion on the work in the needle trades was especially healthy and there are good prospects for developing a militant left wing in the Amalgamated. The T. U. E. L. groups propose a leaflet in the immediate future on the coming agreement and propose a struggle against the expulsion policy which is now also being conducted by the Hillman administration in the Amalgamated. Policy was discussed in detail and the comrades arrived at an excellent understanding thereon. An intensive campaign among the carpenters has been organized and special meetings are being held of the left wing.

In the machinists' coming election, with the left wing off the ballot, the left wing is putting a few pertinent questions to the allegedly progressive Anderson group on the question of amalgamation, reinstatement of expelled Toledo members, right of minority expression within the union and B. & O. plan and demanding a public declaration from the Anderson slate on these issues. In the machinists' elections, our comrades are supporting the Anderson slate against the Johnston outfit because it offers more hope, but mainly our comrades are campaigning for the left wing program of the machinists. The Metal Trades Bulletin sale is being pushed.

The printers are preparing for the election in the Local 16 of the I. T. U. T. U. E. L. group is meeting Friday to take up the elections and other matters. See T. U. E. L. page for details of the work.

Street and Factory Meetings Being Arranged.

With street meetings soon on the way and also the necessity of extending factory meetings, the city central committee appointed a special committee of Comrades Lewis, Bell and Herd to take charge of this work. To systematize much further the distribution and sale of literature and DAILY WORKER, a special committee of Simonson, H. Schroeter, N. Dozenberg, C. Gabin, C. Erickson, K. Harris and B. Garver was elected.

Those comrades who broke discipline at the recent needle trades meeting of the T. U. E. L. have acknowledged their error and stand ready to carry out all party decisions fully in the future.

The Armenian branch delegate will continue to be seated at the C. C. C. pending final action on their appeal to the central executive committee relative to their attitude to the federation bureau.

Preparing for Abramovich.

Abramovich is slated to speak in Chicago, March 15, at the Garrick Theater.

Applications for members to the party were accepted from Englewood English, Douglas Park English, Lake View Scandinavian and Polish South Side.

Advance in Educational Work.

The educational work was reported on. The class for new members of the party was discussed in detail and its success noted. Also branches were urged to take up even more, the matter of independent branch educational activities, as some branches are already doing, either in the form of lectures, study classes, etc.

Students for the intensive Party Training School opening March 16, at Workers Hall, 722 Blue Island Ave., are being selected from Chicago members. A number of miners will come from Southern Illinois. It is plain that the party is taking up questions of intensive and systematic education as a part of program of Bolshevization of the party very seriously was evidenced by the lengthy and excellent discussion at the city central committee.

Anti-Injunction Resolutions Issued.

The district committee has issued a statement and sent resolutions to all labor unions and working class organizations in the state of Illinois, urging the organizations to exert pressure on the state legislature to pass the anti-injunction bill now before the house. Resolution and statement printed in the DAILY WORKER. Comrades should take up this resolution at once in their unions.

Also there must even be a greater distribution of the wage cut leaflets. Many branches and nucle have been distributing at the factories and shops, but more can be done on such an issue which affects the workers daily.

Juniors Marching On.

Comrade Hammersmark reported on the Junior convention and party mempers got an opportunity for full discussion. The party members are asked to furnish at once the names and addresses of their or others children and to connect them up immediately with the Junior section. Also to help the Junior section movement along, comrades who have not done so shall pay their Junior assessments.

Y. W. L. Active in The Shops.

The Young Workers' League report was a good one. On March 22 they are holding a child labor meeting in the Northwest Hall at 3 p. m., a campaign being conducted nationally by the party and the league. On the 21st of March they are arranging a mass meeting and entertainment in the colored neighborhood in an effort to get Young Negro workers into the league and are making preparations for a campaign among the young workers in stockyards.

The weekly Young Worker is now established and that is as imoprtant to the young workers as the DAILY WORKER is to the party.

In the field of nuclei there are nuclei functioning in most of the working area branches of the Y. W. L. and some of them have become quite influential in their shops.

Demonstration on March 29.

On March 29 the party is holding a Defense Week demonstration in Ashland Auditorium.

DAILY WORKER Agents meeting, Room 307, 166 West Washington St., 8:00 p. m.

PROPAGANDA COMMITTEE'S WORK GETS UNDER WAY IN CHICAGO

Propaganda is going to be the order of the day in Local Chicago. At least it is if the propaganda committee knows anything about it. And that committee set about its business Saturday in such a way that in a short while the most Rip van Winklish member in the city will be hobbling about selling Theses.

Without blare of trumpets, but auspiciously enough for all that, the City Propaganda Committee was elected by the last meeting of the C. C. C. It was charged with the duty of waking up Local Chicago. The winter accomplishments of the fifteen or more hundred members who compose the local are not, according to the C. C. C. commensurate with the figures themselves. In a word, there are a thousand and a half people who, for Communists, are not making nearly enough noise. The city propaganda committee (which will doubtless be known as the C. P. C.) will break the silence.

The new committee, composed of seven comrades, met in the new party book shop at 19 S. Lincoln St. at 3 p. m. Saturday. There was no hesitation and there were no preliminaries. It set right to work. The first thing they wanted to do was to get near the membership and transmit a bit of their own contagious enthusiasm. This they did by dividing the branches in the city between them: every member of the committee is to be responsible for a certain number of branches.

Each member of the committee is to visit regularly the branches he is assigned to. He is to get the co-operation of the most competent members of these branches. He is to take care that his branches cover with DAILY WORKERS and literature the unions meetings that have been given to the branches. He is to break down the mental condition thruout the local party that expresses itself in boredom at the mention of Jimmie Higgins work.

As one of the committee put it "When a literature agent is elected in a branch, the rest of the members sigh with relief and dismiss the matter of distribution from their minds, depending on the agent to do all the work."

If you smile and think to yourself "Here is another committee that is starting off with a bang and won't meet again for a month," you are mistaken. The next meeting of the city propaganda committee will be held in conjunction with the DAILY WORKER branch agents meeting tomorrow night, at 166 W. Washington street. There it will take up the matter of making the DAILY WORKER go over in Chicago. The committee isn't overlooking anything.

The membership in local Chicago is going to find it won't be able to get away with merely attending meetings any more. The propaganda committee is going to make local Chicago go to work. It is a double action propaganda committee. Its job is to propagandize the propagandists.

Elected to the committee are, Bob Garver, Clara Gabin, Nick Dozenberg, Kitty Harris, Charles Erickson, Paul Simonson, Hans Johnson, and Gertrude Welsh. Any member in local Chicago that escapes work under the aegis of this committee will be an artful dodger.

Freight Hits Auto Party

FORT DODGE, Iowa, March 9.—Blanche Altman, 19, of Omaha, was instantly killed, four other persons were cut and bruised when a Des Moines southern freight train struck the automobile in which they were riding here today.

FASCIST ITALY WOULD GAG ALL CORRESPONDENTS

Bill Would Make U. S. Writers Liable

(Special to the Daily Worker)

ROME, March 8.—The fascist deputy Silvio, author of a bill legalizing the muzzling of the press, now proposes that foreign representatives entering Italy shall first pass a test as to whether they are persona grata with the government, just as ambassadors receive word from the foreign offices whether they will be received.

"We all know about accredited diplomats and nothing about newspaper men," it was stated. "It is obvious that we cannot permit correspondents to do as they like, without exercising a steady, preventive control of foreign correspondents' work. The expelling of correspondents after they have entered the country would do untold harm, amounting to locking the door after the cattle had run away."

The new bill provides that foreign correspondents be liable to the same law as local editors, while numerous provisions were also added. The measure will be debated in parliament on Monday.

New York Negros Enter New Trades in Great Numbers

NEW YORK, March 9.—The emergence of New York's increasing Negro population into new lines of work, particularly into unorganized jobs, is but one of the studies of the new Negro in Harlem. An article just published points out that Chicago, Detroit and Pittsburgh have had dominant basic industries requiring largely unskilled labor which Negroes have entered in great numbers. In New York Negroes have been employed mostly in personal service as porters, laundresses, and servants. No basic industry uses their strength and endurance.

But, the article published in the Survey Graphic shows that New York Negroes now are reaching into new fields of work. In 10 years 6,000 Negro clothing workers have come into one of the city's geratest trades. Practically all of these Negro clothing workers are in the International Ladies' Garment Workers. Almost all of the 5,386 Negro longshoremen belong to the union. Negro musicians are 50 per cent organized. In many of the skilled trades where Negro artisans are barred or discriminated against the numbers of Negro workers have not increased. Of women laundry workers, 60 per cent are Negroes and the industry is very little organized.

COMMUNIST CHILDREN'S COLUMN

NEW YORK JUNIORS MOBILIZE TO FIGHT PEDDLING OF MUSHY RELIGIOUS DOPE IN SCHOOLS

By ANNA THOMPSON

NEW YORK, March 9.—The bosses and their hired servants are constantly on the lookout as to how to improve their instruments of domination over the working masses they rob and oppress. Recently it must have occurred to them that the two wings of the mind-poisoning apparatus—the public school and the church—were too far apart, too uncentralized for effective work. So a discussion arose and one conference after another was held on the question of bringing religion closer to the public school.

Scrapping whatever scruples they may have had at such a gross violation of the well-known "American tradition," the constitution, and the other holy documents of Americanism and salving without an effort whatever lesions their scientific consciences might have suffered (if they were not too ignorant to possess such a luxury) at the prospect of helping to dish out such an antiquated variety of ancient fable and misinformation for the very truth itself, our 100 per cent Americans and "leaders of thot" have come out strongly in favor of the proposed plans of mobilizing the public schools in the campaign to poison gas the workers' children with the religious dope.

Introduce Religious Opiates.

As a result religious training is being introduced into the New York public schools by leaps and bounds. In some schools, a system has been introduced whereby the children are dismissed from school early on condition that they go to some place (religious school, Talmud Torah, etc.) where some brand of religious dope is dispensed. The children that refuse to go out and get poisoned are made the objects of petty persecution, and are lectured at and scolded, or otherwise punished. In this way the school authorities are cracking the whip to drive the children into the dope peddling joints. But in other cases, perhaps in the majority of cases, the cumbersomeness of this double apparatus is done away with—the religious poison is dispensed right under the roof of the people's public schools and by none other than by the "high-minded patriotic" teacher himself. The Junior office of the Young Workers' League in New York has stacks of information gathered by our Juniors in the public schools as to how this doping work is carried on by the teachers.

Teachers Obey Bosses.

In one school in Brooklyn, the teacher regularly hands out small pocket bibles every morning and each child reads a verse, and then the teacher comments on it, being sure to bring out something that touches upon "daily life"—that is, that can be used against the workers. Then the children ask questions and finally a written examination is given on the subject.

In another school, the dope-venders "say it with music." The learning and singing and commenting upon church hymns is the method employed. In still another school one hour every week—formerly it used to be devoted to cooking—is taken up with pious lectures on "the principles of morality and religion." The children take notes and then have to report.

In a large school in New York the emphasis seems to be on the ceremonial. Each child steps up to the front of the room, reads a piece from the bible, and then kisses the "holy book," while the other children sit with their heads bowed reverently. The teacher talks to them fervently about the necessity for every child being religious and of carrying out the ceremonial of his religion.

A Blow at the Workers.

And so on. Fifty more examples could be given. There is no doubt that at last the school authorities have seriously made up their minds that the workers' children must be pumped full of the religious dope and that the public schools are there to see that it is done.

This is a direct blow at the American working class and at the working class children. The Young Workers League of New York and its Junior Section have heard the challenge and are ready to answer it. A systematic plan of activity has been worked out by the District Junior Committee for the activity of the Junior Section in this campaign. This plan not only takes into account the internal work within the Junior Group itself—such as the enlightenment of our juniors on matter of religion and the training of picked juniors as propagandists and agitators in this campaign—but also the propaganda and agitation and organization owrk outside. Leaflets—printed and mimeographed—are to be issued for distribution among the school children in the schools, mass meetings, and protest meetings. Parents' meetings are to be held to mobilise the adult workers in the struggle and to gain their support for the juniors in the school struggle. A call for a united front is to be issued, labor unions and labor fraternal organizations are to be circularized and approached.

Finally, the protest movement thus intensified and crystallized, will be given organizational form, especially in the schools. Thus our Junior Section will have gone a long stretch on the road to awakening and mobolizing the working class children against capitalism.

Juniors Mobolize Children.

We have already begun to put this program into life. Groups of protesting children are already crystallizing around our juniors in the schools. Meetings have already been arranged for and held.

A big protest meeting of this sort will be held this Friday, March 13, at 1701 Pitkin avenue in Brooklyn, at which speakers from the Y. W. L., W. P., and the Foster Junior Group—speakers in Jewish and English—will explain and discuss the whole question.

The following day, March 14, the Brownsville Section Junior Committee is calling together a parents' meeting and the anti-religion campaign will play a prominent part on the order ning. When our juniors get real busy the howl of the bosses and their servants, the school authorities, will be heard all the way to Chicago.

Down with the religious poison in the schools!

Down with religion, the tool of the bosses!

3,000 German Glass Blowers Strike.

GERMANY, March 9.—Nearly the entire glass industry of Germany is at a standstill as a result of a strike of 3,000 workers because of a disagreement between the bosses and workers over the 1925 prices for Christmas tree ornaments.

AUSTRIA, UNDER ALLIED REGIME, HELL FOR LABOR

Wages Down, Living Up, Big Unemployment

(Special to The Daily Worker)

VIENNA, Austria, March 9.—The league of nations efforts to stabilize the crown and generally to make Austria an example of what the league of nations could do for any nation which is good enough to refrain from going Bolshevik, is suffering complete failure, so far as the workers are concerned.

When the Austrian crown was stabilised unemployed workmen in Austria numbered 50,000. By March, 1923, the number had risen to 167,000. It decreased to 76,000 in November of the same year, but rose again to 126,000 in March, 1924.

By July of last year there had been another decrease to 64,000, since which time, however, the number has been steadily increasing and now stands at 187,000, which is more than ever before.

Now that these workers are out of a job, they also have time to think over the fact that in the same time that the number of unemployed has thus grown, the cost of living has increased forty per cent. The two and a half pound loaf of bread is expected soon to cost 9,000 paper crowns.

Communists are pointing out that revolutionary Soviet Russia has made a success, really stabilized the ruble and reduced the cost of living while rapidly putting the unemployed back to work. The league of nations has failed.

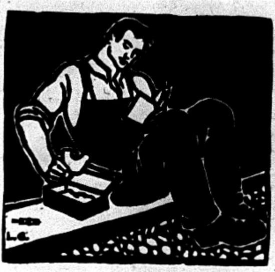
BUILDERS AT WORK

THE LITTLE RED LIBRARY IS READY!

No. 1 and No. 2 Just Off the Press.

WE heave a sigh of relief and say, "at last—it's here." After many difficulties and some delay, we are sending thru the mail today the first copies off the press of the Little Red Library. Within the next few days thousands of copies already ordered, will be going thruout the country, as the first numbers of a steady stream of effective propaganda in small pocket size.

The first announcements of this new series of publications at the convenient price of ten cents each (twelve copies for one dollar) brought us many letters from every state in the country. A letter from Benjamin Eljisberg, D. E. C. educational director of San Francisco, is typical of many that came to the office. This comrade writes:



This is the mark on the cover of every book of The Little Red Library.

"About three months ago, talking to Comrade Ella R. Bloor, I emphasized the importance at this time of centralizing and standardizing our party publications. Among other things I called her attention to the success of the 'Little Blue Books,' saying: 'Why couldn't we have 'Little Red Books' to carry our message to the workers?'

"You can imagine my delight when recently announcement appeared in the DAILY WORKER about centralization of publication and still more recently THE LITTLE RED LIBRARY made its first bow.

"I was especially pleased to note that you realize the importance of unearthing and developing the working class writers."

A student at the University of Wisconsin writes us: "At this moment I have been able to scrape together only two dollars, being only a proletarian student. But I want to thank you for the catalogue which you sent me. It is exceedingly intelligent and convenient. I AM EAGER TO KNOW MORE ABOUT THE LITTLE RED LIBRARY which you advertise on the cover."

Everywhere they are EAGER TO KNOW. And from everywhere orders are accompanied by letters of congratulation on the new series of such great propaganda possibilities.

The first issue, No. 1—"Trade Unions in America," by William Z. Foster, James P. Cannon and Earl R. Browder, will prove of great value especially for our left wing militants. Here, with a brief summary of the history of the American trade unions, they will find the structure and program of the Trade Union Educational League—exactly what the militants needed in their trade union work. And for every single party member here is a worth while pocket companion.

The second number, also ready, is No. 2—"Class Struggle vs. Class Collaboration," by Earl R. Browder. There is reason to be enthusiastic about this little red booklet. Here are facts on all the methods of labor bureaucracy to divert the workers from militant struggle. It is a splendid study of the B. and O. plan, insurance schemes and workers' education—valuable material in a nutshell for the busy worker.

A great future awaits the LITTLE RED LIBRARY of which new numbers will soon be announced. Not only to agents and the BUILDERS of the DAILY WORKER and the Communist movement do we pass on the news of the LITTLE RED LIBRARY. To every worker we bring notice of this little red giant that is sure to develop into the biggest thing in all American Communist publications. Seeing is believing, and if you get the first two numbers, you will believe it.

Dinner Pail Epics

by Bill Lloyd

(Federated Press Jingles.)

I SEE the capitalistic fakers what operate as our lawmakers has put the dirks into the bill to take the children from the mill. They passed amendment to hit booze, but for some reason they don't choose to hit the profits of the geezers who live by being children-squeezers.

Them guys, I'll say without a doubt what put the propaganda out to keep the kiddies working hard are listed on the index-card of every pompous organization to help the children of the nation. The Y. M. they got lots of dough; they help Boy Scouts to make 'em go; the Scamp Fire Girls is given much; but the Y. W.'s been in Dutch since it bucked up for women workers, and ain't petted by the shirkers. The Legion was a special pet, till it begged bonus for the vet. And Sunday schools!—say, they get love from all financial powers above.

They love the kids they do, like hell. They say youth should be treated swell. They love 'em if they work and pray, and do not seek a better day. If they ain't asked for work what's new, they just love kids—like hell, they do.

SCHOOL BOARD TO HEAR TAX RAISE TALK TOMORROW

New McAndrew Plan Will Be Discussed

Superintendent of Public Schools William McAndrew has issued a new 68 page document in which he charges cheating and dishonesty in the existing tax laws. In commenting on the tax laws in this document he rings in the following statements:

"Under existing laws there is an enormous leakage in tax revenue which properly should accrue to the schools.

"'Loop' property and larger industrial plants are undervalued in an assessment for taxation. Large amounts are exempted from or not even listed for assessment.

"This cheating on assessment of property for general state and local purposes has reached such a stage that the true value of property in Illinois as determined for taxation is less than one-fifth of the value as determined by the bureau of the census. Personal property in Cook county is scarcely taxed at all."

And after some more gushing about the "dishonesty in scheduling property" and about its being "a scandal and a menace" he winds up with the proposal of increasing the existing tax rate for education purposes.

This document together with his raise in salaries recommendation is now in the hands of the board of education members and will come up for discussion at the board meeting which meets tomorrow afternoon at 2 p. m.

In going into the new salary schedule of increases one finds that teachers in the elementary schools will not only receive no raise in wages during the first five years but will even be paid less than before. Only the seventh year promises a raise of $300 over the year before. The ones to be really benefitted at once by the superintendent's salary schedule are the elementary school principals. The entire schedule in tabulated form is as follows:

ELEMENTARY TEACHERS.	Proposed salaries	Old salaries

Britain's Dangerous Game

Foreign news today is that Great Britain will fight for the admission of Germany to a new alliance to which Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and perhaps Roumania will be signatories.

This is a concession to the French position as it would bind Great Britain to war in defense of the existing territorial arrangements in eastern Europe. Of these the Danzig corridor now controlled by Poland is the most odious to Germany. It alone is bound to be a constant source of trouble and the British dominions will not support London in any war growing out of these sources of friction.

The readiness of the British foreign office to make this concession to France in answer to her refusal to break with her vassal boundary states is evidence of the serious nature of the crisis arising out of the attempt to maintain peace in Europe while at the same time perpetuating the national rivalries aroused and intensified by the Versailles treaty and imperialist ambitions.

The inclusion of England in such an alliance means that she isolates herself from her colonies in the event of another European conflict and that only her navy alone is at the service of her allies. This is undoubtedly a powerful weapon, but without Dominion co-operation even the British navy is not an instrument of world power.

If France cuts loose from Poland and the other border states they will be absorbed either by Germany or Soviet Russia. If she maintains her alliance and England enters the security pact with Germany nothing has been accomplished except to build a bloc of nations whose strength is merely on paper because of the internal conflicts. The anti-Soviet bloc will have been organized, but its main result will have been to bring close enough to claw one another the capitalist nations that compose it.

Great Britain will lose more in South Africa, Australia and Canada than she will gain in Europe. But she must have a breathing spell. She must bring Germany back as a foil for France. She is playing a dangerous game and knows it.

Soviet Russia also knows that the extension of the influence of the workers' and peasants' government in India, Persia and the Far East is forcing Great Britain to stake everything on an European alliance that cannot last.

Send in that new "sub" today!

Feudal Survivals

The employers of the south have developed their own special technique for intimidating workers and especially Negro workers. We are in receipt of a poster prominently displayed in tobacco plants in Florida, signed by the ku klux klan and announcing that "no loafing or strikes will be permitted."

The wages of packers, nailers and cutters are set at $3 per day; strippers and sorters are allowed $1.50 and $1.75.

A correspondent writes that the klan paraded thru a number of towns and fastened these posters to poles and trees.

The only difference between a situation of this kind and chattel slavery is that the workers are not provided for after the seasonal work is finished. They are turned loose to get a living as best they may. The fate of rebels against the bosses and plantation owners is not hard to picture.

This particular incident has a Florida background, but the policy of suppression and intimidation, the methods used to this end, are common to the whole south.

Under such conditions the workers have to fight for the most elemental privileges and are met with the same brutal onslaught that results only from a struggle for state power in more advanced communities.

Feudalism is not dead in the south.

New Strike Wave in Europe

A general strike of railway workers has tied up transportation in Greece. The workers grew tired waiting for the government to deal with their demands for higher wages while the cost of living increased rapidly. The German railway workers are also on strike; Beginning with a strike of freighthandlers, it has spread to almost all classes of railway employes. The British miners are preparing to move for an increase in wages and all over Europe there are signs of a new strike wave.

The yellow officialdom of the European trade unions are no longer able to keep the workers bound to their respective capitalist states. The reception that the world trade unity campaign of the Red International of Labor Unions has been accorded by the workers shows that the decay of the yellow leadership has been rapid since it followed its outright support of counter-revolutionary governments by actual betrayal of the daily struggles of the workers.

A Communist Trial—in Germany

When the German capitalist state is forced into the open in its war on the Communist and the working class as in the trial of 33 Communists which has just ended, its weakness is easily seen.

The trial of these comrades was made an event of international importance. The capitalist press of the world carried scare headlines announcing the discovery of a Communist secret service under Soviet Russian auspices and the most horrible crimes were attributed to these comrades, crimes ranging all the way from secret murder of German officials to the initiation of a typhus plague by the distribution of disease germs.

The prosecution emphasized—before the trial—the immense mass of documentary evidence it had secured and the labor haters of the world prepared for hair-raising disclosures that would arouse the masses to action against the Communist menace.

The result?

Ten of the Communists were acquitted, three were sentenced to nine months imprisonment and the rest were penalized by small fines!

These comrades were guilty of waging war on German capitalism and this is a horrid crime in the eyes of the social democrats and other less contemptible friends of the capitalist state, but the German government could not prove that they were guilty of anything else.

How much more efficient is American capitalism which can get convictions and sentences of three years for members of the Workers (Communist) Party who merely held a convention in Michigan.

The German capitalist state can send eight thousand Communists to jail and keep them there when it hands them over to dictator Von Seeckt, but when it is forced into the light it has to appear before all the world as an institution which the masses do not respect or even fear.

The trial of the 33 Communists and the subsequent verdict has made the German capitalist state the laughing stock of the world.

The German workers understand that the Communist Party does not fight with typhus germs but with a program and plan of organization that the whole capitalist class fears.

Unemployment

Great Britain heads the list of nations with her unemployed army, according to Moody's Investors' Foreign Service, 26 of each 1,000 of her population being unemployed. Austria comes next with 20 per 1,000, and the United States is third with 2,100,000 unemployed or 19.09 per 1,000 of the population. Austria has had a startling increase of unemployment, due to her financial collapse since the figures were compiled and the proportion is now probably about 30 per thousand.

In Germany out of every 1,000 inhabitants more than seven were out of work at the beginning of the year. Denmark leads the Scandinavian kingdoms with a rate of over eight per 1,000, while Sweden's unemployed number less than three per 1,000. The relatively low figures reported by Russia are of interest. In the western European countries, Belgium makes the best showing with a rate of 2.39 per cent, as compared with 9.26 per cent in the Netherlands.

The following table shows the number of unemployed in the principal countries at the beginning of 1925, together with the population:

	Estimated population.	Number of unemployed	Rate per 1,000 of pop.
Austria	6,500,000	130,000	20.00
Australia	5,800,000	32,708	5.64
Belgium	7,700,000	18,444	2.39
Canada	8,800,000	10,540	1.20
Czechoslvakia	13,600,000	73,006	5.37
Denmark	3,300,000	27,518	8.34
Finland	3,400,000	1,803	.53
France	39,200,000	11,863	.30
Germany	59,900,000	436,450	7.29
Great Britain	44,700,000	1,158,000	25.91
Hungary	8,000,000	26,020	3.25
Italy	40,000,000	134,719	3.36
Netherlands	7,100,000	65,740	9.26
Norway	2,700,000	20,500	7.60
Poland	27,200,000	155,246	5.71
Russia	132,000,000	1,300,000	9.85
Sweden	6,000,000	17,344	2.89
Switzerland	3,900,000	9,451	2.42
United States	110,000,000	2,100,000	19.09

The effect of low wages and the reduction of living standards in Germany, Poland and the eastern European countries upon western nations like England and the United States is clearly apparent from these figures. Unemployment is one method of reducing wages and standards of the workers and its existence in a country so naturally wealthy as the United States shows that we cannot escape the evils that follow in the train of capitalism, because of immense natural resources.

The 2,100,000 unemployed in the United States at present can be taken as the absolute minimum to which the jobless will decrease.

The ranks of the unemployed are recruited steadily from the workers displaced by improved production methods, standardization and specialization. It increases in "good times" when industry is working almost to capacity. In times of industrial depression it will grow to millions almost overnight.

Unemployment in the United States is a permanent fixture. We can paraphrase the famous saying of the southern colonel: "There is no such thing as 'good times.' Some times are worse than others."

BELLAIRE, OHIO, COAL DIGGERS IN CONVENTION

Reactionaries Raise More Smoke Screens

left-wing candidate, received 2,751. The counting, of course, was controlled by the reactionaries and their method of tallying can be judged by the fact that one local union with 6 members cast 118 votes.

Atmosphere Tense

Naturally the atmosphere surrounding the convention is tense. The basis of the attack upon the left wing is contained in a circular issued by the sub-district officials in which they accuse the progressive miners of desiring to form "an alliance with an organization now operating non-union mines in West Virginia." This is their argument against that plank in the program of the progressive miners which calls for an alliance between the railroad workers and the miners.

Warren S. Stone and his administration, with a few members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, owns and runs the Coal River Colliery upon an "open shop" basis. And because of this Frank Ledvinka, John Cinque, and W. T. Roberts place all of the rank and file of the 16 standard railroad brotherhoods on the basis of scabs and strike breakers and urge that the miners do not form an alliance with them.

Fakers Dig Up Fake Issues

In the circular issued by these bureaucrats they accused the progressives of trying to get into office thru using the name of Dominick Venturato, now serving time, for trade union activity, in the penitentiary at Columbus, Ohio. These are the fake issues raise in order to hide their own short-comings and to obscure the real issues that now confront the miners for which they have no proposal except that of class collaboration.

They ask why did not the progressive miners endorse Dominick Venturato for executive board of the sub-district. They conveniently forget that in the last election the progressive miners nominated Venturato and that this same yellow socialist, Ledvinka, pleaded with the progressive miners to withdraw this nomination on the grounds that it would hurt rather than help Venturato, even going so far as to produce a document, supposed to be signed by Venturato, withdrawing himself from the ballot.

Radicals Defended Prisoners

Of the 13 prisoners involved in this case, only Venturato remains in jail, and very little has been done in his interest since the Miners' Defender and the defense committee were liquidated at the instigation of these "election supporters" of Venturato. They accuse the progressive miners of hurting the Venturato case by nominating him as one of their candidates in the election of 1922 and now they accuse this same group of hurting Venturato by not nominating him in 1924. It is a case of being damned if you do, and damned if you don't The progressive miners only nominated two instead of three for the executive board. They did not place any candidate against Venturato but supported him in the election. The votes he received were the progressive votes. The one who defeated him were the Ledvinka-Lewis supporters.

This case will be one of the major issues in the convention. The progressives will fight for the re-establishment of the Venturato defense comittee and will demand that this committee be formed by representatives from each local union; that a publicity campaign be conducted and pressure brought to bear upon the powers that be so that the gates of the prison will be thrown open and Venturato set free.

Many other issues will come up of vital importance, such as the present attempt on the part of the coal operators to inaugurate another wage cut which is the beginning of a new "open shop" drive in the coal industry. Organize the unorganized, fight against wage cuts, nationalization of mines and railroads, alliance with the railroad workers, unemployment insurance, abolishment of the appointive power, are the real issues before the convention and all the camouflage set up by Ledvinka will not deter the militant rank and file miners of Sub-District 5, of Dist. 6, from uniting on the class struggle program presented by the progressive miners.

Oppression Aid to World Solidarity

ers and peasants, which this law is to suppress by savage prison sentences, are those without which workers are condemned to slavery.

The Japanese capitalists, in article 10, of the proposed law, go so far as to bring under its provisions acts of workers in any other country that can be interpeted as affecting Japanese capitalism. In other words, the working class activities of Japanese immigrants in other countries are to be punished if the workers can be arrested and returned to Japan. This section reads as follows:

> "Article 10—This law furthermore applies to those persons who commit the above mentioned crimes even outside the limits of the enforcement of this law."

The Japanese workers and peasants are more conscious of their power and place in the international class struggle than ever before. Since the entry of Japan into the world war the Japanese labor and revolutionary movements have made more progress than in the whole previous period.

The rise of Japanese capitalism has brought into being a great propertyless working class. The Eta, those former outcasts, three million strong, who do the hardest and most unpleasant tasks for the Japanese rulers, are awakening to the new spirit abroad in the world labor movement since the Russian revolution. Strikes and demonstrations against militarism and imperialism have struck terror to the hearts of the Japanese rulers. Japanese capitalism is breaking up. More than 3,000,000 workers are jobless. War is the only solution the Japanese rulers have to offer.

The pressure of the Japanese masses forced the recognition of the workers' and peasants' government of Russia and the rulers know that war on Soviet Russia is impossible.

The rulers of Japan and the United States, greedy for more power and wealth, quarrel with and threaten each other; they would have the workers of Japan and the United States butcher one another to decide which ruling class shall rob the workers and peasants of China and the Far East.

To fool the American working class into believeing that its enemy is the Japanese workers and peasants, and not the American capitalist class, the American rulers have passed a law excluding Japanese workers and peasants from the United States.

The Workers (Communist) Party of America declares that this law does not express the sentiment of the masses of American workers but only of their rulers and betrayers—the capitalists, the capitalist tools in the labor unions and the middle class retainers of capitalism.

The American capitalist class oppresses nad robs the American workers just as the Japanese ruling class oppresses and robs the Japanese workers and peasants.

In the Philippines, Haiti, Santo Domingo, in Hawaii and Guam, in Cuba and Mexico, in South America and China, American imperialism, either outright thru military force, or thru native agents bribed to betray their countrymen and their class, rules and robs.

The Japanese rulers follow the same path in Korea where fifteen million workers and peasants groan under the heel of Japanese imperialism. In China the Japanese ruling class vies with Great Britain, France and the United States for power over the people and natural resources—it recruits the Japanese workers and peasants to fight and die for profits in which they have no share but which only add, like all the loot of imperialism, to the strength of the hangmen of the labor and revolutionary movements.

The Workers (Communist) Party declares that the proposed anti-sedition law of the Japanese rulers is proof of their fear of the growing power of the Japanese workers and peasants—proof that capitalism is the same the world over, the same in the United States as in Japan.

The Workers (Communist) Party of America, while 32 of its most active members are facing long prison sentences because of their devotion to the revolutionary working class movement, declares its solidarity with the Japanese workers and peasants. It denounces the tyrannical acts of its own rulers and those of Japan in categorical terms.

It calls for a united front of the working class of both nations, under the leadership of the Communist International, against American, French, British and Japanese imperialism.

Across the Pacific Ocean, the Workers (Communist) Party of America, in the name of the revolutionary workers of the United States, extends its hand to the Japanese workers and peasants in a warm grip of fraternity. It pledges itself to fight against American imperialism and war.

It asks the workers and peasants of Japan to unite in the world struggle against the bloody rule of world capitalism with the workers and peasants of all lands under the banner of the Communist International.

It calls the attention of the Japanese working class to the splendid struggle and glorious victory of the workers and peasants of Russia over the czar, Russian and world capitalism.

Long Live Soviet Russia!

Long Live the Social Revolution in Japan!

Long Live the United Front of the Workers and Peasants of America and Japan!

Long Live the Communist International—the Leader of the World Revolution!

ulous sums of money they are getting, tells them about the pretty airplanes in which they whiz to work, they point to the $10,000 a year that their brother Bill draws from the steel trust and the other emoluments which a grateful ruling class bestows on so loyal and non-fractious a servant.

SOMETIMES the pressmen go on strike. It is true that their president breaks it before it has much of a chance to develop, but one would imagine that Mr. Berry would be saved from the necessity of leaving his vast industrial enterprises in Alabama in order to pull off a strike-breaking job in New York since the most promising heir to the British throne, the niftiest toe glider and the champion whiskey magician in Great Britain has a paid-up card in the Pressmen's Union. Only a few days ago, David P. sent his check for $7.00 representing two months' dues to the New York local of which he is a member. The French Marshal Foch is also a member of a union, tho not of the butchers'. Still we have strikes and threats of strikes.

IT appears that the attempt to get the labor lion lying down with the capitalist lamb has not been a pronounced success for the lamb. Despite the efforts of the labor lieutenants of capitalism the old quarrel between the exploited and the exploiter over the division of the fruits of labor's efforts goes on and nothing can stop it short of the elimination of the exploiter.

RAMSAY MACDONALD is in danger of losing his leadership of the parliamentary labor party. This was inevitable considering his conduct during his premiership and since. Many revolutionists gave MacDonald credit for honesty while disagreeing vigorously with his ideas. But he has shown himself to be one of the most despicable grafters that ever feathered his own nest at the expense of the working class. But he might continue to hold power had he only sinned in making his hay while the sun shone. Crooks are tolerated even in the labor movement provided they have unusual genius as politicians. This MacDonald did not have.

HE blundered badly in handling the "Zinoviev" fake letter. His incompetency cost the labor party dear. Philip Snowden, another low-lived faker, is jealous of MacDonald's position. So is J. H. Thomas, who is, if such a thing is possible, the most hard-boiled crook in the pack. The left wing, in the labor party, such as it is, is out to wrest the leadership from MacDonald and Co. The most talked-of man for the position is John Wheatley from the Clyde. Wheatley, is reputed to be radical. But while he is a great improvement on MacDonald and the other traitors of the same ilk, he will never lead the British working class against the citadels of capitalism. He is a Roman catholic, for one thing, which is proof sufficient that he is not a revolutionist, at least not the kind that will lead the masses in the final struggle.

SMALL tho it is comparatively, the Communist Party of Great Britain is the only organization that can be expected to take the lead in consigning the British ruling class to the ash can of history. The situation in England is developing rapidly. There is a great breaking away of the masses from the old leadership and while the middle-of-the-road men who are now assumuing a more dominant role, will only go part of the way, it can be said that the masses are on the move and moving in a forward direction.

Pennsylvania Buys 'Em Up

EVANSILLE, Ind., March 9.—The Pennsylvania railroad has under consideration the purchase of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois, the Lehigh Valley and Lehigh and New England railroad lines, according to information received here today from the Pennsylvania lines general offices. ELEMENTARY MARXIAN ECONOMICS

QUESTIONS ON CHAPTERS 14, 15, and 16.

Class in Elementary Marxian Economics, Wednesday March 11, 8:15 p. m., 2613 Hirsch Blvd.

1. Give a brief summary of the transition period from feudalism to the beginnings of capitalism.

2. What were the principal forces back of this great change?

3. Explain briefly how this transition period furnished simultaneously

(a) The original, or as Marx calls it, "primitive" accumulation, the origin of capital, as such.

(b) The "free" laborers for the rising industries;

(c) A source of raw material, and

(d) A market for the commodities produced by this new system of industry.

4. Tell of the moral and physical effects of this transition period upon the masses of the population.

5. What are the two steps from individual hand production, to the present highly developed, monopolistic system of production? Explain fully.

6. What class is expropriated by each of these steps, and by whom?

7. What is the most important function of a medium of exchange, such as gold? Explain how it is only by virtue of this function that it becomes money.

8. Name one other function of money.

9. Does gold make other commodities measureable? Explain. What element is contained in all commodities, including gold, the medium of exchange between all of them?

10. What is the relation between the circulation of money and that of commodities? Explain with special reference to cause and effect.

AMERICAN progressives have an excellent opportunity to come to the front and defend a poor helpless progressive millionaire against the conspiracy of his reactionary foes to separate him from $10,000,000 thru pure spite. This is the kind of war the progressives revel in. The persecuted pauper is Senator Cousens of Detroit who does not like Andy Mellon, whiskey secretary of the treasury, and therefore takes great pleasure in threatening to investigate the internal revenue bureau.

COUZENS is one of the newly rich, so perhaps his noble character has not yet become "corrupted" by great wealth. It is not colossal wealth in the control of one person that our progressives object so much to, but the corrupting influence of money. Of course some invulnerable mortals escape the corrosion. What nonsense! The millions that Couzens owns thru his happy investment in Ford flivvers is at work, working thousands of wage slaves, who are lucky to get a bare existence while Couzens slams his chest and assumes the role of martyr while he dodges a ten million dollar tax.

THE remaining socialists in the United States are brandishing their war clubs like movie Indians and hurling their knives at imaginary bourgeois enemies. History teems with instances of the reformed roue, and he is usually a despicable creature. The wine bibbler who looks for the last time "thru glasses darkly" and the safe cracker who becomes a church deacon, only perhaps to rob the collection box, when the flock is not looking, are characters that make going to the movies unpopular with people of artistic temperaments.

THE socialist party has reformed. Its three year debauch, during which it visited every political bawdy house in the United States and sampled every concoction that the declassed bourgeois bootleggers offered to the prodigal son, is at an end and it returns to its vomit sadder if not [illegible] he wiser too, but wisdom [illegible] comes too late. The socialist party returns only to find nobody home. Long, discolored leaves of grass are growing thru the chinks in the door. Crows are caw-cawing in the rafters.

IT is sad indeed, but this is a cruel world and there is very little pity to lavish on those who allow themselves to be caught under the steam roller of progress. The only socialist weekly, in the United States, the only socialist weekly, officially owned and controlled by the Jewish Daily Forward, is now stabbing the old bourgeois enemy with a paper mache knife while it fills the air with raucous sound, in denouncing the perfidy of the liberals with whom it indulged in political sin for three eventful years. Hard indeed is the way of the transgressor.

WHILE the socialist party is dragging its gray hairs in sorrow to the grave, the Workers (Communist) Party is as full of life as a kitten and as pugnacious as a young bull pup. Some old veterans of the socialist movement cannot help admiring it from a ditsance tho they shirk association with it. When the world war

RUHR MINERS KILLED IN BLAST, WROTE "LET WORKERS' FIGHT GO ON"

BERLIN, Germany, March 10.—The mine disaster which killed 141 miners at Dortmund, in the Ruhr, was due to the mad race for profits. The miners who were killed realized this.

Written in chalk on the black coal face where the miners were entombed, the rescuers found the following message: "WE ARE LOST. FIGHT FOR BETTER CONDITIONS. AVENGE US ON THE CAPITALISTS, OUR MURDERERS."

Below the message, several miners were found lying dead, choked by gas. French and British miners are sending aid to the families of the dead miners.

DAWES FAMILY HELPED HATCH TEAPOT BRIBERY

Charley's Brother in Heart of Oil Scandal

(Special to the Daily Worker)

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Mar. 10.—That the family of Vice President Charles G. Dawes was in the heart of the successful Teapot Dome plot to steal valuable oil leases from the United States government by means of bribery of the highest U. S. officials, was disclosed at the government's court effort here to annul the illegal leases.

At the same time it was disclosed that the government attorneys, Atlee Pomerene and Owen Roberts, are shielding the government officials involved, and endeavoring to make Albert Fall, ex-secretary of the interior, the sole goat.

Pomerene disclosed that Beman Dawes, president of the Pure Oil company, attended a conference at the Vanderbilt Hotel, in November 1921 at which R. W. Stewart, president of the Standard Oil company of Indiana, and other members of the oil trust were present, and at which the plot to bribe government officials was hatched.

The others present at the meeting were A. E. Humphreys, president of the Mexia Oil company of Texas, Harry Sinclair and former United States Senator Charles Thomas of Colorado.

Pomerene did not disclose, however, that the Mexia Oil company which Humpreys represented, is controlled by the Pure Oil company of which Dawes is president, the Pure Oil company directly holding 25 per cent of the Mexia Oil company's stock.

Pomerene attempted to shield Dawes by stating he was "at the meeting in the proper capacity as seller and purchaser of crude oil." However, it appears that the vice president's brother took an active part in the Teapot Dome plot. It was decided at the meeting to let Mr. Osler, head of the Continental Trading company of Canada, which had just been organized for the purpose, the contract for the purchase of 33,000,000 barrels of the Dawes-Humphreys Mexia holdings. The oil was sold at the price of $1.50 per barrel, and this contract was immediately turned over to the Standard Oil-Sinclair Oil interests for $1.75 per barrel. The $2,000,000 profits resulting from this juggling were invested in liberty bonds, the entire amount to be used as a fund to bribe the Harding-Coolidge official family. Dawes was a party to this deal, and acted as a member of the oil trust.

Pomerene declared that $196,000 of this bribery fund had been traced to "Albert Fall and his associates." The whereabouts of the rest of the bribery money is still a mystery.

Stewart, Osler, O'Neill, Blackmer and other Standard Oil witnesses have fled the country and will not be present at the trial. Dawes has not been called as a witness. Immediately after the Continental Trading company had served its purpose is was dissolved.

Vice President Charles E. Dawes is listed in Who's Who as "financier," "Interested in the gas business at Evanston, Illinois, La Grosse, Wis., Seattle, Wash., etc." Another brother Rufus Dawes, is listed in Who's Who as "business man," "business life has been spent in organizing and managing gas and electric companies. Director, Union Gas and Electric company, Metropolitan Gas and Electric company, Central Indiana Gas company, Mobile, Ala. Gas and Electric company, Southwestern Gas and Electric company, Seattle Wash. Lighting company, Pulaski Gas Light company, Jackson County Light and Power company, president board of education at Evanston."

The Pure Oil company, of which Beman Dawes is president, controls the entire gas distributing business of Columbus, Dayton, Springfield, Ohio and has extensive oil, gas and electric holdings in every section of the country.

BOSSES BEHIND MAYOR DEVER'S TRACTION STEAL

The fact that the business and financial interest are the backers of Mayor Dever's traction ordinance was disclosed with the announcement that funds for Dever's campaign to turn the traction lines over to the bankers are being provided by business interests.

The "All-Chicago Council," which is pushing the ordinance, is directed by twenty men, every one of whom represents a large business concern, corporation, or business association.

The directors include representatives of the kiwanis club, the manufacturers' association, and the chamber of commerce.

CARPENTERS IN LOCAL 181 TO PICK NEW HEAD

Present Incumbent Is Unable to Function

When the second vice-president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners came to Chicago to rub some soothing ointment into the wounds of Local 181, three things happened that he did not have on his menu.

First, a special meeting was authorized to elect a new president of the local since the present acting-president was not able to function. The election will be held two weeks from last Monday night.

To Insure Exact Information

Secondly—Several letters were read from local unions asking information about the expulsion of the five members. A motion was made that the secretary Inar Larson should reply to the communications, but the members not being over-confident in the integrity of Larson, amended the motion so that Larson must read his replies to the local before they are forwarded.

Thirdly—A motion was passed almost unanimously demanding that the general office order a new trial for the illegally expelled members or that the charges against them be dropped and they be restored to full membership rights in the organization.

As the expelled members had agreed with the committee elected by a previous meeting to look into the case, to stay away from last Monday night's meeting, they were not present, but appeared at Locals 80 and 416 and were given a splendid reception when they related the story of their expulsion.

Further developments in the big struggle between the militant carpenters and the reactionaries will be told in future issues.

POLICE EJECT AUDIENCE THAT CHEERS SOVIETS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, March 10.—Police broke up a meeting of 1,500 workers here after they had cheered for Soviet Russia, and ejected the entire audience into the street.

The meeting was presided over by Norman Hapgood, who works for William Randolph Hearst, as editor of Hearst's magazine. A letter was read from Arturo Giovannitti, which declared there was no freedom in the United States, and praising the Soviet government.

Roger Baldwin, head of the Civil Liberties Union, arose and declared there was no freedom of speech in Soviet Russia. The audience then became angry, and cheered for Soviet Russia, whereupon the police broke up the meeting, which was said to have been called under the auspices of the International Committee for Political Prisoners.

One version of the meeting was that the police broke up the meeting because of the demonstration for Soviet Russia, and then circulated false reports of a difference of opinion in order to justify their action.

COAL MINERS RUN RADICALS FOR ELECTION

Cappellini and Brennan Making Sham Fight

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

PLAIN, Pa., March 10.—The Progressive Miners' Committee has put up a slate against the Punch and Judy show that John L. Lewis is presenting to the membership of District 1, of the United Mine Workers of America in the district elections. Against Cappellini and Brennan, two fakers who happen to be in a quarrel over a division of the spoils, the progressives have nominated Bernard Zaleska, of Local 838, Nanticoke, Pa., for district president. The candidate for vice-president is John Witcunas, Local 846, Nanticoke, Philip Sabatelli, Local 306, Old Forge, Pa., is candidate for secretary-treasurer.

The local capitalist papers, particularly the Times-Leader, are making furious attacks on the progressive candidates. They are using the same kind of language that Lewis has hurled at the radicals time without number.

The fakers are trying to liquidate the grievance committees which were established by Cappellini before he turned renegade. All local unions have received communications from the district executive board commanding the immediate dissolution of these bodies. Many local unions are non-concurring in the action of the district executive board.

There are seven candidates in the field for the district presidency. The only serious contender on the reactionary slate outside of Brennan and

OAKLAND JOBLESS LEARN THEY HAVE ONE REAL LEADER

Workers Party Only One Appearing

OAKLAND, Cal., Mar. 10.—Last Sunday, the unemployed of Oakland met again after having previously been turned down by the mayor, or rather the city council, in their demands for work at union wages, or maintenance. After a rousing meeting, addressed by several representatives of organized labor (A. F. of L.) and Mother Bloor, it was decided to meet this morning at 11 o'clock at the Oakland city hall and present their grievances again. A leaflet was issued Tuesday afternoon calling on the jobless to turn out.

Out of more than 5,000 registered unemployed in Oakland more than 600 showed up Wednesday morning at the city hall, but none of the A. F. of L. "leaders" of the unemployed put in an appearance, and the organized movement—what little that has been accomplished, was in great danger of falling to pieces, just to the liking of the parasites who feel the whole movement to be extremely annoying, and only too glad to be able to wash their hands of the whole mess. But it was not to be pushed aside so easily. It was a way of hanging on.

The Workers (Communist) Party, represented by Mother Bloor, was the speaker. She drew a large crowd and apparently took the breath away from the city officials. All seemed to be quite taken by surprise, as well, by the audacity of anyone daring to speak publicly for labor from the steps of our very own beautiful city hall.

She was not molested and finished her address sooner than expected due to the street becoming rather crowded and blocked.

The unemployed learned one thing, at least, from their brief experience, and that is that they can rely on the Workers (Communist) Party not to lead them into a blind alley and then desert them.

Another meeting will be called Sunday when it is hoped their brief experiences with "our" city officials will develop into some further action for relief.

School Budget Does Not Provide Salary Raise for Teachers

The proposed increase in teachers salaries was not included in the budget prepared by Superintendent of Schools McAndrew and presented to the board of education yesterday. The budget totals $65,560,266.25 to meet expenditures on schools during the coming year.

The total deficit of the board of education is now $19,140.00.

German Unions Threaten Strike to Aid Railwaymen Against Dawes Slavery

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

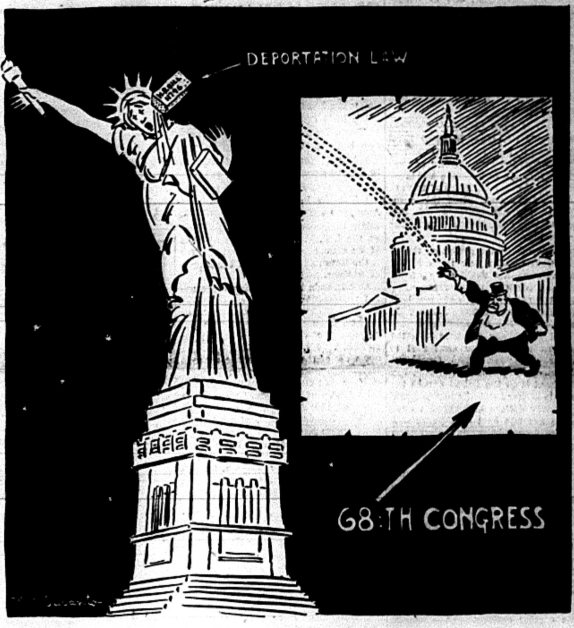
BERLIN, March 10.—Unless the Dawes Plan railway administration ceases its haughty attitude and reaches an agreement with the striking railway workers by Wednesday, the workers of other industries threaten to call a complete general strike.

The unions of other industries have instructed all workres to refuse to work in the strike districts, while the railwaymen will hold a general meeting Wednesday, to determine future action in case the management does not meet their demands by that date.

The railwaymen are extremely angry at the Dawes Plan management raising the salary of the high officials while ignoring the actual workers, who are living below the line of decency and are half-starved all the time.

An idea of the condition of German labor under the Dawes plan of enslavement, may be gathered from the fact that the average weekly wage for a skilled worker in Germany during January was 36 marks and 77 pfennigs, or less than $9. Skilled workers in the steel mills averaged only 35 marks and 52 pfennigs. This accounts for the general response among all workers to support the railway workers.

His Last Service to "Liberty"



CAL'S SENATORS SUPPORT SUGAR TRUST LAWYER

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 10.—The United States senate this afternoon took the almost unprecedented action of rejecting president's cabinet selection, when it voted against the confirmation of Charles B. Warren, of Detroit, to be attorney general.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 10.—Republican senators, in an endeavor to rush thru confirmation of Charles B. Warren, sugar trust lawyer, as attorney general, are attempting to defend Warren's record. Senator Cummins declared Warren "is well equipped to enter the cabinet".

One senator stated that, "Charles B. Warren has acted for years as business agent of the sugar trust", and showed in an earlier speech that Warren is wanted as attorney general in order to halt the exposures of the activity of the sugar trust. Warren has been indicted as a member of the sugar trust and is liable to handle his own case when the sugar trust is further investigated by the department of justice.

Magnus Contests Election

Three senatorial contests, those of Senators Brookhart, Schall and Bratton, are being contested by their opponents in the last election, Daniel Stech, Magnus Johnson, and Holme Bursum.

Senator Couzens, who has made exposures of tax frauds by the copper, steel, aluminum and oil trusts, involving millions of dollars, claims that the ruling of the treasury department that he must pay $10,000,000 additional tax on Ford Motor stock that he sold to Henry Ford in 1919, is "punishment" for his exposures, which involved Secretary Mellon.

Calls "Arms Stores" Bunk

NEW YORK, March 10.—Stories that Germany has segreted large stores of arms and munitions in preparation for another war were called "bunk" today by Lanson B. Houghton, formerly ambassador to Berlin, who arrived here today on the Aquitania for a visit prior to taking up his new duties as United States ambassador to Great Britain.

PORT OF DANZIG KEEPING POLAND ON HOT GRIDDLE

GENEVA, March 10.—What looks like a warning to Poland that she must depend on herself in the future was seen by many political observes here in the editorial in the Ere Nouvelle of Paris, which carries a two column broadside laying down the law to the Polish government.

In the future, declares Premier Herriot's organ, France must look to her own interests first. Of course, it is quite clear that the French capitalists were not throwing millions of francs into Poland merely for the pleasure it gave them to see a conquered bourgeoisie struggling up the ladder of self-determination. Poland was the buffer between Soviet Russia and capitalist Europe and France's military ally. But the buffer no longer buffs.

Poland is anxious over the final determination of the Danzing corridor. This alleyway from Poland to the sea is populated by Germans. They are not altogether pleased with their new masters. Poland threatens to use force to maintain the Danzing free port. The league of nations industriously twiddles its thumbs.

Strong contingents of Polish troops are stationed near the Danzing corridor. They fear the Germans may grab Danzing as the Lithuanians grabbed Vilna.

IRISH PEASANTS FLEEING IN THOUSANDS FROM CROP FAMINE

NEW YORK, March 10.—When the Cunard liner Caronia reached here yesterday, over five hundred Irish peasants stepped off her gangplank. PEAT SUPPLY FAILURE HITS IRISH FISHERS

Arran Islanders Sorely In Need of Fuel

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KILRONAN, Arran Islands — (By Mail)—The failure of the potato crop has not affected the natives of these three islands as badly as the destruction of the peat supply on the Conemara mainland, owing to the heavy floods.

Usually a heavy rainfall does not adversely affect the food supply on the islands, the staple being potatoes and fish. Owing to the limestone formation and the sandy soil the potato crop thrives better in a rainy season than a dry one. What hit the islanders hardest was the failure of the fishing industry.

The standard of living of the Arran Islanders is not high by any means, and when crops are fairly good, the fishing industry prosperous and a plentiful supply of peat available the natives are considerable better off than the townspeople, and in Utopia compared to the slum dwellers of such English cities as Liverpool where thousands of the pauperized Irish laborers from the Orange section of Ireland emigrate to.

Most of the emigration from this section is to the United States, particularly the New England states and San Francisco.

The Main Industry.

Fishing is the main industry here. Usually from two to three thousand barrels of salted mackerel, several thousand barrels of herrings and large quantities of other varieties of fish are available for export. But this year, owing to the depredations of the steam trawlers the entire export was only 200 barrels.

No fuel whatsoever grows on the island. Outside of a few trees in the areas surrounding the houses of the protestant minister and a former justice of the peace, the islands are bare except for briar and furze bushes. In normal times the islanders exchange fish and sometimes potatoes with the Conemara peasants for enuf fuel to last for one year. The Conemara peasants cut the turf in the bog, dry it and haul it to the island across the nine mile strip of Galway bay in hookers. Thirty dollars in English money was the average cost of a years supply of turf or dried peat.

Parasites Have Conveniences.

This year there was no turf and no money with which to buy coal owing to the bad fishing season. There are very few stoves or grates on the island outside of the houses of the parish priest and curate and the homes of the other flunkeys of the government. The hearth in the peasant's little limestone hut with thatched roof is not suited for burning coal, but perfectly alright for a nice blazing turf fire when dried peat is available.

The little steamer which is the only public carrier connecting the inhabitants with the mainland plies between Galway and the islands once a week in winter and twice a week in summer. It ploughs the distance of about thirty miles in three hours. It is one of the toughest bits of sea anywhere around the British isles.

Dangerous Work.

There are no piers at the two smaller islands so the natives board the steamers in their primitive canoes. This is dangerous work in bad weather but these hardy fishermen are accustomed to danger and accidents resulting in drowning are very rare. The canoes may capsize but they never sink.

The islanders were relieved to learn that the Irish Workers' and Peasants' Relief Committee was organized in America to raise funds for relief. There are thousands of people in Boston, Mass.; Portland, Maine; and New York from these islands and the remittances of those exiles help to keep the pot boiling and the fires burning in the desolate islands of Galway bay.

It Was Worth More

BERLIN, March 10.—A pension of only $130 a month is being paid by the government to Frau Ebert, widow of the late president, the Berliner Tageblatt said today, adding: "It is an unglorious page in the history of the republic for the widow of the first president to be getting such ridiculous pay.

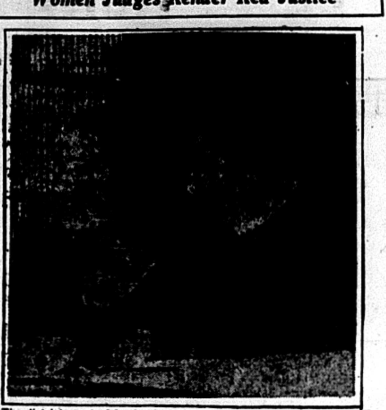
Women Judges Render Red Justice



The district court of justice in Moscow now has two women judges, both of whom were laborers in a factory at the time of the revolution. They entered the law school of Moscow University, were graduated some months ago, and appointed to the court by the Moscow Soviet. Left, Comrade Nasha; right, Comrade Kozchiev, hearing a case.

TRAITOR LEADERS OF AMSTERDAM INTERNATIONAL, IN INTERVIEWS, REVEAL AIMS AGAINST RUSSIA

MOSCOW, February 20.—(By Mail.)—The Pravda, in its leading article under the heading "The Maneuver of the Amsterdam Diplomats," writes:

We have often stated that the declaration of the International Federation of Trade Unions (I. F. T. U.) regarding the Russian trade unions is nothing else but a diplomatic maneuver. The resolution carried by the majority of the Amsterdam executive is formulated in such a manner that it tries tacitly to impose upon Russian labor the rules, usages and customs of the I. F. T. U.

Says the Spider to the Fly.

Russian labor proposed an unconditional conference, upon which the Amsterdam majority politely invites the Russian labor organizations to allow themselves to be swallowed up by the I. F. T. U., who reject all thot of the class struggle and substitute for it the Geneva labor office of the league of nations.

Our friends in the British trade union movement voted against the resolution, but they believe that our view of the resolution is erroneous and that we are the victims of a misunderstanding. Mr. Purcell believes that our view of the matter is not correct. Mr. Swales, likewise, would be glad to hear that our interpretation proved fallacious, and he thinks that our distrust of the Amsterdam right wing has carried us too far, of that right wing which has now to face the hard job of freeing itself from the Barmat admirers.

Unfortunately, our British friends over estimated the Amsterdam right wing, and our scepticism has proved to be well founded.

Amsterdamers Explain What It Means

M. Oudegeest, in an interview with a representative of the Het Volk, interprets the meanings of the resolution in the following manner. First, the resolution is but a continuation of the line laid down by the Vienna conference; secondly, it presupposes negotiations on the basis of the rules and principles of the I. F. T. U.; thirdly, it presupposes that Russian labor should first affiliate and then negotiate about details.

Traitor Leaders of Amsterdam.

M. Stenhuis says the same thing but makes, in addition, some senseless reflections on "liberating Russian labor from the political Soviet organization." According to this, Russian trade unionism should not only accept the Amsterdam rules, but become an appendix of the league of nations by co-operating with the Geneva labor office. Should the Russian trade unions reject this, then they would, according to M. Stenhuis, be guilty of disrupting working class unity. There is no need for any commentary on those utterances. Our worst fears have proved well founded.

British Too Trusting.

It is now clear that our British friends have unconsciously allowed themselves to be misled and that the view of the Pravda regarding the Amsterdam resolution corresponds to the real state of things.

In fact, we have not to do with any misunderstanding, but with a cunning, tho not very clever maneuver of the Amsterdam leaders, who, unlike the German, Dutch and Belgian social democrats, do not openly demand the exclusion of Russian labor, but are putting up barbed wire obstacles in the way of achieving international labor unity.

Another Fairy Tale On Zinoviev.

It is useless to refer to the senseless hopes of those who reckon on the imaginary opposition "between Zinoviev and the Russian trade union movement." This is a stupid myth.

The Russian trade unions and the mighty organizations of British labor desire to see the international working class united—and they will achieve unity in spite of the petty diplomacy, in spite of the petty trickery of some individuals, who are shutting their eyes to the real needs of international labor.

was going strong and the contestants were trying to get Constantine to step in one side or the other, that wise parasite said "When two bull dogs are quarrelling, lap dogs should make themselves scarce." This is no reflection on the old veterans who lack the energy to hitch on to a cyclone, tho perhaps the king of Greece could have selected a more appropriate species of canine.

THE class struggle, all the world over is not exactly what it used to be in the days of the Second International. Then it looked like a friendly match, an "after you Senor" tilt in political civilities between the intellectual aristocracy, who condescended to lead the working class, provided the workers observed the rules of decorum, and the bourgeois leaders who could appreciate an argument without bringing it home to supper and chewing on it along with the corn beef.

THERE were some exceptions of course and let it not be forgotten that essentially the class struggle was the same as it is now, with tremendous strikes, lockouts, military suppressions of strikes injunctions and wars. But the leadership of the world revolutionary movement is unquestionably different. There was no general agreement as to how power should be wrested from the bourgeoisie. The leaders were aiming at the cushions of state. All but the few exceptions. And it is under the leadership of those exceptions that a mighty movement is being builded today, a movement conscious of its mission.

A Workers School in Chicago may seem an inconsequential matter but it is because the Workers Party of America is part of that great world movement under the leadership of the Communist International that scores of militants, fresh from the mines and the workshops are coming to Chicago next week to study the basic principles of Communism, and receive instructions from competent teachers on how to bring the principles of Communism to the masses. The Workers (Communist) Party has no time to waste on philosophical windmill tilting or chasing elusive question marks. Life is too urgent nowadays for that. We are living in a period of world history that marks the passing of a social order and the birth of a new one.

THE Workers (Communist) Party is not alone teaching Communism but it is training the Communist army that will in turn train and organize the workers for the task of their own deliverance. The workers school which will open here next week is a step of great significance. It means that the desultory seeking after knowledge for the sake of knowledge, which was so typical of old time socialist parties is taboo. Communists teach and learn with a purpose.

INTERNATIONAL RED AID URGES WORKERS' FIGHT

Calls for Battle for Class War Victims

the victims of the class war in capitalist lands. The letter addressed to Roger Baldwin, temporary chairman, is as follows:

Letter to Baldwin.

Dear Mr. Baldwin: In you letter of December 13, 1924, to the International Workers' Aid you say the following:

"A group here in New York is undertaking to raise relief for political prisoners abroad. It includes political prisoners in Russia as well as in other countries. We want to relate our work to that which you are doing and we want to ask you to designate one or more representatives of the International Workers' Aid who would be helpful as a member of the committee."

Your proposal as it stands is totally unacceptable to us. We cannot for one moment place on one level and treat in the same manner the counter-revolutionaries and enemies of the working class imprisoned in Soviet Russia with the brave and courageous fighters for the working class imprisoned by the capitalist governments. Political prisoners of the Soviet government are in jail for the dastardly crime of helping international reaction to obstruct and overthrow the rule of the workers and peasants. While the political prisoners of the capitalist countries are in jail as a rule, for loyalty and devotion to the working class and to the oppressed masses generally.

To conclude about the political prisoners in Russia we wish to draw your attention to the "open letter to the Second International," addressed by the Executive Committee of the International Red Aid containing the following proposal:

"1. That the I. R. A. and the Second International undertake, in accordance with a preliminary mutual agreement, to alleviate the hardships of the victims of civil war, namely:

"(a) The I. R. A. will do its utmost to induce the government of the U. S. S. R. to exchange persons incarcerated in that country not because they have hesitated to employ any kind of means and methods to rob the workers' and peasants' population of its revolutionary achievements, for the captives of capitalism lingering in the prisons of bourgeois states, on account of their fight against the capitalist regime of these countries.

"(2) At the same time the Second International and the socialist parties affiliated to it are to use their influence over the government of bourgeois states to induce them to open wide the doors of political prisons and to release the fighters of the revolution in exchange for the counter-revolutionaries imprisoned in the U. S. S. R., whom the Second International has always championed.

"(2) If the Second International agrees to this proposal of ours, the I. R. A. suggests that to prepare this exchange of prisoners the Second International and the I. R. A. should assist each other as regards mutual information about the conditions in which the victims of the present class war thruout the world have to live. An impartial picture of the existing situation could be then presented to the world on the basis of the material collected by both organizations."

As far as we know the Second International never answered the proposal. This to us, is additional proof that the campaign carried on by the Second International for the release of the political prisoners in Soviet Russia is in reality a campaign to undermine the rule of the workers and peasants in favor of international imperialism.

The task of our organization which is the American Section of the International Red Aid is to assist the victims of capitalist reaction thus helping the workers against the capialists. If you and your organizations are willing to engage in securing relief for the victims of capitalist reaction we shall submit to you a concrete proposal for such a campaign selecting one or more capitalist countries (Esthonia, Germany or Poland) where help is now most necessary.

Fraternally yours,
INTERNATIONAL WORKERS' AID,
Rose Karsner, national secretary.

Red Reichstag Members Expose Ebert's Treachery

BERLIN, Germany, March 10.—Wilhelm Marx has been re-elected premier of Prussia by a slim majority. Marx resigned last month after failing to gain a vote of confidence.

The Communists in the German reichstag spoke against saddling the state with the expenses of the dead president Ebert's elaborate funeral. Comrade Remmele contrasted Ebert's funeral, when only the bourgeois mourned his death with the funeral of Nicolai Lenin, leader of the Soviet government.

Remmele told how millions of workers and peasants mourned Lenin's death, because they understood that Lenin represented the workers, whereas Ebert betrayed the workers and enlisted with their oppressors.

March Days Are Here; They Toppled Czarism Thruout All of Russia

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, the policeman's club, protector of all things capitalist, swings a little more threateningly with the coming of spring.

Few among the great army of police know that March is the anniversary month of the Paris Commune, when the workers of France became restless on a large scale, years ago. But they know that this is the month when workers come out of their hovels for a bit of sunshine; when whole families of the working class prove again that the public parks are not for the poor.

• • • •

In Chicago, annually, about this time the hordes of unemployed job hunters hunt a comfortable spot on the grass in Grant Park, on the lake front, to grab a wink of sleep before renewing their search. It is their "lodging." But the sting of the policeman's club on the soles of their shoes, soon awakens them to realities. They are kept on "the move," because the plutocratic guests, of the exclusive hotels opposite on Michigan Boulevard, object to the sight of them.

• • • •

This situation has its counterpart in every American city. It reaches some of its most oppressive phases, for instance, in the 52 arrests made last Sunday, in aristocratic Central Park in New York City, bordered on all sides by the palaces and the apartment houses of the great and near rich. Every spring brings these arrests. The summer finds the "terror" victorious and rampant. The 52 arrests, mostly of the heads of working class families, were for such offences, as seriously reported in the New York World, or you wouldn't believe it, as "stepping on the grass, scattering waste paper and holding picnics in forbidden spots." The confession is made that most of the arrests were on the upper, less exclusive end of the park, the "romping ground of many of the foreign born who are unaware of the park rules." But under capitalist rule, in free America, "ignorance of the law excuses no one," and the working class family, in addition to having its hard-bought Sunday outing spoiled, must see the father lose a day's wage as he appears in Yorkville Police Court, the following day, perhaps to pay a brutal fine levied by a Bolshevik-hating judge who sees Moscow mirrored in every alien face.

W. A. Clark, the copper multi-millionaire, has just died, so he will not be troubled longer in his Fifth Avenue castle by workers in Central Park; but Elbert H. Gary, head of the United States Steel Trust, with a multitude like him, still live about the park and they must not be disturbed by the sight of toil on a holiday; "most revolting."

• • • •

All this is merely symptomatic of the American czarist system.

American capitalism fails to read its own doom in the fact that eight years ago, today, the workers had gone on strike in Petrograd, now Leningrad; that they had elected their Council of Workers' Delegates; that the Great Russian Revolution, that was to reach its crowning victory with the Bolshevik triumph in November was on; that the czar was gone.

Twelve years before, 1905, the Russian workers had attempted to seize power. But Bloody Sunday was their lot. Their heroic efforts came to naught temporarily; they were drowned in the blood of the working class. But the year 1917 was no "Bloody Sunday." It was the czar's turn to fail. It was the hour of the workers' victory.

• • • •

These March days see repeated insults heaped upon the workers in the United States by their capitalist masters. "Stepping on the grass" is a crime in New York's Central Park; just as resisting wage cuts is criminal in the New England textile mills; the organization of the coal miners is outlawed in West Virginia, Kentucky and elsewhere; just as it is a serious offense to be out of work in "The South," where migrant labor, put under arrest, is sent in convict gangs to the turpentine and lumber camps.

• • • •

But even the working class of the United States will reach its day of victory; its glorious March days of triumph. Now is the time for all workers to prepare, thru getting acquainted with the Communist message of deliverance; thru joining the Workers (Communist) Party; thru struggling under Communist leadership in the unions, among the unorganized, the poor farmers, wherever there is an opportunity to awaken the downtrodden for the last battle of the class war. The March days are here.

RED AID DEFIES GLASGOW POLICE AT BIG MEETING

2,000 Workers Send Note to German Reds

GLASGOW, Scotland, March 10.—The International Class War Prisoners' Aid held a demonstration in St. Andrew's hall here, at which over two thousand workers passed a resolution protesting against the persecution of the Communists of Germany, and denouncing the mock trial of the Communists in Liepsig.

The Glasgow magistrates, on hearing of the meeting, refused permission for the holding of the demonstration and ordered it surpressed by the police. The Workers' Aid, however, held a meeting in defiance of the magistrates. The Trades Council, enraged at the magistrates attempt to disrupt the meeting, took an active part in the proceedings.

The president of the Trades Council McNeil, acted as chairman of the meeting. Addresses were made by Jim Larkin, Helen Crawford and an Indian speaker. A resolution was passed condemning the action of the magistrates in ordering the meeting to be abandoned. Many police were present, both inside and outside the hall, but the demonstration was allowed to continue.

A message of solidarity with the German workers and Communist was ordered sent to Germany immediately.

SECTION OF THE TRADE UNION EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE

NOVA SCOTIA MINERS PULL OUT PUMPMEN

In Finish Fight with Brutal Besco

SYDNEY, Nova Scotia.—Desperate and determined to end the unlimited oppression of the British Empire Steel corporation (Besco), which has practically locked out the miners of District 26, the Nova Scotia miners flung down the gauntlet of a one hundred per cent strike last Friday night, which means that the maintenance and pump men, always allowed during ordinary strikes to remain and keep the mine from flooding and in shape for work, are also called out.

Maintenance men abandoned the pumps and took away all tools and draft animals. This has forced the company officials to try their hand at manning the pumps in an effort to prevent flooding and permanent destruction of the mines.

This being but a futile effort, the corporation let it be known that it will permit some of the mines to be destroyed, rather than allow the miners to win the strike.

The walkout was made in perfect discipline. Union leaders, acting as if they were empowered by law, resolutely closed down all "blind pigs."

The strike arose over the refusal of the miners to accept a wage cut agreement, which refusal was followed by a practical lockout in several collieries, combined with a stoppage of credit at the company stores, all in an effort to bring the miners to the properly humble frame of mind to force them to agree to the wage cut agreement rather than see their wives and families starving.

WAGES AND JOBS GO DOWNWARD IN JANUARY DECLINE

Average Wage Is Now $25.46 Weekly

Why workers and farmers can't buy back the full product of their labor is shown in the U. S. department of labor employment report for January, 1925. In spite of a gain of nearly 1 per cent in factory employment compared with December the number of jobs is still 5 per cent of a year ago and most of the heavy decreases appear among the manufacturers of goods for the average consumer.

The total disbursed in wages is running more than $12,000,000 a week short of last January, meaning a further decrease in demand.

The only section of the country to report a gain compared with last year is the west south central, probably reflecting the drift of industry to the cheaper labor regions of the south. On the Pacific coast and in the east nort central states the decline in employment measured more than 7 per cent.

Approximately 75 per cent of the industries covered by the report showed losses in employment. In 18, over 7 per cent of the employes lost their jobs. Among the significant decreases were hosiery and knit goods 7.1 per cent, men's clothing 8.7 per cent, shirts and collars 9.6 per cent, millinery and lace 7.4 per cent, foundries and machine shops 9.8 per cent, fertilizers 8.6 per cent, cement 10.5 per cent, pottery 8.9 per cent, automobiles 16.5 per cent, wagons 11.2 per cent, electrical 11.8 per cent, musical instruments 9.8 per cent.

Average weekly earnings for typical U. S. industries in January, 1925, were:

Meat packing	$25.13
Baking	25.87
Cotton Mills	16.82
Hosiery, knit goods	18.20
Men's clothing	25.37
Women's clothing	27.64
Iron and steel	30.50
Foundries, machine shops	28.81
Sawmills	19.68
Shoes	22,33
Newspaper printing	38.32
Automobile	25.70
Car building, repair	28.14
Electrical	28.00
ALL INDUSTRIES	$25.46

The department reports that manufacturing as a whole is employing [illegible] per cent of a normal full force and those working are putting in 92 per cent full time. This shows industry working slightly better than 75 per cent of full capacity.

Changes in rates of wages during the month were predominantly downward. Decreases averaging 3.9 per cent affected 23,000 workers covered by the reports. A majority were in the cotton manufacturing.

A DOSE FOR STREETCAR MEN, CARPENTERS, LABOR FAKERS, AND A SIX FOOT FOUR SKUNK

CHICAGO.—In a recent issue of the paper misnamed the Union Leader which is the organ of the Chicago Streetcar Men's union, there appeared a three page lying attack on Soviet Russia. It was written by a ridiculous fellow named Harry Harn, whom the Union Leader tried to dignify by saying he was "a trade unionist and member of Carpenters' Local 62."

A Disappointed Prospective Commissar

Harn was a member of the I. W. W., which is not the I. W. W.'s fault, but now poses as a good trade unionist and sells his yellow hide to the most reactionary labor fakers of the A. F. of L. He went into Russia in 1922, like some other fools, expecting that because he was an I. W. W., also an ex-socialist, that he would be at once made boss of Russia and would order every Russian worker about.

He was quickly disillusioned. Nobody paid any attention to him. He was a nuisance and a cry-baby. Instead of cleaning up the lice in his quarters like everyone else, he only made one more. He remained on a few weeks, then came back.

Carpenters' Local 62 Also Unfeeling.

His local union, Carpenters' No 62, gave him the horse-laugh when he tried to speak. Now his snaky lies published in the street carmen's paper have brought the following two letters, one from a street carman, another from one of Harn's companions in his trip to Siberia. They follow:

"Dear Comrades: Enclosed with this letter you will find a paper, the so-called Union Leader, supposed to represent the streetcar men of Chicago. But I am a streetcar man who is being misrepresented by this sheet.

"I am not a member of the Workers (Communist) Party, but my good right arm is ready to defend the Communist movement now, and as long as there is a breath of life left in my body. Even at the time of my death I want one of you Communists to speak at my resting place, and I hope before that time we will have a world workers' and farmers' government.

"I read the DAILY WORKER every day, yet have never found an article in it about the streetcar men and their organization, altho the Surface Lines company violates every agreement with the men except the wage agreement. What is the trouble? Are there no Communists in the carmen's union?

"The officials of this organization are about the most corrupt of any union in America. Come on, you Bolsheviks, let's get these men started on their way to the Soviets of America.

"About this lying article of Harry Harn, in the enclosed copy of the Union Leader, I would like to meet the dirty skunk who went all those thousands of miles to Siberia only to count the lice and bedbugs.

"I could take him right here down State street, from Harrison street, then over to West Madison and down to Van Buren and thru the beautiful ghettos back of the stock yards, and he could see as many vermin as in Russia during its hardest days. Some of these white guards like Harry Harn know more about other countries than they do about this one.

"Our agreement expires June 1, this year, so let's get busy educating these workers.

"Down with the reactionary officials of Division 241! With Mahon, Quinlan, Taber and rest of the those who stand in the way of progress toward a Soviet government in the United States!

"Yours for Communism,
"A Streetcar Man."

Now the letter from Harn's companion in Siberia:

"Dear DAILY WORKER: It seems that some of the reasers of the A. F. of L. publications have been registering protests against the continuous stream of lies about Soviet Russia sent out by the A. F. of L. News Service. In order to quiet and convince them, the organ of the Chicago Streetcar Men, calling itself the Union Leader, has resurrected a lying and ridiculous article written some two years ago by one Harry Harn, member of Carpenters' Local Union No. 62, of Chicago.

"Harn went over in the spring of 1922 to Kuzbas, an industrial colony organized with the object of employing the technical skill of American workers to aid the Soviet government in opening up the vast coal and iron fields of central Siberia. The men who went over, all knew that they were going to a wild region, pretty much on the edge of the world, where material conditions of life would be primitive in the extreme, and also that they were going to a country just emerging from famine and civil war. The first group of all, which was the one of which Harn was a member, was expected to blaze the way for all the rest—to be pioneers among pioneers—and anyone with any sense knew that it would not be very easy going.

"If Harn had really been anything of the pioneer that he fondly and sentimentally dreamt he was, instead of a whimpering six foot four baby, if he had had the guts to go thru with things, instead of leaving after a few weeks, he would have seen order rising out of chaos, the sabotaging, old-time Russian engineers kicked out, the great by-product coke plant in full blast, daily shipments of coke going out to the Ural steel plants and the great machine shops of central Russia, benzol, tar, napthalene, etc., being produced in qauntity, the big power station in operation, mines, machine and carpenter shops electrified, modern machinery in the mines, and an immensely increased coal output.

"And more than that, he would have seen a steady improvement in the condition of the Russian workers in the industry, wages going up and prices down, the speculators driven out of the villages by the competition of the co-operative, plenty of food where there had been a shortage, and new clothes where there had been rags.

"But as it was, the valiant pioneers was completely absorbed in his own comfort. From the moment the group entered Russia he began fussing like an old hen, about this or that inconvenience that the women who were along made light of, wailing over the black bread on which diet the Russians had fought—and conquered—for some five years, and forever calling up visions of the beef steaks of 'God's own country,' as he always called it.

"It is not merely accidental that a man who is still a laughing stock among those who remember him in his pioneering days should be used by the labor fakers against Soviet Russia. His article, which is just one long wail over personal discomforts, with a few stock lies about conditions in Russia thrown in, is typical of the shopkeeper mind which cannot see beyond its own small dignity and its own comfort, and that shrinks timidly from the hardships involved in wresting a new social order from the rotten past. Yours for Communism,
"Harry Kweit."

CHRISTOPHER, ILL. MINE CLOSES DOWN; 500 MORE JOBLESS

CHRISTOPHER, Ill.—The East Mine at this city closed down indefinitely on March. 7. The company just posted a notice to this effect, instructing the men to remove their tools and clohes and clean up their coal. This throwe 500 men out of work.

This mine was idle seven months last summer, and the mine opened up against the latter part of September. Since that time the men have been working two and three days per week. These workers are in very hard circumstances, still in debt to the storekeepers from the last shutdown. The storekeepers now refuse to carry them any further, so their outlook is black, indeed.

The Lewis-Farrington policy of squeezing the surplus miners out of the mines is succeeding well, and a little more of it will completely disillusion the miners who still have apy hopes of relief from such a source.

To mention Lewis or Farrington in this district today is to create a laugh. Confidence in them is gone, nothing but contempt and scorn remain. They are looked upon a operators' lackeys instead of labor leaders.

Cleveland Labor Council Gives God Voice But No Vote

CLEVELAND, Ohio—Not to be outdone by "the official trade union movement" of New York, which is actively co-operating in the work of raising fifteen million dollars for the building of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, the Cleveland Federation of Labor, at its last meeting, seated the Rev. Louis C. Wright as a representative of the federated churches.

The federated churches acted upon an invitation extended by the Federation of Labor. The reverend will have the right to take the floor but not vote.

"I think it is a fine opportunity to establish mutual understanding between the churches and the federation" Dr. Wright said.

Cleveland was the scene of the heresy trial of Bishop William Montgomery Brown, last summer. The churchmen are evidently determined to follow up their fight on Bishop Brown with an attempt to innoculate the trade unions of this city against Communist propaganda.

MINERS GET BETRAYALS AND MORE BETRAYALS

But Are Invited to Stop Getting 'Em

By J. M.

CHRISTOPHER, Ill.—Do we live in a free country? Are we all born free and equal? Perhaps there are still some American working men and women who believe this foolishness, but there are few coal diggers who still have faith in such tommy-rot these days. No better sample of the helplessness of the workers under capitalism and how fate is dealt out to them by the rulers of industry, can be given than the situation now confronting the workers in the coal mining industry.

A Typical Case.

A typical example of how the mine owners are using the threat of unemployment as a club to browbeat the miners into submission, was what happened recently at the mine of Coello, Ill. Coello is just two miles from Christopher, and the mine there is known as the New North Mine which belongs to the Old Ben Mining Co.

For some reason not fully explained, the mine discontinued the use of the regular shaft for lowering and hoisting men to and from the mine. The shaft was said to have been condemned. This made it necessary to use the air shaft for this purpose, and the result was that the men were compelled to start going down at 5:30 a. m. This was necessary in order to get the men down in time for work as it takes much longer than the regular way.

Needless to say, the miners protested and finally struck. To this the company simply replied that they did not care whether the mine worked or not, and unless the men went back to work they would shut down for good.

Enter, the Reactionary Officials.

Negotiations for a settlement were carried on with the company by Sub-District President Lou Fox, and Vice-President D. B. Cobb. These stalwart soldiers of reaction, who are part and pancel of the Farrington machine, finally advised the men to go back to work under protest, which the men did, and the grievance now goes to the district board with little hope for anything better from that source.

It is said that some of the men are now going down in the mine as early as 5:00 a. m. Moreover, the method of putting men down this mine is undoubtedly unsafe, due to over-crowding, as 24 men are lowered down the air shaft at a time.

Just a Different Kind of Slavery.

Under chattel slavery the slave owners were forced to feed the slaves during times when there was no work to do. But under capitalism the modern wage slave must work or starve. In the face of these threats of unemployment, the workers are intimidated and the capitalist class, always quick to see their advantage, uses those means to force the workers to accept all sorts of dangerous and miserable conditions.

The air is full of all sorts of rumors of mines shutting down in Southern Illinois, and the miner does not know what day he might find himself without a job.

Piling It On.

In the face of this situation, the Farrington machine issues a circular against the organization of the unemployed. It is plain to all thinking miners that Farrington is not with the rank and file in the fight to change conditions. Farrington raves about not breaking the agreement, while the operators can and are, getting away with murder.

Another good example of the tactics of the operators is the condition at the mine at Buckner, Ill. Some four or five months ago the wash house at that mine burned down. Altho there is a state law against working a mine without a wash house, the company has refused to build another.

They say if the men cannot wash without a wash house they will close down the mine. The men have now been working about four months without a wash house. The result is, the coal diggers at Buckner do their cleaning up at home mostly. Everyone knows that the shacks where the miners live are not equipped with baths. This is simply another hardship added to the already great number of hardships.

Under a workers' government not only will the workers own the mines, but every mine will be made safe and sanitary. Miners! Join the Trade Union Educational League, and the Workers Party of America and fight for a workers' government.

PHILADELPHIA WAITERS WON TO LABOR DEFENSE

T.U.E.L. Members Show Meaning of Cases

PHILADELPHIA. — After a lively discussion, Waiters' Alliance, Local 279, endorsed the resolution protesting the conviction and sentencing of C. E. Ruthenberg to prison under the Michigan criminal syndicalist law. Their delegates to the Central Labor Union were instructed to pass the same resolution at the next meeting of the C. L. U.

The resolution was introduced by members of the Trade Union Educational League, and efforts were immediately made to table the question on the grouds that Wm. Z. Foster was involved in the Michigan cases and that Foster was a Communist.

Several members of the union who have known Foster during the great steel strike pointed out that the great industrial corporations were anxious to railroad Foster because he, for the first time, had successfully organized the steel workers for the historic strike, and because his record as a militant and aggressive labor leader stand today as a menace to the open shop interests of this country.

After the members of the T. U. E. L. further pointed out that all the other defendants in the Michigan cases have a record of militant activity and accomplishments in the labor movement, and therefore should be supported, there was not a single vote against the resolution.

Bath House Workers Pay Boss Merely to Get Chance at Tips

NEW YORK.—Attendants in Bronx and Williamsburgh Turkish and Russian baths are striking with the rubbers of New York's lower east side ablution emporiums. Women workers as well as men are in the strike for regular hours and regular wages and the right to organize. The Jewish Women's Guild in the Bronx is assisting women strikers.

The strikers are employed in baths where the temperature is high. The rubbers work all hours and any number of hours but are fighting to limit the number to a maximum 54 per week. They are paid no regular wages and frequently the employers demand that tips be split 50-50 with them for allowing the workers to work in their baths.

MILL OWNERS FIND THAT PROCLAMATION DON'T DO THE WORK

UTICA, N. Y.—A few scabs went to work yesterday morning when the mill gates opened, but only about 10 in all, two weavers, two spinners and the rest from other departments of the Utica Steam Cotton mill. Then this morning they didn't go back—while many more who were working the last four weeks stayed away, too. Only about 60 are working, including the second hands, yard men and bosses.

LEADERS AGAIN BETRAY WHITE GOODS WORKERS

Accept 5 Per Cent Instead of 20

NEW YORK CITY.—After an agreement to increase the wages of the white goods workers in independent shops 10 per cent, the leaders of the union went into secret conference with the bosses, and at a mass meeting yesterday to which only a part of the workers in the trade were invited, smuggled thru an agreement, with only a five pre cent increase, abrogating the one recently made and which the members had considered final.

The original demand was 20 per cent, but the leaders never held out for that, but immediately lined up some of the independent shops at the 10 per cent compromise, and later settide with the association bosses at five per cent incerase. This will drag the independent shops down to the five per cent rate also.

As the situation now stands, piece workers get only five per cent on piece work, the weekly wage is increased by $1 per week and cutters get $3 a week increase.

Great indignation is shown by the workers in the white goods industry and the matter will be taken up for further settlement.

Bindle Stiffs Buck Sure Thing Roulette to Aid Scab Legion

YUMA, Ariz.—Opposite Yuma, Arizona, with the Colorado River between lies California, and here daily in Yuma we see the floating, wandering workmen. About three-fourths are blanket or "bindle stiffs," dejected forlorn humans.

We have here also, the ruins on Penitentiary Hill, the old, prison hell, with buildings containing about one-hundred cells still intact.

On Friday and Saturday of Feb. 27 and 28 we had the spectacle of wide open gambling without the faintest bleat of protest from the preacherr and church people.

The object of bringing a large tent, six roulette wheels and other "house percentage" gambling layouts attended by twenty professional house gamblers from the California-Mexican border, was to erect a club house here for those gallant strutters—the American legion.

The faro bank game was taboo, as it is never safe for the house when dealt on the square. The games had a fair play each evening and by whom? American mechanics and laborers, Mexican laborers, Negroes, Chinamen and a few women. The town bankers milled around the tent selling "script" for the purchase of checks for playing.

Not a single banker or business man was "sucker" enuf to patronize the games just the foolish workingmen paid the professional gamblers and to help erect a "club house" for their foe, the American legion.

Carpenters of Los Angeles Inspired for New Battle

LOS ANGELES.—A year ago 16 members of the Carpenters' Union of Los Angeles were expelled arbitrarily by Wm. L. Hutcheson. At that time very little opposition could be aroused to the expulsion policy of the Hutcheson administration. Today the situation is different, however. There is plenty of evidence of a nation-wide revolt of carpenters against the czarist rule of Hutcheson.

Los Angeles locals are now taking a renewed interest in the expulsion cases. The following locals have endorsed the resolution sent out by Local 2140 of Detroit against the expulsions and demanding the reinstatement of all the expelled members:

Huntington Park, Calif., Local 1500.
Los Angeles, Locals 2337, 158, 726, 1976 and 884.

The committee of the Los Angeles expelled carpenters are visiting all the local unions and demanding that their cases be again taken up and that they be reinstated with full rights of membership.

Machinists of Los Angeles, Take Whack at Gag Laws

LOS ANGELES—Machinists' Local Union No. 311, of Los Angeles, at their last regular meeting, adopted a resolution protesting against the criminal syndicalist laws in general and the Michigan syndicalist laws in particular. They also adopted a resolution against the syndicalist laws of California, against the local and state authorities for their suppression of free speech and free assemblage.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE UNION UNITY DISCUSSED

Soviet Union Paper Makes Statement

MOSCOW—The Soviet trade union central organ Trud, writes as follows regarding the present status of the movement for international trade union unity:

"A lively discussion has arisen as to whether the resolution adopted by the Amsterdam executive represents a victory of the right wing or the left wing. British trade unionists, who are friendly to Soviet Russia, are inclined to regard it as a victory of the left over the right wing. According to their opinion, the resolution imposes preliminary conditions upon Russian labor.

Same as Old Vienna Proposal.

"Oudegeest and Stenhuis differ from the British in their interpretation, openly declaring that the resolution means putting into execution the previous Vienna resolution. They assert that the Russian trade unions must first apply for affiliation to the Amsterdam International, and then negotiate about details, otherwise, there will be a rupture of negotiations.

"Which interpretation is correct is shown by a resume of the initial proceedings between Moscow and Amsterdam. Amsterdam demanded recognition of its rules by Soviet labor as a prerequisite of affiliation, while Soviet labor asked for an unconditional meeting with the representatives of Amsterdam for the purpose of discussing international labor unity.

"The correctness and honesty of the proposal of Soviet labor was acknowledged by representatives of British labor, who in the recent session of the Amsterdam executive, advocated unconditional conference with Soviet labor.

How Is Rejection a Victory?

"Rejection of the British views, means, therefore, an undoubted victory of the right wing of Amsterdam over the British left. The British voted against the Stenhuis resolution, which, however, was carried. Where then, is the left wing victory?

"The resolution adopted differs from both the Oudegeest and British motions. It says that Amsterdam is ready to arrange a conference, if Soviet labor unconditionally affiliates to Amsterdam. Originally, it was only a matter of a conference between Soviet labor and Amsterdam. Now it is an Amsterdam invitation to affiliate, with Amsterdam reserving itself the right to set the date and place of conference.

Amsterdam Reverts to Old Stuff.

"In our opinion this amounts to the original attitude of the Amsterdam executive. Who triumphed?

"As our British friends maintain that the right wing did not win, and that they, the British, won, we assume that our British friends were deceived by the right wing.

"Evidently the British have not sufficiently fathomed the political meaning of the Amsterdam right wing. We believe they failed to weigh carefully the Amsterdam resolution.

"We are convinced that as soon as our British friends recognize the true inwardness of the resolution, they will draw the only possible conclusion, that the task is to put into active operation, the British-Russian Unity Committee.

Russian Unions to Reply.

"The presidium of the Soviet General Council of Trade Unions will shortly deal with this question. Its resolution will be drafted solely in the interests of international labor and unity.

"The British trade union leaders who are echoing the desire of the working masses for unity, will now see that they have been deceived and thwarted in their object. However deplorable this may be, we must recognize it and take the lesson to heart for future and correct conclusions.

OIL DOMINATES WORLD, WORKERS OF BAKU TOLD

Soviet Heads Hear 50,000 Pledge Support

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TIFLIS, March 10.—Fifty thousand oil workers and other residents of Baku greeted George Tchitcherin, commissar of foreign affairs, when the governmental train stopped enroute to Tiflis, and cheered when Tchitcherin declared the awakening peoples of the east "have a common enemy with Soviet Russia in the person of the imperialistic powers." The commissars on the train then spoke to the Baku Soviet.

Tchitcherin said that the Standard Oil company and the Royal Shell company are now dominating world politics. He charged that these two companies have bought up nearly all the oil shares previously belonging to Russian capitalists, attempting to use them as a weapon against Soviet interests and clamoring for recognition of "Russia's former obligations."

"Baku oil," Tchicherin said, "while attracting our enemies, at the same time serves as a splendid weapon against them owing to their divided and conflicting interest in gaining a foothold in Baku."

The foreign minister added that thru Baku, Soviet Russia came in contact with the eastern nations, which constitute the strength of the Soviet Union. Tchitcherin charged that the English oil concerns incited the uprising in Georgia against the Soviet government. "England realizes that the awakening of the people of the east is more serious than it thought at first," he said. "Hence its change of policy toward us." Tchitcherin told the oil workers that the sole guarantee to the success of the workers over the threats of foreign capitalists, was close unity between all the Soviet peoples.

Rykoff emphasized the importance of the Transcaucasian Federation thru which, he said, the foreign bourgeoisie are trying to bring pressure upon the Soviet Union because it possesses oil. "Russia's relations with Turkey and Persia are now of the friendliest," Rykoff declared, "and attempts of other powers to bring pressure upon the Soviet Union thru these countries, as in the past, is now bound to fail."

The workers passed a resolution pledging the Baku workers' support of the government's foreign policy.

The governmental train was greeted by large crowds of workers and peasants at every station along the entire route to Tiflis. At Baku the commissars took part in the parade, which ended in a special conference of the Baku Soviet, where the speeches were made. A large delegation of the Red Army was present.

N. Y. ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION OF PARIS COMMUNE OFFERS A MONTH'S SUB TO THE DAILY WORKER FREE

During the month of March the proletariat of the world remembers the heroes and martyrs of the revolutionary struggles of the working class against all forms of oppression; against kings, czars, and capitalist exploitation. The day on which we particularly remember the heroes of these struggles, and draw the lessons that aid us in our present day struggles against imperialism and for the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat is March 18th, the anniversary of the Paris Commune.

Admission is Free.

The Workers Party and the Young Workers League of District No. 2 are going to celebrate the Paris Commune and the sixth anniversary of the Communist International at Madison Square Garden on Sunday, March 15.

This celebration will give every worker an opportunity to help build the party of his class by building the press of the Workers Party, the DAILY WORKER. The celebration will last from 2 p. m. to midnight and will include excellent entertainment of revolutionary educational value, winding up with a grand ball. Admission will be FREE to all who buy one month's subscription to the DAILY WORKER. In this way we will get 15,000 additional readers for the DAILY WORKER who will daily at least for one month read the press of the party of Lenin in the United States. The excellent DAILY WORKER staff will see to it that the major part of these subscribers will remain PERMANENT readers of the DAILY WORKER.

Every member of the party and the Young Workers' League, as well as every sympathizer must get on the job and sell the subs. They can be obtained at the party and league offices and at the office of the party press, as well as directly from Comrade Katterfield, the DAILY WORKER agent at 108 E. 14th.

Comrades our party and the league have made great progress. The Lenin Memorial held this year, where over 20,000 workers of this city turned out to honor Lenin in support of our movement, is sufficient proof of the growth and influence of our party. This is the first Paris Commune celebration of the size to be held in this country. Let us make it a gigantic success. Let us in the period of great reaction show our solidarity and our power. Everybody to work for a great Paris Commune Celebration.

Long live the Communist International!

Long live the Red Army created by the Communist Party of Russia for the safety of the dictatorship!

Long live the Soviet Republic of Russia!

For a strong Communist Daily—The DAILY WORKER!

Build the Workers (Communist) Party!

Long live the world revolution!

Russo-Chinese Fair Set for May 1 Will Be Big Occasion

HARBIN, March 10.—Energetic preparations are under way for the organization of the Russo-Chinese exhibition, which is to be inaugurated on May 1 of this year. The Chinese section of the joint committee has been constituted, under the leadership of Sung.

As regards the Russian part in the exhibition, telegraphic advice from Moscow leads to expect that not only the state trade of the U. S. S. R. will be well and amply represented, but all those Soviet economic organizations, too, which have the right to engage in eternal commerce will likewise avail themselves of the opportunity offered.

The central joint committee is in receipt of new from Harborovsk, Chita, Vladivostok, telling that regional and provincial "assistance committees" have been constituted at those places, whose object is to advertise support and actual participation of the coming exhibition and enlist the the local trading firms. Vlagovestchensk and, eventually, one or two other centers in Eastern Siberia are also expected to have such committees.

The scope and dimensions of the show will probably greatly exceed the boldest original expectations, and the whole affair will present, it is hoped, a sight such as Harbin has never seen before.

Everybody in Old Philadelphia Is Expected to Come

All Philadelphia Communists and sympathizers are invited to attend the First Annual Ball held by the Italian branch No. 3, Saturday evening March 14 at the Rose Garden Hall, 1584 N. 52nd St.

Italian branch No. 3 is one of the newly organized branches that promises to do some real Communist work among the Italian workers. The comrades who have attended the last few Italian party affairs will not fail to be present this time.

Members of the Young Workers League will be there to join the Italians comrades dancing and singing "Bandiera Rossa" and other revolutionary songs that lend life and color to all the Communist affirs.

The committee has arranged for a good dancing music and refreshments so that the elementary wants of all present are satisfied.

The low admission of 35 cents will make it possible for everybody to be present.

FIRE UNION MEN IN GOVERNMENT PRINTING SHOP

Victims of Wage Cuts and Spying

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 10.—More than 200 employes of the government printing office have been dropped from the payroll without notice, and 400 others have been laid off for at least a week without pay. All of the 4,000 employes left on the United States printing office pay roll will have to give up a week's pay, George H. Carter, public printer, has announced.

Employes who were dismissed include men who have been in the service of the government, 30 years, and world war veterans. The dismissals were significant in view of the fact that the government has recently conducted a poster and advertising campaign for new employes, and these new workers were not discharged.

The real reason for the discharge of the old employes and the hiring of fresh men is seen in the recent successful fight of the printers to secure an increase in wages. The public printer, under Coolidge's orders, is taking this method of again reducing wages and taking revenge of the old employes who demanded a decent wage. Those dropped from the rolls include printers, bookbinders, and stereotypers. Carter said there would probably be a further shake-up in the department.

"Naturally the veteran employes were the first to go", Carter said. "Some of them were 65 years old. They will get as high as $700.00 a year retirement pay".

The Typographical Union has had trouble with Carter throuout the entire Harding-Coolidge administration, as under the republicans the printing office has followed the policy of instituting wage cuts and disciplining the union employes. Carter has also developed a spy system which brought punishment to printing office employes for any criticism voiced even outside the printing office.

LETTERS FROM READERS

A Negro Miner Writes.

To the DAILY WORKER:— I am colored. You don't realize these curtains of hell.

I have travelled from the Atlantic to the Pacific and across the Pacific and the Atlantic. This flame of hate I have met on every hand. There is a gigantic task ahead of us. That is to organize the ignorant colored and white workers. Ignorance and superstition seem to reign in the working class. I never saw such hate manifested toward colored men by white men as of recent. It seems to have sprung out the world war.

There are certain leaders of organizations in this country who are dividing and wrecking the workers. These union leaders seem to be on their last legs. There will be but a few of these backward unions left in this open shop drive which is now on. The United Mine Workers is nearly gone. I am from the coal fields of West Virginia. Such conditions! Such suffering!

The white worker is building a wall of hate against his fellow workers. Here in Baltimore because of this hate, colored people live five and six families in a 4-room house. Tho there are thousands of empty houses, a colored person would not dare to rent or even ask about a house. If he does he and his family are liable to be beaten to death by a white mob. This flame of fate is from the Atlantic to the Pacific and wherever the American white man has put foot. Even to foreign countries he has carried his slogan. "The Negro is no good. Anybody that carries a black face is inferior."—James Ford.

AIR MAIL SERVICE WILL SPEED MATERIAL FOR NEW YORK EDITION

The New York edition of the DAILY WORKER will be greatly benefitted by the new air mail schedule between New York and Chicago which will begin shortly.

The new service will provide for air mail carrier to leave New York night at 9:30 Eastern standard time, arriving in Chicago the next morning at 5.30 Central standard time.

This will be a great advantage to the New York special edition of the DAILY WORKER as news matter can be sent late in the evening instead of having it go in the early afternoon as at present. It is now mailed at the Grand Central station just before the departure of the Twentieth Century Limited which arrives in Chicago at 9:00 a. m., the following day. The new service will bring it to the DAILY WORKER office by the time it opens, giving the compositors more time and getting it set before the rush hours.

The New York branches are again reminded of the fact that the most important material for the "Daily" must come from the rank and file and that a regular correspondent should be elected from every branch and held responsible for getting live material to the DAILY WORKER New York office at 108 East 14th St. Send an item every day.

LUMBER CO. SUED BY NEGRO LABOR LEADER

Killing of Union Men Comes Into Court

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 10.—The damage suit brought by Sol Dacus, Negro lumber union organizer, against the Great Southern Lumber company, growing out of the organization of the lumber workers of Bogalusa, in 1919, has been opened in federal Judge Beattie's court here. Dacus is suing for $102,380 for injuries suffered at the hands of the lumber company and their tools, "the Loyalty League" when his house was burned down.

The "Loyalty League," on November 22, 1919, shot dead four white members of the central labor council of the American Federation of Labor at Bogalusa, who were protecting the Negro organizer. One of the murdered men was the president of the council, and another was a union carpenter. The men walked, armed, down the streets of Bogalusa, protecting Dacus. The lumber company tools forced the union leaders to retreat to a garage, and demanded that Dacus be turned over to them.

When the union men refused, they were shot and killed. The four union men who were killed were L. E. Williams, J. E. Bouchillon, Tom Gaines and S. J. O'Rourke.

Dacus has included six members of the "Loyalty League," who were employed by the lumber company to disrupt the union, in his damage suit. These men are Harold Wilcox, John Gulotta, Dave Bern, Mike Berenson, J. B. Lindsey and Louis Levert.

Dacus charges that these men and other lumber trust gunmen attempted to expel him from Bogalusa for his organization work, repeatedly threatened to lynch him, and aided in the burning of his house and the killing of his defenders.

The lumber workers were finally locked out, and told that the only condition on which they could return to work was to tear up their union card. This they refused to do and the lumber interests resorted to violence.

DISABLED WORLD WAR VETERANS BETRAYED BY GOVERNMENT, WALK STREETS FACING STARVATION

Editor's Note:—The writer of the following article, a disabled world war veteran, disgusted at the treatment accorded the war veterans, and realizing that the only way in which the workers can secure emancipation from the domination of the capitalists in industry and government, is to take over the means of life for their own use, has applied for admission into the Workers (Communist) Party.

In submitting his story to the DAILY WORKER, the disabled war veteran writes, "When publishing this article, kindly omit my name and address, As a government employe I am liable to be persecuted and driven to starvation if it is found out that I am working for the rights of the disabled war veterans."

By MUTILATED.

The disabled world war veterans have been forgotten by the capitalist Coolidge government, but the political favorites and millionaires have been remembered. The Teapot Dome parties, who receive orders from Wall Street, are entirely neglecting the war veterans who contracted incurable maladies as a result of exposure to the severe strain of military service or who were maimed at the front. Two hundred thousand were disabled in the world war, and thousands of them will never recover.

On the eve of adjournment congress dealt a blow to the disabled ex-soldiers, by failing to pass relief measures for the benefit of these disabled service men, who were victims of capitalist imperialism.

The provisions to permit the reinstatement of the war risk insurance, with two months' back payment of premiums, the granting of permanent rating for arrested tubercular ex-service men, and several other measures for the relief of the disabled soldiers were eliminated by congress. Thousands of soldiers upon being demobilized, were forced to give up their war risk insurance because they could not pay their premiums.

Now the healthy ex-service men are allowed to take up their insurance again without the payment of back premiums. However, the disabled soldiers, because the insurance companies fear their death, are discriminated against. They must pay all their back premiums if they are to have the war risk insurance. This is the penalty for having been wounded, or having contracted disease in the world war.

However, Wall Street remembers its friends. Congress has passed the ten million dollar hospitalization bill, which gives the politicians the right to give out to their favorites contracts totalling ten million dollars. The corruption practiced by Charles Forbes took place under a similar bill.

The disabled war veterans and other victims of the capitalist system must know that thru the leadership of the Workers Party and only thru the establishment of the proletarian republic will they achieve justice, which is possible only when the workers become the masters of their own destinies and not the slaves of the capitalists.

Thousands of world war veterans are being contracted out to schools for a few months, doing vocational work for which they are not fitted, and against their will. These workers are then being discharged as "rehabilitated," to shift for themselves Thousands of them, unable to do a day's work, or compete with healthy workers, are forced to take non-union jobs, and thus lower the standard of living of the working class. Other thousands are walking the streets without work, facing starvation.

Loman Bros. Desert Eskimoes They Used to Steal for Them

Moscow.—(By Mail).—It is reported from Washington that the American company, Loman Bros., has emphatically refused to comply with the request made by the state department to the firm to defray the cost of transporting from Vladivostok to the United States the Eskimoes who were brought by the Soviet authorities from the Wrangel Island where they engaged in illegitimate fur hunting for the said American company.

It is further learned that the state department has no intention to undertake any steps with regard to the mentioned fact of bringing those Eskimoes to Vladivostok by the Soviet authorities, as there is no desire to make a "diplomatic question" out of the case. It is equally obvious that the state department is not putting up any claims to the sovereignty of the United States over the Wrangel Island.

Krassin Explains Soviet's Position on Czarist Debts

MOSCOW.—The Soviet government cannot possibly recognize and pay the czarist debts, tho it may eventually agree to give compensation for part of them, in order to facilitate intercourse with bourgeois governments and thus promote the economic restoration of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Krassin, Soviet ambassador to Paris, stated to a representative of the Echo de Paris in the course of an interview, in which he outlined the main principles of the Soviet policy in regard to the old Russian debts.

The question of meeting the interests and wishes of the petty bondholders of the Russian loans would be considered apart from the above issue, Krassin remarked.

RUSSIAN OIL PRODUCTS BEAT BRITISH PRICE

Oil Syndicate Agent Elated Over Success

MOSCOW, March 10.—The decisive success met with by Soviet oil products in the northern part of Afghanistan was the gist of the statement made to press correspondents at Cabul by a representative of the Russian Oil Syndicate, recently arrived at the Afghan capital.

An experiment, which has just been made, he said, in sale of Soviet oil also in the south of Afghanistan, has proved quite successful. A consignment of oil products brot to Cabul at the time of the arrival in the capital of the Oil Syndicate's representative, has been rapidly sold out there owing to prices being cheap and lower than those of the British products. An agreement has been concluded, too, for supplying oil products to a number of public institutions.

The representative of the Russian Syndicate further stated that he had received inquiries from a considerable number of organizations and merchants about the possibility of bringing other Soviet goods to Cabul, such as sugar, manufactunres, kitchen ware, and so forth. The Cabul merchants urged that the Afghan market is anxious to purchase Russian manufactures again, which formerly had brisk sales in Afghanistan; they lay stress on the fact that Soviet manufactures would find a willing market actually, too, even if the prices of these goods were to be higher than those of the English textiles.

The general feeling in circles concerned is that the settlement of regular commercial intercourse betweer the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Afghanistan, which is eager to buy Soviet goods, is a question of a very near future.

CITY PRISONERS PILE UP PROFIT FOR POLITICIANS

NEW YORK, March 10.— Profits from the sale of tobacco, food, and other unfurnished necessities to city prisoners are used by New York politicians in charge of jails and workhouses to buy radio sets and entertain so-called welfare workers, according to testimony given in commissioner of accounts Hirshfield's investigation into the department of correction. A surplus of $150,000 is on hand, profits from prisoners' purchases.

Warden Stole Radio.

On Welfare Island a party of 150 prison welfare workers was entertained at $8 a head, $1,215 for the party, Hirshfield discovered. The prisoners did the cooking and serving and cleaning up, no caterer coming in.

Expensive radio sets were purchased for boys' reformatories at New Hampton and Warwick and Women's Correctional Home at Greycourt, Robert L. Tudor, deputy commissioner of correction told. At New Hampton, if not at the others, the set was installed in the warden's and resident commissioner's quarters and the boys never heard of the radio set.

Thieves Fight For Fund.

Hirshfield charges that the fund could be taken by anyone under the present system, run by commissioner of corrections Frederick A. Wallis. Tudor says the commissary is a private enterprise. Profits from Tombs prisoners and those at the penitentiary amount to $20,000 a year. Hirshfield thinks the prisoners should be served at more nearly cost, instead of piling up profits for whoever will take them.

BUILDERS AT WORK

THAT NEW MARCH ISSUE

With a Word About Propaganda Mediums

TO our agents and live wires—to all BUILDERS we bring to attention the splendid new issue of the Workers Monthly. This monthly magazine that grows in leaps and bounds is sure to be another strong arm of the DAILY WORKER in building up the Communist movement and to our BUILDERS we mention particularly the new March issue which is of such attractive make-up and such splendid contents that you will enjoy it yourself and get a new sub on your copy when you loan it to another worker to read.

The striking three color cover will tempt any worker to the interesting contents that carry stories on all the struggles of the Left Wing and so many additional features that the issue will "get" the doubtful member in your union you may have been propagandizing for so long.

The Workers Monthly is complimentary to the DAILY WORKER. Coming out monthly, in more attractive form it leads the worker to an eventual daily reading of the theory and practice that he will meet in the DAILY WORKER . . . and you will have another member for your branch, another member for the Left Wing group in your union thru the Workers Monthly that will lead him to the DAILY WORKER.

A BUILDER has always in mind every item that will lead another worker to Communist understanding and those comrades who are successfully doing the work of propaganda distribution carry the Workers Monthly as one of their chief propaganda mediums that will get interest for an ultimate Communist understanding.

RUSSIAN INFORMATION BUREAU TELLS TRUTH ABOUT SOVIET RULE

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 10.—According to official reports from Moscow just received here by the Russian Information Bureau the Soviet Union will expend from $160,000,000 to $190,000,000 (320—380 million rubles) this year on public education, an increase of from 120 to 155 per cent over the fiscal year of 1923-24, ending Oct 1.

The greatly increased appropriations have been made possible by the remarkable economic improvement in the Soviet Union during the past year, including the establishment of the currency on a gold basis, with a surplus of governmental receipts over expenditures.

The appropriations for education for this year are substantially larger than the pre-war appropriations under the old czarist empire, which has nearly one-third more population than the Soviet Union. All state appropriations are expended under the supervision of the central authority of the commissariat of education, which this year will have $70,000,000 of these appropriations. Of this, $3,700,000 was appropriated by the federal government, as a special fund for improving the condition of college professors and students. The educational item forms more than a third of the entire budget of the various states. Local revenues available for educational needs are estimated this year at $120,000,000.

At the midwinter meeting in Moscow of the All-Russian Teachers' Congress, attended by 1,500 teachers from all parts of the Soviet Union, Lunacharsky, people's commissar of education, reported that after years of hardship, due to the economic blockade of the United States government and the European powers, the educational system was at last in a position to conquer illiteracy in Russia.

Moldavian Soviet Makes the Rumanian Bourgeoisie Uneasy

MOSCOW, Feb. 15 (By mail).—Refugees from Bessarabia here tell that Roumanian government circles have been feeling extermely nervous about the formation of the Moldavian Soviet Republic; the authorities in Bessarabia are especially nervous.

However, the broad popular masses of Bessarabia have greeted the formation of the new Soviet republic with unveiled enthusiasm. The toiling masses are eagerly following any news from Moldavia, while even the petty bourgeoisie makes no secret of its desire to see Bessarabia join the Moldavian Republic as soon as possible. Commercial circles in Bessarabia also believe that such an issue is the only way of reviving the trade of Bessarabia now completely paralyzed.

On the other hand, a terrible reaction has again set in and a ruthless policy of "Roumanization" has been renewed in Bessarabia ever since the formation of the Moldavian S. S. Republic. Among other things the few Russian and Ukrainian schools and cultural institutions that still remained have now been finally closed.

RUSSIAN BANK HAS BEST YEAR OF ITS HISTORY

MOSCOW, Russia, March 10.— The Commercial and Industrial Bank of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (Prombank), has just ended its most successful year. The annual meeting of the shareholders held here recently found a balance of 275,000,000 rubles as against 87,000,000 for last year. The general turnover was sixteen billion rubles.

Capital fully paid increased during the year from 15,000,000 to 40,000,000 rubles. The reserves are nine million rubles. The deposits for the past year were 106,000,000 rubles and 232,000,000 this year. Profits increased in a year from 2,00,000 rubles to 8,500,000 rubles.

Dividends Increase.

Dividends last year were eight per cent and 15 per cent this year. Loans, discounts and guarantees granted for foreign trade amounted to 32,000,000 rulbes. There are 75 branches of the Prombank in all parts of the Soviet Union.

The meeting approved the report of the board of directors, and accepted the motion to further increase the capital to seventy-five million rubles. Money is transferred from abroad thru the Russian-American Industrial corporation and the Amalgamated Banks of Chicago and New York, which are the only representatives of the Prombank in the United States.

MEIGHAN 'COMES THRU' FOR THE PICTURE TRUST

Latest Picture Reeks with Capitalist Bunk

When Tommy Meighan recently made a really creditable picture, "Tongues of Flame," in which, for the first time on an American screen, the Indian was placed in a decent and true light, it was clear that this popular star had to go either forward or else slump back. "Tongues of Flame" offended against every capitalist taboo. It showed up the crooked, cowardly big business methods, the sheep-like ways of middle-class minded workers even when goaded to violence against the big business which had endangered their little property holdings, and in contract to this cheap hectic struggle, it showed the calm, happy life of the Indian tribe. Meighan even violated simultaneously the inter-racial marriage taboo and the plute "rich marriage for the noble hero" reward when he rejected the shallow, selfish rich girl and married the little half-breed Indian school mar'm. It was SOME picture—mobs that set fires and balked the firemen, a race riot, jail delivery, and many other thrills—but the newspaper critics damned it with every phrase and sneer at their command.

Meighan Sells Out

When it came out that Meighan had picked this story himself, over the protest of his directors and press agents, we had hopes that the thinking group of independent, progressive actors headed by Douglas Fairbanks and Charley Chaplin, had a new recruit.

But is was not thus to be. Meighan has heard the call of the box office and returned to the flesh-pots of the plutes. His next picture was called "Coming Through". This is a slightly adolescent slang phrase meaning to give someone what you've got to deliver. Tommy does just that and by way of penance for his last fall from grace, he delivers with compound interest.

The story is bald. A clerk marries his boss' daughter, but the damsel's thrill evaporates when the Old Man calls the bridegroom a "fortune hunter". Male prostitution even when sanctified by church and state is not yet a fully approved road to wealth.

The Missing Teapot Witnesses

Belated echos of the Teapot Dome scandal are to be heard if one listens carefully.

The government is making an effort to convince the populace that is really going to punish somebody for stealing the naval oil reserves in Wyoming and in Cheyenne a farcical trial of the enterprising thieves is in progress.

All important witnesses are conspicuous by their absence. They are all busy men and have been called away on weighty affairs of the oil concerns they represent.

Can the government interfere with the duties of officials of patriotic corporations like the Standard Oil company of Indiana of which R. W. Stewart, wanted as a witness against Fall, is president? Can it hamper the activities of officials of the Standard Oil subsidiary, the Prairie Oil and Gas company, of which James O'Neill, wanted as a witness against Fall, is the former head? Can the government have its agents secure and bring into court the former head of the Midwest Refining company, H. M. Blackmer, who is also wanted as a witness against Fall? Then there is a gentleman named Osler, head of the Continental Oil company, who with the other three and Senator Fall took part in a meeting held in the Vanderbilt Hotel in New York, November, 1921, at which Bernan Dawes, brother of the noisy one, was also present.

Some consideration must be shown men of such high standing in the business life of the nation. They cannot be treated like workers who have sinned by urging the overthrow of capitalism and organizing their fellows for the purpose of establishing a workers' and farmers' government.

O'Neill and Blackmer are in France. Stewart is on his way to South America. Osler is in Africa. All have heard the call of the wanderlust and lost no time in answering it—as soon as the date of the trial was set.

It was at this meeting of pals now forced to part that was arranged the purchase of $2,000,000 of liberty bonds of which $196,000 worth came into the hands of Senator Fall. The balance has not been found and it is believed that the four missing witnesses could tell much concerning their present whereabouts—and other things.

It is obvious that this is a delicate matter—particularly so since one of the Dawes family is now vice-president of the United States.

The trips that the witnesses have chosen are said to be of sufficient duration to allow for the last remnants of public indignation to be dispelled. This is a much better method than putting them on the witness stand and compelling them to lie about their bribery and theft. It does away with a lot of unwelcome publicity that might stir up the populace and precipitate further inquiries that could be nothing but embarrassing to our honest, economical and business-like government.

The prosecutions of militant workers, the railroading of Sacco and Vanzetti, the trials of the Communists in Michigan, the issuance of injunctions against strikers, will not be interfered with by the toleration shown the missing millionaires and their accomplices.

Any precedents established are to be earmarked: "For millionaires only."

Communists in German Rail Strike

The Communists are in the lead in the railway strike in Germany.

The social-democratic union and government officials appeared with proposals for postponement, arbitration, etc., anything to demoralize and weaken the workers in their struggle. The Communists raised the slogan of a general strike.

The action of the yellow leaders is the more despicable in that they have not even their usual excuse that the railways are public property. The railways are in private hands and the workers are sweated for the international bankers since the Dawes plan brought its blessing for the capitalists and curses for the worker to Germany.

Even the tyrannical government ownership of the Reich was too liberal for the allied plunderbund.

There is talk of the rise of German fascism since the death of Ebert, but if all the workers show as much militancy as the railroaders, fascism will have a tough time.

If the American workers want to find out what Communist parties are, how they act in relation to the struggles of the workers, how in all of Europe they alone have a practical program of action and are the only group that asks no quarter of capitalism, if the American workers want to know of what fighting stock the American Communist Party is, let them read the news from Germany. They will find that only the Communists bring life and fire into the German labor movement.

Free Speech and Counter-Revolution

The petty bourgeois anarchist elements, with such super-intellectuals as Norman Hapgood, high-priced coryphee in the Hearst parlor house playing leading roles, have organized a "committee for relief of political prisoners in Russia."

They held a meeting the other night in New York, but a lot of rough working men who had attended because the combination of "political prisoners" and "Russia" led them to believe it was a revolutionary instead of a counter-revolutionary gathering, refused to listen to the attacks on Soviet Russia cheered the workers' and peasants' government and left in disgust. As usual, the counter-revolutionary lovers of freedom called the police just like their little comrade Abramovich does.

It has been very hard for some of the so-called liberals, who are really anarchists in disguise, to keep from showing their true colors as enemies of the Soviet government. They have finally decided that free speech just like we have in the United States must be had by their counter-revolutionary kinfolk in Russia. They have looked clear across France, Germany, Italy, Poland, Esthonia, Finland, Lithuania, Roumania, Bulgaria, Jugo-Slavia, with their thousands of workers and peasants and members of the Communist Party murdered and jailed, to Russia where the workers' and peasants' government imprisons its middle-class and capitalist foes as a matter of self-preservation, where even to these vermin amnesty after amnesty has been granted.

Their purpose is so plain that no amount of humanitarian phrases and hypocritical devotion to free speech in the abstract can disguise it. They are against the dictatorship of the working class, they are against the Communist Party and the Communist International and they are therefore a part of world capitalist reaction.

This same crew is holding a dinner on March 23.

They have the infernal crust to announce in their advertising that the proceeds of the dinner are "to further the work of the Kropotkin museum at Moscow." In the capital of the only country in the world where such a museum could be established, because of the power and toleration of the Soviet government, the murderers of the workers and peasants are being supported by individuals in this country so shamelessly that they capitalize the name sacred to every revolutionist.

It will be interesting and instructing to watch the development of the entente cordiale between the labor fakers, the agents of capitalist government, and these friends of "free speech."

All are enemies of the social revolution and will find a way to one anothers arms.

Ohio Miners' Problems

The convention of sub-district number 5 of District 6, United Mine Workers of America, now in session in Bellaire, Ohio, represents 18,000 workers. This is quite a good sized union for the American labor movement and the convention would be an important one even tho the sub-district were not a part of the largest union in the American Federation of Labor.

The left wing, organized around the Workers (Communist) Party and the Trade Union Educational League has much strength in this sub-district. At the convention it has the task of acquainting the membership with the left wing program and combatting the ineffective and "class peace" policies of the officialdom.

The convention is meeting at the time the coal barons are organizing their forces for a new drive on the union. There is much unemployment in Ohio and the union fields generally. There is need for an alliance with the railway workers to fight for the interests of both groups. There is the question of world unity of the trade union movement raised by the Red International of Labor Unions and sabotaged by the yellow bureaucrats of the Amsterdam International. There is the question of the recognition of Soviet Russia. There is the need for independent political action. There is the need for support of the strike of the Nova Scotia miners. There is the issue raised by the decision of the executive board of District 12 declaring unemployment councils "dual organizations." In addition to these pressing problems of general interest there are many questions of a local character.

The militants in the Bellaire convention have plenty to do. After it has adjourned they will have nothing to do but continue their fight for the left wing program among the rank and file but that is what militants are organized for.

Outlawing War

The Women's Peace Union, at conference held in New York recently, decided to throw all its energies into securing the passage of a federal amendment making war illegal.

This is the height of utter futility. Child-like trust and abiding faith in the processes of capitalist democracy can go no further.

In all probability the members of the Women's Peace Union are supporters of the child labor amendment, but the ease with which the child robbers prevented its ratification seems to have meant nothing to them.

War is a terrible thing, but there is something worse than war—the abysmal ignorance of the causes of war, the manner in which it is brought about and the role of capitalist government in war and peace.

Capitalist democracy is organized not to give but to prevent the effective expression of the millions who are used for cannon fodder when capitalism wants war. To attempt to use the machinery of capitalist government to outlaw war is like appointing a moonshiner as prohibition enforcement officer.

STAGE SET FOR BIG BATTLE AT MINERS' MEET

Progressive Is Elected; Fakers Oust Him

BELLAIRE, Ohio. March 10.—With the opening of the annual sub-district convention of the Eastern Ohio section, the stage is set for a battle between the progressive forces led by J. J. Hoge of this city and Frank Ledvinka, ex-socialist, subservient Lewis tool and present incumbent of the office of district president.

One of the big fights of the convention is expected to take place over the failure of the tellers' report to declare J. Buksa, of Yorkville, elected to the office of trustee. Buksa is an old time miner, but because he is paralysed, has not been able to work in the mines for several years. But his fellow workers in his local union think so much of Buksa that they keep his dues paid up for him.

The fakers now declare Buksa is not eligible to office in the ground that he is not working at his trade. But no objection was raised by the reactionaries when Buksa's candidacy was announced and none would be made now had he not been elected, and a progressive.

The dishonesty of the fakers is proven by the fact that a supporter of Ledvinka, by name Hemsly, who is not working at his trade was declared elected by Ledvinka's tellers. Thru the fact of his election as trustee Buksa would be a delegate to the next convention automatically and a teller. This is what the fakers feared most.

Another Forgery

Before the convention opened, the usual red fire campaign was organized by the yellow socialist Ledvinka and his cohorts. A fake telegram after the fashion of the British tory forgery was produced in order to prove that the Communists were trying to capture the convention. This telegram was addressed to a progressive in the Eastern Ohio subdistrict and came from Cleveland. The name of Papcun a member of the Young Workers League was signed to it.

It happens that Ledvinka was in Cleveland on the very date this telegram was sent and that Papcun denies having sent it. This was part of the campaign launched by the fakers against Communist influence at the convention.

The convention heard the reports of the officers which were mainly tirades against radicalism, amalgamation, the nationalization of mines and against an alliance with the railroad workers. Ledvinka the yellow socialist outdid all others in his fury against anything that smacked of progress. He railed against the program of the progressive miners but failed to say what their program demanded. He defended John Lewis and asked why progressives don't go to non-union fields. Evidently this faker believes that the sub-district is his personal property and that all those who do not agree with him are trespassing on his property.

War On Radicals

The progressive miners retort by asking why John L. Lewis does not spend the union funds organizing the scab coal fields instead of draining the treasury in carrying on crusades against the radicals and progressive leaders like Alexander Howat, Duncan MacDonald, Tom Meyerscough and Jim MacLachlan. They point out that as a result of Lewis' treachery, the open shop coal operators are sapping the foundations from under the union.

When the tellers report on the voting for officers in the last sub-district convention was made, J. J. Hoge asked why a tabulated vote was not sent to the local unions before the convention as prescribed by the constitution. District President Lee Hall, in good jesuit style explained that the constitution did not specify when voting returns should be sent.

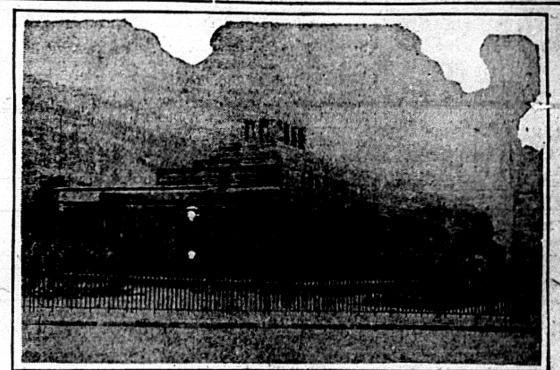
John Cinque, sub-district vice-president, attacked strikes in his report and declared they were seldom justified. He urged the union label, tho sub-district officials use scab paper for letter heads tho using union label on printing.

For Progressive Platform

In a circulation issued by the progressives before the last sub-district election, the miners were urged to support the progressive candidates. They stood for the progressive program and pledged to use the influence of the sub-district office as well as the collective might of the miners in order to secure the release from prison of Dominick Venturato and the other miners who were in Moundsville prison. This reminder of their treachery to the imprisoned miners infuriated the officials, and they issued a tirade against the progressives, endeavouring to bolster up their treachery with a mountain of lies.

The fact is that the only worth while support given to Dominick Venturato and the other victims of the coal operators was given by the progressive miners and the Communist elements in the organization, and their followers.

Plan to Make Lenin's Tomb "World Shrine"



Plans for rebuilding the tomb of Lenin in Moscow into "an eternal shrine for all the world" are being made by the Soviet government. Architect Schusev says the mausoleum proper will be a marble cube, to symbolize eternity. The tomb is seen in its present state. It is located below the center of the Kremlin wall on the Red Square. The coffin rests under a glass case, and the head of the dead Soviet leader is visible to visitors.

Coal Miners Support Militants

Cappellini, is Stanley Edmunds, who poses as a progressive, but the first plank in his platform is "100 per cent Americanism." This shows what kind of a progressive bird he is.

Neither Brennan nor Cappellini have any criticism of Lewis tho both candidates are firing their heaviest mud guns at one another.

Traitor Speaks

Cappellini spoke to a meeting of miners in the Pittston district a few days ago during which he urged co-operation with the employers as a solution of the unemployment situation. He declared the Pennsylvania Coal company had mines working part time because they could not operate at a loss under the present union rules. He wanted the miners to join with the bosses in helping to operate the mines at a profit.

After Cappellini got thru speaking, most of the miners left in disgust and attended a rank and file meeting and demanded to have an explanation from their officers as to what they meant by a "fair day's work." Cappellini tried to explain:

Defends Operators

"There is nothing in the agreement between the United Mine Workers and the operators to compel the companies to operate the colliery if they feel that it is not a paying proposition." He then stated that the Ewen No. 6 collieries were not getting as much time as other collieries because of the great operating expense. "The officials of the company feel that the collieries can be operated without the company losing money, provided there is co-operation between the company and the miners."

This is the renagade Cappellini who is now fighting for his political life with the miners he has betrayed.

The program of the progressive miners on which they are waging the election makes the following demands:

"The election of their three representatives to district offices; calling of a special international convention for the purpose of re-instating Alex Howat, Tom Meyerscough and other so-called progressives; nationalization of the mines; recognition of Soviet Russia; a six-hour day and five-day week; abolition of the conciliation board; elimination of the executive right to revoke local charters; and a revolutionary working class party striving for the abolition of capitalism and the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government."

The progressive platform follows:

"The general grievance comittee is in a position to expose the violations of the constitution by the union officials and the violation of the agreement by the operators. The general grievance committee is close to, and responsive to the rank and file, therefore, our support should be given these committees, so that they will develop a militant leadership.

Against Conciliators

"Many years of experience with the anthracite fields that no just consideration or setlement of grievances has been received or can ever be expected from this body.

"Insofar as we have repudiated the conciliation board, which cannot and does not understand the problems of the miners, we insist that when grievances are being discussed and settled the rank and file must be represented.

"We call upon the miners of District No. 1 to demand settlements of all grievances be made within 30 days.

"We demand a minimum day rate for the contract miners and laborers that will assure us a day's wages when we must wait for cars, timbers, tools and other material.

"We demand the abolition of topping.

"The progressive miners contend the industry must furnish a living wage to every coal miner, and this can only be done by a six-hour day with the same wages we receive while working eight hours. We also demand the five-day week.

Rank And File Elections

"The right to revoke charters should be denied union officials who outlaw thousands of miners who rebel against intolerable conditions.

"We demand the district and the international constitution be amended to provide for the election by the rank and file of all organizers and traveling auditors.

"We call upon the miners of District No. 1 to endorse a call for a special international convention to reinstate Alex Howat, Tom Meyerscough, militant progressives into our union to help us in our fight.

"There must be a fighting alliance between the men who dig coal and those who haul it. In the event of a national strike the miners and transport workers must help one another.

"The only solution for major evils lies in government ownership and workers' control of the mines under the direction of competent miners in the interest of society.

Revolutionary Party

"We stand for independent working class political action under the leadership of a revolutionary working class political party striving for the abolition of capitalism and the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government.

"We demand an intensive organization campaign be started to bring every miner into the United Mine Workers of America.

"We demand equal wages, working conditions and rights in the union for young miners.

"The progressive miners demand the unconditional recognition of Soviet Russia, not only because trade with Russia would stimulate industry in this country, but also because the Russian workers by their heroic struggles have abolished capitalist exploitation and now own the industries and run them in the interests of the working class.

"The progressive miners are unconditionally opposed to all secession and dual union movements. We must remain within the U. M. W. of A. and settle our differences and problems there in a practical and constructive manner."

BRITISH WARSHIP FITTED OUT FOR ROYAL CAKEEATER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, March 10.—The battle cruiser Repulse which is taking the prince of Wales and his retinue to Cape Town for his visit to His Majesty's South African reale state was not intended for a cabaret. Considerable diffeculty is being experienced in housing 200 trunks, 200 chests and several thousand bottles of choise intoxicating drinks.

In addition to ninety servants, the prince is accompanied by a small battalion of women. In view of the fact that there are 1,250 able bodied seamen on board the "Repulse" besides the prince's male entourage, another army is required to protect the women for the prince, who must dance or he is not happy.

LEGISLATURE IN NORTH DAKOTA FAILS FARMERS

Did Nothing for Poor Agrarians

BISMARCK, N. D., March 10.—The session of the North Dakota legislature has come to an end and it did not accomplish anything of importance for the poor farmers of the state. Among the workers generally there was but very little interest in what was going on in the assembly, and its work throughout is but additional proof of the Communist contention that the political machinery of capitalism cannot be used by the workers to throw the capitalist robbers off their backs.

Farmers Representatives Confused.

It is surprising how many nonpartisan league legislators were really disgusted with the entire legislative proceedings. However, as it was, they did not even stand for their own program. When Comrade Miller introduced his bills and resolutions providing for state hail insurance and the functioning of the Bank of North Dakota as a real bank for the farmers and the workers, thus merely giving expression to the ideas embodied in the original program of the league in North Dakota, the large majority of the league legislators themselves voted against these measures.

The League Is Dead.

There is talk now of "re-organizing" the league in North Dakota, but this move is sponsored for the most part by league office-holders and politicians who want to be close to the public trough. As an effective organization in the state the league is absolutely dead and it cannot be re-built on the old basis, but this is something the league pussyfooters refuse to see.

The farmers and the workers of North Dakota, who are now in a state of doubt and hesitation as far as political and economic movements are concerned, will eventually discover that getting "immediate" relief through the capitalist political institutions is but an illusion and will more and more turn to Communism as the only escape from the capitalist system that oppresses them. Our big task at present is to bring before them the inspiring message of hope of the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

IRISH ELECTION CAMPAIGN NOT PEACE POW-WOW

BELFAST, Ireland, March 10.—Polling for seats declared vacant when members of the national group in the Dail resigned from that body, will take place tomorrow.

The election campaign was not without excitement, and in the imbroglio Father O'Flanagan, stormy petrel of the Irish priesthood was one of the actors. O'Flanagan is one of the best orators in Ireland and has been engaged in politics since the Sinn Fein movement was founded. He has had several scraps with Irish bishops and the hard shelled pulpit pounders detest him.

The Free State parish priests denounce him as a priest without a bishop but O'Flanagan gives as well as he recives. One of the principal issues before the voters is the "hanging bill" which the Free State government is rushing thru the Dail.

GILLESPIE, Ill., March 10.—Catching fire from burning rubbish in a nearby cemetery, the $10,000 christian church here was a mass of charred timbers today despite the work of fire departments from Carlinville, Staunton and Benld.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THERE is considerable consternation among movie fandom in the United States over the rumor that Gloria Swanson, instead of hitching on to a bonafide marquis in her latest hymenial adventure, only succeeded in drawing an unsoused bartender from the matrimonial grab bag. Some people are uncharitable enough to believe this is why Gloria got sick, just about the time Ebert of Germany Branting of Sweden, King George of England and Mussolini of Italy either passed in their checks or looked as if they were on their way.

GLORIA is not so bad in the movies. At least there are worse. She was popuplar at the ticket office, but what couldn't she do to the dollars of the rotarians if instead of plain Gloria Swanson, the name "Marquise de la Falaise" could be blazoned from the electric signs? The sad news has gone out from no less respectable a French journal than the Quotidien, that the marquis turned out to be an ex-bartender. He revealed his real identity when he accidentally got sober.

THE Polish socialists are somewhat worried over the intentions of Germany towards certain territory which was allotted by the treaty of Versailles to Poland. Premier Grabski assured the socialists that everything would be alright, that France would take care of her vassal. Just the same the socialists were not satisfied, so they cabled to Leon Blum, chief of the French socialist parliamentary fraction, asking him to use his good offices with the French government in behalf of maintaining the treaty of Versailles in all its pristine iniquity.

AT the rate things are going in America, the Civil Liberties Bureau will have nothing to do but send representatives to bourgeois banquets to give tips on how to extract the teeth of radicalism or act as a defense committee to protect the stoolpigeon Abramovich against the heckling of the American workers who resent this gentleman's crusade against the first workers' republic in human history. The following statement attributed to Roger Baldwin, director of the Civil Liberties Bureau, is taken from the Great Falls Town Topics, and is worthy of reproduction:

"THERE has not been a single case since May of a department of justice representative acting as a provocative agent or engaging in unlawful searches, or seizures in connection with radical or labor activities, or gathering evidence by such unlawful means as tapping telephones or opening mail. There have been no raids on reds and no effort to interfere with the ordinary activities of radical parties and publications. The reversal of the Daugherty-Burns policies has been complete.

• • •

"MOST of the detectives whom Burns brought into the department have been let out and their places have been taken by investigators with law school training. The files of the department have been closed to the professional patriotic organizations which formerly got so much of their inspiration and misinformation from government secret service reports. We note these facts with satisfaction and with the hope that the new system is strong enough to weather the accidents of political change."

SO the golden millenium has arrived! The capitalist beast has been transformed into an angel and immediately after Wall Street got such a stranglehold on the government that even the anarchists gasped for a little while. But after all, the anarchists are easily handled. Let the employers fleece the working class; let their government deport radicals; let them suppress meetings, as they are doing right now, let them send finks into the unions and working-class organizations as they are doing now, but let them do it in a "ladylike manner" and the ferocious powder puff anarchists of Greenwich village will go to sleep with their heads resting snugly in the fatty wrinkles of capitalism's belly.

JAPAN'S 3,400,000 UNEMPLOYED 40 PER CENT INTELLECTUALS

TOKIO, Japan, March 11.—Unemployed in Japan now total 3,400,000, according to figures compiled by the union chambers of commerce. The report says that 40 per cent of the out of work are of intellectual or non-manual labor class, and these find it virtually impossible to get even part-time work.

Bosses Cut Wages and Increase Hours

By LELAND OLDS,

A conflict between labor and capital in England involving the entire trade union movement is thinly veiled in wage negotiations now in progress. The industrial crisis created by foreign competition is giving the employing class a toehold to resist the efforts of labor to secure decent standards.

CAPITALIST PARTY TOOLS AIDING SHYSTERS, BOSSES, LABOR FAKERS, RAPE FARMER-LABOR FEDERATION

By C. A. HATHAWAY.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Mar. 11.—Last Saturday the reactionary politicians within the farmer-labor party made their first effort to destroy the farmer-labor federation and to steal the farmer-labor party away from the rank and file workers and farmers and turn it over to a group of middle-class office seekers.

County conventions were held in each county thruout the state to elect delegates to a state convention to be held in the Labor Temple at St. Paul on March 20.

In the farmer-labor conventions in the past, delegates have been elected from labor organizations, co-operatives, and from county organizations of the farmers' nonpartisan league. This has always resulted in a state convention that was tinged very strongly with left wing sentiment. The farmer-labor party as a result of this was making rapid progress toward the left.

Was Rank and File Body.

A year ago the Minnesota farmer-labor federation was formed, made up purely of rank and file elements and gave expression to somewhat of a class program. This threw consternation into the ranks of the petty bourgeoisie leadership that had con-

Buffalo Monopoly Pays No Heed to Protests

By FRANKLIN P. BRUCE.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 11.—The people of Buffalo, N. Y., have for the past week been in the throes of an excited discussion over the threatened abandonment by the International Railway Co. of car service on five trolley lines, patronized chiefly by workers. Meetings by civic and business organizations have been held, protesting against discontinuance of service. Even the chamber of commerce, the trusted guardian of vested interests, ostentatiously "protested" and surprised the gullible ones by appearing for once to espouse the cause of the "people."

New York state, like many of the other "sovereign" states, has a public service commission whose function ostensibly is to regulate utility corporations and protect the people, but in fact, was created to stabilize the securities and legalize the piracy of all utilities in the state. In this capacity it has admirably succeeded for the past 15 years.

Mayor Schwab swore by the beard of the prophets that he would see to it that the "people got service if he had to declare an emergency," and would permit jitneys to operate. Commissioner Perkins, whose obsession is municipal ownership as a panacea, lampooned the railway officials in a

DAILY WORKER LOCAL AGENTS LAY PLANS FOR BIG SUB DRIVE

"Every party member at least one sub," is the slogan of the DAILY WORKER branch agents in local Chicago. Tuesday evening the branch agents held a joint meeting with the new city propaganda committee to plan Chicago's part of the national subscription campaign being conducted by the DAILY WORKER beginning March 15.

The first consideration before the meeting was house to house sub-getting. The DAILY WORKER promised to send a bundle order of 100 dailies to any address designated by any branch. These are to be distributed to one hundred houses, the same houses, every day for one week. At the end of the week those houses are to be solicited for subs by the branch members.

The plan was adopted by the meeting. But that wasn't enough for the propaganda committee. The committee decided to begin with a territory of its own next Monday, distribute the papers for a week and go for subs a week from next Sunday. The com-

One-Half Million Illinois Women Ask Eight Hour Day

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 11.—There are 536,990 women working in industry in Illinois and nearly 100,000 of them are married women, arguments for the eight-hour day for women before the joint senate and house industrial affairs committees revealed.

The joint house and senate committees on industrial affairs, will hold another public hearing on the bill on March 18.

B. F. Johnstone, of the Belden Manufacturing company of Chicago, in opposing the bill, stated that "My 600 women employees do not favor an eight hour day." It was noticeable, however, that none of the 600 employes were brought in to corroborate the statement.

Harry P. Hill, secretary of the Illinois chamber of commerce, has arrived in Springfield to lend his support to the state police bill, aimed to provide a constabulary force to help the employers break strikes.

STEEL ORDERS SHOW INCREASE FROM BOTH LAST MONTH AND 1924

NEW YORK, March 11.—Forward orders of the United States Steel corporation increased 247,448 tons in the month ended February 28, according to the monthly statement of the corporation published today.

Unfilled tonnage February 28 was 5,284,771 tons, against 5,037,321 tons on January 31; and 4,816,676 on December 31, 1924. One year ago the corporation reported unfilled orders of 4,912,901 tons. This was 371,870 less than the orders reported at present.

CROOKS CHANGE SIDES OVER THE TRACTION STEAL

"Labor" Officials Drop in Soft Place

The mayoralty campaign in Chicago has begun, with a re-alignment of the political gangs on the issue of the traction ordinance. The Hearst newspapers, supporting Thompson as their next candidate for mayor, are opposing the traction ordinance. Mayor Dever has lined up the Tribune, News and Post and the bankers who are trying to retain control of the traction lines for a long term of years.

The Chicago Federation of Labor continuing its blundering policy of supporting the friends of the bankers and the enemies of the workers, followed Mayor Dever right into the camp of the traction magnates. Olander, Walker, Fitzpatrick and the labor burocracy were loath to break with Dever. They postponed action on the traction ordinance until the last minute. While the Workers (Communist) Party in the aldermanic campaign was exposing the traction steal, and demanding control of the traction lines by the workers who run them, the Illinois and Chicago Federation of Labor were begging Mayor Dever for "more time" to consider his traction proposal.

Now, however, these labor politicians have found a soft place to land and have flopped to the Hearst-Thompson combination just as the Tribune flopped to the support of Dever. The "labor" officials have taken part in the re-alignment of crooks, and have presumably decided to support a different set of crooks.

Mayor Dever, speaking before the Rotary club, declared that "The most careful and conservative bankers of Chicago say the plan is feasible." It has been disclosed that R. R. McCormick, who dictates the editorial policy of the Chicago Tribune, acts as attorney for the Chicago surface lines as head of the law firm of McCormick, Kirkland, Patterson and Fleming. The Chicago Evening Post is owned by the Teapot Domer, John Shaffer, who is a heavy stockholder in the traction lines. The editor of the Chicago News is also said to be owner of a large block of stock in the traction lines. All these papers are supporting Dever's ordinance.

Mary McDowell, Raymond Robbins and other "liberals" have given their support to the Dever-Tribune alliance and are working for the success of the traction steal.

CAL AND DAWES VAINLY DEFEND AGENT OF TRUST

Seek Servant Whose Corruption Is Unknown

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 11.—President Coolidge will decide at breakfast tomorrow morning whether or not he will again submit the name of Charles Warren of Michigan, to the senate as his choice for attorney general. Warren's reputation received a severe battering in the senate prior to the vote to reject him. Even the republican senator from Warren's own state, Senator Couzens of Michigan, declared he thought Warren unfit to be attorney general. One senator declared he "Owed it to Michigan and to the United States to reject Coolidge's choice."

Coolidge called Warren on the telephone immediately after the senate had slapped him in the face, and arranged for one of his famous breakfast parties with Warren to decide on a course of action. Coolidge wants to re-submit Warren's name, but the republican senators have had enough of the sugar trust lawyer and are urging Coolidge to select some corporation lawyer whose adherence to big business is not quite so well known.

The senate will probably adjourn for the summer shortly, after considering the Isle of Pines treaty ceding the island to Cuba. The treaty is twenty years old.

Coolidge's hobby, the "world court," another method of chaining the workers of Europe to the gold of American financiers, has been buried in the foreign relations committee for three years, and will probably not be brot on the senate floor until the next session.

GERMANY PAID DEARLY TO BURY TRAITOR TO WORKING CLASS, EBERT

BERLIN, March 11.—The Prussian diet was thrown into an uproar today when a deputy asserted that the funeral of President Ebert cost the reich 3,000,000 marks or $750,000 which he called "an irresponsible waste."

Socialist deputies shouted: "Scoundrel!"

The resultant tumult forced an adjournment.

CARPENTERS ARE CURIOUS OVER ATTORNEY'S BILL

Refused to Pay It Unless Itemized

Chicago carpenters are keenly interested in an expense bill for $5,000, submitted by Attorney Hope Thompson to the carpenters' district council for services rendered to the union, to Hary Jensen and divers others.

Skeptical carpenters suspect that this is the third time the same bill has been submitted after being twice paid. Perhaps they are mistaken. It may be an exact duplicate of the two others. However, the delegates to the district council refused to recommend payment despite a big fight for the $5,000, waged by Harry Jensen, who is a very particular friend of Hope Thompson's. The delegates insisted on securing an itemized bill. It may prove interesting.

For Hatching Plot.

It is rumored in carpenter circles that part of this fee is for legal advice given by Thompson to Jensen when he was hatching the plot to expel the militant carpenters from the union. All this may come out in the wash.

The Daily Worker was informed yesterday by an old timer in the carpenters' union that Second Vice-President Lackey, who presided at last Monday night's meeting of Local 181, came to Chicago with the object of using rough house tactics on the local, but when he got acquainted with their attitude, he changed his mind and brought out the soft soap.

An Appropriate Man.

"No man ever had a more appropriate name than Lackey has," declared the carpenter. "When he learned that he could not intimidate the membership, he switched around and began to pull the Pollyanna stuff. Everything was alright or would be alright. It was alright, I suppose to take the bread and butter out of the mouths of the active members of the local who were railroaded by his underlings But we will teach those lackeys of 'Czar' Hutcheson, that the rank and file are not as dumb or as meek as they thought they were."

The Daily Worker was sold outside the meeting place of Local 181 last Monday night, and Lackey warned the members against believing everything they see in the papers. There is a reason as "grape nuts" used to say. The progressives have the reactionaries on the run.

TEAPOT DOMERS IN MOCK TRIAL USE WHITEWASH

Marshals Give Silent Aid to Oil Trust

CHEYENNE, Wyo., March 11.—Government officials themselves have blocked the return to the government of the Teapot Dome oil leases which ex-Secretary of the Treasury Albert Fall was bribed to turn over to the Sinclair oil interests.

This was revealed by Owen D. Roberts, one of the lawyers appointed by President Coolidge to take part in the mock trial now going on here.

The Chicago United States deputy marshal, who was given subpoenas to serve on Robert Stewart, president of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, failed to serve these subpoenas. Stewart was in Chicago, yet the marshal's office has held the subpoenas since last December without an attempt to serve them. Stewart was allowed to flee the country, and now says, defiantly, that he will return from Paris when he pleases.

The general belief here is that the government's case will collapse, and the Teapot leases remain in the hands of Harry Sinclair, mainly bcause of the half hearted attempts of government officials, who themselves are implicated in the theft of the leases, to prosecute the case.

RANK AND FILE REPUDIATED BY LEWIS FAKERS

Refuse Seat to Duly Elected Unionist

BELLAIRE, Ohio, March 11.—The refusal of the tellers to declare John Buksa, veteran coal miner, elected to the office of trustee, was upheld at today's session of the annual convention of the eastern Ohio coal diggers, despite very strong opposition from the rank and file delegates.

The importance of this sub-district to the Lewis machine here is attested to by the presence of Lee Hall and his forces. Hall was in the chair when the motion disqualifying Buksa was jammed thru.

Ledvinka Attacked Buksa.

A bitter fight occurred on the tellers' report. Ledvinka, renegade socialist, charged Buksa with villyfying him, and with distributing Communist propaganda. Buksa is partially paralyzed, but this did not deter Ledvinka from taunting him with the ability to pass out Workers Party leaflets. Costello, a delegate from Buksa's local, charged the fakers with attacking Buksa because he opened the eyes of the workers. Buksa was a member of the union for twenty years, declared Costello. He took an active part in the 1922 strike and went to West Virginia when the big fight was on.

Costello told how Buksa prevented imported workers from scabbing on the strikers and declared that instead of Buksa being condemned for distributing Communist literature he should be honored for bringing the propaganda of the Workers Party home to the workers and bring them the message of international solidarity.

An Old Veteran.

One of the arguments used against Buksa as an excuse for declaring him ineligible to office after being elected by the rank and file men that he is not working at his trade. J. J. Hoge, asked Ledvinka why this rule did not apply to the cockney-visaged monocle-eyed Ellis Searles, who edits the Miners' Journal, tho he could not tell a coal mine from a cess pool and was not a union member. Ledvinka did not reply to this query, but Roy, one of the district office gang said Buksa had no right to be a member of the union, and should be distributing the Miners' Journal instead of Workers Party literature.

The morning session was occupied with speeches by Lee Hall and his good man, Roy, preparatory to opening fire on Buksa. Hall told of the deplorable conditions in the mining fields. Only one-half of the membership in the Ohio district are able to pay dues.

Roy attacked the progressives without mentioning names and charged them with disrupting the union. International board member, Watkins, talked on conditions in West Virginia. He then traveled to Nova Scotia and lied about the progressive leaders there. Watkins declared the radicals forced a wage reduction on the miners. The fact is that the radicals were removed from office by Lewis for resting the wage cut forced on the miners by the British Empire Steel company. Watkins did not tell the convention that the miners of Nova Scotia kicked the stoolpigeons of John L. Lewis out of the district at the first opportunity and elected a complete progressive ticket to office. This same progressive leadership is now engaged in a mighty battle with the great coal and steel corporation.

New German President.

BERLIN, Germany, March 11.—Dr. Walter Simons, former foreign minister, will be sworn in as acting president of Germany tomorrow. He will serve only until the election of a new president, made necessary by the death of the social-democratic President Ebert.

Argue Legality of Religion.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 11.—Arguments are now being heard in the United States supreme court over the legality of the teaching of religion in private and perochial schools. The issue revolves around a law passed in Oregon in 1922.

TEAPOT HARRY ON TRIAL IN MOSCOW FOR BREAKING PACT

MOSCOW, Russia, March 11.—The trial of the Soviet government against the Sinclair Oil interests was opened here today. The government contends that the government's rights were nullified when the Sinclair company neglected to fulfil its contractual obligations.

BELLAIRE COAL DIGGERS REPLY TO REACTIONARY

Ledvinka Refused to Testify for Venturatto

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BELLAIRE, Ohio, March 11.—More than any one thing about the reply of Frank Ledvinka, president of this sub-district, to the program of the progressive miners, that part dealing with the case of Dominick Venturatto, is arousing most anger. Ledvinka "invites" the progressives to do what they can to help the sub-district officials to get Venturatto out.

The militants here know that the defense that was made of Venturatto and Dan Agosta and the other miners in the state prison, was made because of them and that the failure of the sub-district officials to do anything to get them out rests almost wholely on the shoulders of Frank Ledvinka.

A defense committee of militants was formed when Venturatto and the others were arrested and indicted and they carried on the battle to keep these men from prison. When the committee went to the officials and asked for help they were usually met with excuses or vague explanations or the statement that "that's impractical."

Would Have Won Case.

The defense committee wanted the sub-district officials to get the sheriff to testify for the defense in both the cases of Dan Agosta and Venturatto. This plan—which lawyers declared at the time would have won the cases—did not meet with the approval of the Ledvinka machine. The sheriff was called as a state's witness and both Venturatto and Agosta were sentenced to life.

They were foreigners. They had little influence. They "had to take the rap."

But when Bob Farmer, organizer of the sub-district, who was arrested at the same time as the other defendants and for participation in the same alleged crime came on trial, he was defended adequately. He was aquitted. The officialdom of this sub-district nearly broke their necks in their efforts to help get him off. Bob Farmer was a man with enough influence in the sub-district to raise hell with the officials. He knew enough to compel Ledvinka and the other officials to "come thru." They came and Farmer was acquitted. Every sort of political pressure at the command of the officials was marshalled to help get Farmer out.

Refused to Testify.

The sheriff who had testified for the state as the state had wanted him to testify in the cases of Agosta and Venturatto, testified for Farmer when Farmer's case was tried. The defense committee of the militants had said that the cases of Venturatto and Agosta would be won if the sheriff testified for them. That they were right was proven when the sheriff came to the rescue of Farmer and he got off.

Now Ledvinka comes out with an invitation to the progressive miners to help, but says, "so far none of these master minds have offered any constructive ideas."

That the local capitalist sheet which howled for the blood of Venturatto and Agosta, runs the reply of the Ledvinka machine to the progressives in full does not add to the popularity of that reply.

McAndrew's Plan of Abolishing Councils Criticized by Board

Superintendent of Schools McAndrew's campaign to destroy the teachers' councils was criticized in the board of education yesterday afternoon. "Only by the widest stretch of the imagination could the superintendent's plan be called teachers' councils," said Mrs. W. S. Hefferan, chairman of the committee on administration at their meeting yesterday. Mrs. Hefferan was speaking of McAndrew's substitute for teachers' participation in the schools which was in effect, the abolition of the councils.

"I have been ashamed of the fact that the old council has been ruthlessly and suddenly destroyed," Trustee Mullenbach said.

The McAndrew plan was again referred to the superintendent yesterday, and may be voted on later by the administration committee.

It is now likely that McAndrew will be temporarily balked in his plan of choking off teacher representation in the public schools system of Chicago.

Say Police in Crime Trust.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 11.—Legislative investigation of the Chicago police department was asked in a resolution presented to the house today. It is charged that a "crime trust" is operating in Chicago, with the acquiescence and even the support of the Chicago police department officials.

Mussolini Becomes Worse.

ROME, Italy, March 11.—Premier Mussolini has suddenly taken a turn for the worse, it is rumored here. He is said to be suffering from intestinal ulcerations, which may require an operation.

I. W. W. ATTORNEY DISBARRED BY DECREE SAYING GENERAL STRIKE AND FREE SPEECH ARE UNLAWFUL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OLYMPIA, Wash., March 6.—Elmer Smith, known as "the I. W. W. lawyer," who was the legal advisor of the I. W. W. in their defense of their union hall against an American Legionnaire mob in 1919 and later their co-defendant and attorney in a farcial trial which victimized eight loggers into the penitentiary where they still remain, is now disbarred by a verdict of the Washington state supreme court.

The Usual Fair Trial.

The case was carried up from the proceeding against Smith by the Washington Bar Association. The supereme court decision sustains the disbarment and does so in words that leave no room for doubt as to what class the supreme court thinks its duty to uphold. There was, as usual, the appearance of a "fair and impartial" hearing, with the usual dissenting opinion being given by Judge Tolman, but as usual the result is against the cause of the workers.

Being a lawyer and not a worker, Smith was not eligible to I. W. W. membership, but the court simply ignores that as well as the real reason for his disbarment, his speeches and activities in behalf of the I. W. W. prisoners who were railroaded into the Walla Walla prison for defending their hall as they had a legal right to do against attack by agents of the lumber trust in the guise of "patriotic American legionnaires."

A General Strike Is Unlawful.

That the "right to strike," cherished by all believers in democracy in the I. W. W. as "legal," is also viewed quite differently by the court, is shown in the following excerpt of the court's decision:

"There are also others, members of the organization, in confinement for more heinous crimes. These the defendant has been pleased to denominate 'political prisoners,' and persons punished because of their opinions, and has in his public addresses advocated a general strike, a strike 'that will paralyze all the industries of the state,' as a means of coercing their liberation."

This the court holds to be in violation of his oath as an attorney.

The court then recites other statements of defendant made in addresses which it construes as "incitement to crime."

Free Speech Legal—If You Say Nothing.

In addition to interpreting a strike as a crime, the court goes on to say that, as a logical consequence, even advocating such "unlawful" means is not "permissible" under capitalist "democracy." This neatly expressed, means that workers have a "legal right" to "free speech" and to advocate "a change of government"—yet are forbidden by capitalist law from saying anything which really points out the way to change it. The court says:

"The defendant," says the court, "is freely conceded the right to advocate, either publicly or privately, changes, in the present form of government, however great or however fundamental such changes may be, so long as his advocacy is confined to means sanctioned by law.

"But he oversteps permissible bounds when he advocates changes by criminal or other unlawful means,t and this the evidence demonstrated he has done, both directly and indirectly."

Reds Capture Wrangel Ship.

SHANGHAI, China, March 11. — A battle between Russian Soviet supporters, who boarded the warship Oskotsk and remnants of Wrangel's counter-revolutionary white guard fleet quartered on the warship Monguguy, is said to have taken place here. The Soviet government has demanded the return of these ships to Russia by the Chinese government.

Make Bosses Respect Agreement.

NEW YORK, N. Y., March 9. — Charging their employers with violation of union agreements, 175 button workers employed by four firms went out on strike and did not return to work until the companies promised to observe all the terms of the agreement.

The strike lasted only a few days.

Bread Price Up Here

Bread prices have advanced sharply in nearly every city in the country, and loaves of bread have been made smaller, Thomas F. King told the American society of bakery engineers meeting at the Hotel Sherman. He declared that bread will advance again in Chicago soon.

Krassin and Herriot Talk Trade

LYONS, France, Mar. 10.—Premier Herriot visited the Soviet Russian exhibit at the Lyons fair here, and conversed with Leonid Krassin, Russian ambassador, on measures for active commercial and industrial relations with Soviet Russia. Herriot was particularly interested in Russian tobacco, woods and foodstuffs.

Agricultural Worker is Charman of I.W.W. Executive Board

Carl Kellar, an agricultural worker is the new chairman of the general executive board, I. W. W. He has been a member for almost 10 years and in 1921 was branch secretary in Minneapolis of Industrial Union 110 the agricultural unit of the wobblies.

FORWARD GANG PREPARES OMAHA TO MEET RAPHAEL

Begins by Mopping Up Labor Lyceum

OMAHA, Nebr., March 11.—This city experienced its first taste of right-wing "socialist" tactics last Sunday evening when these enemies of the working class and Soviet Russia organized themselves into a mob to get control of the Labor Lyceum.

The Usual Stuff.

When the left wing group, representing the bonafide stockholders came into the meeting, which had been illegally called for the election of a board of directors, they immediately realized that the meeting had ben deliberately packed by non-stockholders, acting at the behest of the paid agent of the Daily Forward.

Comrade Jonisch, secretary of the Labor Lyceum association, requested a roll call so that the rights of the bonafide stockholders would be protected and outsiders eliminated. This, of course, was howled down. A stockholder then moved to adjourn the meeting because of its illegality. This too, was voted down by the non-stockholders.

Social Pacifists Get Violent.

Secretary Jonisch then stated that the meeting was illegal and, as secretary of the Labor Lyceum association, could not be a participant. Several of the outsiders attempted to strong arm Jonisch, but were prevented from doing so thru the interference of a broad-shouldered stockholder, altho they succeeded in taking away his roll-call sheet and minutes.

The left wing group of bonafide stockholders, fully forty of the hundred present, then arose and left the meeting in a body. On leaving the building they were surprised to see three policement stationed at the door It was afterwards learned that they had been called by a non-union painting contractor who argues that he "cannot afford to hire union men."

How's This For a "Labor" Lyceum?

The right wing then proceeded to name a board of directors consisting of a scab plasterer, the "insurance and Forward agent," a contracting plasterer, a non-union painting contractor, a grocer who has just built a $25,000 home, a boss tailor, and a shoe store proprietor with a bankruptcy record.

The right wing elements hope to isolate the friends of Soviet Russia and discredit the working class elements among the Jewish population of the city. Their only real achievement so far has been to bring about a much-needed spirit of solidarity among these very elements.

Consequently, the Abramovich meeting of the 23rd may mark the defeat of the enemies of Soviet Russia and their complete unmasking before the Jewish population of the city.

Family Quarrel Orphans Three.

SEDALIA, Mo., March 11.— Clyde Porter, 45, and his wife, Siebe, 32, were both shot and killed today culminating a family quarrel of long standing according to John Zinn, the slain man's father-in-law, who surrendered to authorities.

Porter first shot and killed his wife. Zinn in turn killing Porter. The shooting orphaned three children.

$500,000 Indiana Wind Storm.

CHINESE BOYCOTT U. S. GOODS AND GODS IN FOOCHOW

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

PEKIN, March 11.— The native boycott against American merchants and missionaries in Foochow a city of 700,000 population at the northern entrance to the Straight of Formosa, is assuming serious proportions, according to advices to the American legation here.

The trouble began when Chinese families were warned against sending their children to American missionary schools.

First Secretary Mayer of the American legation here is in Foochow attempting to settle the agitation.

LAWYER CLAIMS DESPOT'S POWER FOR HUTCHESON

Injunction Ruling Expected Today

DETROIT, Mich., March 11.—"The Communists 'll git ye if ye don't watch out!"

Thus warned Attorney Gilmore in his closing argument in Judge Hunt's court Monday morning as he closed the case of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners against Wm. (Bud) Reynolds for violation of the injunction that had been issued in answer to the "prayer" of the Indianapolis bureaucracy.

Carpenters Fill Court Room.

The court room, as on the other days that this case has been up, was crowded to capacity with interested carpenters. Day by day they have been filing into court. Day by day that have had impressed upon them that Hutcheson, Sharrock and company are far more concerned in preserving the sacredness of injunction law than in taking care of the interests of the carpenters here in Detroit. The business of the district council can go hang if only the fight to land Reynolds in jail for contempt shall succeed.

Gilmore argued lustily that the court has no right to look into the merits of Reynold's expulsion. The court, says Gilmore, can only take cognizance of the fact that Reynolds had maliciously and defiantly seen fit to break the injunction. And in support of this position Gilmore made many damaging admissions that will rise up in the future to haunt the dreams of the Hutcheson machine.

Well, Well! Listen To This!

"This injunction does not take any rights from Reynolds," declared Gilmore. The general executive board had taken from Reynolds his "political, economic, property, and personal rights" when they ordered him expelled.

And when Reynolds refused to acknowledge the jurisdiction of the G. E. B. in its illegal expulsion act, but insisted on attending the meetings of the carpenters, to preside in his own local union, and to serve as delegate from his local to the district council, when he refused to relinquish his rights of membership, the G. E. B. had gone to court praying for an injunction "to keep him expelled."

A Mere Difference of Opinion

The fact that every local union in this district had adopted resolutions condemning the expulsion and the injunction, and the further fact that practically the entire rank and file in Detroit have availed themselves of every opportunity to voice their disgust at the action of the officialdom, was dismissed by Gilmore as a "mere difference of opinion."

And then in an attempt to frighten the court he "touched like a summer breeze" on what he characterized as the real issue involved in this whole case.

His Honor Up Against It

"These Communists," declared this legal light, "are in the union to break it up, while the plaintiffs are primarily concerned in holding the organization together. This court is faced with the decision of punishing Reynolds or admitting that he is bigger than the court. Shall he be permitted to attack this court with impunity? His whole attitude is one of malicious defiance."

Judge Hunt announced that he would try to have his decision ready on Thursday, March 12.

The Poor, Starving Sugar Trust Cleans Up a Few Millions

NEW YORK, March 11.—The American Sugar Refining Co. has net income of $3,169,421.39 after paying operating expenses, interest on bonds and preferred dividend in the year ended December 31, 1924, according to the annual report of Carl Babst, president of the company submitted to the stockholders today.

Dawes--Morgan System Making Revolutionists in U. S. A. and Germany

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

TODAY, the unrest among the worst treated transportation workers must be great indeed judging by the fears expressed by the exploiting interests and their chosen mouthpieces. This from the New York Times:

> "One railway executive ventured the opinion yesterday that the seven-day week among transportation employes would eventually become a serious labor problem if something was not done to remedy the situation."

• • • •

One of the pen prostitutes on the financial pages of the Hearst publications, in opening one of several efforts on the subject of the seven-day week, declares:

> "If I had to work every week-day, all day Saturday, every Sunday, every holiday, from January 1 to December 31, and then continue the same treadmill for the next year and the next and the next in order to earn a bare living, I think I would become a revolutionist, in fact, I'm sure I would."

That's the way the Hearst writer tries to stir up the railroad managers, the railroad directors and the railroad security holders, according to his own claims.

• • • •

But the whole Hearst regime from "Willie, Himself" to Krazy Kat, will join in mutual resentment against any claim that there is a basis for a revolutionary movement in the United States. When labor really moves, thru efforts to organize, and thru the declaration of strikes, to wipe out the seven-day week, then the whole Hearst pack of newspapers is on the scent yelling for the blood of the working class, just as the Hearst sheet in San Francisco demanded the life of Tom Mooney, to satiate the blood lust of California's ruling class.

• • • •

Evidently Hearst is persuded that the seven-day week issue is one worth while playing with since, "enough protests are coming from seven-day workers, not only on the railroads, but in certain other industries, to fill every column and every page of this newspaper .... Worker after worker describes himself as nothing better than a slave." Here is just a little word-picture from the wife of a seven-day slave:

> "My husband has been working for railroads ever since he was 20 years old, and had worked seven days per week and all holidays, with no time off. He worked as station agent and operator. His wages were $45 per month, when he commenced, and continued the same for ten years."

• • • •

Charles M. Schwab, head of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, upon returning from his annual holiday in Europe, declares that the way to get rich is to decide on a definite business and then "put your heart and soul into it." Hearst publishes that dope, too.

Hundreds of thousands of railroad workers, many of them victims of the seven-day week, have found that the more they put their "hearts and souls" into the transportation business, under the "B. & O." plan for instance, the only result is more money for the railroad owners.

It was resentment against the brutalizing conditions on the railroads that developed the militant spirit in the Maintenance of Way Men's Union, that was betrayed by officials that the kept press loves to praise. It is under the lash of these conditions that the left wing movement on the railroads is again stirring, more class conscious, better prepared to deal with those who commit treason against them.

Hearst, The New York Times, the railroad owners can truly be assured that intelligent revolutionists are growing in numbers on the railroads of the country.

• • • •

Schwab also lauds the Dawes plan; thus voicing the spirit of American capitalism. The Dawes plan has forced Germany's biggest railroad strike. The Dawes plan, with its wage cuts, longer workday, inhuman conditions, is the ideal of American capitalism. The Dawes plan is solidifying the German working class in support of the German Communist Party. The Morgan-Dawes system, of which the seven-day work week is only one of many evils, creates revolutionists under the leadership of the American Workers (Communist) Party. Thus does capitalism drive toward its own inevitable downfall.

New Russo-Chinese-American Industry

HARBIN, March 11.—A new branch of industry has been started in Manchuria in the shape of local jute growing and jute bags production.

This product is badly wanted here as up till now Manchuria, which exports a big amount of agricultural products and consequently needs bags to transport the produce, had to provide them from abroad, mostly from India.

The new concern is a mixed Russo-Chinese-American company—the capital being American, the soil Chinese and the labor Russian. The "yama" (a kind of Manchurian and Mongolian jute) is to be grown on a big area some 400 lis south of Hailar, and the work is to be started this spring already.

Russia Grants Further Amnesty.

MOSCOW, March 11.—The presidium of the central executive committee of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics has resolved that the restitution of Russian emigrants in their rights of Soviet citizenship should be interpreted as being also an act of amnesty, by which those restored in such rights are discharged of their responsibilty for any crimes or offenses committed previously, excepting, however, such as may have been concealed by the applicants when applying for Soviet citizenship.

Soviet Suppies Chinese Railroad.

MOSCOW, March 11.—The Russo-Oriental chamber of commerce has undertaken to arrange for the participation of the Soviet industry in the supplying of materials for the Chinese Eastern railway.

It is learned that this idea has met with willing response, a number of trusts having promptly sent in corresponding offers.

Murderer Morton, Bull Moose Special Commander, Kicks Off

CHARLESTON, W. Va. March 11.—Quin Morton, first president of the Kanawha Coal Operators' association, a director of the National Coal association, and the commander of the murderous "Bull Moose Special," an armored train of company gunmen which, in 1913, ran thru the miners' tent colonies in the Paint Creek and Cabin Creek strikes, firing with machine guns into the tents and shanties occupied by women and children, is dead here today at the age of 68.

Haughton Talks with Coolidge

WASHINGTON, March 11.—Alanson B. Haughton, the newly appointed ambassador to Great Britain, who has just returned to Washington from Berlin, held a conference today with President Coolidge and Secretary of State Kellogg at which conditions in Europe, and particularly in Germany were discussed.

"Park" Price Associations

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 11.—The federal trade commission would be directed to investigate "open price" association, trade organizations exchanging or distributing price information, under a resolution introduced in the senate today by Senator McKeller, democrat of Tennessee.

Trust Gets Another Railroad

NEW YORK, March 11.—Acquisition of the control of the St. Louis and Southwestern railway by interests identified with the Rock Island and Southern Pacific railroad was announced today by Charles Hayden, chairman of the Rock Island lines.

Irish Labor Denounces Treason Bill

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DUBLIN, March 11—The Free State government may go to the country in a general election if the hopes of the republican party for a victory at the polls are fulfilled. There are nine seats being contested in today's balloting. Foreign Minister Fitzgerald declares, that in the event of the government losing fifty per cent of the constituencies, a new mandate will be demanded from the voters.

Republicans May Win.

The republicans never had a better opportunity for success in an election than now. The Free State has added to its unpopularity by sponsoring a so-called treason bill which is the most drastic ever introduced in Ireland, even in the darkest days of Dublin Castle rule. The Irish labor party has declared that its real object is an attack on labor. There is no question about this, as the bourgeois republicans are not out to overthrow the system on which the Free State government rests. They only want to replace the Free Staters.

Tho there are a few labor candidates in the field the struggle resolves itself into a contest between the Free State party and the republicans The unionists who are not entirely satisfied with the periodical anti-British whining of the Free State cat, which is a concession to Irish anti-British sentiment, are supporting the government slate. The government in return has announced its intention to strive for a modification of the income tax and other concessions.

If You Want to Be Buried to Music, See That It's Union

Because the Italian society insisted on hiring a scab band, the funeral of Lepardo Melone, a wealthy Italian grocer, was stopped Monday morning before it got two blocks from the house on the road to the church.

Officials of the Chicago Federation of Musicians and the business agent of the Chauffeurs' and Liverymen's Union, barred the way and blocked the cortege.

There was an argument for about fifteen minutes, then the scab band was fired and the deceased business man proceeded to his last resting place with flowers, but without music.

Los Angeles, Calif., Plans Paris Commune Celebration, Mar. 18

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 11.—The Labor Defense Council and the committee for International Workers' Aid of this city, both supported by many labor unions as well as unorganized workers, have arranged a splendid program for the celebration of the Paris Commune on Wednesday, March 18, at 8 o'clock p. m., at the Symphony Hall, 232 S. Hill St.

The well-trained chorus of the Juniors and the Young Workers' League under the direction of Minnie Karassik will render the songs of the working class. The greatly admired Russian violinist, Miss Zubrinsky will play. Regina Karissik, the talented dramatic star, will recite. Emanuel Levine will speak on "Why Criminal Syndicalism Laws?"

The lessons of the Paris Commune, the significance of that historic event and its relations to the present struggle of the working class will be presented by Sid Bush.

GENERAL STRIKE IN WEST VA. SET FOR APRIL FIRST

Injunction Judges Get Their Pens Busy

FAIRMONT, West Va., March 10.—The United Mine Workers of America is planning to call a general strike of all coal miners in the northern district of West Virginia beginning April 1, according to a statement issued by Van Bitter, representative of John L. Lewis in the West Virginia territory. The statement reads:

"The United Mine Workers of America will issue a general strike call requesting every man working in the non-union mines of Northern West Virginia to join the United Mine Workers of America and strike on April 1.

"The miners' organization has carefully prepared plans to make this strike effective and it is the launching of the real offensive to organise every coal mine in Northern West Virginia. There can be no doubt that the men in the non-union mines will respond to the call."

Open Shoppers Boast.

George S. Brackett, executive vice-president of the Northern West Virginia Coal Operators' Association, declared that the open shoppers were not afraid of a strike. This coal baron's statement confirms stories already published in the DAILY WORKER that the so-called union organized recently in West Virginia was formed with the connivance and support of the operators.

Brackett said: "It is the general understanding of those who are familiar with the situation that the United Mine Workers of America is attempting to anticipate the movement among the miners in this field for an independent union, the purpose of which would be an organization of West Virginia miners, working for the benefit of this state and governed by West Virginian conditions alone."

Other open shop operators also boast that the profits from the digging of coal have increased considerably since the union miners were locked out and the pits run on a non union basis.
